

NOTES FROM THE COURT HOUSE

Ed. Bilney of DeKalb Starts a $4400 Suit to Enforce Payment

SAYS DEFENDANTS CLOUD TITLE

Zelda Chestnut of DeKalb Starts Divorce Proceedings—Charges Desertion

Edward L. Bilney of the city of DeKalb brought suit in the circuit court on Wednesday against Celia Veale, O. W. Johnson, Edward Johnson, Morphy and Anna Morphy, asking that Celia Veale be compelled to carry out the terms of a contract of sale of property located at 118 West Lincoln Highway, DeKalb, Illinois, and that the defendant be restrained from conveying or attempting to convey the property to any other person except the complainant.

It is alleged in the bill that on September 1, 1922 the defendant Celia Veale, being or pretending to be the owner of the property entered into an agreement, wherein she agreed for the sum of $4400 to sell the property to the complainant. Five dollars were paid in cash on the day of the purchase and the balance was to be paid within thirty days of the date of the contract.

The complainant states that on September 10, 1922 he offered to pay the balance of the purchase price, on her delivering to him an abstract of title to the property and upon delivering to him a deed but that the defendant, Celia Veale, refused and still refuses to carry out her agreement.

It is further alleged in the bill that the defendant entered into a conspiracy to cloud the title in order to prevent Celia Veale from carrying out her contract and that Johnson and Morphy entered into an agreement wherein O. W. Johnson agreed with David Morphy for the sale of his real estate, the agreement being signed "Celia Veale by Johnson Ins. Agency, O. W. Johnson, agent." This contract of sale was afterward filed for record and is sought to be removed in the present proceedings as a cloud upon the title.

The premises are improved with a two flat building and at the time the second contract was executed David Morphy was a tenant.

The Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Milwaukee filed its bill to foreclose an $8,000 mortgage, against Amos R. Richardson, Iliam Richardson and others. The mortgage was executed on October 4, 1920 and covers the west fractional quarter of Section 19, in Township 39 north, containing about 106 acres of farm land.

The defendants later executed a $1,000 mortgage upon the same property and although both mortgages are past due the defendants have failed to pay the same. Complainant asks that the property be sold to satisfy the amount of $9,000 and interest on the two mortgages.

Zelda East Chestnut of the city of DeKalb in her bill for divorce filed in the circuit court on Friday, against Thos. L. Chestnut, alleges that she was married to the defendant on June 30, 1920 and three months later her husband tired of married life deserted her. She states he has been away from her for the last two years and asks that the bonds of matrimony be dissolved. She also asks that she be allowed to resume her maiden name of Zelda East.

John R. Waterman and Margaret Ellen Davis, as executors and trustees under the last will of Ella A. Davis, filed a bill in the circuit court to clear up the title to a piece of property located in the city of Sycamore. The bill is directed against the heirs of Orville D. Davis who, it is thought, met his death a number of years ago in Big Rapids, Michigan. Neither Orville Davis nor his daughter, Alice Davis, who survived him have been heard from for the past thirty years. The action on the part of the trustees is necessary so that the property may be sold as provided in the will of Ella A. Davis.

ANOTHER HEALTH CLINIC

The appointed health committee of the county medical association is to hold its third tuberculosis clinic on October 3 in the American Steel and Wire Welfare Building at DeKalb. The examining hours are from 10:00 to 12:00 a. m. and 1:00 to 4:00 p. m. Dr. Geo. Thos. Palmer, president of the state tuberculosis association will conduct the clinic.

In the two previous clinics there have been a total of forty-four examinations made. Of this number twenty-five of the patients were between the ages of eight and nineteen years. Many of these young people through this examination have learned that the proper care will prevent them from having tuberculosis or that the right living may overcome their present trouble. Since the cure of tuberculosis is in the prevention of it, the good of these public clinics can not be overestimated.

Because of the unusual interest in the clinics throughout the county, the clinician each time has had more patients that could be cared for. It is the desire of the committee that there be as little waiting as possible and no disappointments. In order to do this, it is very essential that those wishing to be examined should communicate at once with Mary R. Gruthynan, county visiting nurse, at 247 West Locust St., DeKalb.

DIPHTHERIA CONQUERED

If the famous Flack Hawk, that dauntless Indian Chieftain, were to leap back suddenly from out of the hot far distant past and lead a band of savage red men, each with his terrible warwhoop and bloody tomahawk, against a village or town and there cut down one or two hundred souls, the great state of Illinois would be up in arms to seek revenge. Neither money, time nor ingenuity would be spared in overcoming the hostile tribe so completely that massacre and treacherous deadly warfare would never again curse the land at whatever immediate cost.

A railroad train crashes into another and a dozen passengers are killed. A steamship lists too far and a thousand souls perish beneath the waves. Newspapers and public men everywhere join in a chorus of demands for placing the blame and bringing about such rigid traffic regulations as will prevent another such catastrophe.

These violent shocks that find birth in the unusual bring forth a storm of criticism that echoes again and again through every walk of life and yet a single disease, diphtheria, stealing upon the public like a thief at night snuffs out more lives than all the violent causes, accidental and premeditated, combined. Each year upwards of 15,000 Illinois persons, again mostly children, suffer the tortures of diphtheria while parents and public mildly complain at the mysterious designs of a Divine Providence but lift no helping hand to prevent this awful affliction.

As a matter of fact science has conquered diphtheria so completely that the intelligent utilization of control and preventive measures that are now within the reach of all will more surely cure illness and prevent death from this disease than martial or civil force and mechanical excellence can ever prevent massacre and fatal wreck. Toxin-antitoxin will utterly rout an enemy who is far more deadly than any local rebellion against the law.

Nourishment Defeats Tuberculosis.

Even where people live a great deal in the open air, as in the case of many of the surviving Indians of the United States and Canada, tuberculosis is prevalent whenever the food is inadequate. The Maoris of New Zealand often succumb to this disease because they rarely have any meat.

Difference in Sexes.

One thing that still differentiates the sexes slightly, for all the earnest efforts to make them just exactly alike in every way, shape and form, is the way a middle-aged wife considers it a treat to go out for dinner while a middle-aged husband considers it a treat to stay home for it. —Genoa State Journal.

LITTLE GIRL TELLS OF AWFUL BEATINGS

Sycamore Child Is Beaten Until Black and Blue and Then Tied to Trunk

HOUSEKEEPER ARRESTED—TRIED

Sentenced by Judge Pond to Serve 120 Days in County Jail and Assessed Fine of $100.00

Mother-hungry and in need of the caresses and affection of a good woman in a proper home, little eight-year-old Helen Heckman of Sycamore found but cruelty and filth at the hands of her father's housekeeper.

About two years ago Mrs. Henry Beckman died leaving her husband and three children, Helen, now 8 years of age; Lloyd, now 6 years of age, and Frank, now 12 years of age. Soon after the death of the mother, Beckman hired Mary Mollin, alias Mary Mullin, as housekeeper.

The father, who has been employed continuously in Sycamore, paid very little attention to the children, and the housekeeper treated them more as beasts than human beings. At first it was not so bad, but gradually the housekeeper became more severe and during the past few months has administered to them cruel beatings for minor offenses.

The matter was called to the attention of State's Attorney Poust last Saturday and all the children were brought up to his office by Sheriff Decker. The little girl told of being tied to a trunk after being stripped of all her clothes and beaten by the housekeeper and all showed signs of unmistakable brutality.

A warrant was issued for Mary Mullin who was arrested in Hampshire by Sheriff Decker and is being held at the county jail.

Feeling ran pretty high against Beckman and housekeeper in Sycamore and the county courtroom on Monday was crowded by a large number of Sycamore residents most of whom were women.

Judge Pond in passing sentence stated he was very sorry it was not possible for the defendant to be tried by a jury of women as he believed they would judge her as she should be judged without mercy. He also stated had the defendant in the case been of the opposite sex he would not hesitate to give him the maximum, however, where the defendant was a woman it was not as easy to pass judgment upon her. Judge Pond then fined Mary Mullin $100.00 and sentenced her to 120 days in the county jail. A punishment she so greatly deserves.

It has been ascertained that this woman had been in trouble with the Kane county authorities on charges of confidence game and was at one time arrested in Sycamore and taken back to Kane county. Her husband had recently secured a divorce from her.

DEKALB POST OFFICE VACANT.

According to information reaching the postoffice civil service employees, the postmaster's position in DeKalb is to be vacant October 24.

According to the information received at the office here applicants for the postmaster's position must file application and have it in the hands of the officials not later than October 17.

It is also noted in the list of postmaster'ships that will become vacant this year is that at Plano where Geo. S. Faxon has served as postmaster and at Sycamore where the general opinion seems to say that Col. Hemmaway is the next postmaster.

