

PREPARE FOR THE SCHOOL YEAR

Genoa Township High Will Rate High According to Plans

Special Building for Science Laboratory to be Erected—The Teaching Force

The Township High School Board has practically completed its plans for next year, and the school year 1920-21 will see the High School better prepared than ever to care for the educational needs of the children of the township.

Permission has been granted by the church board for the erection of a science laboratory to the south of the building, that will permit of the experimental work in connection with the agricultural work, natural sciences, and chemistry. The erection of this building has already been arranged for.

The Board has also arranged for the installation of equipment in the basement for domestic science work, and sewing and cooking classes will be organized in the fall.

The engagement of Mr. Edward E. Hood, who has been doing post graduate work in the S. W. S. N. at Charleston, Ill., ensures the addition of a manual training for the boys. Mechanical drawing and woodworking will be taught. If possible, the schedule will be arranged so that these classes will open to the boys and girls in the upper classes who now want to take hand work.

The Board has been fortunate in retaining the services of Miss Sue Cook, whose thoroughness as instructor will be vouched for by all who know her work. Miss Cook, who has specialized in these subjects and holds her masters' degree for advanced work in them, will teach the Latin and Mathematics.

Equally fortunate for the Junior work is the retention of Mrs. Esther Snyder, who will teach history, English and arithmetic in the Junior high school. Mrs. Snyder has an enviable record in the township for faithful and successful work and we know that these subjects will be thoroughly taught.

Miss Anita Hilbish of Freebury, Pa., who holds her degree from Susquehanna University, will teach the Junior science and the class in commerce and industry. Miss Hilbish will also have charge of the music in the high school.

The athletic work will be handled by Mr. Hood, who was captain of the Charleston football team and his had experience in every branch of high school athletics.

Besides the regular college preparatory courses of a recognized high school, including the English, Latin, French, history, science and mathematics, admitting graduates to the University without entrance examinations, the High School will offer vocational agriculture for the farm boy, taught by an instructor qualified under the Smith-Hughes law, Commerce and Industry, domestic science and manual training.

Of particular interest to the seventh and eighth grade pupils in the country is the fact that the inclusion of the seventh and eighth grades in the high school will make it possible now to give these two grades the advantages of the domestic science and manual training classes, the laboratory equipment for eighth grade science, contact with four college trained teachers—two of them men—and training in the fundamentals under one of the most experienced and successful grade teachers in the state.

Besides this, the Board proposes this year to make it possible for the pupils who wish to prepare for college entrance to commence the study of Latin in the seventh grade, covering in the seventh and eighth grades the work usually assigned to the first year in high school. This work will be under Miss Cook, who is especially trained for the Latin teaching. This does not mean that the country pupil who completes the eighth grade in the country school cannot prepare for college in the high school, but it does mean that the township high school offers now to the seventh and eighth grade pupils of the township advantages never before possible in the way of broad and thorough training.

HOME CANNING NECESSARY

United States Department of Agriculture Tells How to Preserve Fruit

Home canning—of the utmost importance during the war—will be just as important this year, according to present indications as they are viewed by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. The shortage of labor on the farms makes it necessary for the canneries to pay high prices for the commodities that will be canned later in the season. Labor in canning factories is expensive and difficult to obtain. Everything from cans to cartage costs has increased in price, and transportation is slow and more expensive than it was in war times. All this increase must be paid by the ultimate consumer; and there is not even assurance that there will be enough canned products to go around. The solution is home canning.

That sugar is higher in price than it has been hitherto has been advanced by some as a reason for canning either less fruit or nothing but vegetables; but unless one intends to give up sweets altogether there seems no good reason for not using canned fruit on account of high-priced sugar. There are few desserts that do not take from one-half to one cup of sugar, and no dessert is more healthful than fruit. It is not necessary to use thick syrup as was used in the days of plenty. A 10 per cent syrup made of 1 part sugar and 9 parts water will make palatable any of the acid fruits. Such fruits as apples, pineapples, and the like, can be canned without sugar. In fact, ordinary glucose or corn syrup may be substituted for sugar in making the syrup. A palatable syrup is made by mixing 1 cup of sugar, 1 cup glucose, and 8 cups of water.

It requires about 7 ounces of sugar for a pint jar. One cup of sugar will make 10 cups of syrup. A pound of sugar will make 20 cups. This last amount will be sufficient for 20 pints of canned fruit. Where the 10 per cent syrup is used the cost of the sugar to can a pint jar is 13 cents with sugar at 30 cents a pound. It is not so expensive after all.

