Christmas Tidings.

Once more through the silvery realms and spaces,
In cabins of log and in the grand palaces;
In the hearts of the old and on childish faces;
Resounding, reflecting, 'mid the world's made races,
Are Christmas tidings.

Once more through the optical nerves and the ear,
We convey reason to those would see him and hear;
To those who in well-clad feet would appear,
Saving those members many a remorseful tear,
Amid Christmas tidings.

For two more weeks, oh lassie and my lad,
Our good footwear, at bed rock prices, can be had,
And oh, your feet, they look and feel so sad!
I pray thee—hear me—make their Christmas glad,
By Christmas tidings.

We have over fifty cases of footwear left yet, prices will be made to make most of it go in two weeks.

"BEAR" IDEA

People must wear clothes. How important that they fit and wear well. We don't keep them—we sell them. Quick, too! You can't help being lucky when you buy ours. They're high grade, stylish, up-to-date and suit the most fastidious. Brains, good cloth, fine trimmings, and experienced cutters are employed in their make-up. These goods are known everywhere as THE LUCKY WORSTED CLOTHING. It is hard to exaggerate their genuine quality and value. Everyone knows that perfect fitting garments outlast those which drag or pull. We guarantee them, and the Lucky Worsteds trademark is sewed in every coat. That stands for the best money can buy or skill produce. The price is surprisingly low.

THE NEWS.

Compiled From Late Dispatches.

CONGRESSIONAL.

The Proceedings of the First Session.
In the United States senate yesterday the president's message was read. There were 272 bills and 16 resolutions introduced, but a majority were reprints of measures which failed to pass last session. Among the bills were the following: To establish a uniform system of bankruptcy; for the compulsory education of Indian children; for the exclusion of alien anarchists; for the amendment of the tariff laws, so as to admit free of duty all material used in the construction or equipment of vessels built in the United States; to limit the president's term to six years without reelection, and repealing all laws permitting the issuance of bonds. In the house the president's message was read, after which bills were introduced to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy; to amend the immigration laws; to equalize pensions on account of service in the Mexican war; to provide that no alien shall be admitted to citizenship who has not for the continued term of five years preceding his admission resided within the United States, and who cannot speak, read and write the English language.

Resolutions for the recognition of Cuban insurgents were offered in the senate on the 4th. Bills were introduced to amend the immigration laws, excluding all immigrants between 14 and 60 years of age who cannot both read and write the English language; to remove the bar of limitations in suits brought by laborers or mechanics against the United States for work done; to increase all pensions granted under the act of 1890 to $12; to provide for a general system of fortifications for sea-coast defenses. A resolution was introduced for vigorous action for the protection and security of American citizens in Turkey. The house was not in session.

Bills were introduced in the senate on the 5th for the unlimited coinage of gold and silver in connection with other nations; to prevent the carrying of obscene literature on railroads; to have all the silver in the treasury coined into subsidiary coin, and providing for the repeal of all laws authorizing the issuance of interest-bearing bonds. A resolution was introduced for the recognition of the belligerency of Cuban insurgents and another declaring it to be the sense of the senate that it was unwise and inexpedient to retire the greenbacks. Adjourned on the 9th. The house was not in session.

The senate was not in session on the 6th. In the house bills were introduced to levy a duty on wool; to amend the act incorporating the Maritime Canal company of Nicaragua; to repeal the interstate commerce law; to prohibit the appointment of aliens to office under the government. Petitions were presented for the admission of Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico to statehood and for the recognition of the Cubans as belligerents. Adjourned until the 9th.

Advices from Constantinople say that Said Pasha, the president of the Turkish council of state and formerly grand vizier, had taken refuge in the British embassy at Constantinople, believing his life was in danger.

It was announced that the embassies had informed the sultan of Turkey that if the firms for the extra guardships were refused the Dardanelles would be forced by the powers.

It was rumored that the sultan of Turkey had decided to consent to each of the powers having a second guardship at Constantinople.

It was announced that British ships had landed soldiers at Pera, a suburb of Constantinople, to protect the British embassy.

A fire at Mariestad, Sweden, did damage to the extent of $270,000 and left 600 persons homeless.

Furious gales prevailed on the English coast, causing the loss of much property and many lives.

A recent census places the population of Berlin, Germany, at 1,674,112.

The situation at Constantinople on the question of the extra guardships of the powers remained unchanged and opinion was divided as to whether the delay was due to a fear of causing a fanatical outbreak against the Christians by the Mussulman subjects of the sultan or to a dread of a clash ensuing between the powers themselves. The cabinets of Russia and Germany would not consent to any aggressive policy with regard to the crisis in Turkey.

George Augustus Sala, the well-known journalist and author, died at Brighton, England, aged 67 years.

LATER.

In the house resolutions were presented calling for the correspondence in the Waller case, for lists of pensioners who have been stricken from the rolls since March 4, 1893, or reduced.

The Toll Gate.

There is a toll-gate hidden away,
Half in the fields, and half in the trees,
Where the children, the elves, and the fairies stray
With footsteps facing the twilight breeze.

The fairies and elves can pass through free,
But a child must pay for the toll with a song.

Before the fairy land it can see,
And this must be said, or it all goes wrong:

"I believe in the Three Little Bears,
And the Prince that climbed the Mountain of Glass,
And I know how the Wild Swan's sister fares—
So open the gate and let me pass."
—Rudolph F. Bunner, in St. Nicholas.

An Unusual Opportunity.

It would seem that no woman reader would fail to take advantage of the offer made elsewhere in this paper by Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., Chicago, to send their Shopping Guide, "The Shoppers' Economist," absolutely free to all who write for it.

This firm has come to be known as "the quickest mail order house in the world." It is one of Chicago's oldest and most reliable firms, its business is immense, and every representation made can be relied upon. They boldly announce: "Your money back if not satisfied with your purchase."

Be sure to find and read the big display advertisement above referred to. By doing so you will probably be greatly assisted in deciding on purchases for Christmas, and the Catalogue has a fund of information that will be valuable at all seasons. And all you need do is to write for it to Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., 58 to 72 State St., Chicago.

Atlanta and the South.

The Chicago and Eastern Illinois R. R. will during the time of the Exposition at Atlanta Sept. 18 to Dec. 31, 1895, offer exceptionally fine service between Chicago and the South. A low rate ticket will be sold, and through cars run to all southern points. This is 55 miles the shortest route to Atlanta, Chattanooga and the South.

For guide to Atlanta and the Exposition address C. W. Humphrey, Northwestern Passenger Agent, St. Paul, Minn., or City Ticket Office, 230 Clark St., Chicago. Charles L. Stone, General Passenger Agent, Chicago.

To California.

Study all time cards and you will find no railroad carrying tourist cars make as quick time as the Phillips Rock Island Excursions. One hour and thirty minutes quicker time than any other route Chicago to Los Angeles.

A. Phillips & Co. have carried over 125,000 patrons to and from California. Why? Because every well-posted California traveler understands Phillips has the best regulated tourist system.

Disastrous Failure!

We can mention no failure more disastrous than that of physical energy. It involves the partial suspension of the digestive and assimilative processes, and entails the retirement from business of the liver and kidneys. Only through the good offices of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters can the restoration of its former vigorous status be hoped for. When this aid has been secured, a resumption of activity in the stomach, liver and bowels may be relied upon. The Bitters conquers malaria and kidney troubles.

Durrant had come up behind. "Yes," he said cynically. "One never knows how an enervating country may soften one's brains."

He bade them a cool good-by and left. She watched his retreating figure, the figure of the active, the strong, the handsome animal, who had scarcely won the better side of her nature at all. He never turned his head. So this was the end!

The bewildering bitterness of it well-nigh paralyzed Rosalys for a few moments. Why had they been allowed—he and she—to love one another with that eager, almost unholy, passion, and then to part with less interest in each other than ordinary friends? She felt ashamed of having ceded herself to him. If her mother had not been beside her she would have screamed out aloud in her pain.

Mrs. Ambrose lifted up her voice. "What are you looking at, child? . . . My dear, I want a little word with you. Are you sure you are attending? When you pout your lip like that, Rosalys, I always know that you are in a bad frame of mind. . . . The vicar has been here; and he has made me a little unhappy."