ECKHARDT HAS BROKEN HIP

In addition to several other injuries including a bone in the shoulder broken, William G. Eckhardt, a patient in the Sycamore hospital, also has a fractured hip.

The attending surgeon informed the patient of the results of the x-ray examination yesterday and told him his left leg would be one inch shorter than the other as a result of the accident Sunday when he fell from the tree.

Mr. Eckhardt will be compelled to remain in the hospital at Sycamore for at least three months if not longer. Another examination is to be conducted, it is said, to determine if there are any further internal injuries.

ANDREW BALDWIN PASSES AWAY

Death Came Early Last Friday Morning After a Long, Hopeless Battle

Andrew Baldwin, more familiarly known as "Andy", passed away early last Friday morning at his home in Genoa after a long and hopeless battle against Bright's disease. The end came unexpectedly, for altho he had been ill for a long time, he could still be about the street until the day before he died.

Funeral services were held Monday, interment in Genoa cemetery. Obituary

Andrew Baldwin, son of William C. and Charity H. Baldwin was born in Pennington, New Jersey, October 12, 1860 and died September 21, 1922 in Genoa, Illinois. He spent nearly all of his life in and around Genoa, making many acquaintances and friends who are left to mourn his death. One brother, Charles, of Edwardsville, and three sisters of Genoa, Mary Burroughs, Anna Donahue and Luella Crawford, survive him. Two sisters, Rosalie Holroyd and Elizabeth Olmstead, preceded him in death about six years ago.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the many friends of our beloved brother for the many acts of kindness shown him during his sickness and after his death.

ROOFING STANDS REAL TEST

Mulehide Product Shows No Wear After Thousands Have Walked On It

The many people who were fortunate enough to attend the legion Fall Festival last week will distinctly remember the booth conducted by our local representatives, Tibbits, Cameron Lumber Co., of the Mulehide Roofing Company.

It was artistically arranged from every point of view and those who took the trouble to inquire about this extra quality roofing, and there were many that did so, were more than satisfied that it was even better than they had been told.

On the other hand, very few knew that a test, perhaps the hardest that can be given a roofing, was being made directly in front of the stand. A whole roll had been put down for the hundreds to walk upon in order to see how well the material would stand up under this terrific strain. A minute examination disclosed the fact that not a scratch was made upon the Mulehide roofing and but very little of the slate composition had been kicked off.

A more severe test can not be imagined and it certainly speaks well for this product.—Advertisement.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Little Items of the Many Interesting Events That Happen in a School Year

Last Friday the eighth grade held a weenie roast at the Genoa township high school. The faculty of the grades and high school were invited. With the help of Mr. Waggoner, the pupils collected wood and long sticks and a dusk a fire was built for roasting marshmallows. Buns and apples were also a part of the supper. Afterwards the children played out-of-door games and went home at nine o'clock.

Chemistry

A course in chemistry is being given for a class of twenty-two pupils this year. Mr. Waggoner is teacher. This is the first time chemistry has been offered since the equipment was destroyed with the old high school building.

THE ACCOMMODATING I. C. R. R.

Looks After the Comfort of Passengers—Gives First-class Service

The high value which the Illinois Central System places upon the friendship of its patrons is discussed in a recent statement by President C. H. Markham in which it is declared that good will is one of the most valuable assets a railway system can have.

Mr. Markham says that the Illinois System is constantly seeking to promote good will among its patrons in this way:—

By attempting to render a dependable, efficient transportation service. By having officers and employees who are at all times courteous and obliging to patrons.

By giving patrons accurate information in regard to the Illinois System.

By co-operating with patrons and seeking their co-operation through their constructive criticism and suggestions.

"The Illinois Central System and its patrons are sharers of common problems," the statement reads. "It is to our best interests to be ever mindful of the best interests of the territory we serve, and, on the other hand, we believe our patrons can best serve their own interests by doing that which will strengthen us. Representatives of all departments of the Illinois Central System are filled with a pride in their work and a desire to be of helpful service to our patrons. They are striving to make every patron of this railroad feel a friendship for and a personal interest in the Illinois Central System.

"It is our hope that the Illinois Central System will always stand in the front rank of the railroads of this country in having the good will of its patrons. We feel grateful to those who strive to serve for the full measure of support and confidence which they have accorded us in the past, and we shall leave nothing undone in endeavoring to merit their continued support and confidence in the future. We feel that having the good will of our patrons places an added responsibility upon us to do our utmost to serve them well, and we accept that responsibility, pleased that we have the opportunity to contribute to the upbuilding of a great and fruitful territory, the incomparable Mississippi Valley."

RECORD FIGURES QUOTED

On State Highway Bonds—Get Approximate Value of $99.69 per Share

The department of public works and buildings of the state of Illinois today held an auction sale on $5,000,000 worth of state highway bonds. Col. C. R. Miller, director of the department of public works and buildings, presided at the sale, and the sale was attended by the director of finance and representatives of all state officers.

These bonds brought the sum of $5,981,300 plus accrued interest from May 1, 1922, which represents a rate of approximately $99.69. The interest yield on the bonds at this figure would be approximately 4.04 per cent. The bonds draw interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum and are due $500,000 annually from May 1, 1929 to May 1, 1940 inclusive. There were six groups bidding representing 42 of the largest financial concerns of the country. The successful bidder was a group composed of Wm. R. Compton Co. of Chicago, Dillon-Reed & Company of Chicago, Halsey-Stuart & Co. of Chicago. Their bid was the 35th auction bid submitted.

BOB JHONSON BREAKS LEG

Found By Frank Haskins Wednesday Morning After Gravel Pit Cave-In

Bob Johnson, living on the old Drake farm west of town suffered a broken leg Wednesday morning when part of the gravel in the pit in which he was digging fell upon him and completely buried his body save for a small portion of the shoulder and head.

He was found in this condition nearly two hours later when Frank Haskins, coming to reload his wagon, saw the injured man and dug him out. An examination by the doctor disclosed no further injuries than the above, save for a few bruises.

AUTO THIEF HELD AT MORRISON

Having a check forged on him, then having his car stolen was the experience of George Schule of Hinckley on Saturday. Theodore Stanton, a young fellow working for Schule had cash a check for $30 and then returned to his home and stole his Auburn car.

Stanton left Saturday afternoon with the money and car headed for the west. Sheriff Decker received a message informing of the theft and immediately telephoned to all cities on the Lincoln Highway.

Stanton was caught in Morrison, probably on his way to Clinton and then on west. He was immediately returned to Hinckley where he will have a hearing there and then be turned over to the grand jury, which meets in October.

Press and public have enthusiastically endorsed his work and the management offers Mr. Zellner with entire confidence in his ability to give you a wonderful entertainment, amusing, inspiring and purposeful.

He appears October 12. Get your reserved seats at Baldwin's or Brown's. Other features of this entertainment will be Dr. Frank Church, lecturer, humorist and entertainer. Then there is the Powers-Snyder company consisting of two girls who are gifted with rare musical talent. And last the play "Cappy Ricks" based on stories by Peter B. Kyne that have been read by millions in the Saturday Evening Post, will be presented by New York Players.

Don't fail to secure your tickets for the course of entertainments at the earliest possible moment. It will help the committee and encourage the school children who are teaming up on sides to see which one will sell the most tickets.

TO AUDIT TREASURER'S BOOKS

Supervisors Met Last Week and Agreed to Pay Account for Work

The conditions in the county treasurer's office occupied much of the time of the DeKalb county board of supervisors at their regular September meeting which began last week Tuesday.

It was finally voted to pay for the audit of the treasurer's books, which audit was ordered by the bondsmen of the treasurer. The joint investigating committee, composed of the members of the finance and fees and Salaries committees, reported.

The report was first adopted. Amendments were suggested after considerable discussion.

Finally the motion adopting the report was reconsidered leaving the matter open.

The board then adjourned on Friday to next Monday, when final action was taken, the results of which have not as yet, been ascertained.

Map of the Near East, showing the neutral zone, embracing Constantinople and the straits, which Great Britain says must not be invaded by the Turks.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Mustapha Kemal Pasha Holds the Key to the Situation in the Near East.

ALLIES PLAN A CONFERENCE

Will Not Permit Russia to Be Represented—British Public Protest Against War—Bonus Bill Killed by President's Veto—Tariff Measure Now Law.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WHETHER or not there shall be another great war in the Near East depends on Mustapha Kemal Pasha. The masterful leader of the Turkish nationalists, having expelled the Greeks from Asia Minor, demands that Constantinople be restored to Turkey, that he be allowed to send troops across the straits to recover eastern Thrace from Greece, and a conference to arrange for guarantees for the neutrality of the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus be held with every country bordering on the Black sea, especially Russia, represented.

