State Legislature has Extended Closed Season on them for Four More Years

Kirkland Enterprise: Mrs. S. S. Hollingsworth was quite severely bruised and her face cut by being kicked and trampled by a horse while unhitching it Tuesday evening.

Elgin Press: Raymond Brown, grandson of G. W. L. Brown, the real estate dealer, shot a wad of a blank cartridge into the palm of his hand Thursday. Lockjaw is feared, as the lad failed to have the wound dressed promptly. Dr. Will Brown removed the wadding Friday.

Sycamore will have $35,000 worth more of asphalt pavement this year. This, with the $25,000 now being expended for asphalt pavement on Somonauk street, and the expenditure for the large amount of sewerage which has been laid will make some $70,000 which Sycamore is expending this year alone on streets.

True Republican: Frank J. Williams of Sycamore is opening a cigar factory and retail cigar store in the Holroyd building in Genoa. He is an experienced workman, an expert judge of tobacco, and a young man who will make friends. Genoa is fortunate in securing this industry.

The first suit against the new Aurora, DeKalb and Rockford railway company was started last week by Attorney Charles Hazelhurst of Elgin for Robert Aldis of Cortland. Aldis asks $15,000 for injuries received in falling from one of the company's cars at Cortland.

Sportsmen who had planned to shoot prairie chickens beginning July 1 of this year have been sorely disappointed. The state legislature has extended the closed season on these birds from July 1, 1907, for four years and those hunters whose appetites call out for the delicious meat of the prairie fowl, and who have been waiting for ten years past for a chance to lawfully pursue the birds through oat stubbles will have to wait until 1911.

The old joke about eating "hot dog" is no joke in Germany any more, for no less than 7,000 canines of various breeds were slaughtered and eaten by the subjects of Kaiser Wilhelm last year, according to a report from Consul George N. Iffit at Annaberg. The eating of horse meat seems to be quite general in Germany, for no less than 182,000 horses were slaughtered for human food in 1906.

"The Runaways" was presented by Fred Raymond's company last night. It was a farce comedy, pure and simple, and was so well presented that the audience was kept in a continuous uproar.

GREEN BUG IS FOUND

Question is Raised Whether it is Destructive Bug of the West

Belvidere Republican: Is the green bug which has been found on oat leaves in the vicinity of Belvidere the destructive "green bug" of the west? That is a question which is agitating those who have noticed the little green bug on the leaves in the oat fields. Henry Porter found some in a patch of oats on the edge of the city the other day, and it is thought that the insects are really the bugs which have at times wrought havoc with small grain in Kansas and Nebraska but that are practically strangers in this section of the country.

It is reported from the vicinity of Waukegan and Elgin that the green bug has been found in fields there and considerable alarm is reported among farmers.

An exchange says that the sowing of salt in the fields is the most effective method yet devised to keep the bugs away, while spraying of salt water does not seem to effect them. It has been advised that owners of oat fields examine their grain and determine if possible whether the green bug has really invaded Boone County.

PLEASANT SOCIAL EVENT

Mrs. J. Molthan Surprised by Number of Lady Friends

Mrs. J. Molthan was the victim of a complete surprise at her home Tuesday afternoon, all in honor of her birthday anniversary.

About twenty ladies met by appointment at John Lembke's store in the afternoon and went to the Molthan home in a body. The result of the plot was a social event of rare pleasure. The hostess was presented with a beautiful davenport sofa. An excellent lunch, furnished by the intruders, was served.

The following were present: Mesdames—J. Krueger, R. Schmidt, W. Duval, W. Gnekow, W. Lembke, J. Lemcke, A. Teyler, W. Krueger, Geo. Duering, M. Dander, W. Bauman, J. Schult, G. Buerer, Lee Smith, Miss Bertha Bell.

Marengo Boy Dies of Lockjaw

Glenn Driver, fifteen years of age, shot himself in the hand at his home in Marengo July 2 with a blank cartridge pistol and died Saturday morning from lockjaw. The wound received treatment by a local physician and the boy was told to go home, keep the wound poulticed and remain quiet. The wound began to heal over and the boy went down town on the 4th and while there fainted away on the street. When picked up it was discovered his jaws were set. The boy was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Driver.

Rorabaugh, the Slugger

"Kling" Rorabaugh, who played with the Genoa Regulars last year, is making an erroneous record in Belvidere, both in fielding and batting. The Belvidere Republican has the following to say of him in a recent game with Dixon: "The big feature of the game was the batting of Rorabaugh. He stepped to the pan five times. First he selected a nice two-bagger, the second time he contented himself with a single, then he chose a base on balls, rested up a bit and took a three-bagger on the next round, ending up with a home run the fifth time up. No telling what he would have done to the ball if he had been given another chance."

MRS. J. F. WOLTER

Passed Away at Her Home in Genoa, Wednesday, July 3

It has pleased God in his mercy to take from our midst Mrs. Katarina Henrietta Sophie Wolter, nee Apers. She was born April 3, 1827, at Pruchten, Germany. There she attended school and joined the Lutheran church. In 1851 she was married to John F. Wolter. To them nine children were born.

In the year 1884 she emigrated to America with the family and at first lived near Marengo, then at Union and Gilberts, and at last at Genoa.

Five weeks ago she began to fail in consequence of old age. Knowing her end to be near she called her minister, preparing for her departure and receiving the Lord's supper. July 3 the end came at 4:30 a. m. She slumbered from time over into eternity, dying at the age of 80 years and 3 months.

She leaves behind her 4 sons, 1 daughter, 24 grand children and 8 great-grand-children.

On Friday, July 5, the funeral services were held at the German Lutheran church of this place, the pastor, Rev. J. Molthan, officiating. Burial took place in the cemetery near Union, Ill., where her husband is laid at rest.

"The days of our years are three score years and ten, and if by reason of strength they be four score years, yet is there strength, labor and sorrow, for it is soon cut off, and we fly away." Ps. 90:10.

Card of Thanks

We desire to express in this manner our gratitude for the kind assistance of friends during the sickness and after the death of our loved one.

The children and grand-children of Mrs. John F. Wolter.

BREAKS HIP BONE

K. Jackman Falls and Sustains Serious Injury

K. Jackman fell on the side walk in front of S. S. Slater's place last Thursday and sustained a broken hip. It was difficult at first to ascertain the extent of the injuries, and not until a consultation of physicians was held were the facts known. At this time Mr. Jackman is resting easily, but if he recovers at all the process will be slow on account of his advanced years. He has been very feeble during the past year.

John Young Marries

Last Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock at the M. E. parsonage John H. Young, well known in Genoa and vicinity, was united in marriage to Miss Alma L. King of Rockford, Rev. T. E. Ream officiating. Mr. Young worked in the shoe factory and on different farms in this vicinity for four years, coming here from Virginia. He has been in Rockford during the past four or five months. Mr. and Mrs. Young will make their home in Rockford for the present.

Little One Eats Lye

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. Will Gnekow has a badly burned mouth and throat as the result of taking a mouthful of Lewis lye last Friday.

Mrs. Gnekow had been using the lye in scrubbing the porch and left the can of lye where the little one could reach it. Child-like the boy placed some of the stuff in his mouth. None of the lye was swallowed but the mouth and throat were blistered so badly the child could scarcely eat for some time. He suffered considerably the first night but is now recovering nicely.