MARRIED IN WOODSTOCK

Burnice Mackey of Riley Weds Harvard Lady

Mr. Burnice Mackey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Mackey of Riley, and Miss Hattie Koltz were united in marriage Wednesday afternoon, June 16, at 2:30 o'clock at the M. E. parsonage in Woodstock, Rev. Graham officiating. The bridesmaid was Miss Estella Olson and the best man Edwin Kellar, both of Harvard.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Koltz of Harvard. She is a young lady of pleasing personality and is held in the highest esteem by a large circle of friends in her home town.

The groom is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Mackey. He is a sturdy and dependable young man and is considered one of Riley's most competent farmers. He is at present engaged in working his father's farm.

This was a double wedding. As soon as Mr. Mackey and Miss Koltz had been married they exchanged places with the best man and bridesmaid who also took the vows.

Mr. and Mrs. Mackey took a short auto trip and ended the journey at the Mackey farm in Riley where they will begin housekeeping.

The Welcome

About sixty friends gathered at the Mackey farm Tuesday of this week to welcome the newlyweds. It was a complete surprise. The guests did not forget to bring an excellent supper including cake and cream. A purse of money was presented the couple by Mr. L. Stockwell in behalf of the guests.

MISS BROWN GRADUATES

Miss Lorene Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Brown, returned from Urbana last week where she graduated from the University of Illinois, being one of a class of 250 students who finished on the 16th of June. Miss Brown received an A. B. degree from the college of Liberal Arts and Sciences. She graduated from the Genoa high school in 1915 and from the Metropolitan Business college in 1916.

The following from Genoa attended the commencement exercises at Urbana: C. A. Brown, Mrs. Cora Robinson, Mrs. F. H. Holroyd, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Brown and family.

REDISTRIBUTION OF LABOR NEEDED

And Conditions are Now Changing in The Big Centers

OVER-PRODUCTION IN SOME LINES

Gravitates Labor to Places Where Labor is Needed—Plenty of Work

Thousands of workmen engaged in the making of men's clothing have been thrown out of employment during the month. At the same time advertising pages of the metropolitan newspapers are carrying bold announcements of reductions in prices of these goods, that show very clearly that the country has been overstocked. The big shoe factories of the country have been making reductions in their shoes, and at the same time metropolitan shoe dealers are grudgingly lowering their profit-making prices. The munition towns, which include Bridgeport, Hopewell, and lesser points have been hit hard by industrial conditions, and many of the places are already in the class of "deserted villages."

For several years people have been deserting farms, evidently preferring occupations which permitted them to live in the large cities closer to the movies and the white lights. With Europe at war there was plenty to do for everybody, and when the United States got into the mess the greatest accession to the industrial ranks still found shortage of labor. All of this industrial activity has borne its fruits, and it is not strange that it has been found that there are too many guns and revolvers around Bridgeport, too many ships at Hog Island, and more powder than is needed at Wilmington. At the same time Detroit seems to be catching up with herself in the manufacture of benzine buggies. The strike in the steel industry last Fall caused the wage-workers of the country to blacklist the steel trust. The result has been that there has been an under production in this field.

The inventory discloses the unmistakable fact that in a large number of industries that have been considered in the "first class" by wage-workers that production has been caught up with herself and that there is already a surplus of labor. In some other fields of employment in the industrial line, where the work has not been so alluring, or the hours as short, or the pay as big, the day of the over-supply of labor has not yet arrived, although it is noticeable that these institutions are catching up with their orders.

Still, there is work for everybody to do. The farms of the country are crying for helpers and every man out of a job in the cities can get back to work if he will forsake the bright lights and become useful as well as ornamental in caring for the growing crops that are to feed humanity during the coming months. There is neither an over-supply of labor in the country, as is indicated in some of the industries, nor a shortage of labor, as the conditions on the farms would lead some to believe. The situation simply calls for a radical redistribution of people who are willing to do useful work.

LETTER FROM DOLLY PELL

Young Lady of Rangoon, India, Writes to Benefactors

For some time the Standard Bearer class of the Genoa M. E. Sunday School, of which Mrs. E.H. Olmstead is teacher, has been defraying the expense of educating a young lady in Rangoon, Burma, India.