To this England has formally replied that Constantinople will not be given up and that she will fight, alone if necessary, to keep the Turk from invading the neutralized zone that includes that city and the straits.

Kemal's forces in Anatolia are at the very edge of the zone, massed at Ismid and Chanak, and already encounters between his patrols and British outposts are reported. England is hurrying reinforcements for her land forces, and the entire British Atlantic fleet has been ordered to the Dardanelles. The dominions have been asked to be ready to send troops, and New Zealand and Australia have promised to do so if they are needed.

It appears that in this conflict, if it comes, Great Britain must stand practically alone against the Turks so far as military operations are concerned. France and Italy have declared they will have no part in it, and the former has withdrawn to the European side her troops in the neutral zone. Greece is quite demoralized and cannot be counted on to help much. The little entente, which is determined that neither Turkey nor Bulgaria shall get eastern Thrace, would be greatly hampered in war by mutual jealousies and threats of revolt in various regions.

Kemal's demand concerning representation in the peace conference met with a brusque reply when Marquis Curzon, British foreign minister, and Count Sforza, Italian ambassador to France, met Premier Poincaré to arrange for the parley. They announce that France, Great Britain, Italy, Japan, Greece, Turkey, Rumania and Rumania would participate in the conference to be held in Venice or Rome, and Kemal's demand that Russia be included was no less insistent than that of the soviet government, but General Daniloff, chief of the Russian general staff, denied the current report that Russia would give Kemal armed assistance, saying the big soviet army in the Caucasus was there to defend the frontiers and the Baku oil fields. "Russia has no intention of sending troops to Asia Minor," General Daniloff said, "nor is there any truth in the rumor of Russian reinforcements on the Estonian, Latvian or Polish frontiers. Russia does not want fighting on any front, and, besides, any military man knows it would be foolish to begin anything in September with winter imminent."

LOYD GEORGE'S policy, stern and uncompromising, though supported so far by most of his cabinet, may have to be modified. There is increasing protest by the press and people of England against Great Britain's undertaking any new war, and the opposition of the trades unions and in the great manufacturing centers is especially violent. There is a widespread feeling that the Turks really are entitled to repossess Constantinople so long as they leave the straits free and unfortified. The dominions, though patriotic always, are rather cool toward fresh military operations; as has been said, little or no help can be expected from other allied nations, and Japan, according to a foreign office official in Tokyo, will stand absolutely aloof.

The British government believes its forces could successfully defend Constantinople and the straits without help, and perhaps they could. But it may be the Turkish offensive will not be confined to that region. There are reports which are more than rumors that the Nationalists are moving on Iraq, part of the British mandate in Mesopotamia, which is ruled nominally by Emir Faisal. Uprisings in that region are said to be becoming general, and the word came from an Anatolian news agency that the British garrisons had been worsted in several encounters with tribesmen and that Mosul was about to be evacuated. It is not unlikely that these reports are exaggerated, but the danger there is real, and is but a part of the threat of a holy war against Christendom. The trend toward this is especially strong in India, where immense throngs of Moslems gathered to rejoice over the victory of Kemal Pasha. In Calcutta speakers bitterly denounced the British policy in the Near East and asserted that seven million Moslems in India are being angered to the point of rising en masse to fight against the British for their legitimate aspirations. The central Khalifat committee of India sent a cablegram to London saying:

"By their support of the Greek military adventure the British government has broken faith with India and the Moslem world. If England goes to war with Turkey now she will never be able to regain her prestige in India."

THROUGHOUT the struggle in Asia Minor the representatives of America, lead by Rear Admiral Bristol, commissioner at Constantinople, and George Horton, consul general at Smyrna, have been chiefly concerned in the rescue of their nationals and the relief of the refugees. In this task they have been notably successful, and Mr. Horton bears witness to the bravery and unselfish devotion of the members of the American colony in Smyrna. Even the American women teachers in the Y. W. C. A. girls' school refused to leave their posts until driven away by the flames.

NO BONUS for the American soldiers and sailors of the World war—at least, none unless congress at the session beginning in December passes a satisfactory bill. The measure which went through the house last March and through the senate on August 31 was vetoed last Tuesday by President Harding. Next day the house overrode the veto by a vote of 258 to 54, but a few hours later the senate upheld the action of the President, the proponents of the bill being able to muster only 44 votes, four short of the required two-thirds majority. Twenty-eight senators voted against the measure this time, seven of them being Democrats. One of these was Senator Williams of Mississippi, and he could not resist the opportunity to exercise his caustic wit. "I'm just a plain damn fool Mississippi Democrat" said he, "but I'm going to support a Republican President in this veto because he is right. The only wonder is that a Republican President could get so right."

President Harding in his veto message said that, while he was "in accord with the avowed purpose of the bill to give expression of a nation's gratitude to those who served in its defense in the World war," he was constrained to return it without his approval for two reasons:

First, because it failed to provide the revenue to defray its expense. Second, because, he said, "it establishes the very dangerous precedent of creating a treasury covenant to pay which puts a burden variously estimated between $4,000,000,000 and $5,000,000,000, upon the American people, not to discharge an obligation, which the government always must pay, but to bestow a bonus which the soldiers themselves, while serving in the World war, did not expect."

Of such a way of rewarding patriotic service he said further: "A peace bestowed on the ex-service men, as though the supreme offering could be paid for with cash, is a perversion of public funds, a reversal of the policy which exalted patriotic service in the past, and suggests that future defense is to be inspired by compensation rather than consciousness of duty to flag and country."

Whether he was right or wrong in his course, the President certainly was courageous, for the pressure brought to bear on him in favor of the bonus bill was tremendous, and the fall elections are not far away. But congress had refused to devise and enact a measure which he could approve as sincere and based on correct financial principles, so that the law makers rather than the chief executive should bear the onus of adverse criticism. The American Legion and other advocates of compensation for the ex-service men will continue the agitation for a bonus.

IN THE presence of Representative Fordney and Senator McCumber, the President on Thursday signed the tariff bill which bears their names, and it became effective at midnight. Vast quantities of imported merchandise were withdrawn from government warehouses just before the new rates went into effect, and vessels hurried into port to discharge their cargoes. Chairman Marvin of the tariff commission informed the President that his forces would have to be tripled in size because of the duties devolving on the commission through the operation of the so-called flexible and scientific provisions of the new law.

Mr. Harding also signed the Capper-Tincher act providing for regulation of trading in futures on grain exchanges.

HAVING accomplished what the Republican leaders called great achievements in legislation and economy and what their Democratic rivals described as nothing, or worse than nothing, congress wound up its long session on Friday and adjourned. The spokesmen for the majority especially stressed the fact that the national expenditure is being reduced at the rate of $1,000,000,000 a year. They added that in three years the public debt has been reduced as much as it was reduced in fifty years following the Civil war. Senator Harrison, Democrat, said the record of congress was "a terrible thing to take back to the people."

CONGRESSMAN OSCAR KELLER of Minnesota sustained a severe jolt last week. He was the author of the resolution for the impeachment of Attorney General Daugherty, based on his obtaining the famous injunction against the striking railway shompen, and also on his alleged failure to enforce the anti-trust laws. Mr. Keller had prepared his case and had induced Samuel Untermyer to present it before the house judiciary committee. Then that committee calmly and cold-bloodedly postponed the hearing until next December. Mr. Keller and Mr. Untermyer were furious, and Sam Gompers denounced the committee's action as brazen effrontery. The executive council of the American Federation of Labor has set aside October 1 as "Impeachment day" for demonstrations against Mr. Daugherty and Judge Wilkerson, who granted the injunction.

AFTER 22 days of furious labor, the rescue crews at Jackson, Cal., reached the level of the gold mine in which 47 miners had been entombed by a fire, only to find that every one of them was dead. It was evident that they had succumbed to poisonous gases within a few hours.

THE League of Nations in session at Geneva devoted a lot of time to discussing naval disarmament without getting anywhere. The league assembly unanimously voted Hungary a member and it was relieved Germany would be admitted soon. General approval was given to the manner in which the mandates for the former German colonies have been exercised including the phosphate monopoly on the island of Nauru, which was questioned by the United States. The Bolivian delegate informed the assembly that "grave difficulties" menaced the relations between Bolivia and Chile unless the mediation of a friendly power or the arbitration of the league can be obtained.

Scrapping of Warships Has Been Halted and Indefinitely Postponed.

NEAR EAST WAR IS REASON

Instability of Europe in General and the Fact That Neither France Nor Italy Has Ratified Agreements Are Factors.

