President of Rockford Motor Club Expresses His Opinion

THE IDEA GROWING IN FAVOR

Wisconsin Roads a Good Example of the Results of Systematic Maintenance

Stating that the present system of road supervision was wholly inadequate for the maintenance of the roads in the state of Illinois, J. S. Joslyn, president of the Rockford-Motor club expressed his opinions on the subject of good roads in an interview for the Morning Star.

"We are operating at the present time under road laws that have not been changed since Illinois became a state," he declared. "At that time the township unit was passably satisfactory, because it took as long then to cover a township as it takes now to cover a county with an auto."

"When the law was passed, we had no road or bridge engineers in charge of the county units as we have today. It is unquestionably unfair to expect as good results from an untrained man as township commissioner as may be reasonably expected from a trained engineer as county commissioner. The township commissioner gets very little pay for the labor he delivers to the township, and he works hard and conscientiously in every case, I believe, to the best of his ability and opportunity. Still the law allows the county commissioner a suggestive authority."

Advocates Road Contracts

"I believe that every road job should be let under contract, as my observation leads me to think that sociability and neighborly do not allow the county commissioner to get the same amount of work for a dollar from his road gang that the contractor would get from his men in order to handle the job in a business-like manner."

"In my opinion we should do away entirely with the township unit, and have the work handled under the county superintendent's supervision and jurisdiction. There should be no roads graded, graveled, or macadamized without an engineer's survey or specification, for the contractor to bid on. Then it never would happen that the commissioner would attempt to make water run up a hill, as I know was tried in one case."

Township Roads in Good Condition

"In the case of our own township, the commissioner has approximately $165,000 to spend in the township outside the city of Rockford on 77 miles of road, and the county has approximately $230,000 to spend on about 900 miles of road outside of the city and township of Rockford."

"The Rockford township roads are in excellent shape as compared with the county roads in the county outside of Rockford township, for the reason that there have been many more dollars available for Rockford township on account of the funds of the city tax going for that purpose."

Explains Wisconsin System

"Our sister state Wisconsin has a system of grading dirt roads after having them surveyed by an engineer, then patrolling them, and I mean by patrolling, grading and scraping after each rain, so as to keep the depressions and ruts filled. Then as soon as there is any more money available for that road, they either gravel it or macadamize it, still maintaining it by patrolling, which gives at least one very good road from town to town for every town in the state."

"Their ultimate desire is to build concrete roads on the main highways, but as it would require from 15 to 20 or 25 years to complete such a system, they believe that it's money well spent to maintain the roads until such time as they can secure sufficient funds and contractors to construct their main roads."

"Four years ago, this was the theory of A. R. Hirst, Wisconsin state road engineer, but at the present time it has become instead of a theory, a noteworthy fact, as can be demonstrated to any reader, if he will drive from Beloit to Kenosha, Milwaukee, Oshkosh, Green Bay, Madison, or almost any other point in Wisconsin. The average cost for patrolling roads in Wisconsin was $263 per mile last year. People in that state feel that it is economical, it allows them less cost per mile for

SOME DETOURING

Motorists Find Rough Riding Between Elgin and Aurora

Aurora Daily Star: With the contract signed for the state-aid road through North Aurora, and the contractors ready to start digging, tourists between Aurora and Elgin will have to take to the east side of the river on their way to the Watch City or else make several detours. The east side road through Batavia is pretty rough, the street commissioners having selected this time to lay a sewer gas main through the middle of the street, but at that it is not much worse than the west side has been for years.

The stretch north of St. Charles and South Elgin is under construction; and as there is considerable rough riding through Geneva and St. Charles, particularly the latter, the west side cement road is not going to be popular with through north and south tourists.

When these three pieces of road are done, as they will be by autumn, there will be a stretch of 22 miles of cement, broken only at Batavia, Geneva and St. Charles. The county seat has considerable north and south paving, St. Charles is arranging to do some this summer, and if Batavia will get busy and fix Batavia avenue there will be nothing to mar the harmony of the motorist.

Also a piece of state-aid cement road north of Elgin on the way to Dundee will be completed this summer.

A SAD ENDING

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Taylor of Genoa Dies

Mrs. Myrtle Ardella Lindquist died at 9:30 o'clock Monday evening at the Sycamore Hospital of complications, following an operation performed a week before.

She was born in Mayfield township July 29, 1888, a daughter of Ed. and Katherine Taylor. She graduated from the Kingston High school in 1904, and then taught school for several terms.

She was united in marriage on Jan. 19, 1910, to Herman Lindquist. To them were born two children, Lester Ronald, aged 10, and Hazel Irene, aged 3, who, with the husband, survive to mourn her early departure. She also leaves surviving her parents, her sister, Mrs. Edna Jones, and her brother, Fred Taylor, and many other relatives and many friends.

Mrs. Lindquist was a member of the Congregational church, was church secretary for several years and a faithful and valued worker in the Ladies' Aid society. Her loss will be deeply felt, not only by the bereaved family to which she was devoted, but by the entire community.

The funeral services were held on Thursday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the late residence, Rev. Mr. Cross officiating.

EX-SERVICE MAN

Laid to Rest in Fairdale Tuesday of This Week

Rev. J. E. Robeson of Genoa officiated at the funeral of Clifford Rickard, son of Mrs. Stella Rickard, at Fairdale Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Rickard, thirty years of age, had resided in the state of Washington twelve years. At the outbreak of the world war he enlisted and went into training at Camp Lewis. Here he was stricken with influenza and pneumonia. He never fully recovered and tuberculosis finally developed. He came to his home in Fairdale a few weeks ago and passed away on the 29th of May.

Funeral services were in charge of the American Legion.

travel, besides eliminating roads deep with mud or badly rutted after the mud has dried up.

Advocates Patrol System "Winnebago county has a sum coming from the state aid road construction which it has paid for, amounting, according to a bill now before the legislature, to $43,594. It is due this section to spend this money as soon as possible on well-graded, macadamized road, to be superintended by a patrol system, so that it will be fit for travel twelve months in the year."

"I believe that enough money should be spent in patrolling our good roads to keep them in good shape during the entire year, rather than to build concrete roads that are not patrolled."

OPPOSING LANTZ BILL STRONGLY

No Action Taken Tuesday as Predicted—Thirteen from Genoa Present

In one of the closest contests ever staged in the state of Illinois legislature, those opposed to the Lantz bill (regulating the Chicago board of trade, or practically putting it out of business) won the battle temporarily at least on Tuesday.

After five hours of argument and parliamentary jockeying, neither side wanted a decision in committee of the whole of the house on the first of the Lantz bills.

By agreement between Representative Shanahan of the Chicago men and Representative Tice for the downstate supporters of the Lantz bill, senate bill 283 was reported out of committee without recommendation.

This means that the supporters of the bill will be required to furnish a majority vote to place the bill upon the house calendar so that it can be called for second reading, which is the amendment stage of legislation.

No Action Until Next Week

When Tuesday's hearing adjourned it was expected the vote to put it on the house calendar would come Wednesday, but the tentative agreement is for both houses to adjourn Thursday noon, which probably means that there will be nothing doing on Board of Trade legislation until next Tuesday at the earliest.

The net result of Tuesday's action is to put the Lantz bill supporters on the defense. The tactical advantage now held by the board of trade is that it is up to the other side to furnish the majority quorum necessary to shove the bill in the rest of its house journey. With the full membership present the Lantz bill men have to line up seventy-seven votes to adopt the motion.

Meantime Senator Lantz made no effort to call up senate bill 284 in the senate, that being the bill that would prevent the dealing in futures.

ECKHARDT TREASURER

Will Handle Millions of Dollars in New Organization

William G. Eckhardt of DeKalb has been named as one of the chief executive officers of the greatest agricultural marketing organization in the world, according to the official announcement of the personnel of the United States Grain Growers, Inc., made late Saturday night.

That the DeKalb man is engaged in no mean enterprise can be easily imagined when it is shown that the capitalization of the corporation of which he is the treasurer is $100,000,000, while the potential financial power of the giant concern is fixed at at least one billion.

The corporation was formed for the purpose of handling the country's grain crop on a co-operative basis. Incorporation papers will be filed in Wilmington, Del., next week.

The officers of the United States Grain Growers, Inc., are:

C. H. Gustafson, of Lincoln, Neb., president; J. A. Anderson, of St. Paul, Minn., first vice president; George C. Jewett, of Spokane, Wash., second vice president; C. H. Hyde, of Alva, Okla., third vice president; W. G. Eckhardt, of DeKalb, Ill., treasurer, and Frank M. Meyers, of Fort Dodge, Iowa, secretary.

The farmers' corporation will at once lease or build elevators in Chicago, Minneapolis, Omaha, Kansas City, Cleveland, New York and Spokane or Seattle, and later in Galveston and Fort Worth.

In the house. By special trains, by auto caravans, and by horse and buggy, farmers came from every corner of the state. Before 7 o'clock men opposed to the Lantz bills had registered at the Leland hotel, headquarters of the anti-bill leaders. At the St. Nicholas, the Illinois Agricultural association and the county farm bureaus, the men who have been the brains of the Lantz bill propaganda had their camp.

By 10 o'clock the great state house lawn was bristling with groups of excited and argumentative farmers. By noon, the capitol was a mass of battlers. Legislators ran for cover. To some of the old timers it looked like the old state convention days during the time of the Lowden-Deneen deadlock.

The following from Genoa were in Springfield Tuesday: John Gahl, S. T. Zeller, J. R. Kiernan, Arthur Patterson, B. D. Smith, M. J. Corson, Chas. Whipple, Albert Stray, N. A. Montgomery, W. A. Elklor, A. B. Brown, H. S. Burroughs, L. J. Kiernan.