GENOA TOURISTS PLEASSED

Interesting Points Visited in New Mexico and California—Trip on the Pacific

Los Angeles, June 28.

Dr. Hill, Mr. Little, Mr. and Mrs. Shurtleff, mother and myself, all want to say hello to Genoa people.

I wish all Genoa may take the trip we people have taken. It is almost impossible to conceive that we are only about a four days' trip from home, the scenery, the people, the various climates thru which we have passed, have been so different. Every state seems to have a people of its own, with their mode of living and customs.

I am just going to tell you about the most interesting places that we visited on our way here.

Our first stop, after leaving Genoa June 14, was Kansas City, which was reached that evening about 6:30. We have nothing but good words for Kansas City, it is certainly a very picturesque old place, with its high elevations, beautiful drives and parks. That evening we visited the electric park and it was splendid. The electrical display could be seen for miles. Saturday morning a friend of Dr. Hill met us at the hotel and showed us the city, after which we took a few minutes to call on Mr. Lane. However, Ed. is the same old boy and we were all glad to see him.

At 11:30 a. m. we started for the west. The country thru eastern Kansas is much the same as Illinois, only crops seem to be in a more backward state, most of the corn was just coming up. Beyond the central part of Kansas there was nothing but miles and miles of waste land and prairie dogs. At five next morning we were all up expecting to see the Rockies, but were disappointed and had to wait until Trinidad was reached, which was 8 in the morning. We stopped half an hour here for breakfast but spent most of our time gazing at the mountains. I think that was one of the most interesting days we had on the train. The grandeur of the mountains, the Mexican and Indian settlements with their funny little dobi houses, just hundreds of them about 8 or 10 feet square and 8 feet high, no floors and small holes for windows. Every family consists of two to 16 with an average of two dogs to every house.

As we entered New Mexico, which was Sunday about 10 a. m., we began to see loads of Mexicans going visiting. Sunday seemed to be a national holiday with them. Not one was left behind, the older ones sit up front in the wagon on stools while the younger generation filled the bottom and sides. Their favorite color in dress was red and green, the taste they showed in getting themselves up was great.

At six that evening we made our next stop at Lama, a small village of Indians and Mexicans. It had no attractions whatever, with the exception of the mountains all around. Here we took the train for Santa Fe, where we arrived at 8 that evening. Here Mexicans, half breed Indians and cow boys greeted us, not an American face. Mrs. Shurtleff and I wished we were back in Illinois about that time. Finally a Mexican porter from a hotel took us in charge and after driving about fifteen minutes landed us, not at a dobi house as we expected, but at a splendid American hotel.

In the morning Dr. Hill and Mr. Little got up at 5 o'clock and attended Catholic services. The people in Santa Fe are very devoted to their church. We saw hundreds going to mass that morning, men, women and children. The women all wore black shawls over their heads, the heavier the fringe on the shawl the wealthier the family.

At eight o'clock our carriage came and we went for a drive around the city. It had rained the night before and as there are no walks around the dobi houses we concluded to ride. First we visited the old San Miguel church, built in 1550. Had to wake the priest up and pay a fee of 25 cents but it was worth the trouble. There were the old benches, bell and paintings of over 300 years, life size figures of Christ and St. Paul with burning candles in their hands, and many other old and interesting things. After leaving the church we drove around thru all the dobi streets—at home we would call them alleys. Their houses are all joined together and you would think one family occupied a suite of rooms, but every room represented a different family. Dr. Hill tried several times to get their pictures but just as soon as he would make his appearance with his camera they would all go in and close the door. Santa Fe has a population of about 6,000, is situated at the foot of the mountains. Laboring men get not over $1 a day and property is very cheap. They have to irrigate, but even that way they don't seem to raise much. They called us "tender feet" and aimed to charge us twice as much as their own natives. We left Santa Fe Monday afternoon. Went again to Lama and took train for Adamanda, Arizona,—the petrified forests—which we reached the next morning at 5:30. A water tank, small hotel and 10 by 16 depot is what greeted us; surely this was the worst; but what we saw after made up for all our first misgivings. After getting breakfast we started in a three seated wagon for the forests. The country thru which we passed was sand, rivers of sand. Our guide said: "They were 72 miles from a small grocery, 210 miles from any place that sold fruit." Now you can have some idea as to what a forsaken, lonely country we were in. After driving thru the sand for 9 miles we came to large elevations of stone and on these table lands was the first petrified forest of about 2,000 acres. The trees were from 1 foot to 3 1/2 feet in diameter. They looked as if someone had chopped them all down and sawed them up in different lengths. It was certainly a perfect forest only in a state of petrification. The colorings of the wood and bark were beautiful and in such natural preservation. As we stood and looked over that immense forest we began to realize that it was a most wonderful work of nature. We drove to the second forest which covered over 3,000 acres. Both forests were in the same natural state and had we seen nothing else that day we felt amply repaid for all our trouble and expense. These forests belong to the government and no one is allowed to disturb them in any way. After leaving the forests our guide drove to the mountains where in hidden places of the rocks were Indian hieroglyphics of centuries ago in the shape of toads, comets, stars, animals and other signs that all had a meaning to the Indians. After leaving here we next drove to some old Indian ruins and while there we all had a chance to feel and see an Arizona sand storm. I tell you it was great and we were all glad to get back to our little hotel after a ride of 22 miles. I must not forget to say that if the hotel was small the price made up for the size.

Wednesday morning we took the 5:30 train for Flagstaff and arrived there at 10:30. Flagstaff is surrounded by a dense pine forest and is situated at the foot of San Francisco peaks whose tops are snow covered the entire year. It has an altitude of 7,000 feet and is a cool, beautiful little country place. After getting our hotel we started on an eighteen mile drive to the cliff dwellers, and it was a pleasant drive. The roads were good and thru dense pine forests all the way. These forests are owned by the government which sends out men to trim and thin them out. This makes Flagstaff quite a lumber district. After riding nine miles we came to the guide's log cabin, the first house we had seen in the nine miles' ride and the first man we had come across who would not accept a tip. He was under the employ of the government, was the reason. We left our carriage and followed down an old Indian trail leading to the canyon for about half a mile, then entered the canyon, the most beautiful sight. Four large mountains joined together forming a circle and in the center was the canyon, a depth of several thousand feet. Along the sides of these mountains under the projecting rocks were the ruins of the cliff dwellers, 800 rooms in all, some in almost perfect shape, of others the walls had nearly all fallen apart. The oldest Moki Indians have no knowledge of the place, so they must have lived centuries ago. On the top of one of the mountains was the ruins of an old fortress, which went to prove that they had been a strong people and large in numbers. It would have been impossible to have attacked them with any success. They were within at least 2,000 feet of the bottom of the canyon and the mountains protected them from above. We found several pieces of broken pottery and arrow heads.