The class recently received the following letter from their protegee:

Dear friends,
I send my heartiest thanks for your kind aid, which I appreciate immensely. The money just helps out with my boarding fees for the rest of this year. I am sure you will be greatly pleased to hear something of my school life.

I am in the 10th standard, which is the highest class for a school education, and if I pass I could take a college course, but I have not decided, as my mother needs my help as soon as possible and in order to render it to her I will have to take my teacher's training when I pass my 10th. She is working at present, but her pay is insufficient to cover all our expenses and besides I have a little brother who is in school as a boarder and his fees have also to be met with.

Now I daresay you would like to hear something about our school. The No. of students in the High school which comprises the 8th, 9th and 10th standards is 21 while that in the 10th is 8. This is managed by 3 teachers each having a certain No. of subjects to teach. The scripture is taken by Miss Ashwill the principal who is very kind and does her best for the school. Our studies this year are Second Language, Mathematics 1 (Arithmetic, Algebra and Mensuration) Math. 2 (Euclid) Higher English and Geography. The English text books are the "Merchant of Venice," "Macbeth," "Gothen," "Tale of two cities," Cambridge readings in literature and Jock of the Bushveld so you see we are very busy. School commences at 10 A M and gives over at 4 P. M with a break of half an hour for tiffin. The boarding department is away from the day school and we have to walk to school, but on Sundays the bus takes us to Sunday School and Church.

The Sunday School is rather large and I am glad to say it is gradually increasing. The ladies form one class, and the gents another and the other classes follow these two according to their grades. I am in the senior class and my teacher is Miss Auburn, who is a very jolly person. The members of the S. S. board have decided in having a special class in order to train girls to be S. S. teachers and I am going to be one of them. We boarder girls sing in the S. S. choir and the big folks sing for the church choir. The class for little children in S. S. is conducted by Miss Ashwill who is helped by a few teachers. We have our picnics which always go off well.

Well my dear friends I hope that this brief account will give you all some idea of what I have been trying to explain. I must thank you once again for your kind help and before I conclude I must ask you to please pray for me to be successful in my examination. I can assure you I shall never forget your kindness for you shall always have a place in my thoughts. I am sorry I have no photo of myself but Miss Ashwill has kindly promised to take a snapshot of me and then I will most probably send you one in my next letter. I trust to hear from you soon.

I close with my best wishes to you all and your teacher
Yours truly,
Dorothy Pell

RETURNING TIDE OF PROSPERITY

Congressman Fuller Predicts Bright Future Under Republicans

AGAIN CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS

Endorsed by Many County and District Conventions and Consents to Run

Congressman Charles E. Fuller of Belvidere will again be a candidate for congress, according to the following letter:

June 15, 1920.—Mr. E. B. Tabor, Editor of the Leader, Earlville, Ill.—My dear Mr. Tabor: Some time ago you were kind enough to write inquiring if I intended to be a candidate for re-election to congress, and tendering me your support in case I should so decide. I think I informed you then that my inclination was to retire at the end of my present term, and not to seek another election, but as I was not then fully decided, I promised that I would advise you later of my decision.

It is still true that my personal inclination would be not to ask again for support of the people of the district, who have so generously honored me in the past. However, I feel that my personal desires should not be the sole deciding factor, and that if the people of the district wish me to further represent them during the trying times of reconstruction, when so very much is at stake, including even the independence of the American Union, and the very existence of Republican government, and after having been so greatly favored in the past, and being under such deep and lasting obligations to the people of the district, I feel that I have no right to place, my personal inclinations above the call of duty.

At least three of the counties of this district, without solicitation from me, have in their county conventions endorsed me for re-election, and the district congressional convention not only endorsed me but urged me "irrespective of my personal wishes or desires," to be a candidate for re-election; also a considerable number of people throughout the district have written to me with like effect, many others have personally urged me to consent to serve another term. These unsolicited endorsements could not but be very gratifying to me, and they seem to make it almost imperative that I should consent to serve another term.

I need not say how greatly I appreciate the cordial support you, personally, and through your paper, have given me in the several campaigns of the past, and I must express the same appreciation of the very generous support given by you substantially the entire press of the district, and by the great majority of the people as well. The obligations incurred thereby can never be forgotten nor fully repaid while life shall last.

And now, in the obedience to what seems to be the wishes of, at least a majority of the people of the district, I am pleased to announce that I will be a candidate for re-nomination at the primaries in September next, and if nominated and elected I shall give the best that is in me to the service of all the people of the district.