"I should have thought he was too stupid to give anyone a pang! Why do they put such simpletons into the churches?"

"Well—he says that people are chattering about you and that young Durrant. And I must tell you that—that, from a marrying point of view, he is impossible. You know that. And I don't want him to make up to you. Now, Rosalys, my darling, tell me honestly—I feel I have not looked after you lately as I ought to have done—tell me honestly, is he in love with you?"

"He is not, mother, to my certain knowledge."
"Are you with him?"
"No. That I swear."

CHAPTER V.

Seven years and some months had passed since Rosalys spoke as above written, and never a sound of Jim.

As she had mentally matured under the touch of the gliding seasons, Miss Ambrose had determined to net upon the hint Jim had thrown out to her as to the practical nullity of their marriage contract, if they simply kept in different hemispheres without a word. She had never written to him a line; and he had never written a line to her.

He might be dead for all that she knew; he possibly was dead. She had taken no steps to ascertain anything about him, though she had been aware for years that he was no longer in the army list. Dead or alive he was completely cut off from the country in which he and she had lived, for his father had died a long time before this, and his house and properties had been sold, and not a scion of the house of Durrant remained in that part of England.

Rosalys had readily imbibed his ideas of their mutual independence; and now, after the lapse of all these years, had acted upon them with the surprising literalness of her sex when they act upon advice at all.

Mrs. Ambrose, who had distinguished herself in no whit during her fifty years of life save by the fact of having brought a singularly beautiful girl into the world, had passed quietly out of it. Rosalys' uncle had succeeded his sister-in-law in the possession of the old house with its red tower, and the broad paths and garden lands; he had been followed by an unsatisfactory son of his, last in the entail, and thus unexpectedly Rosalys Ambrose found herself sole mistress of the spot of her birth.

People marveled somewhat that she called herself Miss Ambrose still. Though a woman now getting on for thirty she was distinctly attractive both in face and in figure, and could confront the sunlight as well as the moonbeams still. In the manner of women who are still sure of their charms, she was fond of representing herself as much older than she really was. Perhaps she would have been disappointed if her friends had not laughed and contradicted her, and told her that she was still lovely and looked like a girl. Lord Parkhurst, anyhow, was firmly of that contradictory opinion; and perhaps she cared more for his views than for anyone else's at the present time.

That distinguished sailor had been but one of many suitors; but he had stirred her heart as none of the others could do. It was not merely that he was brave and pleasing, and had returned from a campaign in Egypt with a hero's reputation; but that his chivalrous feelings towards women, originating perhaps in the fact that he knew very little about them, were sufficient to gratify the most exacting of the sex.

His rigid notions of duty and honor, both towards them and from them, made the blood of Rosalys run cold when she thought of a certain little episode of her past life, notwithstanding that, or perhaps because, she loved him dearly.

"He is not the least bit of a flirt, like most sailors," said Miss Ambrose to her cousin and companion, Miss Jennings, on a particular afternoon in this eighth year of Jim Durrant's obliteration from her life. It was an afternoon with an immense event immediately ahead of it; no less an event than Rosalys' marriage with Lord Parkhurst, which was to take place on the very next day.

The local newspaper had duly announced the coming wedding in proper terms as "the approaching nuptials of the beautiful and wealthy Miss Ambrose, of Ambrose Towers, with a distinguished naval officer, Lord Parkhurst." There followed an ornamental account of the future bridegroom's heroic conduct during the late war: "The handsome face and figure of Lord Parkhurst," wound up the honest paragraphist, "are not altogether unknown to us in this vicinity, as he has recently been visiting his uncle, Col. Lacy, high sheriff of the county. We wish all prosperity to the happy couple, who have doubtless a brilliant and cloudless future before them."

"NOW, DARLING, ABOUT WHAT WE HAVE TO SETTLE."

This was the way in which her acceptance of Durrant's views had worked themselves out. He had said: "After seven years of mutual oblivion we can marry again if we choose."

And she had chosen. Rosalys almost wished that Lord Parkhurst had been a flirt, or at least had won experience as the victim of one, or many, of those precious creatures, and had not so implicitly trusted her. It would have brought things more nearly to a level.

"A flirt! I should think not," said Jane Jennings. "In fact, Rosalys, he is almost alarmingly strict in his ideas. It is a mistake to believe that so many women are angels, as he does. He is too simple. He is bound to be disappointed some day."

Miss Ambrose sighed nervously. "Yes," she said. "I don't mean by you to-morrow. God forbid!"

"No."

Miss Ambrose sighed again, and a silence followed, during which, while recalling unutterable things of the past, Rosalys gazed absently out of the window at the lake, that some men were dredging, the mud, left bare by draining down the water, being imprinted with hundreds of little footmarks of plovers feeding there. Eight or nine herons stood further away, one or two comely fishing, their gray figures reflected with unblurred clearness in the mirror of the lake. Some little waterhens waddled with a fussy gait across the sodden ground in front of them, and a procession of wild geese came through the sky, and passed on till they faded away into a row of black dots.

Suddenly the plovers rose into the air, uttering their customary wails, and dispersing like a group of stars from a rocket; and the herons drew up their frail-like legs, and flapped themselves away.

Something had disturbed them; a carriage sweeping round to the other side of the house.

"There's the door-bell!" Rosalys exclaimed, with a start. "That's he, for certain! Is my hair untidy, Jane? I've been rumpling it awfully, leaning back on the cushions. And do see if my gown is all right at the back—it never did fit well."

The butler flung open the folding-doors and announced in the voice of a man who felt that it was quite time for this nonsense of calling to be put an end to by the more compact arrangement of the morrow:

"Lord Parkhurst!"

A man of middle size, with a fair and pleasant face, and a rather short beard, entered the room. His blue eyes smiled rather more than his lips as he took the little hand of his hostess in his own with the air of one vying on proprietorship of the same, and said: "Now, darling, about what we have to settle before morning! I have come entirely on business, as you perceive."

"Ah—my beautiful one! I have nothing to give you in return for the immeasurable gift you are about to bestow on me—excepting such love as no man ever felt before! I almost wish you were not quite so good, and perfect, and innocent as you are! And I wish you were a poorer woman—as poor as I—and had no lovely home such as this. To think you have kept yourself from all other men for such an unworthy fellow as me!"

Rosalys looked away from him along the green vistas of chestnuts and beeches stretching far down outside the windows.

want to introduce you to Miss Ambrose. Isn't she lovely? O, how stupid I am! Of course you grew up in this neighborhood, and must have known all about her as a girl."

Jim Durrant it was, in the flesh; once the soldier, now the "traveler and explorer" of the little known interior of Asiatic countries; to use the words in which he described himself. His foreign-looking and sun-dried face was rather pale and set as he walked last into the dining-room with young Lacy. He had only arrived on that day at a hotel in the nearest town, where he had been accidentally met and recognized by that young man, and asked to dinner off hand.

Smiling and apparently unconscious he sat down on the left side of his hostess, talking calmly to her and across the table to the one or two he knew. Rosalys heard his voice as the phantom of a dead sound mingling with the usual trivial words and light laughter of the rest, Lord Parkhurst's conversation about Egyptian finance, and Mrs. Lacy's platitudes about the the home rule question, as if she were living through a curiously incoherent dream.

Suddenly during the progress of the dinner Mrs. Lacy looked across with a glance of solicitude towards the other end of the table and said, in a low voice:

"I am afraid Miss Ambrose is rather overstrained—as she naturally may be. She looks so white and tired. Do you think, Parkhurst, that she finds this room too hot? I will have the window opened at the top."

"She does look pale," Lord Parkhurst murmured, and as he spoke glanced anxiously and tenderly toward his betrothed. "I think, too, she has a little overtaxed herself—she don't usually get so white as this."

Rosalys felt his eyes upon her, looked across at him and smiled strangely.

When dinner was ended Rosalys still seemed not quite herself, whereupon she was taken in hand by her good and fussy hostess; sal-volatile was brought, and she was given the most comfortable chair and the largest cushions the house afforded. It seemed to Rosalys as if hours had elapsed before the men joined the ladies, and there came that general moving of places like the shuffling of a pack of cards. She heard Jim's voice speaking close to her ear:

"I want to have a word with you."