IN THEIR OWN HOME

Karl K. Holtgren and Miss Marguerite Shierk Married Wednesday

In the apartment which they have been preparing during the past several weeks, Mr. Karl K. Holtgren and Miss S. Marguerite Shierk were united in marriage at nine o'clock Wednesday morning, June 1, Rev. J. E. Robeson, pastor of the M. E. church, officiating. Only members of the immediate families were present. Luncheon was prepared and served in the apartment by the bride's mother, after which the couple left in an automobile for Indianapolis where they will visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Burgess. Mrs. Burgess was formerly Miss Irene Patterson. They will return to Genoa next week and begin housekeeping at once, the rooms being all ready, even to the kitchen utensils and groceries.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Shierk of Genoa and a granddaughter of Mrs. D. B. Arbuckle of Kingston. She came to Genoa with her parents a few years ago and by her sweet manners has won many friends besides capturing one of the city's best male products. Karl was born in Genoa, graduated from the high school, saw service in the world war, and after returning from France was taken into partnership by his father, under the firm name of F. O. Holtgren & Son.

Mr. and Mrs. Holtgren have the best wishes of the community. May life for them be just one continuous honeymoon.

A BAD PRACTICE

The bicycle boys in town, and there are many of them now, have become a little careless regarding riding on sidewalks. Now The Republican has no objection whatever to the boys using the walks, but it might be well to remind them that the practice is dangerous, to them as well as to pedestrians. The boy on a bicycle on a smooth walk, is just like the man in an auto on a cement road—he cannot resist the temptation to "step on 'er." Some persons might step out onto the walk at the very instant that a bicycle flashes by. Then it's good night! Hundreds of people have been badly injured in this way, and many killed outright. It often happens that the rider is the one injured or killed. Boys should be particularly careful in riding where walks are close to buildings.

M. E. CHURCH NOTES

Sunday morning the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will hold its annual thank offering service. Rev. Clarence Olmstead, who has recently returned from Burma, India, will deliver the address. Come and hear Rev. Olmstead tell the interesting story of this land.

Sunday evening we will give the next number in our stereopticon lecture series: "Our Island Cousins, the Philippines." This lecture is chock full of valuable information and interest. These lectures are proving interesting. There is a splendid attendance. This is one of the best in the course.

GENOA LOSES IN BATFEST

Ten Innings Required to Decide Game at Hampshire Sunday

In a ten inning game at Hampshire last Sunday the Nationals were defeated by the Hampshire team, the score being 10 to 9. It was Genoa's game until the fifth inning, when the score stood 8 to 4 with the Nationals holding the lead. It was right at this point that the Hampshire team seemed to find Holderness and considerable damage was done before the pitcher could again get settled down. It was a good game from the fan standpoint, there being enough fast work to please the most exacting batfest critic, Hampshire marking up nineteen hits while Genoa registered eleven. Geithman and Cornwell are given credit for three double plays.

The Somonauk Woman's Club of Genoa invites the Community Club of Genoa to attend the DeKalb County "Get Together" picnic in the Congregational church at Somonauk, June 15. Each woman is requested to bring dishes for self, one half dozen sandwiches and one article of food. The Somonauk Club will serve coffee. Dinner at 12:30. Program at 2:30. Any one desiring to attend please notify Miss Irma Perkins before June 6.

AUTO VICTIM DIES

After being struck by an automobile driven by Leo McGirr in DeKalb last Wednesday night, suffering a fracture of the base of the skull, Edward Barrett passed away Saturday night at 9 o'clock without recovering consciousness. His death is a most deplorable one, following the serious accident on North Third street when McGirr was driving along that street during the heavy rainstorm and failed to see the man on the bicycle.

SPEND VACATION AT CAMP GRANT

Government Offers Free Outing for Young Men of Illinois

UNCLE SAM PAYS THE EXPENSES

Education, Recreation and Physical Training During Month's Sojourn

The Citizens Military Training Camp to be opened at Camp Grant, Thursday, July 21, and to continue for four weeks, is a voluntary affair on the part of the students and is for the young men in Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin—the Sixth Army Corps area. The War Department aims to bring together young men of all occupations on a basis of equality and under the most favorable conditions of outdoor life and to promote good citizenship and an interest in national defense.

All Expenses Paid

The Government will pay all expenses of those attending this camp, including transportation, food and medical care. Each candidate will pay his own transportation to the camp and be reimbursed upon arrival at the rate of five cents a mile.

Enrollment at this camp implies no later service obligation, although it is hoped that men who attend will be inclined thereafter to enroll with the National Guard or the Reserve.

Who May Attend

The camps are open to all men between the ages of sixteen and thirty-five years, who are of sound character, intelligence and physical condition. No educational qualifications are prescribed, but each candidate must file a certificate of good character, signed by school master, clergyman, priest or rabbi, together with medical testimony from a qualified physician as to hearing, eyesight, heart action and a general condition adequately fitted for the course of training.

The "Plattsburg Idea"

The training at Camp Grant will be carried on in the spirit which infused Plattsburg and the other pre-war camps. The ideal of virile American manhood will be strongly emphasized. Devotion to country, good comradeship, "teamwork" and a feeling of equality, coupled with a high respect for good discipline and a morale will be throughout controlling aims.

Uniform training and instruction will include the initiation of all who attend into the elementary duties of the soldier and the ordinary routine of camp life. There will be squad, platoon and company drills; small arms practice; guard duty; camping and marching; individual cooking; care of equipment and actual problems in minor tactics.

Physical Training

The supreme aim of Camp Grant will be the physical well being and development of all who attend. Every man is urged to take vaccination against small pox and anti-typhoid treatment before he reports to camp. If he cannot present a certificate covering such inoculation he must undergo treatment after arrival. Outdoor games and sports will be under the direction of experts and every man will be taught not only to take part but also to direct. Careful individual attention will be given to the correction of all minor bodily defects with advice as to the future corrective treatment and exercise.

Lectures, Music, Movies

Full provision will be made at Camp Grant for the wholesome and interesting employment of all leisure time. There will be lectures, moving picture programs; amateur and professional musical and dramatic entertainment with full use of Post Exchange facilities; mail service and a club room.

Equipment and Location

Each candidate will bring to camp one piece of hand luggage containing shaving and toilet articles; four suits of underwear; two pair of pajamas; six pairs of socks; six handkerchiefs; four face towels and two bath towels. It will be well also to bring athletic uniforms and equipment, musical instruments and bathing suits, in so far as each has these articles. Military clothing and equipment will be furnished and laundry service provided free.

Additional information and necessary enrollment blanks may be secured from Major Allen R. Edwards, 210 Mallers Building, Chicago.

ANOTHER WOMAN ESCAPES

Mrs. McCumber Avoided a Serious Operation by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in Time

Georgetown, Ill.—"After my first baby was born I suffered so with my left side that I could not walk across the floor unless I was all humped over, holding to my side. I doctored with several doctors but found no relief and they said I would have to have an operation. My mother insisted on my taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I soon found relief. Now I can do all my own work and it is the Vegetable Compound that has saved me from an operation. I cannot praise your medicine too highly and I tell all of my friends and neighbors what the Compound did for me." — Mrs. MARGARET MCCUMBER, 27 S. Frazier St., Georgetown, Illinois.

Mrs. McCumber is one of the unnumbered thousands of housewives who struggle to keep about their daily tasks, while suffering from ailments peculiar to women with backache, sideaches, headaches, bearing-down pains and nervousness,—and if every such woman should profit by her experience and give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial they would get well.

K. of C. Organized in 1882. The Knights of Columbus, a fraternal and benevolent organization to which male members of the Roman Catholic church are eligible, was founded in 1882 in New Haven, Conn., with the object of furnishing financial aid to its members and their beneficiaries and of establishing and promoting social and intellectual fellowship. The society is governed by a supreme council, the members of which are elected by the various state councils. The headquarters of the organization are at New Haven, Conn.

II. THE IMPOSSIBLE—Continued.

"Why," he broke out furiously—"if you do not know me, how is it you know me so well? When, suspecting the truth—but never how hideous it was—I followed you back to New York yesterday; when I tramped for hours the streets where I had met and loved and wooed you and, as I thought, won your love; when at length I caught sight of Carnehan and dogged him from bar to bar, without his knowledge, until finally he reeled into that infamous place, and I, suspecting he might have had you imprisoned there, got a detail of police from the station round the corner; when we broke in, and I found you half demented with fear, and you saw me and came running into my arms: when that happened—if you were and are not Leonora—how did you know who I was, how came you at sight to cry out my name, Mario?"

She begged his charity with clasped hands.

"If you will only listen, I can explain."

With a curt nod he consented, turned his back to the fire, folded his arms. His eyes held a sardonic gleam.

"I am listening."

She made impulsively to speak, but uttered never a sound. Her heart misgave her. The story she must tell, if she were to explain, was even more preposterous than that which he was refusing to credit. It would only earn his deeper scorn. Her eyes turned blank, her face expressionless.

"I am waiting," he prompted.

She looked away, and drooped, discouraged, despondent.

"Forgive me," she said in a weak voice. "After all, I hardly know how to explain. I can only ask you to be kind—believe me when I tell you I'm not your wife, not Leonora."

His eyebrows climbed. "Who, then, am I to believe you are?"

"My name is Priscilla Maine, I—"

"I know no person of that name."

"No; we never met—"

"Still, you are well enough acquainted with me to use my Christian name at first sight of me—without even the formality of an introduction?"