The issues are now fairly well settled; a magnificent ticket has been nominated that ought to command the support of all true Americans who put the welfare, the prosperity, the independence of their country above all other political considerations. With the election of Harding and Coolidge will come the returning tide of Republican prosperity and under such an administration it will be a pleasure to serve.

Cordially yours,

SUMMER SCHOOL

Summer school opened Monday at the Normal school and all morning the teachers were busy showing the students to the different class rooms they will use during the summer. It is estimated that there will be about 600 in all to the summer school. All of these have found rooms either in the Dormitory or out in the city. In the afternoon short classes were held and the students were told what was expected for the semester. Regular classes started Tuesday morning and will continue till the fall term starts.

QUARTER OF A CENTURY

Wm. Harty drove over to Hampshire the other evening and while attending an entertainment some of the hoodlums of that place slashed his buggy to ribbons. (This started a feud between Genoa and Hampshire that existed for years.)

Fresh eggs are selling at 11 cents. Hogs are bringing $4.75 in Chicago and corn 49c.

WILL NOT CLOSE

Genoa Merchants Decide that Idea is Wrong

Genoa merchants had about decided this week to follow the plan of some larger cities and close their stores on Thursday afternoons during the summer months. After giving the matter further consideration, however, the business men took another view of the situation. The half holiday would have been welcomed by the clerks, but on the other hand the closing might have caused considerable inconvenience to farmers during the busy season. Should a farmer find that he needed something from the store on Thursday afternoon and that store was closed, the condition might be exasperating.

Genoa is endeavoring to attract business from a wider territory than ever before and the merchants now realize that every move made must be to attract rather than detract.

ODD FELLOW MEMORIAL

Local Lodge Will Attend Church Sunday Morning

The first landing will be at Southampton, England, from which place he will proceed to London, thence to Ireland where he will be welcomed by his aged father and mother, six brothers, two sisters and a host of friends. Fr. O'Brien will be accompanied by a cousin, Rev. James Killy of San Francisco and a classmate, Rev. M. O'Callahan, of Marion, Iowa. Should his companions decide to go to France, he will visit the last resting place of Lieutenant Bayard Brown.

A priest from St. Viator College will be at Genoa during the absence of the local pastor.

NICHOLS BUYS HOUSE

Charles L. Nichols has bought of Mrs. L. M. Gross a residence on West State street in Sycamore. The purchase price is said to have been $6,000. The purchaser will move from his farm and take possession September 1. He will erect a modern garage and make other improvements on the property.

Shelton, county superintendent of schools of McHenry County. Miss Koltz has been employed as teacher in the rural school at Lawrence for the ensuing school year at a monthly salary of $145.

SCHOOL BOARD AGAIN OPENS BIDS

Luckily None of the Members were Afflicted with Weak Heart

TWO ROOMS TO COST $20,000.00

No Bids Accepted and None Rejected—Board Adjourns to Saturday, June 16.

The board of education of the city schools advertised for bids for the construction of two rooms of the proposed six-room building and the bids were opened Monday evening. Said board is still suffering from the shock and at present is running around in circles, praying that there may yet be found an outlet and end of the seemingly hopeless situation.

The bids opened Monday evening, including the general work, plumbing, heating, wiring, etc., totaled approximately $21,000. No bids were accepted and none were rejected, but the board adjourned until Saturday evening of this week to give the members a chance to catch their breath and an opportunity to think it over.

The board is endeavoring to erect this portion of the building, as a temporary relief, without issuing bonds. It is absolutely essential that no bonds be issued until time for erecting the complete building.

But some kind of a building must be put up at once. No teacher can be engaged to teach under conditions as they have been during the past two seasons, and no one can blame teachers for refusing to stand for such conditions, where there is not a redeeming feature in complying with the state regulations pertaining to light, heat, ventilation and sanitary conditions.

Consistency

The state assembly has made these laws and should have known that conditions now require a great outlay of money. Yet that body failed to provide any means of raising the needed additional funds.

Genoa will have some kind of a school building next fall, but before things are well under way the board of education has some sweating to do.

DOGS KILLING SHEEP

B. C. Awe's Patience Has Been Completely Exhausted

Dogs have been killing and maiming many sheep in B. C. Awe's pasture and his patience has at last been exhausted. He now gives warning that dogs found running at large on his farm will be shot, and no one can blame him for taking such action. Last Saturday night several sheep and lambs were killed by dogs and Mr. Awe spent all day Sunday in dressing the wounds of many others. He has suffered loss of a similar nature many times in the past, but this was the first time the killing assumed the nature of a massacre.