"I can't," she faltered.

"Did you get my letter?"

"No," said she.

"I wonder how that was! Well, I'll be at the door of Ambrose towers while the stable clock is striking twelve to-night. Be there to meet me. I'll not detain you long. We must have an understanding."

"For God's sake, how do you come here?"

"I saw in the newspapers that you were going to marry. What could I do otherwise than let you know I was alive?"

"Oh, you might have done it less cruelly!"

"Will you be at the door?"

"I must, I suppose! * * * Don't tell him here—before these people! It will be such an agonizing disturbance that—"

"Of course I shan't. Be there."

This was all they could say. Lord Parkhurst came forward, and observing to Durrant: "They are wanting you for bezique," sat down beside Rosalys.

She had intended to go home early, and went even earlier than she had planned. At half-past ten she found herself in her own hall, not knowing how she had got there, or when she had bidden adieu to Lord Parkhurst, or what she had said to him.

Jim's letter was lying on the table awaiting her.

As soon as she had got upstairs and slipped into her dressing gown, had dispatched her maid and ascertained that all the household had retired, she read her husband's note, which briefly informed her that he had led an adventurous life since they had parted, and had come back to see if she were living, when he suddenly heard that she was going to be married. Then Rosalys sat down at her writing table to begin somehow a letter to Lord Parkhurst. To write that was an imperative duty, before she slept. It need not be said that awful, indeed, to her was its object, the letting Lord Parkhurst know that she had a husband, and had seen him that day. But she could not shape a single line, and the visioned aspect that she would wear in his eyes, as soon as he learned the truth of her history, was so terrible to her that she burst into hysterical sobbing over the paper as she sat.

Some Nature Hints.

There was a tender light on the girl's face as she stood looking at the sunset. The young man who was supposed to be enjoying the view with her, but who was in reality lost in rapturous contemplation of her, almost feared to breathe lest he should disturb the ecstasy of the moment for her. By and by she sighed a deep sigh of utter contentment and turned to him: "Thank you so much for bringing me to this lovely place," she said. "I know now exactly what shade of blue goes with crimson, and I have the plan of a stunning afternoon gown in my mind."—N. Y. World.

THE JUDICIARY.

Attorney General Harmon Reviews the Work of His Department.

Washington, Dec. 6.—The maiden report of Judson Harmon, as attorney general, containing a review of the operations of the department of justice for the last fiscal year, was laid before congress Friday. It treats at length of the business of the supreme court of the United States and recommends that except in capital cases appeals in criminal cases may not be taken to this court. Four years' experience has clearly shown that too much of the time of the supreme court is occupied by criminal appeals.

The number of cases in the supreme court docket at the end of October term, 1894, is stated at 640. In 1890 there were 1,190 and since that date the court has been gradually reducing the amount of accumulated business. There are, the report says, 9,000 cases on the docket of the court of claims and it is increased by 900 cases per year.

Referring to the "Greer county case" now in the supreme court Mr. Harmon states that many people have taken up claims there and "if the decision shall be in favor of the United States the question will arise whether congress should wholly disregard the claims of the settlers, as it will have an undoubted right to do, or provide legislation by which they may be protected upon making reasonable payment for the land occupied."

Mr. Harmon asks congress to direct him what to do in the Bell telephone litigation. The expense of this case, he says, is very heavy. It will take six months to prepare rebuttal testimony. He favors continuing the case to a final decision, provided the expenses can be met.

At some length Mr. Harmon discusses the Pacific railroads in their relations to the government. He says: "The Northern Pacific litigation has called attention in a striking way to the necessity which has long existed of legislation to regulate the appointment of receivers and judicial sales of railroads. Public as well as private interests require the preservation of unity of such lines in their management pending foreclosure, and in their sale. This can now be accepted only by harmony of action among the courts of the various circuits, but the appointment of receivers and the repetition of orders in each circuit cause a multiplication of trouble and expense which can well be avoided.

When, however, the different courts refuse to cooperate, not only are public and private interests in the property imperiled and costs more greatly multiplied, but there is constant risk of scandal from which the administration of justice should be kept free.

"There seems to be a general demand for relief. It can readily be afforded by providing that suits to foreclose mortgages or appoint receivers of such railroads shall be brought in the circuit where the operating offices are, or in the circuit where the chief terminals are located, or in that containing the greatest length of track; or full jurisdiction might be given to the court in which suit is first brought. The important thing is to invest a single court with control over the entire property. I beg to recommend that action be taken to this end. All risks of disputes can be avoided by giving the chief justice power of designation in case they arise."

Mr. Harmon devotes much space to the discussion of the condition of United States prisoners and prisons and says that a government prison should be erected in some southern state. During the past year the president granted 66 pardons and denied 104 and 262 applications for pardon were not submitted to him, having been adversely reported upon by the United States attorney and trial judge.

In favoring the abolition of the fee system Mr. Harmon says:

"Great vigilance has been exercised and every effort made to keep down the expenses connected with the federal courts. Excessive and illegal charges can in some measure be avoided by watchfulness and laborious investigation, but arrests and prosecutions on frivolous charges and flimsy proof to which part of these expenses is due, cannot be prevented by this department. This can be accomplished only by abolishing the system, which, by making the fees of commissioners, marshals, clerks and attorneys the source of their compensation, presents a constant inducement to unnecessary arrests and litigation.

"The 40 per cent. of unsuccessful prosecutions during the past year, which is less than usual, does not, of course, include the cases wherein persons are arrested and charged on preliminary hearing, or those wherein the charges are ignored by grand juries. Not only do the fees of commissioners and those of marshals and witnesses with mileage in these cases cause a large annual expenditure to the government, but annoyance and loss of time are inflicted on those involved as parties and witnesses, which indirectly work both material and moral injury to the public. Besides, a class of professional witnesses and informers grows up in many sections, to the scandal of the administration of justice. The discovery in northern Alabama of a widespread conspiracy among commissioners and deputy marshals to extort money from the government by means of fraudulent charges of fees and the recent conviction of such of the conspirators as failed to escape only call renewed attention in a striking way to the evils of the fee system. These have been so often mentioned to congress by different presidents and attorneys general that anything I could say would be mere repetition.

"Considerations of mere economy should not prevail when the tone of such an important branch of the public service is involved, but such considerations are always of weight, and I wish to call attention to the fact that little if any additional expense need be involved in the change from payment by fees to payment by salaries. Indeed that change may well be hoped eventually to prove a measure of economy, as I think the experience of many of the states has shown."

The expenses of the federal courts for 1895 were $5,412,718, and the criminal cases pending July 1, 1895, numbered 12,405 and terminated during the year 25,949, of which 60 per cent. were decided in favor of the government. The number of civil cases terminated was 2,751, of which 62 per cent. were won by the government.

DENIED TO DURRANT.

The Famous Murderer Is Refused a New Trial.

San Francisco, Dec. 7.—Judge Murphy Friday morning denied the motion for a new trial in the case of W. S. T. Durrant, convicted of the murder of Blanche Lamont, and ordered that he be turned over to the warden of San Quentin penitentiary to be kept until the date has been fixed for passing sentence upon him. Judge Murphy said he approved the verdict of the jury, it being the only one that could have been rendered under the circumstances. The defense gave notice of an appeal.

HON. A. J. HOPKINS representative in Congress from this district, is a worthy opponent of the Chicago candidate for Governor, and as the canvass progresses the Cook county bosses will find that the yeomanry of Illinois are not to be led by the nose by a coterie of office-seekers in that tax-ridden city. Cook county contains an immense population and is entitled to a fair share of the good things of the state, but there is a line where its demands must be met with a firm refusal. That county and city occupies about four-fifths of the time of the State Assembly, and its representatives stop at no combination to encompass its desires, but there must be an end. It comes now. They are in the field for Governor, for State Treasurer, and for United States Senator, with other wants to be made known as candidates multiply. The rest of the State cries "Halt! We are in the field for the chief executive, and we are going to have him."