Washington, Sept. 27.—Scrapping of naval armaments has been halted and indefinitely postponed, a high naval official announced here.

This government fears that Great Britain may find it necessary to withdraw from the agreements altogether, he added.

Not until the world gets on a real peace footing, it was stated, is there a likelihood that the powers will consent to weaken their naval strength in any way.

The factors responsible for this situation are stated as the Near East war, the instability of Europe in general and the fact that neither France nor Italy has ratified the agreements reached here.

In keeping with the other powers it was revealed for the first time that the United States is holding onto her effective naval vessels. The few ships that are being scrapped, it was declared, are those that are obsolete and were marked for the scrap heap before the arms conference met.

While the other powers are fully armed, it was given as the administration policy that the United States will not in any way weaken her defenses. It was added that as a leader in seeking reduction of armament this government regretted the new developments, but could not lead to the extent of scrapping ships before all of the powers actually started scrapping. Even then, it was pointed out, the navy will keep fully posted and not scrap any faster than the others.

In connection with the attitude of Great Britain, officials pointed out that Sir Auckland Geddes, British ambassador, made verbal reservations at the conference to provide for a delay in making the agreements operative.

The Briton pointed out that while his country welcomed the opportunity to get rid of expensive armaments that the first consideration must be self-defense. He intimated that the time when Great Britain would actually begin to cut down could be accurately marked by the time that the world becomes safe.

Sir Auckland called at the White House and conferred with President Harding. He said that it was a friendly visit to pay his respects. Those close to the administration said, however, that he expressed regret that events had delayed and would indefinitely postpone the date of making the arms pacts effective.

Japan is following the line adopted by the United States, it was stated. A few of the obsolete ships are being scrapped, but the other units of the navy are being kept in commission. The six battleships of the Virginia class are the only ones out of commission in the United States. These are the Virginia, Rhode Island, Nebraska, Georgia and New Jersey.

The Michigan and South Carolina, the first two dreadnaughts built by the navy and on their way to the scrap heap, have been turned back. The Connecticut, Vermont, Minnesota and New Hampshire, also specified for abandonment, are being retained.

Work on the Colorado and West Virginia, sister ships of the Maryland, the most powerful in the navy, is being rushed.

M'GRAW WINS EIGHTH FLAG

Victory Over St. Louis in 5 to 4 Ten Inning Game Clinches the Pennant.

New York, Sept. 27.—The New York Giants clinched the National league pennant when they downed St. Louis 5 to 4, in a ten-inning battle.

It is the eighth pennant that McGraw has won since he became manager of the Giants, a major league baseball record.

OWNER OF 9 CIRCUSES DIES

Clarence A. Wortham of Danville, Ill. Dies—Sons Attended Military Academy at Chicago.

Cincinnati, Sept. 27.—Clarence A. Wortham of Danville, Ill., widely known showman and owner of nine circuses, died at a Cincinnati hospital, following an attack of appendicitis. He was forty years old. Funeral services were held at Danville.

Bonds for Herrin Miners.

Marion, Ill., Sept. 27.—Judge Hartwell granted applications for the release on bond of 36 of the 44 men indicted for murder in connection with the Herrin mine killings, but denied liberty to the remaining eight.

Washington, Sept. 27.—Princess Ivan Pschernitscheno of Russia, who came to this country as a stowaway after trudging across Russia, established to the satisfaction of immigration officials that she is an American citizen.

OPPORTUNITY TO EVERY MAN

Life's Ambitions Can Generally Be Realized, if One Is Willing to Pay the Price.

Life's ideals are not always capable of being realized. Too many people have the same desires and glut the market. Besides, only a few can do what they thought they could. It's no wonder such folks are easy prey for the human vultures that hover near the carrion pits.

But this is no reason why you should join the ranks of the unfortunate. It's your time to make good, my boy. The old world has opportunities on the begging list. The trouble is folks don't want them.

Why not tackle the job nearest you? Put the enthusiasm of your play, and the intelligence of your best thinking into what you do. Play the game as if you meant to win. The results will justify you.

Your record will depend on you. Our greatest men are the product of their own industry. Head and hand write the record that places you among the nation's honored citizens. Each one doing his best can rise to the height of his ambitions if he will pay the price.—Grit.

The German Kaiser's Own Story

The long-awaited autobiography of Germany's deposed emperor will be published in The Chicago Daily News, beginning Tuesday, September 26, continuing in daily installments until completed.

The story is well told, and will command the attention of readers everywhere. Many of the author's opinions and statements are fantastic from the American point of view, but interest in the narrative is increased, rather than lessened, by this fact. Old controversies are sure to be revived, old discussions renewed, by the former kaiser's defense of Germany and his attacks on the leaders of other nations. For instance, he takes seriously the old absurd canard about a secret treaty against Germany and Austria, in 1897, by the United States, Great Britain and France. This is only one of his declarations that will amaze—and amuse—the American reader.

Beginning with a chapter on Bismarck, the ex-emperor traces history through four decades. In a general way the story is chronological, although in the opening chapters the writer often diverges into events long past, or into the remote future. But from the time he reaches the period immediately preceding the world war the story moves in rapid action and is in many respects informative, notwithstanding the author's prejudice, eccentricity, and, in many instances, his surprising misinformation.

It is a story of absorbing interest to the reader of history and of current events alike, and is bound to create a world of discussion. It deals not only with the direct events of the war, but covers a mass of most important collateral matter intimately or remotely related to the war.

Here are some of the significant "high spots" in a topical analysis of the story:

Why Bismarck Went Out
Diplomacy With England
Tangier Visit and Moroccan Crisis
Germany's Denial of War Aims
Propaganda Before War
Germans and Art Treasures
"The Wrong of Versailles"
Secret Talks with the Czar
Visit to Victoria's Deathbed
King Edward's "Encirclement"
Failure of German Diplomacy
Attitude of Sir Edward Gray

Emperor Karl of Austria
Swapping Zanzibar for Heligoland
Chamberlain Offer of Alliance
Russians as Asiatics
Germany's Naval Plans
Charges of Atrocities
Wilson and the 14 Points
Germany When Defeat Came
Fatherland and World's Opinion
The Flight to Holland
Why Kaiser Avoided Suicide
Germany of the Future

Publication of this remarkable autobiography began this week in The Chicago Daily News—the first installment on Tuesday, September 26. Newsdealers throughout the northwest have increased their usual supply of the paper, and can give new readers either back numbers beginning with Tuesday, or an advance "reprint" of all the chapters printed in the paper from Tuesday, September 26, to Saturday, September 30, thus insuring to every new reader "The German Kaiser's Own Story" from the beginning.

Readers who find it more convenient to get the paper by mail may send $1.00 to The Chicago Daily News, 15 North Wells street, Chicago, and get it, postage paid, daily for two months.

Advent of the Piano.

Ages of Washington's Official Advisers.
The average age of President Washington's cabinet was less than forty years. Hamilton was thirty-two, Jefferson forty-six, Randolph thirty, General Knox thirty-nine, and Samuel Osgood forty-one.

Legend of Wandering Jew.
The wandering Jew was a legendary personage condemned to wander upon the earth until the second coming of Christ, for reviling the Savior while on his way to Calvary. Some say he was a porter in the service of Pontius Pilate, named Cartaphilus; but others identify him with Ahasuerus, a cobbler on whose doorstep Christ attempted to rest when overcome with the weight of the cross. Tradition has it that Ahasuerus drove the Savior from his door with curses, whereupon Jesus calmly replied: "I truly am going; but thou shalt wander over the earth until I return." Southey's "Curse of Kehama," Croly's "Salathiel," and the Sue's "Le Juif Errant" make use of this legend, although not in its original form.—Kansas City Star.

UNKNOWN PEOPLES OF AFRICA

Race of Beings Who Are Said to Live in the Trees, Among Those Enumerated.

In a part of unknown Africa a race of tree beings are said to exist, who live in the tops of the trees and are sheltered from enemies by the dense foliage. These folk, two-toed and claw-handed, pass from tree to tree with the ease and activity of monkeys, and are of a particularly ferocious nature. Then there are dwarfs in Central Africa which live like wild animals among the rocks and bushes. Their projecting jaws and protruding lips, slender, ill-shaped legs and protruding bellies give them the true ape-like appearance. They are singularly timid and fleet at the sight of strangers.

As mysterious is the race of gigantic natives in the unknown deserts, north of Uaso Nyiro and the Lorian swamp, East Africa. This strange race is known by tradition to the natives now inhabiting the land west of the Juba in the north and the Tana in the south. Their name appears to be "the Maanthile," and tradition has it they are Christians, and originally came from Abyssinia.