There is not a more liberal man in the country than B. C. Awe in allowing people to use his grounds for picnics, family parties, camping and fishing excursions. The people of Genoa should fully appreciate this attitude. Should Mr. Awe absolutely forbid trespassing on his farm, it would mean a pleasure loss to those who enjoy occasional strolls along the river. Mr. Awe has patiently put up with fence cutting, camp fires and confiscation of articles left along the river. In consideration of his kindness in all intents and purposes letting us use his farm as a public park, we can do no less than repay him by being considerate.

Dogs should not be allowed to run at night, for it is then that they travel far and kill sheep. If you have a dog and he meets sudden death—on the Awe farm, blame no one but yourself. Lock the dog up at night.

WHY NOT EVERY DAY?

Practically all the doctors in DeKalb have agreed to close their offices every Thursday afternoon. Accordingly it will be unhealthy to be ill in DeKalb Thursday afternoons. If a person can postpone sickness a half day, why not put it off indefinitely.

THE KINGLY SPUD

A Rhinelander, Wis., farmer, held over four cars of potatoes which he could have sold for around $2,000 last fall, and last week accepted a check for $10,000 for them.

MY WIFE'S DIAMONDS

By O. B. DU BOIS

(Copyright.)

My name is Raymond, Henry J. Raymond, and I am a stock broker by profession.

You probably remember the rise of G. R. Q. in nineteen-two. Well, I was one of the tight little sticks in the financial kite at that time, and I got mine. I am going to be perfectly frank, my hat-size increased directly after this transaction.

I began to buy diamonds for Mrs. Raymond, and never stopped until I had loaded that clever little lady with gems galore. I even bought them for my wife's sister. The day I gave Mrs. R—the diamond necklace, I gave one to her sister Belle. It was scandalous the way I bought diamonds.

They never came too big or brilliant for me, and every stone was tested by my friend, Silverstein. I used to lunch with Mr. Silverstein quite often, his pawn-broker shop being located on the same block with my office.

Well, you know the condition of the market in nineteen-three. It was simply awful, and things going from bad to worse.

I was living out at Brinton that year, and when the winter came on I was simply cupped for money. You can imagine how bad things were when I tell you that I sifted the furnace ashes and shoveled the snow just to economize, and yet we seemed to be paying our household bills. Somehow that blessed little wife of mine could stretch a ten-dollar bill until it covered fifty dollars' worth of expenses.

Matters came to a focus, however, one morning in December.

Jessie (that's Mrs. Raymond), and I had been to a reception at the club the night before. Ye gods! but she sparkled like a cut-glass chandelier. And there I was going to the city the next morning with just thirty-two cents in my pocket.

I was in the smoker when the idea came to me.

"I'll steal Jessie's diamond necklace," said I.

You see, I had convinced myself that three thousand dollars tied up in a necklace was too much money.

Directly after dinner Fate drove things my way on a gallop, for Jessie suggested that we go down and call on her sister Belle.

"Say, Jess," said I, "if you don't mind, I'd sooner run over to the clubhouse a while."

"Very well," she replied like an obedient little wife. "But you'll call for me, won't you?"

"Certainly, certainly, I'll drop in at 10:30 sharp," I answered.

Oh, but it was easy! I just walked around the block, went in the house, dug down in the trunk and took my plunder.

Just to keep up the little comedy and introduce a realistic effect, I stole the trunk lid open and wrenched off the fasteners from a window opening on the kitchen extension.

Naturally, I went to Silverstein's the first thing in the morning, and he came up dollar for dollar. Of course, I explained that the market was in bad shape, and I needed some ready money that day, etc., etc. Do you know that the fellow actually wanted to press more money on me; but the jump from thirty-two cents to three thousand dollars was enough for me.

Maybe I didn't take home some flowers that night.

I invented a charming fabrication about a sudden rise in stock when I presented some roses that evening.

Well, all things come in due season, and I felt certain things were about due when Jess went upstairs to dress for dinner. She said she would dress "special" in honor of my good luck and the roses. I knew that "special" meant diamonds.

She had been in her room a few moments only when I heard her scream.

"Mercy! Jess, what is it?" I asked.