The larger part of the Republicans of Illinois are favorable to A. J. Hopkins. He has made many friends during the few weeks he has been making a canvass not only at home and in Northern Illinois, but in the central and southern part of the State, where Mr. Tanner is supposed to have a large following. And Mr. Hopkins is worthy promotion. He has won his spurs. He has come up from a farmer boy to be one of the best known public men in the country. He has served ten years in Congress; has been for some time a member of the Committee on Ways and Means in the House, the most important committee in Congress; he is clasped with such as Thomas Reed, William McKinley, Crisp and other leaders in both parties; and it is probable that he will be made chairman of that committee in the coming session. This much is said to show that Mr. Hopkins is a man of brains, a man of principal, and a man who will be an honor to the people as Governor of Illinois.

Some of the strongest men in southern part of the State are for him. General "Jim" Martin, who was commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Illinois, and who was chairman of the Illinois State Republican committee a short time ago, is for Hopkins and says so. There is no better man in the State than General Martin, nor one who has more political perspicuity. We have received word from many old political friends in different parts of the state that the Tanner movement is not popular among the people, not because of anything wrong with Mr. Tanner, but because of his following.

And all Chicago is not for Tanner. Mr. Hopkins' friends in that city are as much opposed to a Cook county grab game as are the people outside, and they want fair play all over the state. The delegates to the state convention from Cook county will be elected by senatorial districts, and A. J. Hopkins will get a goodly number of them.

As things look now, Mr. Hopkins will be our next Governor, and the Eighth District will labor to a man to further his cause, and thus do honor to the intelligence and wealth of our strong republicans.—Kendall County Record.

Average Attendance Per Room, 36.2.
Per cent of attendance, 92.

Taking the school throughout the interest has been good and the work satisfactory. Considering the disagreeable weather and the distance many of the country pupils have to come, the attendance has been very good. The upper rooms met in the high school room Nov. 22nd, for oratorical exercises. Everything passed off pleasantly and all the pupils but two who were on the program responded their names. A number of visitors were present and expressed themselves as well pleased. We are always glad to have visitors attend these exercises and will say come again.

The Primary rooms on the 27th of Nov. came together in the primary room for oratorical exercises and spent an enjoyable time together in listening to the little recitations, songs and dialogues by the little ones. It was rather difficult to crowd them in with the pupils in the upper rooms so they met below.

In the upper rooms, most of the week before Thanksgiving was spent in reviewing and examinations. It was a hard week for both pupil and teacher, but now the pupils are all graded and some feel glad while others feel sad. The majority of the pupils did well in the examination, some of them averaging over 90 per cent. Some of course ran low in their grade as was expected.

Cards will be sent out to the parents this week giving the work, attendance, deportment, etc. for the first three months. We hope all parents will look at these cards carefully and sign them and return them to the teachers. In addition to the cards we have procured a record in which all the work done by each pupil from the time he enters until he quits will be recorded. This is badly needed in school.

In conclusion let me say the work of the school has been quite satisfactory. All the teachers have been prompt in all their duties, no one has been tardy and but one day has been taught by a substitute, caused by the death of a relative. The pupils generally are obedient and well-behaved, some exceptions of course. Quite a number on department for the first three months are perfect.

The school will close on the 29th, for holidays and as this is the last report before Christmas, we wish pupils teachers and everybody, "A Merry Christmas" and "A Happy New Year."

Respectfully submitted,
JOSEPH GREY, Supt.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenk, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter. Geo. Shurtleff Dead.
Wednesday morning at quarter past three occurred the death of Geo. Shurtleff. He was born in Derby, Vermont, on the 15th. of Feb., 1821.

Mr. Shurtleff was probably one of the best known old settlers in this district. He came to this county in the fall of 1852 and settled on a farm near here where he made his chosen vocation a decided success. He had a wide circle of friends in this county, and every one who knew Geo. Shurtleff were confident they had a friend indeed, for he was always the same wherever he might be. After storing up enough to warrant him a comfortable living for the remainder of his life, he retired from the farm and removed his family to Genoa where he has resided ever since. Mr. Shurtleff was a God fearing man, being a member of the Christian Advent Church for many years.

The funeral services take place this morning at eleven o'clock, Rev. French officiating.

Hurrah for a Good Time!

The Genoa Band will give an oyster supper tomorrow night, which will be served from 5:30 to 7:30, and there will be a liberal supply of oysters in each bowl, as the band boys never do anything by halves: the last entertainment given by them is sufficient evidence. Every one who is interested in the welfare of the band should come and patronize them. After supper has been served an entertainment will be given, every number to be executed by a member of the band. And last, but not least, comes a dance for which good music will be furnished, and you may be assured that no disorderly conduct of any kind will be tolerated in the hall. Come and have a jolly time. The supper will cost 25c and you can dance as long as you wish for another 25 cent piece.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alternative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding Nature in the performance of the functions. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Prices 50c. and $1.00 at L. C. Shaffer's, Kingston and F. T. Robinson's, Genoa.

The Most Joyous of All.

Last Friday evening about fifty conspirators gathered at the home of Mrs. Kate Cozzens from which place they were conveyed in bob sleighs and cutters out to the magnificent residence of A. V. Pierce and precipitated a complete surprise on that estimable family. Talk about gay times, it was the event of the season. The joyous company immediately took possession of the whole mansion, and during the entire evening rippling laughter could be heard from basement to garret. The spacious dining room was cleared and given up the lovers of the mazy waltz and fascinating quadrille, even Mr. Pierce could not resist the temptation and went through the quadrille for the first time in fifteen years. Others who did not care to dance indulged in a game of cards and other pleasant games. The intruders had brought refreshments with them which were served about eleven o'clock. The party did not break up until one o'clock, when they reluctantly wended their way home-ward, after receiving a very cordial invitation from Mr. and Mrs. Pierce to come again.

The wife of Mr. Dr. Robinson, a prominent lumberman of Hartwick, N. Y., was sick with rheumatism for five months. In speaking of it Mr. Robinson says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that gave her any rest from pain. For the relief of pain it cannot be beat." Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by F. T. Robinson, Genoa and L. C. Shaffer, Kingston.

The Kirkland Reporter has been enlarged to a six-column folio and a decided improvement is noted.

In 1892 Mr. A. L. Coldwater, who owns three retail drug stores in New York City, having learned of the great value of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for colds, croup and whooping cough, ordered a supply for his customers. It met with so much success that he found it necessary to order more, and during the winter sold over two gross of the remedy. He says it gives the best satisfaction of any cough cure he ever handled. For sale at 25 and 50c. per bottle by F. T. Robinson, Genoa and H. R. Fuller Kingston.

THE OPENING WINTER.

Rev. Dr. Talmage Delivers a Few Words of Warning

Against the Temptations and Allurements That Beset the Paths of Young Men During the Long Winter Evenings.

The following discourse on "The Opening Winter" was delivered by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage before his Washington congregation, being especially addressed to the young men of his flock. It is based on the text:

I have determined there to winter.—Titus iii, 12.

Paul was not independent of the seasons. He sent for his overcoat to Troas on a memorable occasion. And now in the text he is making arrangements for the approaching cold weather, and makes an appointment with Titus to meet him at Nicopolis, saying: "Well, this is the eighth day of December and the second Sabbath of the winter. We have had a few shrill, sharp blasts already, forerunners of whole regiments of storms and tempests. No one here needs to be told that we are in the opening gates of the winter. This season is not only a test of one's physical endurance, but in our great cities is a test of moral character. A vast number of people have by one winter of dissipation been destroyed, and forever. Seated in our homes on some stormy night, the winds howling outside, we imagine the shipping helplessly driven on the coast, but any winter night, if our ears were good enough, we could hear the crash of a thousand moral shipwrecks. There are many people who came to the cities on the first of September who will be blasted by the first of March. At this season of the year temptations are especially rampant. Now that the long winter evenings have come, there are many who will employ them in high pursuits, in intelligent socialities, in Christian work, in the strengthening and ennobling of moral character, and this winter to many of you will be the brightest and the best of all your lives, and in anticipation I congratulate you. But to others it may not have such effect, and I charge you, my beloved, look out where you spend your winter nights.