Until pestilence and native war broke them they are said to have cultivated large areas, used irrigation to raise crops, owned camels and lived in great circular houses, the huge stones of which testify to their strength.

FOOD IN FIFTEENTH CENTURY

Beer and Salt Fish Inseparable Companions, According to Household Books of the Period.

In the fifteenth century, provisions for a noble household had to be on hand for a long while in advance, for stores were not convenient to the great estates. Breakfast is only one of the excellents chronicled in "The Pastons and Their England: Studies in an Age of Transition," by H. S. Bennett, but it was an extraordinary menu that began the day in the period of the Wars of the Roses. In the Northumberland Household Book Margaret Paston prescribes this meal "For the Nurey, for my Lady Margaret, and Master Ingeram Percy. Item a Manchet a Quart of Bere a Dysch of Butter a Pece of Saltfish a Dysch of Sprolts." My Ladis Gentlywomen, however, fared more simply: "Item a Loaf of Brode a Pottell of Bere a Pece of Saltfish."

Throughout beer is the faithful companion of salt fish. Before Lent it was necessary for Margaret Paston to order fish by the "horse load" and quantities of eels. Luxuries came from overseas and she frequently requested her menfolk to send home spices of all sorts. "I pray you that you will vouchsafe to send me another sugar loaf, for my old one is done."

Yellow Fever Wiped Out.
Yellow fever has been completely eliminated from Guayaquil, Ecuador, where it has been prevalent for generations. In 1842 half the population of the city died of this disease, and there were from 200 to 500 cases every year until the campaign of extermination was begun in 1918.

Alfred Founded British Navy.

It was King Alfred the Great who founded the English navy. Toward the end of his reign the navy is said to have consisted of about 300 vessels, which were stationed on the east, west, and south coasts of the kingdom; and this system of stationing squadrons at different parts of the coast may be said to be in force today, though modern naval science has now substituted destroyers and submarines for the vessels of Alfred's day. With such ships King Alfred, the founder of the "blue water school" of sailors, scoured the narrow seas so effectively that no invader dared approach, and he asserted such dominion in British waters that at last no pirate or sea-rover was to be found in them. A further advance in warship building belongs to the reign of Edward III, in the fourteenth century. The vessel most used was called a "cog," a word from which we get our "cogswain," or "coxswain," the master of one of those "cogs."

Turkish Capital's Tragic History.

Constantinople, the capital of the Moslem empire, received its name in the year 330, when the city was formally dedicated as the seat of the eastern empire by Constantine the Great, after whom it was named. The site of the city was that of the ancient Byzantium, which had been founded by Byzas and a colony of Megarians in 687 B. C. It was allied first with the Greeks and later with the Romans, but rebelled against the latter, was besieged for two years and finally laid in ruins. For over a century it remained practically uninhabited, until Constantine selected it as the capital of the empire, destroying all heathen temples and replacing them with the edifices of the new faith. In May, 1453, the city was taken by Mahomet II and the Turk has held it ever since.

Must Be Real to Be Lasting.
True glory strikes root, and even extends itself; all false pretensions fall as do flowers, nor can anything feigned be lasting.—Cicero.

Jewel Father of Gold Standard.

The evolution of the jewel was responsible for another and highly important custom—one which has become a vital and seemingly ineradicable feature of our present-day civilization. It was the adoption of gold as the standard medium of exchange. Gold not only filled the bill, but was conveniently carried, especially since the invention of the serpent ring and bangle.

Pink Milk.
If your are in doubt about the cream on your milk, add a tiny drop of spirits of salts. If the milk has been adulterated to give it a rich appearance, it will turn pink—and then you can turn the milkman pink by showing him how the trick is done! You can, by the way, also test your vinegar by the same method. If it is bogus vinegar a little spirits of salts will turn it a brilliant green.

"Little Brother," Again.
I was dancing with "the only one" when I suggested that we sit out the next dance. We did—out in one corner of the dark veranda. It was while we were engaged in a very fond embrace that Little Brother Bill, showing his new flashlight to some of the guests, absent-mindedly directed its rays our way.—Exchange.

Herbal Remedies

Most of the old remedies prescribed by the herbalists of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries contained some element which was extremely difficult to secure, such as "the fat of a mountain mouse" or "the pounded residue of a swallow's nest," while the greater number of them were always taken with red or white wine.

The peony was said to be efficacious for healing diseases at night, whereas, if the gatherer should chance to be seen by a woodpecker, he "risked the loss of his eyesight." The early root-gatherers were anxious to discourage competitors in their art, and therefore made it as dangerous as they could for anyone to obtain the "simples" in the right way.

The Cheerful Robin.

It would go hard with the birds if their case were left to be decided upon argument alone. But robins are their own best advocates, says the Detroit Free Press. They come in the spring—vandals that they are—and start a deeply planned campaign to cultivate everybody's friendship. The deep woods know them not; they never skulk in the bushes nor flee the presence of man. Instead they choose the lawn for a hunting ground, build their nests even on porches and window sills, and never let the sun go down without a song delivered from the most conspicuous perch on the place. The robin's cheerfulness is irresistible; his neighborliness compelling. It is absolutely impossible not to like him when he offers such convincing proofs every day that he likes men.

Difference in Sexes.
One thing that differentiates the sexes slightly for all birds is the effort to make them just exactly alike in every way, shape and form, is the way a middle-aged wife considers it a treat to go out for dinner while a middle-aged husband considers it a treat to stay home for it.—Ohio State Journal.

Let the Boys and Girls Come Too

This is the season of the year when the boys and girls can earn a little money for themselves.

Give them the opportunity to do so.

It is very fine indeed when the young folks learn to handle money wisely.

To know how to earn money and to spend it wisely is a quality all must have who want to become well-to-do.

We are always glad to have the young folks as our patrons. Let them come. Let them know the joy of building a bank account—let them learn to feel at home when in the bank.

You cannot afford to let your neighbor's children get the advantage over yours in this important matter.

AGRICULTURE

Accuracy in Cream Tests

Many farmers have occasion to doubt the correctness of their cream tests. For this reason those selling cream should have a knowledge of the Babcock method of determining the percentage of butterfat, which is the method used almost entirely by cream purchasers in this country. P. H. Tracy of the dairy department of the University of Illinois explained the different steps in the sampling and testing of cream by this method:

1. The cream can is weighed.
2. The cream is well mixed and a sample is taken in a clean, dry, glass sample jar which is placed in warm water to break up any lumps that may be present.
3. The cream can is emptied and after being inverted over a steam jet to remove the adhering cream, it is reweighed to obtain the net weight.
4. A cream test bottle which is clean and free from moisture on the outside is then placed on the cream scales which are carefully balanced.
5. Nine grams of the well mixed sample are weighed out, care being taken not to spill any of the cream on the outside of the bottle. The pipette used in handling the cream should be clean and dry or else well rinsed with the cream to be tested.
6. Enough sulphuric acid (usually about 9 cubic centimeters) is added until the contents of the bottle come to the shoulder.
7. The bottle is placed in a centrifuge and whirled five minutes.
8. Enough water is added to bring the fat well up into the neck of the bottle.
9. The bottle is then whirled two minutes.
10. If a steam tester is used the machine may be read directly from the test machine. If either an electric or hand tester is used, the bottle should be placed in a hot bath having a temperature of 135-140 degrees Fahrenheit for five minutes. This is very important as a bottle real cold will reduce the test 1/2 to 1 1/2 per cent.
11. Glymol (a red-colored oil) is then carefully added to the top of the fat column and the reading made.

When the test is properly conducted the fat column will be of a deep straw color, clean and free from burnt particles or curd.

Where a steam tester is used, at least ten minutes will be required to finish the test. Five minutes longer will be required for the electric or hand tester and for those steam testers that do not keep the bottle at a temperature around 135 degrees Fahrenheit.

If your cream buyer follows in general the above procedure and is careful in his work, your tests should be accurate.

Water and Fertility

The statement is frequently made that crops growing in well fertilized soils will withstand drought better than those in soils not fertilized. This is not due entirely to the larger water-holding capacity of the more productive soils; in truth, this factor may be of much less importance than the water-requirement of the crop.

Water-requirement is meant the number of pounds of water taken up from the soil by a plant for each pound of dry matter produced in growth. The transpiration stream serves, among other functions, to carry the essential nutrient elements from the soil in the plant. It is logical to believe that with an abundant supply of available nutrients, the amount of water required to get them into the plant would be less than where the supply is meagre. Experiment bears out this line of reasoning.