Tuesday at 11:30 we left for Williams, which we reached that afternoon. Here we took a train for the grand canyon and arrived there at 5 that evening. We walked up to the El Trovador hotel, a hotel that cost half a million, and gazed out upon the canyon. I cannot describe it, words cannot express the grandeur. As far as we could look were those immense rocks with their beautiful colorings and at a depth of from 6,000 to 8,000 feet. The canyon of the cliff dwellers was splendid, you could come in touch with that, you could see it all at one time, but of the grand canyon you can only see a very small part at once. Our hotel was about 40 feet from the rim of the canyon and it was great to stand there and look down 7,000 feet. The tents below looked like white specks and people on mules in the trail below looked about the size of a small dog. There are three different trails leading down the canyon to the Colorado river, the shortest is 7 miles, known as the Bright Angels trail. In going down there are many dangerous places where you have to get off your mule and walk, it being so steep that the mule can take care of no one but himself. There are quite a few outside attractions at the canyon. The Moki Indians who

Parade a Splendid Feature—Genoa Band Makes a Hit—Street Sports Galore

Genoa's celebration of the Fourth of July, 1907, will go on record as the best effort in entertaining in the history of the city.

Every feature as advertised was carried out, with the exception of a merry-go-round. Negotiations were completed for one of these swings but the person who had arranged to put up the machine failed to appear. However, there were other attractions which were not advertised which balanced things and kept the crowd busy. From the time the parade started at ten o'clock in the morning until nine o'clock at night there was scarcely a minute that there was not something doing in the way of entertainment. The people could not have been busier watching a three-ring circus.

The parade was a feature worth seeing, there being several pretty floats and grotesque outfits. Prizes were awarded as follows: Industrial floats—W. W. Cooper, 1st; Thompson Piano Co., 2nd; E. H. Browne, 3rd. Fantastics—F. A. Holly and Fred Anderson, 1st; Loyal Brown, 2nd; Eddie Awe, 3rd. Farmer's double hitch—Arthur Hartman, 1st; Marjorie Rowen, 2nd. Single hitch—Eddie Holmes.

The parade was led by the Genoa band which made a neat appearance in the new uniforms. The boys were praised by everyone for their day's work. Not only did they play well, but willingly. It is an organization of which Genoa may feel proud.

The water fight took place after the parade and drew a large crowd to the scene of action.

The speech by Mr. Earl D. Reynolds at the park was heard by a goodly audience and was well received.

After the exercises the vaudeville and street sports were pulled off on Main street. In the former there were four acts of high class, including acrobatic feats, horizontal bar acts, hoop rolling and slack wire stunts. There was no particular program for street sports, the several races being announced as the afternoon advanced. There were ten or twelve contests in all and the committee only stopped on account of the lateness of the hour. The order in the morning was to keep the ball rolling every minute regardless of cost. The total cost was only a few dollars short of $400.00.

The Genoa White Sox defeated the Kirkland team in the morning game, the score being 13 to 1. In the afternoon, however, the tables were turned and the visitors won 8 to 6.

If there was anyone not entirely satisfied with the day's program he has failed to register a complaint.

Main street was thronged with people from morning until the program was finished and those who catered to the inner man did a rushing business. About 225 gallons of ice cream were disposed of at the five parlors in operation.

No less than 500 rigs were in town, there being about 300 checked at the four livery stables.

Henry Smith, W. F. Eiklor and Wm. Abraham transacted business in the windy city Thursday.

HOW TO CURE A NOSE BLEED.

Some Suggestions Made to a Sufferer by a Sympathetic Crowd.

A man whose nose was bleeding stood in the alley near the sidewalk south of the Dwight building the other afternoon, his head bowed and the blood dropping rapidly to the ground. A crowd of sympathizers and questioners gathered around him, says the Kansas City Star.

"Say, fellow, if your right nostril is bleeding hold your left hand high in the air for a minute or two," one man suggested. Up went the hand of the sufferer.

"A better way to stop it is to hold a key down your back as far as possible, something like this," another member of the crowd suggested. The man with the bleeding nose fumbled in his pocket for a second and brought forth a key, which he shoved down his back and held it there for a time.

"A better way than that is to stick a roll of paper or something under the upper lip," a third one suggested. The man drew a piece of paper from his pocket and stuck it under the upper lip.

"Say, pardner, the trouble is your blood has a tendency to flow upward. Now, you will stand with your head and allow the blood to flow the other way, it will stop that nose bleeding at once."

This was too much for the man with the bleeding nose. Holding a handkerchief to his nose he pushed a way through the crowd and walked rapidly down the street.

"If that man would only lay flat on his back and hold his feet in the air his nose would stop bleeding at once," was a parting suggestion. But the man with the bleeding nose did not hear him.

Nature Fails.

"You know Haecel, Ernst Haecel, the wonderful German scientist of Jena? Well," said a globe trotter, "I have seen that man eat snakes, monkeys, and iguanas."

"It was in Ceylon, in a village called Belgama. We were spending the winter there, and we had a fine time, although it was too hot. Haecel ate his queer food in his daily curries, taking the profoundest scientific interest in them."

"His old cook to-day would give him a curried snake, to-morrow an iguana, the next day a sea spider, the day after a monkey. And Haecel would laugh, taste the food curiously, and, if it was good, eat it with appetite."

"A strange man, a scientific machine—yet very lovable—if a centipede was sweet and tender, he would eat it as chicken."

So's Little Joke.

Socrates had his joke. It was his custom to forego, now and then, with a convivial circle of philosophers, geometers and others. On such occasions, at the stroke of two a. m., he would rise (it is reported of him that he always could rise) and address the chair.

"Mr. President," he would say, "I move you that this circle now go home and square itself."

And his credit was such, and people were so used to taking him seriously, that it came to be believed that the squaring of the circle was an impossible thing—Puck.

Senator Hoar on Luxury.

"The chief carnal luxury of my life," once wrote the late Senator Hoar of Massachusetts, "is in breakfasting every Sunday morning with an orthodox friend, a lady who has a rare gift for making fishballs and coffee. You unfortunate and benighted Pennsylvanians (he was writing to a Pittsburg editor) can never know the exquisite flavor of the codfish, salted, made into balls and eaten on a Sunday morning by a person whose theology is sound, and who believes in all the five points of Calvinism."

Olive Oil.

A large part of the real olive oil consumed in New York comes to the city by way of New England. The olive oil men of California have formed themselves into an association, the members of which produce the greater part of the 250,000 gallons of oil now the output of this country yearly. For the eastern trade they have established a big bottling plant in New England, to which the oil is shipped in bulk in tanks such as are used for shipping petroleum.

The Future of Japanese Tea.

On the basis of statistics showing the production and export of Japanese tea during the last ten years the Osaka Asahi (Rising Sun) entertains pessimistic views about the future of Japan's tea trade, which now ranks next to raw silk. In Europe and America, says that paper, there are indications that coffee, cocoa and chocolate are gradually superseding tea; and this tendency is also noticed even in Asia, especially in Japan.

live in their own native way. They had an Indian dance while we were there which was very interesting and funny to us.

After staying two days at the canyon and taking in all the important places we started for Los Angeles. The country between Williams and within 50 miles of Los Angeles was rocks and sand, no irrigation at all. Sunday we arrived here and just let me say this much, don't expect too much of California or you may be disappointed. The residence part of the city and the parks are very beautiful, but the business district cannot be compared with Chicago. The fruit season is rather late this year and it is not as good quality as usual. Apricots 5 cents a pound, peaches 10 cents a pound, strawberries 5 cents a box, oranges from 15 to 25 cents a dozen. We have visited the parks, beaches, ostrich farm, stayed two days at the Cataline islands and have many other places of interest to go to. We are staying at Hotel Chamberlin, a fine hotel, at the top of Angels flight. Are within a three minute walk of all the car lines yet we have pure air and a fine view of city and mountains.