She confessed sullenly: "I can't explain. It's impossible. But what I have told you is true: I am Priscilla Maine."

"And you, whom I have never met—you tell me—you knew so much about me that you knew I had gone to New York, promising to return in time for dinner, leaving my wife alone with the servants; you knew she had disappeared. Perhaps you knew even her?"

Overlooking the sarcasm, she declared: "As well as I know myself." "At last!" he offered her an ironic bow—"something I can believe!"

"You can convince yourself," she suggested, "if you will get New York on long distance, call Murray Hill two-three-six-one, and ask for Mrs. Trowbridge."

"Well, what then?"

"She will tell you her niece, Priscilla Maine, has been missing since last night."

"And what, pray, will that prove?"

"You may listen while I talk with her. Her replies will prove I am Priscilla Maine."

He shrugged. "But you know very well there is no telephone within ten miles of this camp."

In consternation she dropped back into her chair and sat trying to think. Would it do any good to tell him the history of her dreams? Could she herself be convinced against her will by such a story?

The answer came from Mario.

"It is useless," he said wearily. "No; do not interrupt me. Say nothing more."

"But I must make you understand, I must!"

"No, Leonora; I already understand too well. You do not love me; and since you have found it difficult to escape me, you invent this cock-and-bull yarn to spare my feelings. A mistaken kindness. No matter; you make your wish clear. I am to believe you think you are not my wife. So be it; I will believe that, but I can do so only at a price."

"Tell me what you mean."

"If I am to believe that you believe you are not Leonora, I must believe that you are mentally deranged." He pondered gravely: "It is possible terror and suffering have so worked upon you—"

"Mario!" she pleaded—"you can find out the truth if you'll take me to the nearest telephone—whether it's ten miles or fifty—now, tonight, in your motor car."

"It is too late. These good people hereabouts go early to their beds. Shall I disturb them for no purpose other than to humor a mad freak?"

"Then let me go—"

"Alone?"

"I'm not afraid."

"But I am afraid for you. Remember how I found you last night, in peril of your life. Shall I trust you again to run yourself into God knows what danger? You need not ask that of me, Leonora."

"What am I to do?" she cried, wringing her hands.

"Compose yourself. Go to your room, rest quietly for tonight. In the morning, possibly, you will feel better, or possibly you will see how futile it is to try to deceive me; you will want, perhaps, to tell me the truth."

"I have told you nothing else!"

"Then confess to the whole truth: You do not love me."

She was dumb.

A gust of rage shook him violently. Standing over her with hot eyes in a blazing face he raised quivering arms as if tempted to strike her.

"Confess!"

"I can't," she said sadly.

The statement was like a slap to him, its sheer simplicity rendering it the more stupefying. He started, gaped, his arms fell, then rose to seize her shoulders.

"What did you say?" he demanded, his voice breaking. "You love me?"

She nodded with swimming eyes and the quivering mouth of a child. He tried to draw her to him, but she held back.

"No, Mario—please!"

"But you have just admitted that you still love me!"

She endured his gaze with an adorable bravery.

"I have always loved you—ever since Leonora loved you—and as well."

"Then you still insist—"

"I am not your wife, I have never seen you before tonight except—"

She stammered into silence. If it were humanly possible to render the situation more impossible than it was, she could achieve that by rounding out the phrase that had died on her lips: "except in dreams."

"Except—?"

"Please don't ask me. I can't tell you—not tonight. Tomorrow, perhaps, Mario; please be kind to me now, let me go."

His hands fell away from her shoulders. "Perhaps you are right," he said heavily. "If this goes on, I myself must go mad."

"Then be pitiful to me, be still more kind. Take me to New York tonight, take me to my aunt, Mrs. Trowbridge—"

"What?" His tone changed again, becoming thick with resentment and suspicion. "You are at that again?"

myers

"Confess!"

Undeceive yourself: it is useless. I cannot comprehend your motive . . . But I forget, you are not yourself. You have not yet recovered, you need more rest. Go to your room, please. In the morning we will both be better able to continue this discussion—or you may have forgotten it, please God!"

She could not blame him, and yet . . .

"Do you mean this, Mario? You refuse to give me a chance to prove to you—"

"Absolutely."

"If not tonight, won't you promise to take me to New York tomorrow—"

"You will stay here until you come to your senses. I have a right to know the truth—and I will have it out of you if it takes a year—or a lifetime!"

He turned his back. She moved toward her door.

"Good night," she said. He made no answer. She went on.

Of a sudden, with a choking cry, he overtook and crushed her to him. "Oh, my dear one!" he cried in agony—"to think that you have suffered to bring you to this pass!"

She was able to withhold response, to rest passive in his hold.

"You love me?"

She made no answer. With a hand beneath her chin, he lifted her face to his, but her look disheartened him, he hesitated.

"Please, Mario, not my lips—not again tonight—not till we understand each other better."

He let her go. She found herself on the threshold of the bedchamber. She looked back. To see him standing where she had left him, his arms slack, his head fallen forward, chin to chest, crushed by his vast disconsolation—that wrung her heart.

But what must be, must . . .

III. THE CAPTIVE.

The key was on her side of the door: she was none the less a prisoner.

She knew, even as the door closed behind her, what she must do, and when. Her mind was made up to make good her escape before morning.

The mere suggestion was appalling. She dared not dwell long upon the difficulties it presented lest resolution weaken. To her own knowledge of her whereabouts, she was lost completely—going on Mario's information ten miles from nowhere. But there was a road; a road must lead somewhere. She was young and strong enough to walk ten miles if she must, further at a pinch. And the occasion was extreme: she dared not let herself be deterred by any obstacle or any danger, real or fanciful.

She was too desperately in love . . . She could hear Mario in the living room, pacing to and fro; she could picture to herself the man in the torment of his solitude for her, froited by mystification and the feeling of frustration. She imagined that her pulses throbbed in time with those unheating, unresting footfalls. The temptation to go out to him and comfort him was all but stronger than her instinct for self-preservation.

What did it matter whether Priscilla Maine survived or perished, so that he were not made unhappy?

After all, what did she care whether he loved her by this name or by that, so that he loved her?

Leonora was no more. Carnehan's confession had confirmed Priscilla's clairvoyant knowledge of her death. No harm would be done to any living soul if she took his love for Leonora and made it her own: Mario himself would not be wronged; for the dead could have loved him no better than the living did and would, and all his sadness would become gladness and his sufferings he assuaged.

Aware—though she denied it—of the abyss that yawned for her, she was constrained by sheer might of will to put away thoughts such as these.

She had needed to remind herself there could be no enduring happiness in a love that was won by fraud . . .

With determination she attacked the problem: How to escape?

Her bedchamber had three windows and, aside from that which opened on the living room, two doors, of which one gave access to the bathroom, the other to Mario's room, which in turn opened on the living room again.

With infinite stealth she closed and locked that door.

Two of the windows looked out on the front of the bungalow, the third on the side. All were fitted with wire screens to be raised and lowered like ordinary glazed sashes. But the wood had swollen since their installation; she could not budge any of them. And when she thought of cutting the wire out of the frame, she found no tool better suited to her needs than a pair of curved manicure scissors.

Her only way out, then, was through the living room. And Mario was there. She would have to be patient. If he felt as little disposed for bed as she, after her day-long sleep, she would have long to wait.

She ransacked Leonora's slender wardrobe without finding any clothing more suitable for her flight than the dress she had on. Apparently Leonora had found time to do but little shopping for herself. She had not needed many things to wear, so far from civilization. Presumably she had meant to wait till their return to town . . .

In the end Priscilla selected a long motoring coat of darkish stuff, rather heavy, but not too heavy for night in the hills. She found it not uncomfortable, indeed, when she sat down to wait beside one of the windows.

She had extinguished the candles which seemed to be the only means of illumination the bungalow boasted. The room was black, blacker far than the night that glimmered beyond the screens. A few stars were visible, not many, only enough—as the phrase runs—to make the darkness visible. In the beginning Priscilla could distinguish nothing but the stars. After some time she was able to make out the profile of the surrounding forest, dense against the sky. It was hours before she could see more . . .

She sat quite still, in the lassitude of melancholy, lonely in the company of her thoughts.

Once Mario came to the door and tapped softly, calling on Leonora by her name.

Priscilla made no sound. He was soon discouraged, and did not repeat the overture.

Shortly after one o'clock Mario went to his room, and for several minutes candlelight shone at the bottom of the communicating door like the minted rim of a golden coin. When it went out she heard him close the door to the living-room. Whether he had returned to the latter or had gone to bed, she could not guess. Though she crouched, listening, first at one door, then at the other, till her limbs were cramped, she heard no more sounds beyond either.

The night grew bitterly cold. Discomfort as much as impatience at length overruled timidity and caution. Warily opening the living-room door, she found Mario seated in a chair, facing her.

IV. FLIGHT.

He had placed the chair within a yard of the door. His feet, as he sat with legs extended, ankles crossed, were almost on the threshold. She could hardly pass without stepping over them. He made no offer to move.

Indeed, he did not stir a finger. His hands were clasped before him, his head rested on the high back of the chair, his face was masked in deep shadow, the deeper for the fire directly behind him, across the room, whose dying glow furnished the only light.

It was a long minute before his measured breathing revived her courage. She sidled out noiselessly in her stocking feet, watching him suspiciously. But the sleep that follows an emotional crisis, always profound, annulled the precautions he had taken to prevent precisely what was happening.

At the edge of the veranda she delayed long enough to take her slippers from the pockets of the motoring wrap and put them on. Then she stepped down to the soft turf and sped swiftly round the bungalow to the garage.