"Oh, oh! I'm dying from laughter. Oh, but this is too funny."

"What is it, Jess? Tell me at once."

"Why, I—why somebody has stolen my diamond necklace." Then she went off into another fit of silly laughter.

"Well, I thoughtered, 'Tell me, is that something funny?'"

"Oh, yes; it's too funny," she managed to say. "They—they were only paste."

"Paste! Those diamonds paste!" I howled. "You're crazy."

"Oh, no, I'm not; it's too funny. I—I had a duplicate necklace made of paste diamonds," she gurgled. "I always knew that we'd be robbed some day. Oh, isn't it a good joke?"

I saw Silverstein taking the matter in the light of a good joke.

"Where are the real diamonds? That's what I want to know," I blurted out. I must have spoken very rough, for she began to cry.

"They are in our safe-deposit box, safe, and—and you don't even tell me you are glad, and—and, or, oh, oh! I wish I was dead!"

Well, when I heard that joyous bit of news all of my comfort talk came to the surface, and I soon had her feeling real chipperlike.

"You'll leave them there, where no robber can get them, won't you, dear?" she chirped, drying her tears.

"Why—no—yes, yes, of course," I managed to say.

"Oh, what a love of a man you are!"

In about five minutes I heard Jess give an unearthly scream, and I bounded up those stairs like a balloon ascension. I found her on the floor, wringing her hands.

"Oh, Henry, this is terrible. The rest of my diamonds are gone. Rings, sunbursts, everything. All taken by the same robber."

"By George, I never touched them," I gasped before I thought.

"Oh, of course you didn't," she sobbed. "But it was the first thing I thought of, that maybe you had done it for a joke. Oh, dear, oh, dear!"

I managed to get about two hours' sleep before morning. The most important problem now was to secure that key. There it lay on her dresser, so near and yet so far. At 5 a. m. I decided to steal it. Jess was in her beauty sleep, her soundest and best; so I quietly took it and substituted one from my pocket that resembled it to perfection.

I was at the Trust company's office before that institution opened its doors.

In ten minutes' time, I was in Silverstein's place, ready to explain how the matter had occurred. But would you believe it, the fellow actually had a warrant out for me.

"Why, confound it, man," said I, "my wife had a set of paste diamonds made for safety and I never knew a thing about it," and then I saluted right in. It was shameful, the way I talked to him, and for a strong finish, I threw the genuine diamonds down on the counter and shook my fist at him.

"I'm through with you, Silverstein, do you understand? I'm through with you."

Silverstein picked up the necklace and after one hasty glance, tossed it back again.

"You're through with me, eh? Well, I'm not through with you. This necklace, also, is the cheapest kind of paste." Then he turned to the rear of the shop and said, "Hey, Louis, call an officer."

I raved and stormed.

I pleaded and begged.

But it did no good. In the end I counted out two thousand nine hundred and seventy-five dollars and had to put up my watch to cover the twenty-five dollars I had spent.

It must have been between twelve and one when the officer came in and said that my wife was outside and would like to see me. In fact, she followed right in behind him and commenced to talk the moment she entered the door.

"Oh, Henry, guess what. I phoned for the chief of police this morning after you left, and he came up to the house and asked a lot of questions, and made a whole lot of notes, and—"

"Good heavens! This is too much!" I howled.

"What's too much?" she simpered.

"This police business," I yelled, with visions of the explanations that would have to be made at headquarters.

"Why, Henry, the idea! He said he could find the robber inside of six hours."

"That's it, that's it," I moaned. "You want me to go to jail, don't you?"

"What do you mean, love?" she twittered.

"Mean! Oh, I mean to say that I stole the necklace. Do you understand? I did it. Me—Yours truly. I am the robber. I stole the necklace. But, by George! I never touched the rest of them in the bottom of the trunk."

Her face lit up with a heavenly smile, and, without any excitement, she said:

"Well, I surmised it all the while, so—I stole the others."

"You?" I gasped. "You?"

"Yes, dear," she answered.

"Then you have made a terrible mistake in calling up the police," said I.

"Well, as for that—er—it's—really, it's the only fib I've told, and I rather thought I'd use it to precipitate matters," she answered, cool as ice.

"Well, since you're so clever, maybe you can tell me why I found a second set of paste diamonds in that safe-deposit box?"

"Oh," she said, freezing up. "You've been there, too, have you?"