Dr. Hill and Mr. Little seem to have a great many attractions that we can't quite understand, yet we hope to be the even half dozen to come home again. Mr. and Mrs. Shurtleff and mother are having the time of their lives and guess I would be if it wasn't for that all gone feeling they call homesickness.

Tested His Friends.

An Irishman who died in the early part of the nineteenth century in one of the outlying parishes of London, undertook to test the devotion of his friends and acquaintances by making out a list of 400 of them, who were requested by written invitation to attend his funeral, which was held at 7 o'clock one cold winter morning in the parish church. Only twenty-nine persons appeared. When his will was opened, it was found that, having no natural heirs, he ordered his fortune to be divided among the persons who attended his funeral. London Mail.

CLEANING THE MINTS.

Even the Dust is Robbed of Its Particles of Gold.

It has been said that no miser guards his treasure more religiously than Uncle Sam watches the precious metal that passes through his mints. Moreover, precautions against waste are almost innumerable. Every evening in each of the mints of this country the floors of the melting rooms are swept cleaner than a good housewife's kitchen. The dust is put carefully aside, and about once in two months the soot scraped from every flue is transferred to the same precious dust heap. This is then burned, and from its ashes the government derives no inconsiderable income. The earthenware crucibles used in melting are employed no more than three times. Then they are crushed beneath heavy rollers, and in their porous sides are found flakes of the precious metal.

In the melting room when the casters raise their lades from the melting pots a shower of sparks fly from the molten surface of the metal. For the most part they are bits of incandescent carbon, but clinging to the carbon is often a minute particle of metal. Lest such particles should escape, the ashes and clinkers below the furnaces are gathered up at night. This debris is ground into powder by means of a steam crusher and then is sold to a smelter, like ordinary ore, at a price warranted by the assayer.

The lades that stir the precious metal, the big iron rods, the strainers and the dippers all are tested in a most curious fashion. After considerable use they become covered with a thin layer of oxidized silver, closely resembling a brown rust. The implements are then laid in baths of a solution of sulphuric acid, which eats away the iron and steel and leaves the silver untouched.

Gradually the ladle, or whatever the implement is, will disappear, and in its place remains a hollow silver counterpart of the original, delicate as spun glass. These fragile casts reproduce the ladle with perfect accuracy in all its details, although their surfaces are perforated with innumerable little holes. Scarcely have they been molded, however, before they are cast into a crucible, to become in time dollars, quarters and dimes.

In one corner of the melting room there is a large tank, into which newly cast silver bars are dropped and left to cool. Infinitesimal flakes of silver scale off and rise to the surface of the water, which acquires the metallic luster of a stagnant pool. Here is silver that must not be lost. So beneath the pipe through which the tank is emptied is banked a thick layer of mud. As the water filters through it the mud retains the precious residuum. Four times a year this mud is removed, and each experiment discloses the fact that some $50 has been saved. —Minneapolis Journal.

Illinois Central R. R.

Notice to the Public in regard to Payment of excess Fare on Train.

Under the enactment of the Illinois Legislature providing for a two cent per mile maximum passenger rate, effective July 1st, 1907, the railroads are authorized to collect as follows when payment of fare is rendered on train. "If any passenger shall have failed to purchase a ticket entitling him to carriage, a rate of three (3) cents per mile may be charged and collected." This, therefore, is to advise that collection of excess will be strictly enforced in accordance with the above when payment of fare is tendered on train from a station at which ticket might have been procured within a reasonable time before the departure of the train. To avoid payment of this excess the public is earnestly requested to purchase ticket before boarding train. S. G. HATCH, G. P. A. A. H. HANSON, P. T. M. Aug 7

Italian Lizards.

F. H. Herrick in "Bird Lore" describes a peculiar state of affairs, which, he says, exists in Italy in consequence of the merciless slaughter of birds of all kinds in that country. Spring and fall the Italian markets are filled with birds, and the land is virtually depopulated of winged inhabitants. The farmers, Mr. Herrick thinks, would suffer greatly from the ravages of insects but for the singular compensation that nature furnishes for the absence of the birds. This consists in the multitude of lizards, which dart about everywhere and display the utmost agility and admirable appetites in capturing and devouring insects.

Her Day Would Come.

A large funeral procession was wending its way through the gates of a cemetery in the neighborhood of Glasgow. As the crowd of spectators was very large, the police had some difficulty in preserving order and repressing the untoward curiosity of a certain section of them, mainly composed of old women. "Aweel," indignantly exclaimed one venerable dame to a policeman who barred her further progress, "ye may keep me oot the noo, but the day'll come when I'll gang up in spite o' ye." —Strand Magazine.

Lock Jaw In Stock

Lock jaw is causing stock owners throughout the country no little trouble this summer, the conditions seeming to be just right to foster the disease. Farmers cannot be too careful in giving stock immediate attention in case a scratch or cut appears. Under ordinary circumstances the home remedies in such cases would be sufficient, but many have lost heavily by having too much confidence in the usual applications. The safest way is to call a veterinary at once and have the wound properly dressed and thus prevent blood poisoning.

Satire of a Logger.

In the pine clad hills of a certain state the country folks had gathered at a neighbor's house to spend the evening in a social dance. The male contingent of the gathering was composed of farmers, mill men and logging hands; the fairer sex, the wives, sisters and sweethearts of the men, and the district school-teacher, who was the center of attraction of the young men and who seemed to be aware of her own popularity. During the evening an awkward, bashful and roughly dressed logging hand was introduced to the schoolteacher and asked if he might have a dance with her. The schoolteacher drew herself up haughtily and said: "No, sir-ee! I am particular with whom I dance." Whereupon the logging hand replied, with an air of indifference, "I am not a mite, or I would never have asked you."—Judge's Library.

American Architecture.

If architecture is "frozen music," American architecture has been a medley of "Yankee Doodle," "The Arkansas Traveler," and "ragtime." After the colonial period, which gave us fine specimens of public and private buildings, there followed two generations of bad building, the result of sudden growth. Taste had little place in a country working night and day to erect necessary shelter. That America is advancing in all the arts is to be expected. The outlook for architecture is especially hopeful. A committee appointed by the American Institute of Architects has reported that, "on the whole, architecture is being taught in America with a broader view, and in certain respects more effectively, than in any other country." There are reasons why this good teaching will count in practice, thinks Youth's Companion. The architect differs from other artists in that his practical studio is millions of dollars' worth of materials. That studio, the means of developing the art, is afforded by the amount, diversity and costliness of American building. There is a general improvement in taste and increased respect for expert opinion. Rich builders, individuals and corporations, losing much of the arrogance which money breeds toward all forms of service, show disposition to give the architect free hand to work out his ideas, and not merely produce as a hireling what the patron orders. We may look in another generation not only for great art in public buildings and costly dwellings, but for the reaction of great things on little, for the disappearance of the salmon-pink dwelling beneath the fig-sawn porch of which the American has erstwhile been proud to sit. Finally, since architecture, dependent on native material and landscape, is an indigenous art, it invites the architect, preeminently among artists, to create original, native types. The future may produce buildings of distinctively American beauty.

American Expansion.