Its doors were open—as she already knew, for a view of the garage was commanded by the side window of Leonora's bedchamber. Cold moonlight, slanting in, picked out the blind lamps of the car and the bright work of bonnet and windshield.

With a thumping heart she slipped into the driver's seat and groped for the lighting and ignition controls of the dash. The luck seemed to be with her now; the switchboard had not been locked.

Her foot depressed the starting pedal, and in the great hush the willing drum of the motor reverberated like a long roll heralding the Trump of Doom. Simultaneously meshing the gears in first speed, Priscilla let the clutch in somewhat too suddenly. The car jumped like a startled animal and leaped out of the garage. She heard, or thought she heard, a shout from within the bungalow, and in her haste bungled the shift to second speed, so that the gears ground and screeched infernally. Nevertheless, the car moved down to the road at a swifter, smoother pace.

In passing she saw, out of the corner of her eye, Mario run out onto the veranda, pause, then dash madly toward the car. She bore heavily on the accelerator and made the third shift smoothly enough, an instant later rounding into the road on not more than two wheels. Angry shouts in the rear told her that Mario had failed to overtake her.

To a moderate store of amateurish driving ability alone she owed not one but a dozen breath-taking escapes. The road twisted and turned in a way to test the ability of a skilled hand at the wheel, in the first few miles seldom running straight for as much as two hundred yards. The grade grew by degrees less dangerous, however the road less serpentine; there were presently stretches of almost level running.

After a time the road forked, and perhaps two miles further on it forked again. Being utterly ignorant of the lay of the land, but guessing that the valley was on her right, Priscilla in both instances took the right-hand track. Well beyond the second fork the car dropped swiftly down a short but steep declivity, and, before she could see her danger and apply the brakes, plunged into mud above the rims. Laboring heavily, it stopped dead. After a few convulsive heaves the engine sputtered and stalled.

The Calm Level.

I have seen the sea lashed into fury and tossed into spray, and its grandeur moves the soul of the dullest man; but remember it is not the billows, but the calm level of the sea, from which all heights and depths are measured. When the storm has passed, and the hour of calm settles on the ocean, when the sunlight bathes its smooth surface, then the astronomer and the surveyor take the level from which to measure terrestrial heights and depths. When the emotion of the hour has subsided, we shall find that calm level of public opinion below the storm, from which the thoughts of a mighty people are to be measured, and by which their final action will be determined.—James A. Garfield.

SPLINTER MARKS FAR NORTH SOMEWHAT HARD TO EXPLAIN

Little Peninsula Extending Into Lake of the Woods in Canada Is American Territory.

Principal Could Hardly Have Chosen More Inopportune Moment to Make His Entry.

Many Americans have worried about a stubby little peninsula which extends from Canada into the Lake of the Woods north of the forty-ninth parallel, which marks the established boundary between Canada and the United States from the Lake of the Woods to Puget sound.

This small area, chopped off from Canada and surrounded on three sides by the waters of the Lake of the Woods, belongs to the United States. Disregarding Alaska, it is the northernmost land of the American republic.

No map shows any town or village in the remote and isolated region. It appears merely as a trackless forest wilderness.

Now it is indicated that there is a village in this forgotten enclave, for a post office has been established at Penasse, and a weekly mail service is maintained. During the winter the service will be by horse and sleigh across the ice of the lake.

In the summer a motorboat will be used.

The United States is richer in hellum than any other country.

I was a callow school teacher, nervous and anxious to please, writes a correspondent. In my first year I followed the usual scheme, substituting or ceding for teachers absent for various causes. I was at a school one day teaching in the absence of a woman who was ill. During the morning exercises I read a couple of chapters from a story, as was her custom. I cannot remember the name of the book, but I had just read "Troubles," when the door suddenly opened and in walked the principal. The room, composed of high-school sophomores, burst into one prolonged roar of laughter. The principal, a man insistent upon his dignity, waited patiently, but one burst of laughter followed another. I tried to explain, but began to laugh myself. Finally, realizing that it was the only way to restore order, he left the room. Later I explained and he saw the joke.

SPEAK GOOD WORD FOR PIE

Scientists Give Comfort to Those Fond of Delicacy That Is Distinctly American.

Among the many varieties of food that have been attacked on the score of indigestibility, etc., pie stands among the foremost. Laymen, doctors, and even philosophers have warned against the popular pastime of pie eating.

Like the distant pastry relative, is somewhat less likely to form the subject of objections from the physiologic critic, while puddings usually belong to the innocuous, or at least receive tolerant consideration. The proof of the pudding—and why not also the pie—is in the eating. Accordingly, a number of gastro-enterologists at the Jefferson Medical college, Philadelphia, reports the Journal of the American Medical Association, have come to the defense of pie by actually determining the gastric response to it and analogous foods in the healthy human stomach.

Direct comparison of a variety of pies, cakes and puddings representative of American culinary art on the same persons indicated that pies "were handled more readily than cakes, and puddings somewhat more readily than either." For those who can think best in terms of statistics it may be stated that the average gastric evacuation time of digestion of puddings was two hours and eighteen minutes, against two hours and twenty-seven minutes for pies; whereas cakes followed in the wake with an average record of three hours and two minutes. Averaging the highest total acidities, values were obtained for puddings of 92, for pies of 90 and for cakes of 90.

There is no occasion to report here the insignificant distinctions between custard pie and lemon meringue, for example, in their gastric behavior, but it must be admitted that mince pie, so often regarded as an arch offender of the digestive tract, requires a rather long time (from 2 3/4 to 3 1/2 hours) to leave the stomach. The addition of ice cream to a piece of pie—a unique American combination—does not increase the burden of the stomach to any extent, and the conventional apple pie and cheese likewise give a conservatively good report. To a few persons it may be a consolation to know that angel's food cake remained distinctly longer in the stomach than did devil's food cake. Of course, complete test of the dietary worth of food.

Man and His Cosmetics.

Comes now a man writer to a beauty department of an exchange who confesses not only that he uses cosmetics, but also states many other men do the same, have been doing it for years and are doing it more and more each year. But, he adds, men are better makeup artists and their doling up is seldom detected.

Not only does this man make this confession freely, and indeed with traces of pride, if not actual boasting, but he believes it the duty of both men and women to improve their looks when possible with beauty enhancing devices, and the girl he marries must be more broad-minded than his mother, who believes no girl has any excuse for using paint and powder, or for touching up her hair and eyebrows.

Perhaps the man is only fooling, but if these things be so, the increased election expenses caused by allowing women to vote will seem as nothing compared to the increased expense of beautifying humanity when men follow the lead of women. A committee should be appointed to investigate this statement and, if it is found true, a movement for the conservation of cosmetics will be in order.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Airplane Compass.

An entirely new kind of compass, for use on airplanes, is the invention of a German named Bamberg. It depends for its operation upon the electrical resistance of selenium, which varies with any change in the intensity of light falling upon it.

The bowl of the compass contains two electric bulbs, directly opposite each other, which throw their rays through a lens whereby the rays are concentrated upon two selenium cells mounted on a bridge extending across the top of the bowl.

The compass may be mounted on the tail of the airplane, so as to be at a distance from all disturbing magnetic influences, the position of its needle or pointer being made known to the pilot by an electrically connected indicator in front of him.

Leather From Rabbit Skins.

According to American Consul Norton of Sydney, Australia, a secret process, said to be unknown hitherto to the tannery trade, has been discovered by an Australian for making leather from rabbit skins and recovering the fur as a by-product in felt making. A company has been formed in Sydney to turn this discovery to practical use, having established works capable of handling about 100,000 skins a week. The leather has already been utilized in Sydney in the manufacture of boot and shoe uppers, hand bags, gloves and other articles.—Scientific American.

MAN'S QUEER PETS

Animals and Birds That Have Figured in History.

Death of King Alexander of Greece, Credited to Bite of Monkey, Calls Forth Reminiscence.

The report, which later was denied, that King Alexander of Greece died from the bite of a pet monkey, and the presentation to the prince of Wales of a young koala, or Australian bear, a mountain devil, and a barking lizard, during his trip around the world, bring to mind the peculiar pets of nations and of famous men and women of history, says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

The natives of Pisa, Italy, kept tame eagles. The Florentines kept lions, and the Romans had wolves, the latter as an outgrowth of the Romulus-Remus story of the foundation of the city. Many peoples besides the Romans have made pets of wolves. Despite their proverbial ferocity in the wild state, many, taken as cubs, grow tame and manifest the traits of a faithful dog as a companion.

The history of the sport of hawking, or falconry, engaged in to some extent today, extends to prehistoric times and recalls the intelligent devotion displayed by the pet hawk of Genghis Khan, which three times in succession dashed a cup of water out of the hand of its master, who was thirst-parched after a hunt, in order to save his life. The water had been collected drop by drop from a pool on the height of a cliff. When the hawk had deliberately knocked the cup from his hand for the third time and at last sent it spinning between the rocks, the master drew his sword and killed the bird. Then he wearily climbed the cliff, only to find the dead body of the most poisonous variety of snake coiled at the bottom of the clear pool.

Monkeys have nearly always been general favorites, perhaps because of the uncanny intelligence they show. The pathetic little beggars with the organ grinders on our streets, the mascots of airplanes, and Prof. Garner's "Little Susie" are notable exam-pies. King Solomon had apes brought into his kingdom once in every three years, and after stating this fact, the account naively adds that he exceeded all the kings of the earth for wisdom. The part played by dogs and horses in the World war is a complete story in itself, but cats, chickens, cows, and goats shared with them the honors among the boys in France. The cats in the trenches furnished amusement, so the tale is told. Puss seemed to have no fear of bullets, but manifested a high degree of annoyance when her glossy coat was spattered with mud during the process of washing her face and combing her fur on the top of a parapet.