As early as 1850, Sir John Bennett Lawes carefully carried out experiments upon this question with the following results:

Crop	No. Mineral Complete	Fertilizer
Wheat	247	206
Barley	258	206
Clover	260	148

The water-requirement was thus reduced by fertilization from 1 per cent in barley to 45 per cent in the clover crop and, with one exception, was greater than 10 per cent in all cases.

Subsequently, no less than 25 investigators in France, Germany, Russia, England and the United States have carried out similar experiments and all with the same results. The following quotation from Briggs and Shanta, based upon a detailed study of these investigations is of interest in this connection: "Almost without exception, the experiments show a reduction in the water requirement, accompanying the use of fertilizers. In highly productive soils, this reduction amounts to only a small percentage. In poor soils the water-requirement may be reduced one-half or even two-thirds by the addition of fertilizers. Often the high water-requirement is due to deficiency of a single plant food element. As the supply of such element approaches exhaustion the rate of growth is greatly reduced, but no corresponding change occurs in the rate of transpiration. The result is inevitably a high water-requirement."

The fundamental principle here involved, especially emphasizes the importance of soil treatment as a means of increasing production in dry seasons.

Joint Chinch-Bug Campaign

A joint campaign against chinch bugs is to be waged in the states of Illinois and Indiana, according to plans laid at a conference held at Danville. At the conference were Prof. J. C. Hackleman of the crops department and Prof. W. P. Flint of the entomology department of the University of Illinois, and Prof. W. A. Ostrander and J. H. Davis of the crops and entomology departments, respectively, of Purdue university.

Chinch bugs have been increasing in abundance, and the area of infestation enlarging in Illinois and Indiana, and the present indications are that the bugs will continue to be abundant.

Farmers in certain areas are discussing cropping problems in relation to chinch bug control, particularly the advisability of limiting the acreages of small grains. It was the opinion of those who have been studying the chinch bug problem that it is impractical to eliminate the growing of wheat, this opinion being based on observations where such practices have been attempted in areas previously infested. On the other hand barley is more susceptible to infestation and is always more severely injured and therefore where chinch bugs are abundant it is unwise to continue growing barley. It was agreed that reducing the growing of grass crops to a practical minimum and increasing the legume acreage would have a marked influence on chinch bug control in the future.

In the infested areas in Illinois the growing of resistant strains of corn has given good results and there is strongly recommended.

The fact that 90 per cent of the chinch bugs hibernate in protected places, such as along the south and west slopes of hedges and fence rows, ditch banks and woodlots, makes it desirable that farmers kill as many of the bugs and remove the winter protection by burning over such places between November 1 and April 1, but especially during the month of November, when by far the best results can be secured. Furthermore, that burning must be adopted as a community proposition, since bugs may migrate a distance of several miles when they leave their winter quarters in the spring.

Local Units Serve Best

Farmers' elevators, co-operative livestock shipping associations, grange locals and farmers' clubs are rendering efficient, economical and satisfactory service in purchase and distribution of feed, flour, coal and potatoes for their members in a growing number of counties.

A significant development in the attitude of organized wholesale dealers toward these local farmers' units is the action of one of the leading wholesale produce dealers in one of the larger cities of the state. This firm is soliciting the business of local farm units on the same basis as the regular retailer. In one city this same firm distributed 35 carloads of potatoes to employees of manufacturing plants. Local units for distributing commodities not only provide service, but they make this service available to a much larger number of farm bureau members than can be offered through a central distributing plant.

In confirmation of the soundness of this policy the county in Illinois that has had the longest contact and most experience in the purchase of commodities of this kind is developing and using local merchants and other agencies in securing distribution that will render impartial service to every member of their farm bureau.

Potato Growing

That potatoes may be raised with big yields, in spite of insects and fungus growths, has been proven this year by the tests on three plots, where yields ranged from 187 to 225 bushels to the acre, on the farm of Chris Bischoff at Granite City. A car of highly improved seed was purchased from a northern grower and each tract in the test was given three applications with a high-pressure spraying outfit with a three-nozzle effect. One acre was treated with lead arsenate, the cost being about $6.00 an acre. Pyrox was used on another field, at a cost of $6.12 an acre. A quantity of lead was used with the Bordeaux mixture on one application.

The acre on which lead was used yielded 187 bushels. The field on which pyrox was used turned out 195 bushels. The best results were obtained on the Bordeaux tract, where 225 bushels were produced. The lowest price received for any of the potatoes has been $2.25 per 100 pounds, or approximately $1.35 a bushel. On this basis the Bordeaux acre has returned a profit of $304.00.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.
Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.
Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

When he got up from the table he said to me: "I shall expect to see you tomorrow in the library at four, Mary."

And Mary answered: "Yes, Father," polite and proper, as she should; but Marie inside was just chuckling with the joke of it all.

The next day I watched again at four for Father to come up the walk; and when he had come in I went down to the library. He was there in his pet seat before the fireplace. (Father always sits before the fireplace, whether there's a fire there or not. And sometimes he looks so funny sitting there, staring into those gray ashes just as if it was the liveliest kind of a fire he was watching.)

As I said, he was there, but I had to speak twice before he looked up. Then, for a minute, he stared vaguely.

"Eh? Oh! Ah—er—yes, to be sure," he muttered then. "You have come with your books. Yes, I remember."

But there wasn't any twinkle in his eyes, nor the least little bit of an understanding smile; and I was disappointed. I had been looking for it. I knew then, when I felt so suddenly lost and heart-ache, that I had been expecting and planning all day on that twinkly understanding smile. You know you feel worse when you've just found a father and then lost him!

Well, he took my books and heard my lessons, and told me what I was to study next day. He's done that two days now.

Oh, I'm so tired of being Mary! And I've got more than four whole months of it left. I didn't get Mother's letter today. Maybe that's why I'm specially lonesome tonight.

JULY FIRST.

School is done, both the regular school and my school. Not that my school has amounted to much. Really it hasn't. Oh, for three or four days he asked questions quite like just a teacher. Then he got to talking. Sometimes it would be about something in the lessons; sometimes it would be about a star, or the moon. And he'd get so interested that I'd think for a minute that maybe the understanding twinkle would come into his eyes again. But it never did.

Naturally the lessons haven't amounted to much, as you can imagine. But the term was nearly finished, anyway; and my real school is in Boston, of course.

It's vacation now. I do hope that will amount to something!

AUGUST FIRST.

It hasn't, so far—I mean vacation. Really, what a world of disappointment this is! How on earth I'm going to stand being Mary for three months more I don't know. But I've got to, I suppose. I've been here May, June, and July; and that leaves August, September, and October yet to come. And when I think of Mother and Boston and Marie, and the darling good times down there where you're really wanted, I am simply crazy.

If Father wanted me, really wanted me, I wouldn't care a bit. I'd be willing to be Mary six whole months. Yes, I'd be glad to. But he doesn't. I'm just here by order of the court. And what can you do when you're nothing but a daughter by order of the court?

As I said before, if only there was somebody here that wanted me. But there isn't. Of course Father doesn't. That goes without saying. And Aunt Jane doesn't. That goes, too, without saying. Carrie Heywood has gone away for all summer, so I can't have even her, and of course, I wouldn't associate with any of the other girls, even if they would associate with me—which they won't.

That leaves only Mother's letters. They are dear, and I love them. I don't know what I'd do without them. And yet, sometimes I think maybe they're worse than if I didn't have them. They make me so homesick, and I always cry so after I get them. Still, I know I just couldn't live a minute if I wasn't for Mother's letters.

Father doesn't like ladies. I know he doesn't. He always runs away from them. But they don't run away from him! Listen.

Quite a lot of them call here to see Aunt Jane, and they come lots of times evenings and late afternoons, and I know now why they do it. They come then because they think Father'll be at home at that time; and they want to see him.

I know it now, but I never thought of it till the other day when I heard our hired girl, Susie, talking about it with Bridget, the Smalls' hired girl, over the fence when I was weeding the garden one day. Then I knew. It was like this:

Mrs. Darling had been over the night before as usual, and had stayed an awfully long time talking to Aunt Jane on the front piazza. Father had been there, too, awhile. She stopped him on his way into the house. I was there and I heard her. She said:

"Oh, Mr. Anderson, I'm so glad I saw you! I wanted to ask your advice about selling poor dear Mr. Darling's law library."

And then she went on to tell him how she'd had an offer, but she wasn't sure whether it was a good one or not. And she told him how highly she prized his opinion, and he was a man of such splendid judgment, and she felt so alone now with no strong man's shoulder to lean upon, and she would be so much obliged if he only would tell her whether he considered that offer a good one or not.