"I have, madam. Please explain."

"In the first place, Mr. Raymond," she commenced, right on her dignity. "How do you think I can run our establishment on the paltry sum of money you give me? In the second place, Mr. Raymond, those diamonds were mine. The first set of paste I had made for safety, and as nobody seemed to know the difference, I had the second set made because I knew you were hard up."

"Then you used the money for household expenses?" I asked.

"I did," she replied very emphatically.

What could I do? I simply went right over and kissed her, and there in my office we had a heart-to-heart talk.

When she started for the 2:30 train, she said:

"Remember this: Many a man has gone to pieces financially just because he failed to let his wife know how he stood on money matters."

And she was off, taking her original paste diamonds with her.

"After dinner that night, Jess placed a small package in my hand, and said: 'To show you that a woman can manage these things better than a man, take this and use it.'"

"What is it, Jess?" I asked very meekly.

"A genuine diamond necklace," she replied. "I called on Belle this afternoon. Paste diamonds are just as becoming to her style as the genuine."

"Why, Jess—What?—How?"

"Never mind how I did it," she answered. "That's part of a woman's management, and what Belle doesn't know will never worry her."

RIVAL FROCKS OF EQUAL CLASS

THE FOREMOST American designers concede the wonderful talent of the French in the conception and making of clothes, but they have arrived at the point of excellence where they are not afraid of comparisons. Here we have an opportunity to consider an American and a French frock, side-by-side, and both made for summertime dress-up occasions, shown with the millinery and footwear selected for them. French costumers are establishing branches of their houses in this country, but it is more significant that Americans are sending millinery and footwear to Paris, and perhaps other things.

From Paris comes the lovely frock of flowered georgette with an accordion plaited skirt and plain, short smock, cut in the kimono style with elbow sleeves. The sleeves are turned back in a cuff and a little ruff made of the plaited georgette finishes them. Two-toned ribbon with picot

Midsummer Brings Its Blouses

AN EPILOGUE to the story of summer blouses might easily be longer than the story itself for midsummer has modified the earlier styles and added some new ideas to those that the spring has brought in. The popularity of elbow and shorter sleeve tricots, except for the tailored styles. Tricotee was a second thought with designers and has proved immensely popular. Just now it has joined forces with georgette and these two are used together, with the tricotee appearing in wide panels on the front of sheer blouses to provide a smart vest for the street or formal suit.

Nearly all the new smocks are very short, made of georgette with embroidery for decoration. Those for afternoon and dinner wear are in high colors and often use a plain and a figured pattern in combination. Orange, flame, turquoise, emerald, rose and jade green are in high favor and they are embroidered in other brilliant colors. Georgette maintains its position as the favorite material for blouses, but fine voile is very close to it—may overtake it as summer advances. These lovely and practical voiles are reasonably priced and other blouses show a decline that is promising. Voile is ideal for wear with street suits and wash satins or pongee silks are its competitors in tailored models.

A blouse and a smock of georgette are shown in the picture, both of them examples of long-sleeved designs. The blouse is in a very light tan color, and cherries with twigs and foliage are embroidered in beads and silk. Very wide tucks at each side of the front and above the cuffs help give this

The KITCHEN CABINET

What beauty sense women have they acquire as men do—by inheritance, education and practice—not otherwise.—Campbell.

SOME GOOD CAKES.

A simple and easy way to make angel food which takes a moderate number of eggs is the following: Take one cupful each of sugar, egg whites and flour, one-half teaspoonful of cream of tartar and a little salt with one teaspoonful of vanilla. Sift one-half of the cream of tartar with the flour and put the other half into the egg whites when half beaten. Beat the eggs until stiff; add the sugar, folding it in, then fold in the flour very lightly. Bake in a moderate oven 50 minutes.

Gold Cake.—Take four eggs well beaten; do not separate. Add one cupful of water to the eggs. Cream half a cupful of butter, add one and one-fourth cupfuls of sugar and two and one-half cupfuls of flour with three tablespoonfuls of baking powder. Flavor with lemon. Bake in loaf or layers.

Date Torte.—Take one cupful each of chopped nuts, sugar and dates, one tablespoonful of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, two well beaten eggs. Bake in a sheet and serve with whipped cream.

Election Cake.—Take one-half cupful of shortening, one cupful of bread sponge, one egg, one cupful of brown sugar, one cupful of sour milk, two-thirds of a cupful of raisins, eight chopped figs, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and salt, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of cloves, the same of nutmeg, mace, one and one-fourth cupfuls of flour and one-half teaspoonful of soda.