In the first place, I have to remark that at this season of the year evil allurements are especially busy. There is not very much temptation for a man to plunge in on a hot night amid blazing gaslights, and to breathe the fetid air of an assemblage, but in the cold nights Satan gathers a great harvest. At such times the casinos are in full blast. At such times the grogshops in one night make more than in four or five nights in summer. At such times the play bills of low places of entertainment seem especially attractive, and the acting is especially impressive, and the applause especially bewitching. Many a man who has kept right all the rest of the year will be capsized now, and, though last autumn he came from the country and there was luster in the eye and there were roses in the cheek and elasticity in the step, by the time the spring hour has come you will pass him in the street and say to your friend: "What's the matter with that man? How differently he looks from what he looked last September." Slain from one winter's dissipation. At this time of the year there are many entertainments. If we rightly employ them, and they are of the right kind, they enlarge our socialities, allow us to make important acquaintance, build us up in our morals, and help us in a thousand ways. I can scarcely think of anything better than good neighborhood. But there are those entertainments from which others will come bespoiled in character. There are those who by the springtime will be broken down in health, and though at the opening of the season their prospects were bright, at the close of the season they will be in the hands of the doctors, or sleeping in the cemetery. The certificate of death will be made out, and the physician, to save the feelings of the family, will call the disease by a Latin name. But the doctor knows, and everybody else knows, they died of two many levees. Away with all these wine-drinking convivialities. How dare you, the father of a family, tempt the appetites of the young people? Perhaps at the entertainment, to save the feelings of the minister or some other weak temperance man, you leave the decanter in a side room, and only a few people are invited there to partake; but it is easy enough to know when you come out, the glare of your eye and the stench of your breath, that you have been serving the devil.

Men sometimes excuse themselves and say, after late suppers it is necessary to take some stimulant to aid digestion. My plain opinion is that if you have no more self-control than to stuff yourself until your digestive organs refuse their office, you had better not call yourself a man, but class yourself among the beasts that perish. At this season of the year the Young Men's Christian associations of the land send out circulars asking the pastors to speak a word on this subject, and so I sound in your ear the words of the Lord God Almighty: "Woe unto him that putteth the bottle to his neighbor's lips." Rejoice that you have come to the glad winter months that remind you of the times when in your childhood you were shone on by the face of father, mother, brothers, sisters, some of them, alas! no more to meet you with a "Happy New Year," or a "Merry Christmas." But again and again have we seen on New Year's day the sons of some of the best families drunk, and young men have excused themselves by the fact that the wine-cup has been offered by the ladies; and again and again it has been found out that a lady's hand has kindled the young man's thirst for strong drink, and long after all the attractions of the holiday have passed that same woman crouches in her rags, and her desolation, and her woe under the uplifted hand of the drunken monster to whom she had passed the fascinating cup on New Year's day. If we want to go to ruin let us go alone and not take others with us. Can we not sacrifice our feelings if need be?

When the good ship London went down the captain was told that he might escape in one of the lifeboats. "No," he replied, "I'll go down with the passenger." All the world applauded his heroism. And can we not sacrifice our tastes and our appetites for the rescue of others? Surely it is not a very great sacrifice. Oh, mix not with the innocent beverage of the holiday the poison of adders! Mix not with the white sugar of the cup the snow of this awful leprosy! Mar not the clatter of the cutlery of the festive occasion with the clank of a madman's chain. Pass down the street and look into the pawnbroker's window. Elegant watch, elegant furs, elegant flute, elegant shoes, elegant scarf, elegant books, elegant mementoes. You sometimes see people with pleased countenance looking into such a window. When I look into a pawnbroker's window, it seems to me as if I had looked into the window of hell! To whom did that watch belong? To a drunkard. To whom did those furs belong? To a drunkard's wife. To whom did those shoes belong? To a drunkard's child. I take the three brazen balls at the doorway of a pawnbroker's shop, and I clank them together, sounding the knell of the drunkard's soul. A pawnbroker's shop is only one of the eddies in the great torrent of municipal drunkenness. "Oh," says some one, "I don't patronize such things. I have destroyed no young man by such influences. I only take ale, and it will take a great amount of ale to intoxicate." Yes; but I tell you there is not a drunkard in America that did not begin with ale. Three X's—I do not know what they mean. Three X's on the brewer's dray, three X's on the door of the gin shop, three X's on the side of the bottle. Three X's, I asked a man. He could not tell. I asked another what is the meaning of the three X's. He could not tell me. Then I made up my mind that the three X's were an allegory, and that they meant thirty heart-breaks, thirty agonies, thirty broken-up households, thirty prospects of a drunkard's grave, thirty ways to perdition. Three X's. If I were going to write a story, the first chapter I would call Three X's, and the last chapter I would call the pawnbroker's shop. Oh, beware of your influence.

The winter season is especially full of temptation, because of the long evenings, allowing such full swing for evil indulgences. You can scarcely expect a young man to go into his room and sit there from seven o'clock in the evening, reading Motley's "Dutch Republic," or John Foster's essays. It would be a very beautiful thing for him to do, but he will not do it. The most of our young men are busy in offices, in factories, in banking houses, in stores, in shops, and when evening comes they want the fresh air, and they want sightseeing, and they must have it, they will have it, and they ought to have it. Most of the men here assembled will have three or four evenings of leisure on the winter nights. After tea, the man puts on his hat and coat, and he goes out. One form of allurements says: "Come in here." Satan says: "It is best for you to go in; you ought not to be so green; by this time you ought to have seen everything," and the temptations shall be mighty in dull times such as we have had, but which, I believe are gone; for I hear all over the land the prophecy of great prosperity, and the railroad men, and the merchants, they all tell me of the days of prosperity they think are coming, and in many departments they have already come, and they are going to come in all departments; but those dull times through which we have passed have destroyed a great many men. The question of a livelihood is with a vast multitude the great question. There are young men who expected before this to set up their household, but they have been disappointed in the gains they have made. They can not support themselves; how can they support others? and, to the curse of modern society, the theory is abroad that a man must not marry until he has achieved a fortune, when the twain ought to start at the foot of the hill and together climb to the top. That is the old-fashioned way, and that will be the new-fashioned way if society is ever redeemed. But during the hard times, the dull times, so many men were discouraged, so many men had nothing to do—they could get nothing to do—a pirate bore down on the ship when the sails were down and the vessel was making no headway. People say they want more time to think. The trouble is, too many people have had too much time to think, and if our merchants had not had their minds diverted many of them would long before this have been within the four walls of an insane asylum. These long winter evenings, be careful where you spend them. This winter will decide the temporal and eternal destiny of hundreds of men in this audience.

Oh! make your home bright. Bring in the violin or the picture. It does not require a great salary or a big house, or chased silver, or gorgeous upholstery to make a happy home. All that is wanted is a father's heart, a mother's heart, in sympathy with young folks. I have known a man with seven hundred dollars salary, and he had a home so happy and bright, that, though the sons have gone out and won large fortunes, and the daughters have gone out into splendid spheres, and become princesses of society, they can never think of that early home without tears of emotion. It was to them the vestibule of Heaven, and all their mansions now, and all their palaces now, can not make them forget that early place. Make your homes happy. You go around your house growing about your rheumatism and acting the lugubrious, and your sons will go into the world and plunge into dissipation. They will have their own rheumatism after awhile. Do not forestall their misfortunes. You were young once, and you had your bright and joyous times. Now let the young folks have a good time. I stood in front of a house and I said to the owner of the house: "This is a splendid tree." He said, in a whining tone: "Yes, but it will fade." I walked around in his garden, and said: "This is a glorious garden you have." "Yes," he said, "but it will perish." Then he said to my little child, whom I was leading along: "Come and kiss me." The child protested and turned away. He said: "Oh, the perversity of human nature!" Who would want to kiss him? I was not surprised to find out that his only son had become a vagabond. You may groan people out of decency, but you can never groan them into it, and I declare in the presence of these men and women of common sense that it is a most important thing for you to make your homes bright if you want your sons and daughters to turn out well.