Father hitched and ahemmed and moved nearer the door all the time she was talking, and he didn't seem to hear her when she pushed a chair toward him and asked him to please sit down and tell her what to do; that she was so alone in the world since poor dear Mr. Darling had gone. (She always calls him poor dear Mr. Darling now, but Susie says she didn't when he was alive; she called him something quite different. I wonder what it was.)

Well, as I said, Father hitched and fidgeted, and said he didn't know, he was sure; that she'd better take wiser counsel than his, and that he was very sorry, but she really must excuse him. And he got through the door while he was talking just as fast as he could himself, so that she couldn't get in a single word to keep him. Then he was gone.

Mrs. Darling stayed on the piazza two whole hours longer, but Father never came out at all again.

It was the next morning that Susie said this over the back-yard fence to Bridget:

"It does beat all how popular this house is with the ladies—after college hours!"

And Bridget chuckled and answered back:

"Sure it is! An' I do be thinkin' the Widder Darlin' is a heap fonder of Miss Jane now than she would have been had poor dear Mr. Darlin' lived!"

And she chuckled again, and so did Susie. And then, all of a sudden, I knew. It was Father Mrs. Darling wanted. They came here to see him. They wanted to marry him. As if I didn't know what Susie and Bridget meant! I'm no child!

Paul is No Silly Boy. He's Old Enough to Get a License to Drive His Own Car.

But all this doesn't make Father like them. I'm not sure but it makes him dislike them. Anyhow, he won't have anything to do with them. He always runs away over to the observatory, or somewhere, and won't see them; and I've heard him say things about them to Aunt Jane, too—words that sound all right, but that don't mean what they say, and everybody knows they don't. So, as I said before, I don't see any chance of Father's having a love story to help out this book—not right away, anyhow.

As for my love story—I don't see any chance of that's beginning, either. Yet, seems as if there ought to be the beginning of it by this time—I'm going on fifteen. Oh, there have been beginnings, lots of them—only Aunt Jane wouldn't let them go on and be endings, though I told her good and plain that I thought it perfectly all right; and I reminded her about the brook and river meeting where I stood, and all that.

But I couldn't make her see it at all. She said, "Stuff and nonsense!" and when Aunt Jane says both stuff and nonsense I know there's nothing doing. (Oh, dear, that's slang! Aunt Jane says she does wish I would eliminate the slang from my vocabulary. Well, I wish she'd eliminate some of the long words from hers. Marie said that—not Mary.)

Well, Aunt Jane said stuff and nonsense, and that I was much too young to run around with silly boys. You see, Charlie Smith had walked home from school with me twice, but I had to stop that. And Fred Small was getting so he was over here a lot. Aunt Jane stopped him. Paul Mayhew—yes, Paul Mayhew, Stella's brother—came home with me, too, and asked me to go with him auto-riding. My, how I did want to go! I wanted the ride, of course, but especially I wanted to go because he was Mrs. Mayhew's son. I just wanted to show Mrs. Mayhew! But Aunt Jane wouldn't let me. That's the time she talked specially about running around with silly boys. But she needn't have. Paul is no silly boy. He's old enough to get a license to drive his own car.

Well, of course, that ended that. And there hasn't been any other since. That's why I say my love story doesn't seem to be getting along very well. Naturally, when it gets noised around town that your Aunt Jane won't let you go anywhere with a young man, or let a young man come to see you, or even walk home with you after the first time—why, the young men aren't going to do very much toward making your daily life into a love story.

TWO WEEKS LATER.

A queer thing happened last night. It was like this:

Yesterday Aunt Jane went to spend the day with her best friend. She said for me not to leave the house, as some member of the family should be there. She told me to sew an hour, weed an hour, dust the house downstairs and upstairs, and read some improving book an hour. The rest of the time I might amuse myself.

Amuse myself! A jolly time I could have all by myself! Even Father wasn't to be home for dinner, so I wouldn't have that excitement. He was out of town, and was not to come home till six o'clock.

It was an awfully hot day. The sun just beat down, and there wasn't a breath of air. By noon I was simply crazy with my stuffy, long-sleeved, high-necked blue gingham dress and my great clumpy shoes. It seemed all of a sudden as if I couldn't stand it—not another minute—not a single minute more—to be Mary, I mean. And suddenly I determined that for a while, just a little while, I'd be Marie again. Why couldn't I? There wasn't anybody going to be there but just myself, all day long.

I ran then upstairs to the guest-room closet where Aunt Jane had made me put all my Marie dresses and things when the Mary ones came. Well, I got out the very finestest, softest white dress there was, and the little white slippers and the silk stockings that I loved, and the blue silk sash, and the little gold locket and chain that Mother gave me that Aunt Jane wouldn't let me wear. And I dressed up. My, didn't I dress up? And I just threw those old heavy shoes and black cotton stockings into the corner, and the blue gingham dress after them (though Mary went right away and picked the dress up, and hung it in the closet, of course); but I had the fun of throwing it, anyway.

Oh, how good those Marie things did feel to Mary's hot, dried flesh and bones, and how I did dance and sing around the room in those light little slippers! Then Susie rang the dinner-bell and I went down to the dining-room feeling like a really truly young lady, I can tell you.

Susie stared, of course, and said, "My, how fine we are today!" But I didn't mind Susie.

After dinner I went out into the hall and I sang all over the house. Then I went into the parlor and played every lively thing that I could think of on the piano. And I sang there, too—silly little songs that Marie used to sing to Lester. And I tried to think I was really down there to Boston, singing to Lester; and that Mother was right in the next room waiting for me.

Then I stopped and turned around on the piano stool, and the room was just as still as death. And I knew I wasn't in Boston. I was there in Andersonville. And there wasn't any Baby Lester there, nor any mother waiting for me in the next room. And all the fluffy white dresses and silk stockings in the world wouldn't make me Marie. I was really just Mary, and I had got to have three whole months more of it.

And then is when I began to cry. And I cried just as hard as I'd been singing a minute before. I was on the floor with my head in my arms on the piano stool when Father's voice came to me from the doorway.

"Mary, Mary, what in the world does this mean?"

I jumped up and stood "at attention," the way you have to, of course, when fathers speak to you.

"Yes, sir," I tried not to have my voice shake as I said it; but I couldn't quite help that.

"What is the meaning of this, Mary? Why are you crying?"

I shook my head. I didn't want to tell him, of course; so I just stammered out something about being sorry I had disturbed him. Then I edged toward the door to show him that if he would step one side I would get away at once and not bother him any longer.

Whatever of thought you think or receive, you send from you again an invisible substance to act on others. —P. Mulford.

DO YOU LIKE PINEAPPLE?

Pineapple like other fruits are never better than when served and eaten fresh. But we are glad to have a few cans during the season when they are not on the market, to help out in the variety of our menus. As a salad or in combination with other foods, pineapple adds much to a dish. A cabbage salad becomes a dish in the highest class with a slice or two of pineapple added to it.

Pineapple Cake.—Make an angel food or any white cake baked in a sheet. Cut and put together in layers with a filling of whipped cream into which has been stirred shredded pineapple, sugar and flavoring to taste. The cake may be baked in layers of made into small cakes.

Pineapple Salad.—Arrange a slice of pineapple on lettuce, and on the slices place pieces of red pepper cut in the form of poinsettia petals. Riced hard-cooked egg may be used for the centers.

Pineapple Dessert.—Arrange on individual plates as many slices of pineapple. In the center of each slice place a cone of ice cream and sprinkle with chopped nuts. Whipped cream may be added to the cone, then the chopped nuts.

Pineapple Marshmallow.—Mix equal amounts of marshmallows cut in quarters and pineapple cut in cubes; add pineapple juice and let the mixture stand for a while in a cool place. Just before serving, add a half-cupful of sweetened and flavored whipped cream and a few almonds. Serve in sherbet cups garnished with cherries.

Frozen Pudding.—Make a custard of a pint of milk, three egg yolks, a cupful of sugar and a pinch of salt; strain, add a teaspoonful of vanilla and almond mixed, then fold in the whites of the eggs and a cupful of whipped cream. Add chopped pineapple and candied cherries finely minced and freeze as usual.

Pineapple Fritters.—Stir grated pineapple into fritter batter, using one cupful of flour, one-half teaspoonful of baking powder, a pinch of salt, two well-beaten eggs, one-half cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of milk. Beat well. Use a cupful of pineapple Fry in small spoonfuls in deep fat.

Pineapple With Cheese.—Place a slice of pineapple in the center of head lettuce. In the center of the slice put a ball of seasoned cream cheese, sprinkle with a little of the riced yolk of egg.

Observation more than books, experience rather than persons, are the prize educators. It sometimes takes courage to insist that you are right, but a lot more to admit that you are wrong.

EVERYDAY FOOD

A tasty pudding which is quickly prepared and so good for the small people is apple bread pudding.