Every child has heard the story of Dick Whittington's cat which was sent to sea and won her poor little master a fortune by killing the rats that wrought such havoc on the dinner table of a foreign king. But, sad to relate, the history of this early lord mayor of London does not substantiate the legend.

Solved the Mystery.

While still a novice in the art of stenography I was called one day to take a very important letter from the president of the firm. In my nervousness I failed to notice that there were but a few blank pages in my notebook, and as a result was compelled to write on the cover of the book. All went smoothly in the transcription of my notes until I reached the cover, and then try as I might I could not make out a single word. Finally in desperation I went to the president and told him of my plight. He was quite kind, offering to dictate that portion of the letter over and suggested that I endeavor to read a few lines so that he might get the connection. However, this was an impossibility on my part, whereupon he began studying the little dots and dashes and suddenly blurted out: "Can it be that you are trying to read your notes upside down?" which to my great consternation and embarrassment solved the mystery instantly.—Chicago Tribune.

Copy American Methods.

Four French cities where Y. W. C. A. foyers are maintained have recently put on finance campaigns in true American fashion, and have raised sums of money exceeding the most optimistic predictions, according to a Y. W. C. A. secretary just returned from France. They are St. Etienne, Tours, Bourges and Mulhouse. The finance campaigns were mapped out and directed by American secretaries and accomplished by the French directors. Sufficient money to carry the 1921 budget of expenses for Y. W. C. A. work in these cities is now in the bank. In Mulhouse 120,000 francs were raised for joint Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. work.

The Yearning for Prominence.

"Why do you insist on walking out in a high hat and a frock coat?" "Well, everybody likes to be considered a great man, whether he deserves it or not. Every now and then the conductor of a sightseeing wagon points me out as a cabinet official or a senator or something."

Pay Dirt.

"I've tried for gold and copper, even for diamonds. But I can't seem to strike pay dirt."
 "Why don't you try farming?"

Twenty-Toed Elephants in Demand.
 Twenty-toed elephants are held in veneration throughout India, and are keenly sought by all the rajahs and maharajahs for the prosperity they are supposed to bring, says Charles Mayer, in Asia Magazine. They are guarded more carefully and quartered even more sumptuously than the white elephants of Siam, and the price they will bring is determined almost entirely by the amount the rajahs can gather together.

Shock Frequently Does Good.

Keep fear out of your system, but don't be troubled at a little fright. Anything in the nature of a shock or a jolt is helpful if it doesn't come too late. It is the only way that three-quarters of the inhabitants of this earth can ever be made to realize the necessity of doing what is in them to do.—John Blake in Chicago Daily News.

Could Be Bought Off.

Allice was staying with her father one evening while her mother was away. The father, while reading, was wiggling the floor lamp and Allice spoke up: "You know mamma does not want you to play with that lamp." She waited a minute, then added: "If you will give me a nickel, I won't tell her."

Illinois Central System Calls Attention to Things the Public Does Not See

The public is accustomed to see passenger and freight trains arrive at stations and depart from stations and travel between intermediate points on the railway, performing a necessary service without which almost all commerce would be paralyzed. It seldom gets a glimpse behind the scenes and realizes the magnitude and diversification, of railway operation.

The public see an engineer and a fireman in charge of a locomotive, a conductor and a brakeman in charge of a train. It see comparatively little of all there is back of the actual running of a train—the executive and general officers, the heads of departments, the division officers, the train dispatchers, the signal maintainers, the foremen, the skilled and unskilled laborers, the shop men, the track walkers, the miners producing coal, the workers producing the steel, the woodmen producing the ties and the plants where they are treated with preservative chemicals, the mills producing the lumber, the refineries producing the lubricants, the rock quarries and rock crushers, the gravel pits and steam shovels, and the thousand and one other operations which enter into the production of railway transportation.

Few outside of those whose business it is to do so ever examine the anatomy of a modern locomotive, a passenger coach, a refrigerator car or an ordinary freight car. A modern locomotive contains more than 4,200 parts, not including rivets and bolts, all of which must be inspected daily and kept in perfect condition, some requiring the constant attention of highly trained electricians, the superheater attachment is looked after by specialists, the boiler requires the attention of expert boiler makers, the separate and distinct engine which operates the reversing mechanism must have special and constant attention and the airbrake system also demands the attention of experts.

A modern all-steel passenger coach, exclusive of bolts, rivets, screws, nuts, washers and nails, has more than 2,000 parts. The wheels, trucks, airbrakes and draw gear require constant inspection. The dynamo which generates electricity for lighting the coach when the train is running, also storing the batteries to provide lighting when the train is standing, must be carefully handled. The same is true of many other parts. The single item of cleaning and ventilating passenger coaches runs into large figures.

A modern refrigerator car has more than 1,500 parts. Perfect insulation must be maintained and the car must be kept absolutely clean. Twelve boxes and many other parts require constant attention.

The ordinary box car has more than 500 parts which must be regularly and constantly inspected and kept in safe condition. Just as a chain is as strong as its weakest link, the safety of a train is gauged by the weakest car in the train. The men who actually operate the trains on the Illinois Central System compose a comparatively small proportion of the more than 50,000 employees back of them.

One out of every eleven persons in the United States depends directly upon the railways for a living, counting one worker to every five persons.

Railway prosperity is necessary to national prosperity. Anything that injures the railways also injures the public. Anything that helps the railways helps the public.

The railways consume 28 per cent of all the bituminous coal produced in the United States. They consume 25 per cent of all the steel produced in the United States. They consume 18 per cent of all the timber and lumber produced in the United States. They also are users of large quantities of lubricating oils, and other commodities.

The Illinois Central, like other railways, is a citizen of each town on its lines. It pays taxes and means as much to the life of each community as any other business concern in the community. It has but one thing to sell—transportation. When you buy that transportation, remember the investment in the property that makes it possible to run the train that furnishes you with service, and remember the great expense back of running that train, aside from the salaries of the enginemen and trainmen whom you see and the agent with whom you deal.

The railways do not claim perfection. Every railway in the United States has locomotives and cars that should be replaced by better ones; machinery and appliances that should be replaced by later and better models; steel rails that should be replaced by heavier ones; track that should be provided with better ballast; terminals that should be enlarged. The railways are striving to overcome these deficiencies. They are succeeding gradually. They are fighting for the privilege of serving you—the public. They ask no advantage of any kind. They ask only a square deal.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

 President, Illinois Central System.

MEMORIAL DAY

Large Attendance at the Exercises
Monday Afternoon, May 30

Memorial services in Genoa, under auspices of the American Legion, were impressive, the day's program being all that one could wish for.

Judge Shurtleff delivered a scholarly address and the Burlington band furnished excellent music. The cemetery was never more beautiful, and practically every grave was laden with flowers.

C. E. Adams is the first in Genoa to give notice that he is eating green peas, gathered from his own garden. This is some record, for ordinarily the middle of June is considered early for this crop. Mr. Adams remembered the writer's failing and supplied us with a generous sample.

Mrs. O. F. Schneider and son, Leon, of Maywood, were week end guests at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Edsall. Walter Alberston of Genoa, who graduates from the Northern Illinois Normal School tomorrow, has secured a position as teacher of manual training in the Sterling schools next year. Elwin Byers, also of Genoa, and a normal graduate, will teach in Oak Park.

E. H. Griggs of Chicago spent the week end in Genoa. Large audiences during their three days' stay here, they being unfortunate in following the Sherman Stock Company. The Lamberts have a good company, better than the usual tent show, while their equipment is excellent. Perhaps next year they will have better luck.

Mr. and Mrs. Jams Mansfield, Jr. and children of Elgin spent Monday at the home of Mrs. Margaret Frazier.

Mrs. John Pratt and Mrs. Luman Colton had the following as their guests for the week end: Dr. and Mrs. Lindmark and children, Ethel Charlotte and George Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Edward Randall and daughter, Ruth; Mr. and Mrs. Dow Campbell; James Wells, Mrs. E. H. Randall, George R. Doty, Miss Delia Larson, all of Chicago; Miss Charlotte Byers of Manistique, Mich; Leroy Clendenning of Elgin.

The Missionary society will meet at the home of Mrs. C. E. Adams next Tuesday afternoon, June 7. Mrs. J. E. Robeson will lead the devotional services and Mrs. McCoy will act as study leader.

Clarence Olmstead and family, who have just recently returned from India and are now visiting in Belvidere were guests at the L. P. Durham home Sunday. Other guests were Mrs. Lane of Belvidere, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Olmstead and Mr. and Mrs. Holmes of Shabbona.

Miss Edith Westover is spending a few days in Genoa with relatives and friends.

Mrs. Charles Gustafson and Mrs. Minnie Bucklin of Delevan, Wis., and Mrs. Jessie Carlson of Rockford spent Saturday at the home of Gus Gustafson.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Stanley, Misses Madeline Larson and Margaret Hutchinson and Garfield Pierce attended Eastern Star meeting in Kirkland Friday night.

Buy a Hart Schaffner & Marx suit made to measure all wool. You will not be ashamed of it in any place or any company. Satisfaction guaranteed or money back. Hughes Clothing Co., Genoa, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Lmbke entertained at Sunday dinner Rev. and Mrs. Bramshire and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Lembke, Mrs. Renock of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lembke and son, Charles, and Mrs. Ervin Beth of Elgin.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Fossler and son, Harold, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rose motored on Memorial Day to Lake Delevan Lake, Lake Geneva, Janesville and Rockford.