Oh, what a beautiful thing it is to be a young man standing up amid these temptations of city life incorrupt while hundreds are falling. I will tell you your history. You seem to be prospering; you look like your father for all the world; I thought you would turn out well when I used to hold you on my knee; if you ever want any help or any advice, come to me; as long as I remember your father I'll remember you. Good morning." That will be the history of hundreds of these young men. How do I know it? I know it by the way you start. But here's a young man who takes the opposite route; voices of sin charm him away. The glow has gone from his cheek and the sparkle from his eye, and the purity from his soul. Down he goes, little by little. The people who saw him when he came to town while yet hovered over his head the blessing of a pure mother's prayer and there was on his lips the dew of a pure sister's kiss, now as they see him pass cry: "What an awful wreck!" Cheek bruised in grogshop fight. Eye bleared with dissipation. Lip swollen with indulgences. Be careful what you say to him, for a trifle he would take your life. Lower down, lower down, until, outcast of God and man, he lies in the asylum, a blotch of loneliness and pain. One moment he calls for God and then he calls for rum. He prays, he curses, he laughs as a fiend laughs, then bites his nails into the quick, then puts his hands through the hair hanging around his head like the mane of a wild beast, then shivers until the cot shakes, with unutterable terror, then with his fists fights back the devils, or clutches for serpents that seem to wind around him their awful folds, then asks for water which is instantly consumed on his cracked lips.

Some morning the surgeon going his rounds will find him dead. Do not try to come out or brush back the matted locks. Straighten out the limbs, wrap him in a sheet, put him in a box, and let two men carry him down to the wagon at the door. With a piece of chalk write on top of the box the name of the destroyer and the destroyed. Who is it? It is you, oh, man, if, yielding to the temptations of a dissipated life you go out and perish. There is a way that seemeth bright and fair and beautiful to a man, but the end thereof is death. Employ these long nights of December, January and February in high pursuits, in intelligent socialities, in innocent amusements, in Christian work. Do not waste this winter, for soon you will have seen your last snow shower, and have gone up into the companionship of Him whose raiment is white as snow, whiter than any fuller on earth could whiten it. For all Christian hearts the winter nights of earth will end in the June morning of Heaven. The river of life from under the throne never freezes over. The foliage of life's fair tree is never frost-bitten. The festivities, the hilarities, the family greetings of earthly Christmas times will give way to larger reunion, and brighter lights and sweeter garlands and mightier joy in the great holiday of Heaven.

AT CONSTANTINOPLE.

Dilatory Tactics of the Crafty Ruler of the Turks.

British Marines Landed at Pera—Said Pasha Fears the Wrath of the Sultan—Guardship Question Still Open—The Sivas Massacres.

London, Dec. 7.—Special dispatches from Constantinople allege that H. M. S. Imogene and Coekatrice have landed blue jackets at Pera to protect the English embassy. Pera is a suburb of Constantinople, on the north side of the "Golden Horn," on the summit of the hill above Galata and Tophane. It is two miles in length, chiefly inhabited by Franks, and comprises the residences of several ambassadors, with Greek and Roman Catholic churches, a Mohammedan college, and a monastery of Dervishes.

Constantinople, Dec. 6.—The porte has made a demand upon the British embassy for the surrender of Said Pasha, president of the council of state and formerly grand vizier, who has taken refuge in the embassy because he feared arrest, if nothing worse, if he complied with the sultan's commands that he reside in the palace. The demand has been refused by Sir Philip Currie, British ambassador, and Said Pasha is still under the protection of the embassy.

Nobody here doubts that Said Pasha had good reason to seek the protection of the British ambassador, and the situation is recognized on all sides as being extremely critical. When the sultan was informed of the course taken by Said Pasha he was greatly incensed and made several futile attempts to induce the fugitive to return to his house. Hesen Tewfik Pasha and other ministers to the British embassy, where they had a long interview with Said Pasha, and held out all kinds of promises to him on the sultan's behalf. But all their efforts to persuade the pasha to leave the embassy came to nothing, Said firmly refusing to trust himself outside of his asylum.

Later in the day, Tewfik Pasha visited Sir Philip Currie and begged the ambassador to do his utmost to induce Said Pasha to return to his home, making use of the argument that the fight of the president of the council of state was certain to have a very bad effect upon the population of Constantinople and might cause trouble of a most serious nature. But all these arguments were thrown away upon Sir Philip, who, after listening quietly to all that his caller had to say, politely told him that he could not interfere in the matter. He added that Said Pasha had asked for an asylum and that his request had been granted. There the matter ended, so far as the British ambassador was concerned.

The feature of the political situation here is the step taken by Said Pasha, president of the council of state, and formerly grand vizier, in seeking refuge with his son, aged about 12 years, in the British embassy. An investigation of the affair shows that the sultan sent a special messenger to Said Pasha, inviting him to occupy the chalet within the grounds of the Yildiz park. Fully aware of the significance of this invitation, Said Pasha declined. This is said to have made Abdul Hamid take steps to arrest the former grand vizier, who is suspected by the palace people of intriguing for the deposition of the present sultan.

Abdul Hamid, it seems, believed that Said Pasha was trying to influence the council of state to declare him (the sultan) suffering from weakness of mind. This so enraged Abdul Hamid that he determined to get Said Pasha out of the way. It may not have been the plan to actually murder the latter; but nobody doubts that if he had been enticed into the Yildiz chalet he would have at least remained there a close prisoner for a long time to come, and some morning the news of his "suicide" would possibly have been circulated. When Said Pasha heard that the sultan, nerved to desperation by the intimations of the palace courtiers, had determined upon his arrest, he lost no time in placing himself under the protection of Sir Philip Currie.

Constantinople, Dec. 8, via Sofia, Bulgaria, Dec. 9.—The situation here on the question of the extra guardships of the powers remains unchanged and continues to offer a tribute to the powers of delay and evasion of oriental diplomacy as practiced by the Turkish government. Statements are constantly reiterated of the continued accord of the powers on the subject and their unyielding determination to insist upon a compliance with their demands. Less is heard, however, of the rumors which were of frequent occurrence in the early period after the demand had been presented, that the sultan had at length decided to grant the necessary firman to permit the passage of the Dardanelles, or even that he had actually issued them.

Opinion continues divided as to whether the delay in taking any action to enforce the demands is due to a fear of causing a fanatical outbreak against the Christians by the Mussulman subjects of the sultan or to a dread of a clash ensuing between the powers themselves.

The British embassy is surrounded by police spies. Lord Salisbury has sent a message to Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador, expressing his approval of his conduct in harboring Said Pasha. In the meantime the gates of the embassy are closed, and a force from the Imogene patrols the grounds.

Authentic details have been received of the Sivas massacres. They show that the slaughter began on November 12 and continued for a week following. It is known that 1,200 Armenians and ten Turks were killed before there was a cessation of the bloody work. The stricken Armenians have gathered the mangled remains of their kinsmen and buried them in a great trench in the cemetery. The Armenian villages in the vicinity were also looted and the people left to beg and die. The winter will bring terrible suffering to all the living victims of the outrages.

At the village of Pasuan, near Erzingjan, the Kurds and Turks attacked a crowd of Armenians who had taken refuge in the Armenian church and killed 40 of them. Altogether 400 were killed and 800 were wounded in the Erzingjan district.

STATE OF TRADE.

Business Situation Reviewed by Bradstreet and Dun.

New York, Dec. 7.—Bradstreet's says: "Business is still sluggish, as if gored by excessive indulgence of the appetite of buying when prices were advancing. In nearly every branch stocks not yet distributed to consumers stand in the way of new orders, and competition of a producing force largely exceeding the present demand puts down prices, that decline retarding purchases yet more. After the holidays men look for a large demand. Financial influences have not hindered, and really has the opening of a session of congress affected business so little.

"Wheat has advanced about a cent for the week. The best western estimates of the crop have been raised again. Corn moves from farms less freely than a year ago, the low price hindering. Cotton has been weak again, declining a quarter for the week. Iron and its products are lower. Foot and shoe shipments for the week are larger than last year, and manufacturers are getting increased orders with general reduction in prices, but leather has declined. Hides are about half a cent lower.