Evidence accumulates that the United States is expanding in influence and that American devices are abroad in the world. Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, is a competent witness. In his baccalaureate sermon to Rutgers college students, in the course of an allusion to the growing power of democracy, he said that during a recent visit to England he stopped at a hotel in London where he rode up and down stairs in an American elevator, ate rolls made of American flour, dictated correspondence to an American stenographer who wrote on an American typewriting machine, and heard all London talking about the American president. He could have amplified the statement and gone into detail showing how American appliances, productions and ideas enter into the everyday life of the English people and to greater or less extent into that of many other nations, but his presentation of the matter will carry a significance not to be lost. The American impress, says Troy Times, is being stamped all over the earth, and this means positive if not otherwise furtherance of democratic ideas.

Somebody who has been reading "Wilhelm Meister" discovers that the servant question existed in Goethe's time, and quotes Therese as saying to her guest invited to dinner: "My cook has just run away at a most inopportune time. My man has mangled his hand and I had to prepare all myself. Nothing bothers one nowadays more than servants. No one will serve, not even themselves." The difference in this twentieth century is that the Thereses do not know how to act as substitutes for the missing cook, or if they do know, refuse to act. They prefer to "go out to their meals."

A tragedy was consummated the other day in St. Petersburg, when the sword of honor which the people of France were to have given to Gen. Stossel was presented to the St. Petersburg Museum of War Relics. The man, so short a time ago "the heroic defender of Port Arthur," but now discredited by court martial, and branded as a coward and traitor, was not present at the ceremony, says the Youth's Companion, and the dedicatory inscription which recited his courage and skill had been changed to a complimentary reference to the Russian army.

Model tenements do pay, says the New York World. They yield a fair return to investors, they afford pleasure and comfort to tenants, they exert an influence elevating to the moral and physical average of the community. Why do not more rich men build them?

A Lynn, Mass., preacher urges the women of his congregation to keep on their hats in church, which shows that he knows one good way of solving the empty pew problem.

The Royal Road. Struggling Author—Why, De Poesy, how prosperous you look! Was your last book of poems a success? De Poesy—No-o, can't say that it was. "Published a popular novel, perhaps?" "No." "Ah, then you have written a play. I have always held that play writing, while not the highest form of art, was nevertheless—" "I have written no play." "You haven't? Where did these fine clothes come from? How did you pay for that handsome turnout?" "I have abandoned literature and am peddling clams."—N. Y. Weekly.

LIFE INSURANCE A SACRED TRUST.

Responsibilities of Officers and Directors. Evidently President Kingsley of the New York Life Insurance company has learned the great lesson of the times with respect to the responsibility and duty of directors of corporations. Speaking to the new board of trustees, on the occasion of his election to the presidency, he emphasized the fact that "life insurance is more than a private business, that life insurance trustees are public servants, charged at once with the obligations of public service and with the responsibilities that attach to a going business which at the same time must be administered as a trust." He also realizes that similar responsibilities rest upon the officers of the company. "I understand," he says, "your anxiety in selecting the men who are day by day to carry this burden for you, who are to discharge this trust in your behalf, who are to administer for the benefit of the people involved the multitudinous and exacting details to which it is impossible for you to give personal attention. My long connection with the New York Life—covering nearly twenty years—my service in about every branch of the company's working organization, gives me, as I believe, a profound appreciation, not merely of the heavy burden you have placed on my shoulders, but of the standards of efficiency, the standards of faith, the standards of integrity, which must be maintained at all times by the man who serves you and the policyholders in this high office." Best of all, perhaps, he feels that words are cheap, and that the public will be satisfied with nothing short of performance. "My thanks, therefore," he continues, "for an honor which outranks any distinction within the reach of my ambition, cannot be expressed in words; they must be read out of the record I make day by day."

One Point of View. It was the desire of a teacher in a negro school to impress upon the minds of the youths the benefits derived at Tuskegee and other seats of learning for the ambitious negro. One day, in closing a brilliant discourse on this subject, in which Booker T. Washington was set forth as a criterion, she said to one little boy who had evidently heard not a word of her talk: "Now Rastus, give the name of the greatest negro?" The answer was surprisingly forthcoming—"Joe Gans!"

Sad Disappointment. A verdant-looking old fellow recently entered the office of a down-town woman's exchange, and after a moment's hesitation inquired of the lady in charge: "Is this here the Woman's Exchange?" "It is," replied the lady. "Well," continued the countryman, somewhat sheepishly, "I'd like to swap off my old woman for 'most anybody you happen to have on hand."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Careful Public Guardian. One of the pillars of the city ordinances is a traffic policeman stationed at Fourth avenue and Twenty-third street. He loses no opportunity of making war on persons who drop banana peels in the street. He pounces upon an offender and orders him to pick up the slippery menace to life and limb and to carry it to a receptacle for waste on the sidewalks. —New York Herald.

COULDN'T KEEP IT. Kept It Hid from the Children.

"We cannot keep Grape-Nuts food in the house. It goes so fast I have to hide it, because the children love it so. It is just the food I have been looking for ever so long; something that I do not have to stop to prepare and still is nourishing." Grape-Nuts is the most scientifically made food on the market. It is perfectly and completely cooked at the factory and can be served at an instant's notice, either with rich cold cream, or with hot milk if a hot dish is desired. When milk or water is used, a little sugar should be added, but when cold cream is used alone the natural grape-sugar, which can be seen glistening on the granules, is sufficiently sweet to satisfy the palate. This grape-sugar is not poured over the granules, as some people think, but exudes from the granules in the process of manufacture, when the starch of the grains is changed from starch to grape-sugar by the process of manufacture. This, in effect, is the first act of digestion; therefore, Grape-Nuts food is pre-digested and is most perfectly assimilated by the very weakest stomach. "There's a Reason." THE LIONS OF THE LORD A TALE OF THE OLD WEST BY HARRY LEON WILSON

CHAPTER XXXVII.