MAN'S CRUELTY TO ANIMALS

Writer Denounces the "Life Imprisonment" Which Confinement in Zoological Gardens Means.

"Purely as a matter of ethics, abolition is the ultimate logic of all zoological gardens." Such is the opinion of a writer in the Nation of London. "Animals have committed no crimes against the community," he says, "and therefore the community has no right whatever to give them life sentences of imprisonment." A very few of the larger animals, he admits, may affect human life injuriously, but they form an infinitesimal portion of the inhabitants of a zoological garden. On the other hand, it is argued that we never thought of confining those animals believed to be the most injurious, namely insects—and therefore it is plain that "the punishment does not fit the crime."

Even if it were granted that animals are happier in captivity than in their native wilds, this can only be meant relatively, for though protected and cared for, animals in captivity are denied the primal joys of liberty and fitness to environment, among such jobs being their power of exercising their suppleness of body or strength of wing in graceful movements, and not least of all joys, the power of satisfying their continual curiosity.

Much has been done for animals, and much more might be done for the wild birds. For the eagles, hawks, condors and vultures the writer feels that nothing can be done. He quotes from that great lover of birds, W. W. Hudson, to whom the sight of any bird in a cage, be it robin redbreast or bird unknown to William Blake, literally sets him in a rage. He has somewhere described a sermon he heard on genius, in which the preacher likened the life of the ordinary person to that of the canary in its cage. But of the genius—"A cloud came over his (the preacher's) majestic features, he drew himself up and swayed his body from side to side, and shook his black gown and lifted his arms as a great bird lifts its plumed homologues, and let them fall again two or three times, and then said in deep measured tones which seemed to express rage and despair—"But did you ever see the eagle in his cage?"

The brooding hopeless gaze of those stern eyes offers only one solution to the aquiline problem, the keys of the city of the air.

Every Man to His Trade.
A devoted couple, married a short time ago, took up their abode in a dainty cottage in a suburban quarter. Everything in the house was the latest and gave unmix satisfaction. But one evening when the husband returned he found, to his disgust, that a water pipe had burst. The rooms were flooded and the carpets, which were the husband's special pride, were in danger of being spoiled.

"Well, well," said he impatiently to his wife, "why on earth didn't you hammer the pipe up! Here, give me a hammer and I'll do it in a twinkling."

He got the hammer and pounded away at a pipe down in the cellar. When he had finished he paused to examine the result of his labor. Then, to his complete chagrin, he heard the sweetly chiding voice of his wife at the top of the stairs.

"Howard!" said she, "the gas has gone out, and the water is still running." Then he sent for a plumber.—Answers.

Unfortunate Apology.

A certain editor of a country newspaper in Kansas was asked to leave the community as the result of a typographical error in his report of the wedding of the mayor's daughter, relates Pop. After exhausting his supply of large words about the "blushing bride," he had said: "The large elaborate bouquets of roses were pink."

The mayor demanded a correction and apology in the next week's issue, all of which the editor was glad to promise. The next issue contained:

"We wish to apologize for the manner in which we disgraced the beautiful wedding last week. Through an error of the typesetter we were made to say 'the roses were pink.' What we wanted to say was 'the noses were pink.'"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Gorilla Fond of Music.

A gorilla beating a drum astonished Marseilles. The animal had been taken to the French port from Africa by a colonel. One day the gorilla was seen walking down the boulevard holding a negro by the hand. The woman entered a toy shop and bought a trumpet and drum. Delighted, the gorilla bent the drum and blew the trumpet lustily. A hard blow broke the drum, whereupon the gorilla looked worried, scratched his head perplexedly and re-entering the shop, seized another drum and ran down the street, beating it triumphantly. The negro followed, but the beast climbed to a balcony and remained there half an hour, beating a military march in perfect rhythm.

Crops of Hawaii.

The two main crops of Hawaii are sugar and pineapples. The greater part of the land best suited to agriculture is in parts of the territory deficient in rainfall. This has made a large irrigation necessary. The imports for the fiscal year of 1919 were $50,743,793. The exports amounted to $88,250,021. Most of Hawaii's commerce is with the United States. Other products of the island are coffee, fruits, nuts, rice and hides.

Wonderful Human Bones.

Human bones have a wonderful power of resistance. It has been proved that they will bear a pressure three times greater than oak and almost as much as wrought iron before being crushed.

Meaning of Dream of Liberty.

To a person who dreams he has gained his liberty, loss of health. To dream of taking liberties with another warns you to be cautious or you will be led astray. To lose your liberty denotes shame.

Dreaded Element of Which He Sang.
Edvard Grieg, the Norwegian composer, who wrote of the Vikings and the great ocean, who sang, "And it was Olaf Trygvesson and he sailed the north sea wide"—Grieg could never enter a boat because it made him deathly ill. Although money was a badly needed asset in the Grieg household, all the contracts at fabulous prices which American managers offered him were refused, because a boat ride would have killed the ocean-musician.—Charles D. MUCH IS TOLD BY PROVERBS Household Sayings Throw Light on Characteristics of Social Groups Whence They Emanate.

It is a commonplace to say that a nation's moral code is revealed in its proverbs; but it is less widely recognized that proverbial sayings throw light also upon the long-standing economic structure of a social group. A proverb is not an individual observation; it condenses the experience of a class, a sex, a caste. A large number record the accumulated experience of the small peasant proprietor, his ceaseless labor and petty saving and screwing. "While the sheep bleats he loses a mouthful." The economics of married life are often tersely laid bare. "A wooden mother is better than a golden father" (Shropshire) must be taken from the outlook of a wife who would be summed up in a national census as "home worker."

"A rolling stone gathers no moss," says the wisdom of the staid British countryman, diligently making the best of his land by long and careful husbandry. "By going and coming the bird builds its nest" is the opposite point of view held by a Negro trader traveling backward and forward through the African forest.

Bawbees are round and rin away.
A grip o' the grund is guide to hae.

expresses the land-hunger of a Scotsman of the old school, mistrusting "investments" which he cannot see and handle.

Here is a trio from Norway: "A large stock needs much pasture." "A cow will not hear that the hay is dwindling away." "You cannot climb a mountain by a level road." Do they not sum up certain aspects of the little farm perched up amid scanty mountain pastures?

Factory life, a modern growth everywhere, has not yet left its mark upon the proverbial lore of any country because it has not yet been fully assimilated as a mode of self-expression. The proverb is everywhere a spontaneous growth, for "shoes alone know if 'tocking hab hole," as they say in Jamaica.

Century's Coming-of-Age.

The present century does not come of age until January 1, 1922. It began on January 1, 1901, and not on the first day of 1900, as so many people imagine. The first century was completed in 100 years. The second began with the year 101, and, of course, the analogy follows through all succeeding centuries.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased. Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble. Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions. Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

FORCED TO FIGHT FOR HER BREATH

Nashville Artist Tells of Terrible Suffering Experienced by His Wife.

HUSBAND GOES DOWN HILL

Finally Both Decide to Put Tanlac to Test and as a Result Have Enjoyed Best of Health for Past Three Years.

"Both my wife and myself have put Tanlac to the test and we call it the greatest medicine in the world," said J. T. Montamat, 1123 Third Ave., North, Nashville, Tenn., artistic sign painter for the Cusack Company. Mr. Montamat has lived in Nashville for nearly thirty years and is highly respected by all who know him. "Before my wife took Tanlac she suffered so badly from gas on her stomach and heartburn that she often said she felt like she was smothering to death. She actually had to sit up in bed to get her breath. "Well, in a short time after she began taking Tanlac her trouble disappeared and she was like a different person. Seeing the good results in her case, I began taking the medicine myself and it soon had me feeling like a brand new man. "Up to that time I had been troubled with indigestion. I had no appetite and the little I did eat seemed to do me about as much harm as good. I felt so tired and languid I hated to move around, and was getting in such a run-down condition that it worried me. "Tanlac acted with me just like it did with my wife, and although that was three years ago we have enjoyed the best of health all along. However, I keep a bottle of Tanlac in the house all the time, and when I feel myself getting run down the medicine soon has me feeling all right again. I am convinced that Tanlac is without an equal. Our friends all know how it helped us and I don't hesitate to tell anyone about it." Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

Robert and Aunt Mary. Robert Demaree of Franklin, age three, received a number of Easter baskets and bunnies, and one aunt had delighted him by hiding colored eggs in her yard and letting him hunt for them. His mother in talking to him at night said: "And do you know, Robert, it made Aunt Mary just as happy as you, for she loves you so much." Robert replied: "Yes, and I think Aunt Mary is the whole cheese, mother." The parents are still wondering where he heard it.—Indianapolis News.

Cuticura Soap for the Complexion. Nothing better than Cuticura Soap daily and Ointment now and then as needed to make the complexion clear, scalp clean and hands soft and white. Add to this the fascinating, fragrant Cuticura Talcum, and you have the Cuticura Toilet Trio.—Adv.

Not Flattering to Father. The doctor's little six-year-old was entertaining the caller, a new neighbor, until her mother appeared, and was chatting away at a great rate. Presently the caller asked something about the little one's grandmother. "Why, don't you know?" cried the child. "Know what, dear?" "Why, grandma is dead and grandpa is dead and Aunt Alice is dead—and most all papa's patients are dead, too."—Boston Transcript.

Robert and Aunt Mary.

Help That Aching Back!

Is your back giving out? Are you tired, miserable, all run down; tortured with nagging backache, lameness and sudden, stabbing pains? If so, look to your kidneys. Overwork, hurry and worry tend to weaken the kidneys. Backache and an all worn out feeling is often the first warning. Get back your health while you can. Use Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy thousands recommend. Ask your neighbor!