"With all the shrinkage in present business and prices, it is encouraging to find but a small increase in failures. 'Abilities for four weeks of November were $12,092,293, against $10,581,873 last year. Manufacturing liabilities were $3,560,681, against $5,242,849 last year; but trading liabilities only $6,728,912, against $7,207,367 last year. Failures in the United States for the week have been 324, against 385 last year, and 53 in Canada, against 40 last year."

R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say:

"General trade continues the features of preceding weeks—smaller volume, quiet in most lines, business being conducted conservatively, activity only among dealers in woollens, clothing, shoes and hats. And new orders generally of a winter character. The season has been a late one, prolonged mild weather having delayed orders until the Christmas demand and the belated autumn request came together. Notwithstanding almost uniform reports of quiet and unchanged conditions it should be noted that Jacksonville, Augusta and Birmingham at the south, Milwaukee, Kansas City and St. Louis at the west, prove exceptions to the rule by reporting gains in demand for wholesale staple goods compared with the preceding week. The course of prices also shows a more favorable tendency. Indian corn and wheat showing advances, prices of flour, pork, rice and tobacco being firm and unchanged, while lower prices are furnished by oats, lard, coffee, cotton, print cloth, petroleum, leather, hides and lumber, coal, southern pig iron, Bessemer pig iron, live hogs and live cattle."

NAVIGATION CLOSES.

End of the Season on the Great Lakes—Disasters for the Year.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—At noon to-day navigation on the lakes for the season of 1895 closes. The volume of lake business in all lines of traffic except grain from Chicago has exceeded all previous records. Marine men call it a reasonable season because of the steady rise from extreme depression to extreme activity.

Next season will see an enormous increase in tonnage on the lakes. Boats with a greater capacity than those under construction at all other ship yards in the United States are now being built on the lakes. In freight alone there will be 21 steel steamers of the 6,000-ton class, six steel schooners of equal capacity, and nine large wooden vessels ready for business for the first time next spring.

In navigating the great lakes the lives of 58 seamen were lost during the season. Few of them were lost in wrecks. The most serious loss of life was the foundering of the Canadian steamer Africa on Georgian bay in October. By far the larger number of lives lost were from sailors falling overboard or into the holds of their vessels. Forty-three boats valued at $778,700 and measuring 20,195 net tons were lost. Twenty-three of them went ashore, nine foundered, four were burned and seven went down after collisions.

Rebels Defeated.

Havana, Dec. 6.—On December 2 the Spanish columns under the command of Gen. Suarez Valdez and Navarro, numbering 1,250 men combined, had an engagement with the united insurgent forces of Maximo Gomez and Maceo, which have formed a junction in Biforma, between Las Villas and Camaguey. The rebels, who were 4,000 strong, lost a large number of killed and wounded. The Spanish troops captured rebel camp and pursued the insurgents to Trilladeros.

Named for the Supreme Bench.

Washington, Dec. 4.—The president on Tuesday nominated Rufus W. Peckham, of New York, to be associate justice of the United States supreme court, to succeed the late Howell E. Jackson, of Tennessee. Judge Peckham is a resident of Albany and judge of the court of appeals of New York. His name has been mentioned frequently for the office to which he was nominated Tuesday.

LEADERS OF LABOR.

American Federation Annual Session Begins.

Many Prominent in the Cause Attend the New York Meeting—Salient Points of the Address of President McBride.

New York, Dec. 10.—The convention of the American Federation of Labor was opened Monday at the Madison Square garden. Labor leaders from all over the country, Canada and Great Britain are present to lend their prestige to the importance of the convention as an assemblage of the leading representatives of the organized working class of the United States.

The greatest interest is already displayed in the election of officers, and the friends of the candidates are actively canvassing for votes. Samuel Gompers, ex-president of the federation, is sure to be a candidate for the office again. Interest also centers in the proposition to remove the headquarters from Indianapolis.

John McBride, president of the federation, called the convention to order, and introduced J. W. Sullivan, of this city, who delivered the address of welcome.

President McBride responded in appropriate terms.

A committee on credentials was announced and the convention took a recess until two o'clock in order to give the committee time to prepare its report. There were only one or two contesting delegations.

Upon the reassembling of the convention, the committee on credentials reported in favor of seating 83 delegates, and that there were six protests for the consideration of which the committee asked further time. The report was accepted. The chairman announced the committees, after which he read his annual report, as follows:

"While there has been and is now a material improvement in trade conditions, as compared to those of the previous two and one-half years, yet the improvement has not been as pronounced as press reports would lead us to believe, and such as it was, beneficial as it has been, it did not relieve the strain upon the American Federation of Labor until late in the year. This, because nearly all afflicted organizations had created obligations, during the continued industrial depression, that had to be discharged before their obligations to us could be met.

"Regardless of the many advantages under which the Federation labored during the year, such progress was made in our work that I am able to congratulate you upon the fact that both numerically and financially the American Federation is stronger to-day than it was at the end of 1894, and to assure you that the prospects for the future are full of promise for the success of the trade union movement.

"The year 1895 has been noted for the large number of small, or local, rather than large, prolonged strikes. The most stubbornly contested strikes were those of the garment workers in eastern cities, and while, in each case, the workers did not secure all they demanded and were entitled to, they resulted in gains of such a beneficial character that every member of the craft should take pride in sustaining their national union, which originated the demands, inaugurated and successfully conducted the fight for improved conditions. The largest and longest strike of the year was that of the coal miners in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia and Virginia. The settlements made, while giving higher prices to mine laborers, did not give the satisfaction and security that the strikers wanted, and, because of this the year has been one of agitation and uncertainty in mining districts. The officials of the United Mine Workers have had a hard year's work and it now looks as though their efforts to bring order out of chaos would be rewarded by not only securing higher wages, but by wiping out of existence the company, or as it is better known, the truck store system—a system by which mine workers have been shamefully robbed.

"The passage of the McGuire bill by congress afforded some relief to seamen, but not all that they required. I would advise that your efforts in their behalf be continued until the laws of our country are so strengthened that they will guarantee protection and fair treatment to every seaman that sails under our flag. The Phillips bill, providing for a commission to inquire into and report upon the legislation needed by labor, did not become a law, but its author, Mr. Phillips, has been re-elected and will endeavor to secure its passage at the present session of congress, and steps should be taken by this convention to aid him in his efforts."

"The greatest crime of the nineteenth century, and the most remarkable ever perpetrated upon our people, was that committed by the present national administration in adding to the bonded indebtedness of our country during a time of peace. The attempt to maintain a gold reserve of $100,000,000 by a contract such as was made with the Belmont-Morgan syndicate, was farcical to say the least, but a farce only in so far as it was intended to blind the people to the fact that they were being robbed, deliberately and unmercifully, in the interests of eastern bankers and bondholders, whose only desire has been and now is the perpetuation of a system of bonded indebtedness on the part of the government.

"The eastern bankers, if permitted, will continue draining the gold reserve until new bonds replace the old ones and an interest-bearing indebtedness has been again established and the life of the national banks prolonged beyond the present generation of men.

"Have we a political programme? This is a disputed question. The Denver convention by separate and distinct votes adopted 12 declarations of political belief but a motion to adopt as a whole was defeated, and in consequence of this it is held by some that the previous declarations were invalidated, while others are of the opinion that each declaration was complete in itself and that the motion to adopt as a whole was superfluous, and its adoption or rejection by the convention could neither add nor take from the declarations previously made. In my judgment the latter position is the correct one, but I have not been called upon to render a decision on the question, and to satisfy those who entertained doubts in the matter I ask that you clearly define the position you intend to hold along political lines.

"Whether the declarations made at the Denver convention are approved or disapproved by you, the self-evident truth confronts us that wage-workers cannot hope to be free in the shops, mines and factories while trudging in party slavery to the polls. As an organization we may decide to leave politics alone, but unfortunately for the interests of the organization and its members, politics will not let us alone, hence we are compelled, not from a sentimental, but from a purely business standpoint, to consider and act politically in such a manner and along such lines as will yield practical results to the trade union movement in its efforts to ameliorate the wage-workers' condition in life.