The Gentle Carries Off His Spoil. Half an hour later they heard the sound of voices and wheels. Follett looked up and saw a light wagon with four men in it driving into the meadows from the south. The driver was Seth Wright; the man beside him he knew to be Bishop Snow, the one they called the Entablature of Truth. The two others he had seen in Amana, but he did not know their names. He got up and went forward when the wagon stopped, leaning casually on the wheel. "He's already dead, but you can help me bury him as soon as I get my wife out of the way around that oak bush—I see you've brought along a spade." The men in the wagon looked at each other, and then climbed slowly out. "Now who could 'a' left that there spade in the wagon?" began the Wild Ram of the Mountains, a look of perplexity clouding his ingenious face. The Entablature of Truth was less disposed for idle talk. "Who did you say you'd get out of the way, young man?" "My wife, Mrs. Ruel Follett." "Meaning Prudence Rae?" "Meaning her that was Prudence Rae." "Oh!" The ruddy-faced bishop scanned the horizon with a dreamy, speculative eye, turning at length to his companions. "We better get to this burying," he said. "Wait a minute," said Follett. They saw him go to Prudence, raise her from the ground, put a saddle blanket over his arm, and lead her slowly up the road around a turn that took them beyond a clump of the oak brush. "It won't do!" said Wright, with a meaning glance at Entablature of Truth, quite as if he had divined his thought. "I'd like to know why not?" retorted this good man, aggressively. "Because times has changed; this ain't '57." "I'll almost do it myself," insisted Snow. "What say, Glines?" and he turned to one of the others. "Looks all right," answered the man addressed. "By heck! but that's a purty saddle he carries!" "What say, Taggart?" "For God's sake, no, Bishop! No—I got enough dead faces looking at me now from this place. I'm hanted into hell a'ready, like he said he was yesterday. By God! I sometimes think I'll have my ears busted and my eyes put out to get away from the bloody things!" "Ho! Scared, are you? Well, I'll do it myself. You don't need to help." "Better let well enough alone, Brother Warren!" interposed Wright. "But it ain't well enough! Think of that girl going to a low cuss of a Gentle when Brigham wants her. Why, think of letting such a critter get away, even if Brigham didn't want her!" "You know they got Brother Brigham under indictment for murder now, account of that Aiken party." "What of it? He'll get off." "That he will, but it's because he's Brigham. You ain't. You're just a south country bishop. Don't you know he'd throw you to the Gentile courts as a sop quicker'n a wink if he got a chance—just like he'll do with old John D. Lee the minute George A. Peters out so that the chain will be broke between Lee and Brigham?" "And maybe this cuss has got friends," suggested Glines. "Who'd know but the girl?" Snow insisted. "And Brother Brigham would fix her all right. Is the household of faith to be spoiled?" "Well, they got a railroad running through it now," said Wright, "and a telegraph, and a lot of soldiers. So don't you count on me, Brother Snow, at any stage of it now or afterwards. I got a pretty sizable family that would hate to lose me. Look out. Here he comes." Follett now came up, speaking in a cheerful manner that nevertheless chilled even the enthusiasm of the good Bishop Snow. "Now, gentlemen, just by way of friendly advice to you—like as not I'll be stepping in front of some of you in the next hour. But it isn't going to worry me any, and I'll tell you why. I'd feel awful sad for you all if anything was to happen to me—if the Injuns got me, or I was took bad with a chill, or a jack-rabbit crept up and bit me to death, or anything. You see, there's a train of 25 big J. Murphy wagons will be along here over the San Bernardino trail. They are coming out of their way, almost up time now, on purpose to pick me up. Fact is, my ears have been pricking up all morning to hear the old, bull-whips crack. There were 31 men in the train when they went down, and there may be more coming back. It's a train of Ezra Calkins, my adopted father. You see, they know I've been here on special business, and I sent word the other day I was about due to finish it, and they wasn't to go through coming back without me. Well that bull outfit will stop for me—and they'll get me or get pay for me. That's their orders. And it isn't a train of women and babies, either. They're such an outrageous rough lot, quick-tempered and all that, that they wouldn't believe the truth that I had an accident—not if you swore it on a stack of Mormon bibles topped off by the life of Joe Smith. They'd go right out and make Amana look like a whole cavalry of razor-hoofed buffaloes had raced back and forth over it. And the rest of the 2,000 men on Ezra Calkins' pay roll would come hanging around pestering you all with Winchester. They'd make you scratch gravel, sure!" "Now, let's get to work. I see you'll be awful careful and tender with me. I'll bet I don't get even a sprained ankle. You folks get him, and I'll show you where he said the place was." Two hours later Follett came running back to where Prudence lay on the saddle blanket in the warm morning sun. "The wagon train is coming—hear the whips? Now, look here, why don't we go right on with it, in one of the big wagons? They're coming back light, and we can have a J. Murphy that is bigger than a whole lot of houses in this country. You don't want to go back there, do you?" She shook her head. "No; it would hurt me to see it now. I should be expecting to see him at every turn. Oh, I couldn't stand that—poor sorry little father!" "Well, then, leave it all; leave the place to the women, and good riddance, and come off with me. I'll send one of the boys back with a pack mule for any plunder you want to bring away, and you needn't ever see the place again." She nestled in his arms, feeling in her grief the comfort of his tenderness. "Yes, take me away now." The big whips could be heard plainly, cracking like rifle shots, and shortly came the creaking and hollow rumbling of the wagons and the cries of the teamsters to their six-mules teams. There were shouts and calls, snatches of song from along the line, then the rattling of harness, and in a cloud of dust the train was beside them, the teamsters sitting with rounded shoulders up under the bowed covers of the big wagons. A hail came from the rear of the train, and a bronzed and bearded man in a leather jacket cantered on a small pony. "Hello, there, Ruel! I'm whoopin' glad to see you." He turned to the driver of the foremost wagon. "All right, boys! We'll make a lay-by for noon." Follett shook hands with him heartily, and turned to Prudence. "This is my wife, Lew. Prudence, this is Lew Steffins, our wagon master." "Shoo, now!—you young cub—married? Well, I'm right glad to see Mrs. Ruel Follett—and bless your heart, little girl!" "Did you stop back there at the settlement?" "Yes; and they said you'd hit the pike about dark last night, to chase a crazy man. I told them I'd be back with the whackers if I didn't find you. I was afraid some trouble was on, and here you're only married to the sweetest thing that ever—why, she's been crying! Anything wrong?" "No; never mind now, anyway. We're going on with you, Lew." "Bully proud to have you. There's that third wagon—" "Could I ride in that?" asked the girl, looking at the big, lumbering conveyance, doubtfully. "It carried 6,000 pounds of freight to Los Angeles, little woman," answered Steffins, promptly, "and I guess you to left over 28 or 30 at the outside. I'll have the box filled in with spruce boughs and a lot of nice bunch grass, and put some comforts over that, and you'll be snug and tidy. You won't starve, either, not while there's meat running." "And, say, Lew, she's got some stuff back at that place. Let the extra hand ride back with a packjack and bring it on. She'll tell him what to get." "Sure! Tom Callahan can go." "And give us some grub, Lew. I've hardly had a bite since yesterday morning." An hour later, when the train was nearly ready to start, Follett took his wife to the top of the ridge and showed her, a little way below them, the cedar at the foot of the sandstone ledge. He stayed back, thinking she would wish to be there alone. But when she stood by the new grave she looked up and beckoned to him. "I wanted you by me," she said, as he reached her side. "I never knew how much he was to me. He wasn't big and strong like other men, but now I see that he was very dear and more than I suspected. He was quiet and always so kind—I don't remember that he was ever stern with me once. And though he suffered from some great sorrow and from sickness, he never complained. He wouldn't even admit he was sick, and he always tried to smile in that little way he had, so gentle. Poor, sorry little father!—and yesterday, not one of them would be his friend. It broke my heart to see him there so wistful when they turned their backs on him. Poor little man! And see, here's another grave all grown around with sage and the stones worn smooth; but there's the cross he spoke of. It must be some one that he wanted to lie beside. Poor little sorry father! Oh, you will have to be so much to me!"

The train was under way again. In the box of the big wagon, on a springy couch of spruce boughs and long bunch grass, Prudence lay at rest, hurt by her grief, yet soothed by her love, her thoughts in a whirl about her.

Follett, mounted on Dandy, rode beside her wagon. "Better get some sleep yourself, Ruel," urged Steffins. "Can't Lew. I ain't sleepy. I'm too busy thinking about things, and I have to watch out for my little girl there. You can't tell what these cusses might do." "There's 30 of us watching out for her now, young fellow." "There'll be 31 till we get out of this neighborhood, Lew."

He lifted up the wagon cover softly a little later, and found that she slept. As they rode on, Steffins questioned him.

"Did you make that surround you was going to make, Ruel?" "No, Lew, I couldn't. Two of them was already under, and, honest, I couldn't have got the other one any more than you could have shot your kid that day he up-ended the gravy dish in your lap." "Hell!" "That's right! I hope I never have to kill anyone, Lew, no matter how much I got a right to. I reckon it always leaves uneasy feelings in a man's mind."