An Illinois Case

Kasper Schmitt, insurance agent, 309 Lawrence Bldg., Sterling, Ill., says: "I had stitches in the small of my back when I bent over, and got so bad I had to quit work. The kidney secretions passed irregularly and I had to stop up often at night. Headaches and dizzy spells came on me frequently. Four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of the attack."

MEANS VICTORY FOR LEGION

Report of Dawes Committee Embodies Principal Features of Organization's Relief Plan.

All investigation speed records at the national capital were broken by President Harding's special commission to frame a comprehensive program for the relief of disabled veterans, which was headed by Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes of Chicago.

He jammed through, in less than two days, an inquiry into treatment of disabled soldiers, recommendations that mean adequate hospital treatment to 10,000 wounded veterans now in poorhouses, asylums, insufficiently equipped hospitals or in no institution at all, as well as payment for disability to thousands of veterans not in hospitals.

The report of the Dawes committee is considered a great victory for the American Legion program for disabled soldier relief. Its recommendations embody the principal features of the Legion plan.

They are:

1. Appointment of one official to have charge of all disabled soldiers' relief and benefits. There now are three departments.

2. Decentralization of administration, so officials with delegated authority may act without red tape.

3. Appropriation of whatever additional money is necessary for new hospitals.

BUCK PRIVATE TO COMMANDER

C. L. Dawson, North Dakota Legion Man, Rises From Lowest to Highest Rank.

From the lowest rank in the military service to the highest grade conferred by the ex-service men of his state is the record jump made by C. L. Dawson of Beach, N. D. recently appointed national field representative of the American Legion.

From buck private to department commander of the American Legion in North Dakota tells the story of Mr. Dawson's rise. Although well past middle age, he enlisted as a private in the Balloon corps soon after war was declared. After fifteen months at Fort Omaha, he was discharged with the rank of private first class. He was chief clerk of the North Dakota legislature during its last session.

IDEALS OF AMERICAN LEGION

Stand of Bill Dowling Post of Chadron, Neb., Has Brought Much Favorable Comment.

The ideals of the American Legion are explained in a published announcement of Bill Dowling Post of Chadron, Neb., which has drawn much favorable comment from Legion posts in the Middle West. The announcement read:

"To the public—No, we are not organized to 'run the country' or to 'rob the government.' Read the preamble to our constitution.

"To politicians—We stand for 'policies, not politics.'"

"To capital—Some of us are capitalists; all of us are laborers.

"To labor—Read what Samuel Gompers has to say in regard to labor and the Legion.

"To all ex-service men—Let's stick together. We started it over there; let's finish it in the American Legion.

"To all un-Americans—Look out for the American Legion!"

HOW LEGION MEN GET LAND

Applicants for Homestead Entries Should First Make Personal Inspection of District.

In response to many inquiries from ex-service men in the Middle West regarding government land grants, Irvin I. Fenrite, secretary of Argonne post of the American Legion in Des Moines, Ia., has made an investigation of the situation.

"Persons desiring to make homestead entries," said Mr. Fenrite, "should first fully inform themselves as to the character and quality of lands they desire to enter and should in no case apply to enter until they have examined each legal subdivision for which they make application. Satisfactory information concerning the lands may be obtained from a personal visit to the district in which one wishes to take out land.

"Each applicant is required to swear that he is well acquainted with the character of the land described in his application and the only way that he can assure himself that prior settlers have no claim is to make a personal inspection of same.

"An ex-service man is required to establish residence on the land involved after his entry is allowed, unless an extension of time is granted on account of sickness, climatic reasons or similar excuses. Credit is given for service in the Army, Navy or Marines, providing the applicant has had eighteen months of service. If such is the case, the applicant is required to live on the land only seven months. If he obtains so much credit for military service that there is required only one year's residence, he must prove only such amount of cultivation as will prove his good faith as a homestead claimant. If his credit for service requires more than one year's residence, he must show cultivation to the extent of one-sixteenth of the area of the land beginning with the second year. Regardless of credit for service, all applicants must prove that there is a habitable house on the land.

"There is only one portion of the country where land may be obtained without the requirement of a homestead. At Sentinel, Ariz., there are 10,000 acres open for which no homestead is required, but which necessitates the payment of seventy-five dollars for three hundred and twenty acres and an expenditure of one dollar per acre for improvement. This is arid land which may be used for cotton raising if irrigated. When irrigated, it sells for from two to three hundred dollars an acre. It is estimated that the cost of irrigation on three hundred and twenty acres is about $10,000.

"Approximately 132,000,000 acres of land are open, including every state west of the Mississippi river except Iowa and Texas. The first thing to do is to decide on the state. Then, get the location of the land offices in that state. All blank forms of affidavits and other papers may be obtained for the district office in which the land lies.

"Taking out a homestead is not a speculative proposition. If the applicant can afford to establish himself for the period required under the homestead laws, taking advantage of the credit allowed him for service in the World war, he will be well repaid after a few years."

BACK TO NATURE FOR HEALTH

Ex-Service Man is Attending College in Bathing Suit and Living in Pup Tent.

Attending college in a bathing suit and living in a "pup tent" on his alma mater's campus, H. B. Parker, of Boston, Mass., is gaining in a hard fight for life and an education.

Mr. Parker, formerly a student at Boston university, had to leave the colder climate because of the impaired condition of his lungs following service in the army during the World war.

H. B. Parker and His Pup Tent.

Realizing his condition, he sought schooling in a warmer zone and took to the open. Through an arrangement with Dr. W. S. Currell, of the University of South Carolina, he pitched his tent on the university campus. With a mosquito bar and a folding cot to furnish his habitation, he is pursuing his studies and is steadily progressing on the road to recovery.

Before leaving Boston, Mr. Parker was appointed by the American Legion to investigate conditions at state institutions in behalf of the Legion's department of vocational training. He urges all men afflicted as himself to seek the open and to find health in the "back to nature" plan.

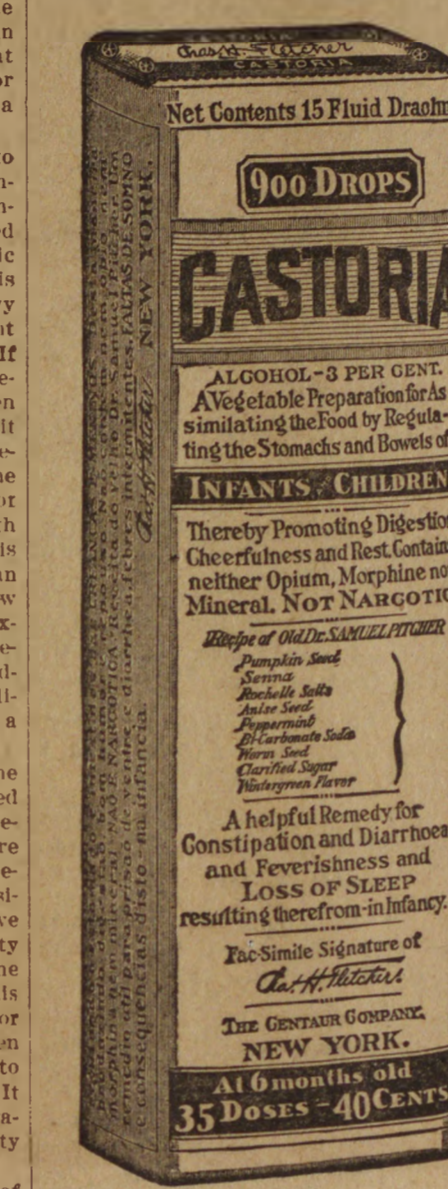

Baby Specialists.

THAT there are Physicians who specialize on Infant ailments you know. All Physicians understand Infant troubles: all Physicians treat them. It is his profession, his duty, to know human ills from the Stork to the Great Beyond.

But in serious cases he calls in the Specialist. Why? He knows as every Mother knows, or ought to know, that Baby is just a baby, needing special treatment, special remedies.

Can a Mother be less thoughtful? Can a Mother try to relieve Baby with a remedy that she would use for herself? Ask yourself; and answer honestly!

Always remember that Baby is just a baby. And remembering this you will remember that Fletcher's Castoria is made especially for Infants and Children.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

The False and the True.

Advertising by the use of large space, the expenditure of huge sums of money have placed on the market, have put in your home, perhaps, many articles that today have been discarded, as you will readily admit. Do you recall anything that has more modestly appealed to the public than has Fletcher's Castoria: modest in all its claims, pleading at all times—and truthfully—for our babies?

The big splash, the misleading claims may win for a time, but the honest truth-telling advertiser is like the old story of the tortoise that beat the hare.

Mothers everywhere, and their daughters, now mothers, speak frankly, glowingly, enthusiastically in praise of Fletcher's Castoria. Speak of it lovingly as a friend that has brought comfort, cheer and smiles to their little one.

To them: to these true mothers no argument can induce them to set aside their bottle of Castoria, their old friend, that they might try even another and unknown remedy for babies. Then, would YOU think of going to YOUR OWN medicine chest to find relief for Baby's troubles? Can you not separate the false from the true?

Death in the Dishrag.

According to a government report the influenza case rate for a group eating from plates and utensils washed by hand was 324 cases per 1,000 inmates, as compared with a rate of 108 per 1,000 inmates from that group eating from dishes washed by dish-washing machines. In view of these figures, hand washing of dishes permits at least one disease to attack three times as many persons as does the dishwashing machine.