"While disagreeing over different issues, we all agree that reforms are needed and it should be our purpose at this time to act only on matters of moment upon which all are in hearty accord, and if this is done it will be an easy matter to form a plan of action both political and cooperative that will succeed in taking from our federal courts powers which have lately been arrogated by and not delegated to them; to agree upon a method of shortening the term of organized labor by legislation to eight per day, or less, thus enhancing the value of work and wages. At this time it is not independent party, but independent voting that will accomplish beneficial and speedy results. By cooperating in the support of men and measures favorable to labor interests you would soon have all parties striving to secure the votes of organized labor by this method the nationalizing of the means of transportation and communication could be accomplished and the municipal ownership of water, heat, light and power plants be assured."

The secretary reported that during the year the organization spent for the defense of miners and other unions, for the defense of Debs, the lecturing tour of Burns and Holmes, etc., $3,467. The receipts for the year were $18,943.54; expenses, $16,612.42, leaving a balance on hand October 31, 1895, of $2,331.12. The secretary says: The total amount contributed to the Debs fund this year and last was $1,386.41. He continues: "While we cannot report any great apparent gains in the field of labor during the past year, the agitation and education that is progressing along economic lines is particularly noticeable."

The report of John B. Lennon, treasurer, shows that the total income during the year was $18,943.54; total expenses, $16,612.42; balance in hands of treasurer, $2,331.12.

After brief addresses by John Swinton and Father Ducey, the convention adjourned until to-day.

A mass-meeting was held at Cooper union at night. Samuel Gompers acted as chairman of the meeting. Mr. Gompers made a brief address, in which he said that the objects of the convention of the American Federation of Labor were to bring about unity of action between the trades unions of the country and to decide what might be best to advance the interests of the toilers of the country.

The chairman then introduced John McBride, president of the American Federation of Labor, who talked about the liberties of the people and compared the cause of the Cubans now to that of the Americans at the time of the revolution. Addresses were also made by John B. Lennon, the federation's treasurer; James O'Connell, president of the International Machinists' association, and Henry Weissman.

Fate of Two Thieves.
Fairmount, W. Va., Dec. 10.—Three men robbed the general store of Joseph Hood, about 15 miles below here, between here and Morgantown, late Saturday night. Sunday the goods were found caught on the dam below, and Monday two dead bodies and an upturned skiff and more goods were found. The men are unidentified thus far. A third man probably escaped, as wet goods were found on the bank. They had probably overloaded the skiff with goods, sinking it.

Went on with His Sermon.
Butte, Mont., Dec. 9.—George Bretherton, a wealthy rancher living near Meeker, aged 79, who has been visiting his sons, prominent merchants in Butte, dropped dead in the Mountain View Methodist church during services. The body was removed from the church and Rev. Mr. Rollins, without interruption, continued his sermon.

Take a Hint from Mary.

Mary had a little lamb;
You do not look surprised;
Of course you don't, for Mary has Been widely advertised.

And something you may learn from this,
If you are not a clam;
You can be just as widely known
As Mary and her lamb.

Your name can be a household word,
And you be known so well
That folks will confidently buy
The things you have to sell.

And when you once have got yourself
Into the cheering rays
Of the sunlight of publicity
You bet your life it pays.

Here are some good instructions for killing a newspaper. Just let your subscription go. It's only a dollar or two—the publisher don't need it. If he asks you for it just get as mad as you can and tell him to stop the paper—you never read it any how. Then go and borrow your neighbors. When the reporter comes around to you for news, always be busy. Make him think your time is worth $100 a minute and that he were intruding. If the advertising and job man comes tell him you don't need to advertise—everybody knows you; that you will try to get along without any printed stationery—it's too expensive and you must economize. Never drop in to see the editor unless you want a free complimentary notice or a lengthy obituary notice for a beloved relative. Never recommend the paper to anyone. When you speak of it always say, "Yes, we have a little sheet, but it don't amount to very much." Keep this up for a year or two and you will have a dead newspaper, a dead set of merchants and a dead town.

A youth who is quite well known here and who recently attended college in a town not many miles distant wrote the following letter home to his parents shortly after his arrival there and it has just come to light:

I got here all right and forgot to write before. It is a very nice place to have fun. A feller and I went out in a boat and the boat tipped over and a man got me out, and I was so full of water I didn't know nothin' for a long while. The other boy has to be buried when they can find him. His mother came from Lincoln and she cries all the time. A boss kicked me over and I've got to have some money to pay the doctor for fixing my head. We are going to set an old barn on fire and I should smile if we don't have a bully time. I lost my watch and am very sorry. I shall bring home some mud turtles and I shall bring home some tame woodchucks if I can get them in my trunk.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thomas Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results of which these are samples, that prove the wondrous efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at F. T. Robinson's, Genoa and L. C. Shaffer's, Kingston Regular size 50c and $1.00.

NO MEDICAL EXAMINATION REQUIRED.

Mrs. J. P. Bell, Ossawatimic, Kan., wife of the editor of The Graphic, the leading local paper of Miami county, writes "I was troubled with heart disease for six years, severe palpitations, shortness of breath, together with such extreme nervousness, that, at times I would walk the floor nearly all night. We consulted the best medical talent. They said there was no help for me, that I had organic disease of the heart for which there was no remedy. I had read your advertisement in The Graphic and a year ago, as a last resort, tried one bottle of Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart, which convinced me that there was true merit in it. I took three bottles each of the Heart Cure and Restorative Nervine and it completely cured me. I sleep well at night, my heart beats regularly and I have no more smothering spells. I wish to say to all who are suffering as I did; there's relief untold for them if they will only give your remedies just one trial." Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1.00, 6 bottles for $5.00, or will be sent prepaid, on receipt of price by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

BEFORE SUBSCRIBING FOR A MAGAZINE SEE THE BEST,

DEMAREST'S!
FOR 1893.
An Unparalleled Offer.

Demorest's Cut Paper Patterns are the most practical on the market. They are of any size that any member of a household could require. In each copy of the Magazine is printed a coupon entitling the subscriber or purchaser to a pattern (worth and regularly sold for 35c) or any number of patterns for 4c each to cover package and postage. When the value of the patterns is considered the subscriber actually gets Demorest's Magazine Free.

And what a magazine it is! For 1893 it will be more brilliant than ever before. New management, new methods, new ideas. Each copy contains an exquisite reproduction in colors of some celebrated picture by a famous artist, worthy to adorn the walls of the most refined home. It is affirmed that DEMAREST'S is the only complete Family Magazine published combining all of the most excellent points of its contemporaries, besides having inimitable features of its own. DEMAREST'S is actually a dozen magazines in one.

It is a Digest of Current Events and Ideas for the busy man or woman, a Review and a Storehouse of interest for all. Wives, mothers, sisters and daughters can find exactly what they need to amuse and instruct themselves, also practical hints in every department of domestic and social life, including the furnishing and ornamenting of the home, embroidery, bric-a-brac, artists and fancy work of all kinds, etc., and suggestions and advice regarding the well-being and dressing of their own persons.

The scope of the articles for 1893 and 1894 will cover the whole country and its varied interests and the articles will be profusely illustrated with the finest engravings and in addition, it will publish the best and purest fiction. It treats at length Out-of-Door Sports, Home Amusements and entertainments; it gives a great deal of attention to the Children's Department and "Our Girls," and has a monthly Supplement by celebrated people, in which are discussed important questions of the hour of interest to the wider readers.

Let us have your subscription at once. You get more value for your money than it is possible for you to secure in any other magazine.

A Year!

The Chicago Weekly Dispatch has made arrangements by which it has reduced the subscription rate to 50 CENTS a year, postpaid. The rate will be maintained until the circulation has reached 250,000 copies weekly, on until the close of the campaign of 1894. The paper will be continued at the present size of twelve pages and will be a great national democratic newspaper, defending democratic democracy, upholding the national democratic platform of 1892, advocating the restoration of the people's money, urging the emancipation of the party from monopoly domination, contending for a return to Jeffersonian principles and battling for the rights of man against the rule of property.

We appeal to all who wish to identify themselves with the common people to send in a subscription for one year at once, and to include one or more persons to whom they would like to send a paper; also to send us the names and postoffice addresses of these who would be likely to subscribe.