Eight days later a tall, bronzed young man with yellow hair and quick blue eyes, in what an observant British tourist noted in his journal as "the not unpicturesque garb of a border ruffian," helped a dazed but very pretty young woman on to the rear platform of the Pullman car attached to the east-bound overland express at Ogden.

As they lingered on the platform before the train started they were hailed and loudly cheered, averred the journal of this same Briton, "by a crowd of the outlaw's companions, at least a score and a half of most respectable-looking wretches, unshaven, raggedly dressed, heavily booted, slouch-hatted (they swung their hats in a drunken frenzy), and to this rough ovation the girl, though seemingly a person of some decency, waved her handkerchief and smiled repeatedly, though her face had seemed to be sad and there were tears in her eyes at that very moment."

At this response from the girl, the journal went on to say, the ruffians had redoubled their drunken pandemonium. And as the train pulled away, to the observant tourist's marked relief, the young outlaw on the platform had waved his own hat and shouted as a last message to one "Lew," that he "must not let Dandy get gandered up," nor forget "to tie him to grass."

Later, as the train shrieked its way through Echo canyon, the observant tourist, with his double-visored plaid cap well over his face, pretending to sleep overheard the same person across the aisle say to the girl: "Now we're on our own property at last. For the next 60 hours we'll be riding across our own front yard—and there ain't any keys and passwords and grips here, either—just a plain Almighty God with no nonsense about Him."

Whereupon had been later added to the journal a note to the effect that Americans are not only quite as prone to vaunt and brag and tell big stories as other explorers had asserted, but that in the west they were ready blasphemers.

Yet the couple minded not the observant tourist, and continued to enlarge and complicate his views of American life to the very bank of the Missouri. Unwittingly, however, for they knew him not nor saw him nor heard him, being occupied with the matter of themselves.

"You'll have to back me up when we get to Springfield," he said to her one late afternoon, when they neared the end of their exciting journey. "I've heard that old Grandpa Corson is mighty peppery. He might take you away from me."

Her eyes came in from the brown rolling of the plain outside to light him with their love; and then, the lamps having not yet been lighted, the head of grace nestled suddenly on its pillow of brawn with only a tremulous sigh of security for answer.

This brought his arm quickly about her in a protecting clasp, plainly in the sidelong gaze of the now scandalized but not less observant tourist.

This incident shows the value of a word spoken at the right time.—Puck. Laundry work at home would be much more satisfactory if the right starch were used. In order to get the desired stiffness, it is usually necessary to use so much starch that the beauty and fineness of the fabric is hidden behind a paste of varying thickness, which not only destroys the appearance, but also affects the wearing quality of the goods. This trouble can be entirely overcome by using Defiance Starch, as it can be applied much more thinly because of its greater strength than other makes.

Flow of Artesian Well. To calculate the rate of flow of an artesian well a simple plan is to lower a bottle of aniline fluid to a depth of say 500 feet and then electrically explode a cap to burst the bottle. The time required for the fluid to appear at the surface gives an accurate gauge as to the velocity of flow. It is claimed that this method gives results as accurate as a weir. The diameter of the pipe being known, the rate of flow readily follows.

CARES FOR WARDS

NEW LAW PROVIDES FOR STATE CARE OF INSANE.

Many Improvements in the Various Institutions Are Made Under the Board of Charities—Now Best in the Country.

Springfield, Ill., July 11.—Under the administration of Gov. Deneen the state charitable institutions have entered upon one of the greatest periods of advancement in the history of Illinois. The state apparently for many years had been too heavily burdened to keep pace in its charitable service, with the advancement made during the last quarter of a century by medical, architectural and engineering science. Now, however, owing to the thrift and business shrewdness of Gov. Deneen, a cash balance in excess of $3,000,000 has been piled up in the state treasury, thus providing means for many improvements. A part of this money will be used to improve the service in the charitable institutions, to erect new buildings, chiefly of the hospital type, and to begin a thorough rehabilitation of existing buildings and equipment.

Seeing his way to begin improving the charitable service, Gov. Deneen, when he appointed the present state board of charities, with Dr. Frank Billings as president, asked the board to work out plans ultimately to make the 17 charitable institutions of Illinois the equal of any like institutions anywhere, and to indicate what new institutions were necessary to lift the service in Illinois to the level of that of the most progressive American states. The board worked out such plans. They were submitted to the general assembly. The members of the legislature recognized practically every policy advanced by the governor and the state board of charities, and so far as they felt the finances of the state would permit, made appropriations of money to take the first steps in carrying out the program of advancement as submitted to them.

Complete State Care of Insane.

Perhaps the greatest single piece of legislation was the passage of the bill for complete state care of the insane. This marks the beginning of the greatest public charity epoch in the state of Illinois since the time of Dorothy L. Dix, 60 years ago. The state now steps up into the front rank beside New York and Massachusetts. While the new act does not carry appropriations, it provides the machinery for gradually removing to curative state hospitals all insane in county almshouses, the unsatisfactory conditions in some of which were published by the state board of charities in a recent bulletin. The new law makes the care of the insane the ultimate duty of the state only, not as a criticism of counties, but because the larger resources of the state are necessary to properly handle the great, growing problem of insanity. It also provides, through a system of pay patients, if thought best to enforce that provision, for an income to the state that may reach as high as $350,000 per annum. This would help materially in supporting the hospitals for the insane and to that extent would reduce the demand upon the taxpayer.

Bartonville a Curative Hospital.

This new law, furthermore, changes the policy of the state towards the chronic insane. The large institution at Bartonville was established to care for the chronic insane of the state, entrance to that institution being by a roundabout way from the other state hospitals through almshouses into Bartonville. A careful study of the conditions, not only in Illinois but in other states, showed that it was impossible ever to collect all of the chronic insane of Illinois on the restricted hilltop at Bartonville. There are 2,000 chronic insane there now, but there are 9,000 so-called chronic insane in Illinois in public institutions to-day. Furthermore the board of charities recognizes that it is repugnant to humanity to consider any insane person as beyond the pale of cure to be legally and officially pronounced "incurable" as the old law did. The new law for the complete state care changes the Bartonville institution from a place for the sole custody of the "incurable insane" into a curative district hospital like Kankakee, Jacksonville and the others. It will be provided with every possible curative resource. Persons will be received there both in acute and chronic condition of insanity.

By a separate act, not originally associated with the state care act, but fitting nicely in with it, this institution is now named the Illinois General Hospital for the Insane, thus forever suppressing that most repugnant name "incurable insane."

Education of Institution Physicians.

The legislature provided for a central institution of instruction to be located at Kankakee. This institution will be under the direction of a man who has made successful study of mental and nervous diseases and who is familiar with the scientific laboratory work used by the foremost men in the world in the study and treatment of insanity. To this institution the physicians of the other state hospitals will go for instruction. Each institution also will be fitted out with a scientific laboratory. As a result the medical administration and service throughout Illinois will be made equal to that in the best public and private hospitals in the world. It is in institutions of this character that new things are learned which cure diseases that previously baffled science.

Water Treatment for Insane.