NEW ROAD MACHINERY

Being Used on Grant Highway West of Elgin

Eyes of the road building world are being directed to the fourteen mile stretch this side of Elgin where the latest road construction machinery in the country is being given a try-out by the contractors on the state road. Leading contractors declare the machinery will considerably reduce construction costs if found practical.

A tractor shovel, which alone does the work of a steam shovel and several teams of horses, is attracting wide attention. The machine, which is operated by one man cuts down banks, picks up huge boulders, hauls them away and then dumps them, all through the pressing of levers. Used in grading the road this tractor shovel has hauled 400 yards of gravel and dirt in one day. Its best record is forty-one yards an hour.

All the machinery used so far on the entire stretch is motorized. Scrapers of all sizes and shapes are pulled by huge tractors. They go up and down hill, over boulders and across small ditches, the same as the famous "tanks" used in the World war.

"It's the greatest thing that I have ever seen," said George N. Lamb, district engineer of the state department of highways. "If these machines have been perfected they should materially reduce the cost of building hard roads."

J. D. Adams, head of the J. D. Adams company of Indianapolis, went to Elgin last week himself to test out the new road building machinery. For two days he personally piloted one of the heavy graders.

At the gravel pit near Pingree Grove, Engineer Stewart, in charge of the work for the McCall Construction company of Chicago, announced last Saturday that the big 85 foot mast will be erected this Tuesday morning. This mast weighs 110,000 pounds.

"Certain obstacles which we have confronted have kept us back in our work or we would be laying concrete at this time," said Engineer Stewart. "We were forced to drill a 175 foot well to strike water. Now we are waiting for the installation of a large pump."

With good weather conditions it was stated the road will be completed in time for the running of the annual automobile race.

THEY GET TOGETHER

Farmers and Bankers Discuss Present Day Problems

The tour of the Illinois Bankers Association which ended last week was the greatest effort of cooperation between farmers and bankers in the state ever known, according to the DeKalb County Farm Bureau.

George A. Fox, director of finance of the Illinois Agricultural Association, was with the bankers on their special train and presented the farmers' viewpoint in speeches made at every one of the towns visited.

"If you banks and merchants owned all the farms in this county what would you do? First, you would hire the best man you could get for your production. Then you would get the best man for your marketing. That is exactly what the organized farmer of Illinois has done in the county farm bureau movement", was one of the statements made by Mr. Fox.

M. A. Graettinger, Secretary of the Illinois Bankers Association, advised a closer cooperation and friendly relation between the banker and farmer, as did Hon. Wm. C. White, president of the Association.

Many county farm advisers and farmers accepted the bankers' invitation to attend the meetings and join in the discussion of farmers-banker problems.

BOY LOSES ARM

Warning to Boys Regarding Wires Down on Street

The right hand and arm of little Lester Behm, five year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Behm of Dundee, was amputated.

The arm was cut off between the wrist and elbow, the operation being necessary because of the seriousness of the boy's condition as the result of burns received from touching a fallen high voltage wire at his home in Dundee, following the storm early last week.

BIG LAND SUIT

In the big $56,000 Squaw Grove suit to enforce specific performance of a contract of purchase, T. M. Cliffe and Faissler, Fulton & Roberts have been retained to fight it. Some interesting legal questions will be presented in this case. It will be remembered that the complainant Alice M. Myers filed her bill against Fred H. Hartman and Clarence Hastie to compel the defendants to pay for the land they had contracted for. This will be the first of those big and very interesting suits to be fought bitterly.

BUILDING WORK HALTED

On account of the building contractor's lockout in Chicago, work at Lake Area, over in Lake county, where the $10,000,000 building project for St. Mary's of the Lakes University has been under progress, has been halted and unless the large army of men return to work soon it is doubtful whether the corner stone celebration can be held soon. The university, under the diocese of Chicago, will have a dormitory containing 400 outside rooms.

NEW GRADE SCHOOL

The contract for the new grade school at Woodstock has been let to Gertz & Son of Elgin, their bid being $28,000. The same firm also has the contract for the new community high school building there, the foundation for which is already in. The Elgin contractors have a large gang of men on the job.

TO EMPLOY FIFTY MEN

Fifty men will be employed on the hard road construction between Elgin and Marengo and ex-service men will be given preference, according to Chief Engineer Stewart, who represents the McCall Construction Co. in charge of the work.

Aesop's Hen Was a Goose.

Some "translators" of Aesop's Fables use "hen" for "goose" in the fable about the golden egg, but the Greek of the "text" is "chen" which looks like some fountainhead of "hen" but really means "goose." The accepted translators or rather adapters, follow the familiar word of the vast majority, "goose." It must be remembered that there really is no original Aesopian text, but only some later transcriptions of what came to be regarded as the fables told by the old slave.

TYPICAL OF LAND

Impression Recorded After Visit to Persian Throne Room.

Unparalleled Riches Stored in Apartment Close to Scene of Want, Misery, and Famine.

In Teheran, Persia, is a lofty room about the size of one of the smaller European cathedrals, which contains more heaped-up riches than any equal area in the world. It is the throne room of Persia, a sealed place, open only rarely to a favored few.

Opening from the grand staircase of the shah's palace, the room looks on a beautiful court, musical with the sweet confusion of voices of myriads of birds and the splash of fountains, redolent of soft, languorous odors.

Just a block or two away is a street of misery, of poverty and sometimes famine. Yet in the shah's courtyard, the palace or the throne room, there could be no remembrance of want; the senses are numbed with the profusion of wealth.

The ceiling is faced with prisms of cut glass and from it hang half a dozen magnificent chandeliers, blazing with lustres and touched with various colors. On the floor are more than 50 rugs—I counted them—some of them hundreds of years old. There was one little thing that one could have carried in one's hands, a rug with a tree rising from its base; looking at that I could really almost sympathize with the Persian's fair for brigandage.

And between wall and wall are tables, priceless tables and chairs, china and clocks, and articles of every description. There was a great round silver tureen set in amethysts, which the Grand Duke Michael had given the late shah. On a stand were two huge gold sunovars, gifts from Great Britain, and between them an ugly gold bowl, given by the kaiser. There were great elephant thrones, or howdahs, long tusks of ivory, vases from China, as tall as a man, carved works from Japan, embroideries and lace—all the crowded riches that imagination can conceive. And here and there amid the glory some cheap grotesque thing that looks as if it came out of a five-and-ten-cent store—a cheap vase, an ugly crockery figure, a knot of dusty artificial flowers.

But from the doorway what halts the eye, what is the climax of the place, is the peacock throne. It stands at the head of the room, a striking object even seen at a distance and in perspective. It is about the size and shape of a French bed, a structure with a floor, six broad legs, a headboard, sides, and, at the foot three mounting steps.

It is covered with thick gold foil enameled in deep blue and greens. The headboard is a glory of color. At the top is a huge sunburst of diamonds, and underneath three emeralds, each about the size of a checker board square. At the two ends of the headpiece are two jeweled peacocks. Wherever one looks on the surface of this throne are to be seen jewels—diamonds and emeralds, pearls and sapphires, turquoises and rubies—set in with lavish profusion. At one side of the throne stands a chair on which the shah is crowned, a chair heavy with gold foil and set with delicate and lovely pearls, graduated in all sizes.

But the gold foil of the chair is fastened on with common tacks! And the pearls are carelessly graduated. And on the throne the precious stones are side by side with semi-precious stones. An emerald may be cheek by jowl with the cheapest sort of flawed ruby. And even the best of the stones are badly cut, absurdly cut.

Symbolic, the whole thing seemed to me, of the state of Persia—the glory and tawdriness, lavishness and waste, riches and poverty.—Maude Radford Warren in Saturday Evening Post.

Device Proved Its Worth.

In the latter part of September so thick a fog settled upon New York harbor that while it lasted, which was several days, the shipping of the port was completely paralyzed. The delay, however, afforded a good chance to test the new electrical pilot cable that, extending 14 miles from Ambrose Channel lighthouse to the Narrows, is designed to guide vessels in thick weather. One steamship, equipped with the "listening" device that is complementary to the cable, went confidently up the harbor, as sure of her course as a blind man who slides his hand along a familiar railing. It will probably be only a short time before all harbors have a similar cable and all vessels are equipped to use it.—Youth's Companion.

Houses His Apprentices.

Reviving, for new reasons, the ancient system that gave the shop apprentice a home with his employer, a large eastern machinery manufacturer has established 27 apprentice employees in a homelike two-story house. Sleeping rooms accommodate one, two or three occupants; shower baths, laundry and a housekeeper are provided, and the living room contains all reasonable comforts. The plan is expected to promote "shop talk" and increase the ambition of young workers.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

The Marching Multitude.
"I understand that footwear is going to be less expensive."
"I'm glad of that," commented Senator Sorghum. "There is going to be a record-breaking crowd of people wearing out shoe leather in the next season's procession."

Ford
THE UNIVERSAL CAR
The Ford Sedan

THE Ford Sedan quite naturally is in larger demand every year, and now with pre-war prices, without any sacrifice of the high quality of materials, and excellent reliability of workmanship, comforts and conveniences, the Sedan is the car of cars, and while a luxury in itself, at the same time is a necessity, costing less than the ordinary touring car (except the Ford) its value cannot be equalled.

Any of us will be pleased to take your order for the Ford Sedan, assuring you of as prompt delivery as possible, and the further guarantee of comfort and economy through the efficient after-service which is always at your command. We are all equipped with the latest up-to-date machinery; with the genuine Ford-made parts, so that we can keep your car as good as gold, so far as service is concerned, every hour in the year.

We solicit your orders. If you are going to have a closed car this fall we believe the Ford Sedan is your best investment. Won't you call in and talk it over, or let us give you a demonstration?