Cut pieces of bread into two-inch squares or smaller, spread with butter, and put into a baking dish with a generous cupful of thinly sliced apple sweetened and flavored. Bake until the apple is done. Serve hot with sugar and cream.

Salmon Croquettes.—Mix a cupful of canned salmon with an equal quantity of cold mashed potato. Bind with beaten egg or a very thick cream sauce. Shape into croquettes, dip in crumbs and egg and fry in a wire basket in deep fat.

Codfish and Macaroni.—Take one cupful each of cooked macaroni and flaked cooked codfish. Put into a buttered baking dish, sprinkle with salt, pepper and crumbs—the crumbs well buttered. Sprinkle with grated cheese and add sufficient milk to moisten. Bake until brown in a hot oven.

Cuban Codfish.—Chop one onion fine and fry a light brown in butter. Add a cupful of canned tomatoes and a cupful of fresh codfish. Cook ten minutes, stirring constantly. Serve on buttered toast.

Pea and Walnut Salad.—Take equal quantities of green cooked peas and walnut meats broken into bits. Sprinkle with French dressing and let stand half an hour. Serve with mayonnaise on lettuce or in lemon cups.

Jellied Fish.—Soak one package of gelatin in cold water to cover, then add enough water to make a cupful and dissolve over heat until the liquid is transparent. Have ready four cupfuls of flaked cooked fish, season highly with salt, pepper, lemon juice or tarragon vinegar. Add the hot gelatin to the fish and stir until it begins to thicken. Pack into an earthen mold which has been rinsed with cold water and set away to harden.

Creamed Codfish With Poached Eggs.—Take left-over creamed codfish, heat and spread on toast which is well buttered, then drop on each a poached egg. Serve hot.

Rheumatism and Dyspepsia Are Soon Ended

Victims of stomach trouble and rheumatism often find that when their stomach is set in order, the rheumatism disappears. Thousands of people everywhere have testified that Tanlac has freed them of both troubles simultaneously. Mr. Robert Trotter, 148 State St., St. Paul, Minn., says:

"About a year ago I began to go down hill. Sour stomach and rheumatism in my arms and shoulders kept me in misery all the time. Since taking Tanlac all my aches and pains have gone, and my stomach is in fine shape. I'm glad to endorse such a fine medicine."

Badly digested food fills the whole system with poisons. Rheumatism and many other complaints not generally recognized as having their origin in the stomach quickly respond to the right treatment. Get a bottle today at any good druggist.—Advertisement.

Spoils Cat's Appetite.

Cats and canaries are supposed to be deadly enemies with most of the animus on the side of the cat. Women folk who like them both as pets generally have to choose between the two and one or the other is barred from the home. How to have them both and induce them to live in peace and harmony together has worried many a housewife. An East Orange woman has solved the problem. A visitor at her home recently noticed the family cat cringe in terror as it passed under the bird cage on its way to the door.

The woman explained her system of training. She says she secretly took the bird from the cage and let the cat pounce about. When the feline investigator stuck its head inside she slammed the door on it and let the cat struggle to get free until nearly exhausted. That cured the cat of nosing around the bird cage.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Prolific Writer.

Claribel, age twelve, is a regular reader of poetry. Not infrequently she notes a poem signed "Anonymous." That puzzled her and one day she asked her father who "Anonymous" is. Father had to admit he did not know. "Well," said Claribel, "he certainly writes a lot of poems."

It is more blessed to give than to receive is a balm for those who have to give.

TIME HAD CHANGED THINGS

Fare Offered Might Have Satisfied Conductor Once, but Not at This Day and Date.

My young daughter and I were starting for the country. I purchased the tickets and we hurried on the train, finding a crowded coach. Not being able to secure two seats together, I gave Ruth her ticket and found a seat for myself in the forward end of the car.

Soon the conductor came along collecting fares. I handed him my ticket and settled back comfortably in my seat. He looked first at the little piece of cardboard and then at me. I am fair, fat and forty.

He seemed rather amused as he returned the ticket with these words, "This might have gone at one time, but I am afraid it won't do now."

I didn't stop to argue, for as I glanced at the ticket I saw I had retained the half fare and given the full fare to my young daughter.—Chicago Tribune.

FREEDOM FROM LAXATIVES

Discovery by Scientists Has Replaced Them.

Pills and salts give temporary relief from constipation only at the expense of permanent injury, says an eminent medical authority.

Science has found a newer, better way—a means as simple as Nature itself.

In perfect health a natural lubricant keeps the food waste soft and moving. But when constipation exists this natural lubricant is not sufficient. Medical authorities have found that the gentle lubricating action of Nujol most closely resembles that of Nature's own lubricant. As Nujol is not a laxative it cannot gripe. It is in no sense a medicine. And like pure water it is harmless and pleasant.

Nujol is prescribed by physicians; used in leading hospitals. Get a bottle from your druggist today.—Advertisement.

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS

Read This Letter from Mrs. W. S. Hughes

Greenville, Del.—"I was under the impression that my eldest daughter had some internal trouble as ever since the first time her sickness appeared she had to go to bed and even had to quit school once for a week. I always take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound myself so I gave it to her and she has received great benefit from it. You can use this letter for a testimonial if you wish, as I cannot say too much about what your medicine has done for me and for my daughter."—Mrs. Wm. S. Hughes, Greenville, Delaware.

Mothers and oftentimes grandmothers have taken and have learned the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So they recommend the medicine to others.

The best test of any medicine is what it has done for others. For nearly fifty years we have published letters from mothers, daughters, and women, young and old, recommending the Vegetable Compound. They know what it did for them and are glad to tell others. In your own neighborhood are women who know of its great value.

Some More Truths.

WOULD you use a steam shovel to move a pebble? Certainly not. Implements are built according to the work they have to do.

Would you use a grown-up's remedy for your baby's ills? Certainly not. Remedies are prepared according to the work THEY have to do.

All this is preliminary to reminding you that Fletcher's Castoria was sought out, found and is prepared solely as a remedy for Infants and Children. And let this be a warning against Substitutes, Counterfeits and the Just-as-good stuff that may be all right for you in all your strength, but dangerous for the little babe.

All the mother-love that lies within your heart cries out to you: Be true to Baby. And being true to Baby you will keep in the house remedies specially prepared for babies as you would a baby's food, hairbrush, toothbrush or sponge.

Children Cry For Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Are You Prepared?

A doctor in the house all the time would be a good idea. Yet you can't afford to keep a doctor in the family to keep baby well or prevent sickness. But you can do almost the same thing by having at hand a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria, because it is a wonderful remedy for indigestion, colic, feverishness, fretfulness and all the other disorders that result from common ailments that babies have.

Fletcher's Castoria is perfectly safe to use. It is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. Children cry for Fletcher's Castoria, and mothers recommend it because they have found it a comfort to children and a mother's friend.

If you love your baby, you know how sweet it is to be able to help baby when trouble comes. You cannot always call upon a doctor. But doctors have nothing but good to say of Fletcher's Castoria, because they know that it can only do good—that it can't do any harm—and they wouldn't want you to use for baby a remedy that you would use for yourself.

"Little Brother" Again.

I was dancing with "the only one" when I suggested that we sit out the next dance. We did—out in one corner of the dark veranda. It was while we were engaged in a very fond embrace that Little Brother Bill, showing his new flashlight to some of the guests, absent-mindedly directed its rays our way.—Exchange.

Another View of Selfishness.

Selfishness does not always apply to the man who is unwilling to share his belongings with others, but it also applies to the man who may have some practical ideas and will not pass them on to his neighbor.

Mr. Pork Producer:

You are interested in the fact that from our pork herd we sold during the month of August 125 MARCH pigs at an average age of 5½ months and an average weight of 167 pounds.

We have a select lot of registered spring boars by the sire of these pigs.

Where Extra Service is Demanded Firestone Cords Predominate

WHEREVER the exacting and tests of tires are most severe—there you will find Firestone Cords in universal use.

The hard jobs seek Firestone. And so well has Firestone responded under difficult conditions—so consistently has mileage mounted to totals impossible to obtain from ordinary tires that today Most Miles per Dollar is the buying slogan of thinking motorists everywhere.

The blending and tempering of rubber, gum-dipped cord construction, air-bag cure—all these mileage methods have been developed by men whose life work is the production of constantly increasing tire values for the public.

Users in this vicinity verify Firestone reputation, and report almost daily some new Firestone record of extra distance travelled.

Don't be satisfied to buy tires—buy values—the longest mileage at the lowest price consistent with such reliable performance.

Make Most Miles per Dollar your principle of tire economy—choose your next tire on that basis.