As a part of the medical administration the water treatment for the insane is being installed in every state hospital in Illinois. While this form of treatment masks behind a big Greek name, it merely is a precise, scientific use of the "home doctoring" methods of our mothers. The hot water bottle, the cold wet cloth, the hot wet cloth, the ice pack, the wet sheet pack, the steam bath on the skin and breathed into the lungs, the warm bath and the cold bath all bring up memories of the aches, colds, nervous attacks and fever that mother used to cure with water, steam and ice.

Water treatment as applied for mental and nervous diseases, achieves its greatest triumphs in approaching insanity or in insanity in the early stages, particularly those forms which are said to be caused by the poisons of alcohol, morphine, cocaine, fevers, poisons generated in the systems, and particularly that form of toxic insanity of the most pitiful character which afflicts young mothers. Stated in another way, water cures most frequently those forms of insanity which manifest themselves in great excitement or great depression of spirits. Without going into the scientific explanation of the how, why, and wherefore of the water treatment, it can be said briefly that the value of water lies in the ease with which it can be used to apply heat and cold to the surface of the human body; and the ease with which it can be used to apply pressure to the human body, pressure ranging from the gentle patten of a shower to the impact of a gushing stream. In fact, water by means of precise apparatus can be made soothing to the excited maniac, stimulating to the depressed insane person and irritating to the person whose mental process is slow and needs irritation to wake him out of his sluggishness. Water also will help the system to throw off those poisons which may cause insanity.

For Thorough and Kind Care.

Women physicians are in service in the general hospitals for the insane, and a corps of house doctors who are known as internes is being provided to assist the regular physicians. Dentists or dental internes are being provided to care for the teeth of the state's wards.

Training schools for nurses and attendants have been established to educate the persons who come in closest contact with the insane so that their service will be more intelligent and therefore more kind.

As part of the medical treatment, work on a larger scale than ever before is being provided for those insane persons who are capable of work. One of the saddest sights of a hospital for the insane is the long dark corridors in the older institutions with rows of idle patients sitting there with their minds filled with horrible delusions and hallucinations. Work is natural and necessary for all persons, sane or insane, who are able to work. It diverts the mind from itself. It materially assists in curing insanity.

Provision for Insane Consumptives

Consumptives are separated from other patients, the idea being to keep them from infecting others and to give those ill of this dread disease the rational chance for a cure, which is life in the open air and food which is simple and nourishing. Probably the most perfectly arranged and managed tent colony for consumptives in America and perhaps in the world is located on the hill at Bartonville.

For the feeble-minded it has been determined to diminish the intellectual education provided at Lincoln and to increase the manual training. The very presence of feeble-mindedness argues against intellectual work. These unfortunates also are provided with a new gymnasium, which is very much needed. Many physical improvements are being made at this institution.

Soldiers and Their Wives Together.

One pitiful condition often met with in the charity service in Illinois is the veteran's wife in the poorhouse. The general assembly has provided for the erection of two cottages and a hospital at the Soldiers' and Sailors' home at Quincy, the soldiers and their wives to live together in the cottages in their declining years and the hospital to be for the care of wives who are taken ill.

Taking up the care of children, which of late years has received a great deal of attention, the legislature passed a bill allowing the counties to establish temporary detention homes and also providing that dependent orphan children, not soldiers' orphans, including children now in the unwholesome surroundings of almshouses, shall be cared for at the Soldiers' orphans' home at Normal. There they will be given education and training to fit them for good citizenship. Preference is given to almshouse children. Provision is made by a new law by which ultimately the work of visiting children placed in family homes will be amplified and conducted by the board of charities more effectively than is possible now. Beneficial changes were made in the laws for the adoption and treatment and control of dependent and delinquent children.

Two new cottages were provided for girls at the state training school for girls at Geneva, and new cottages for boys at the St. Charles home. A fine gymnasium and infirmary will be erected, also, at St. Charles, the gymnasium being a $50,000 gift from the Commercial club of Chicago.

WHY SHE WAS THANKFUL.

Little One Had Reason to Approve Father's Choice.

Of the sisters of a well-known New York family one is married. She has a little girl greatly petted by all the aunts and subjected to much advice from all of them. Of this last the little lady sometimes wears, which weariness on a certain occasion made itself shown in the following reply from her small ladyship:

Said one aunt: "If you were my child I should have you do thus and thus." Said another aunt: "Were you my child I would do so and so." The remaining aunt made a similar remark.

The little lady thought it high time to express her own feelings. "But I have," she said, "always been so thankful that papa married the sister he did!"

ALMOST A SOLID SORE.

Skin Disease from Birth—Fortune Spent on Her Without Benefit—Cured Her with Cuticura.

"I have a cousin in Rockingham Co. who once had a skin disease from her birth until she was six years of age. Her father had spent a fortune on her to get her cured and none of the treatments did her any good. Old Dr. suggested that he try the Cuticura Remedies which he did. When he commenced to use it the child was almost a solid scab. He had used it about two months and the child was well. I could hardly believe she was the same child. Her skin was as soft as a baby's without a scar on it. I have not seen her in seventeen years, but I have heard from her and the last time I heard she was well. Mrs. W. P. Ingle, Burlington, N. C., June 16, 1905."

The Terrible Mafia.

Neither the Naples Camorra, the Paris Apaches, nor the Black Hand of America is the most powerful and terrible secret society in the whole world, in spite of the harrowing details of their ghastly work. The pair must go to the Mafia, which flourishes in Italy, and has done so for more than 300 years. This society, which works so swiftly and silently, yet so surely, was founded in Sicily for protection against the injustice of foreign rulers.—London "P. T. O."

Sheer white goods, in fact, any fine wash goods when new, owe much of their attractiveness to the way they are laundered, this being done in a manner to enhance their textile beauty. Home laundering would be equally satisfactory if proper attention was given to starching, the first essential being good Starch, which has sufficient strength to stiffen, without thickening the goods. Try Defiance Starch and you will be pleasantly surprised at the improved appearance of your work.

Thrift and stinginess are as similar as they are different.

The extraordinary popularity of fine white goods this summer makes the choice of Starch a matter of great importance. Defiance Starch, being free from all injurious chemicals, is the only one which is safe to use on fine fabrics. Its great strength as a stiffener makes half the usual quantity of Starch necessary, with the result of perfect finish, equal to that when the goods were new.

TIRED AND SICK YET MUST WORK. "Man may work from sun to sun but woman's work is never done." In order to keep the home neat and pretty, the children well dressed and tidy, women overdo and often suffer in silence, drifting along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have help to overcome the pains and aches which daily make life a burden. It is to these women that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, comes as a blessing. When the spirits are depressed, the head and back aches, there are dragging-down pains, nervousness, sleeplessness, and reluctance to go anywhere, these are only symptoms which unless heeded, are soon followed by the worst forms of Female Complaints. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound keeps the feminine organism in a strong and healthy condition. It cures Inflammation, Ulceration, displacements, and organic troubles. In preparing for child-birth and to carry women safely through the Change of Life it is most efficient. Mrs. Augustus Lyon, of East Earl, Pa., writes:—Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—"For a long time I suffered from female troubles and had all kinds of aches and pains in the lower part of back and sides, I could not sleep and had no appetite. Since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and following the advice which you gave me I feel like a new woman and I cannot praise your medicine too highly." Mrs. Pinkham's Invitation to Women. Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Out of her vast volume of experience she probably has the very knowledge that will help your case. Her advice is free and always helpful.