Golden Orange Cake.—Take one-half cupful of clarified fat, one cupful of New Orleans molasses, one tablespoonful of sugar, one egg, the juice and rind of an orange, one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one-half cupful of cold water, two cupfuls of pastry flour, salt to taste. Bake in a shallow pan and cover while hot with butter and powdered sugar.

"A little love, a little trust, A soft impulse, a sudden dream, And life as dry as desert dust, Is fresher than a mountain stream."

HURRY-UP DISHES.

Dishes which may be prepared and are ready to serve in a short time are in constant demand. A good plan for the housewife who is subject to a sudden short-order call is to have a list of good dishes in a convenient place where a glance will tell what can be made available for the meal. With the canned soups to be opened and heated in five minutes the soup course is one easy to arrange. With a jar of good mayonnaise always on hand for salads, a salad is not difficult to prepare. A few stewed prunes on leaf lettuce with a good dressing makes a most acceptable combination. Another salad easy of preparation is crushed peanuts. Roll them until like coarse crumbs, sprinkle with finely minced green onion and serve with either French or mayonnaise dressing on lettuce.

Luncheon Dish.—Cut squares of bread from three slices of bread, making one-inch squares. Prepare two cupfuls of white sauce well seasoned with salt and pepper, adding one teaspoonful of curry powder. Cook five eggs in the shell until hard, cut in slices after removing the shells and add the bread and white sauce. Serve hot.

Salmon With Peas.—Heat a fillet of salmon in the can, turn carefully onto a hot chop plate and surround with cooked peas either in a white sauce or simply buttered. Tuna fish, scalloped with hard-cooked eggs cut in slices, baked until well heated through is another good hurry-up dish.

Creamed Meat.—Take cooked meat, roast of beef, ham, pork or chicken, put through the meat grinder and add to a rich white sauce. Serve with toast or on it.

Chocolate Cake.—Cream one-half cupful of butter with one cupful of sugar, add three beaten eggs, the rind and juice of half a lemon, two squares of grated chocolate, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and three-fourths of a cupful of sweet milk. Mix and bake in layers or loaf.

Savory Eggs.—Beat two eggs with salt and pepper and a tablespoonful of cream. Melt an ounce of butter in a saucepan, then pour in the eggs, stirring constantly; as they thicken add some pieces of the tender breast of chicken. Serve piping hot on buttered toast.

Celery Toast.—Slice tender stalks of celery into thin slices and cook until tender in just enough water to keep them from burning. Make a rich white sauce, season well, add the celery and pour over rounds of buttered toast.

Pepper Steak.—Take a round of veal two inches thick. Salt and pierce it with a coarse-tined fork. Pour one can of tomatoes over the meat, then dice a large onion and a large green pepper; put over the tomatoes. Place in the oven and bake one and one-half hours. Remove the lid and baste until all the juice goes into the meat.

Asparagus on Toast.—Cook the tender tops of asparagus in boiling water just long enough to make tender. Add cream, butter, salt and pepper to season. Do not drain off the water and serve on nicely toasted slices of bread.

From two to four the child consumes more than a quarter of the supply of food required by the workman. From four to ten there is a steady increase, while from twelve to fifteen a child requires as much food in actual weight as does a person in the prime of life, a trifle less than the hardest-working laborer. Any deficiency in quality is much more serious at this age than at any other.

GOOD AND SIMPLE FOODS.

A plain cake which is not at all expensive but is tender and delicious may be made of sour cream. Beat one egg and one white of egg until light then add one cupful of sugar and a cupful of sour cream, a tablespoonful of lard, a little salt, one and three-fourths cupfuls of flour, one tablespoonful of cornstarch, one-half teaspoonful of soda and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, vanilla. Beat well and bake in layer cake pans. Use any filling desired.

Ham on Toast.—Put ham through the meat grinder. To one cupful add one-half cupful of milk, a tablespoonful of butter, salt, pepper and one-half tablespoonful of flour. Cook a few minutes, spread on toast, break an egg on top and set in the oven until the egg sets.

Sweet Potato and Almond Croquettes.—Bake four medium-sized sweet potatoes and remove from the skins. There should be two cupfuls. Add three tablespoonfuls of blanched and finely chopped almonds, one teaspoonful of salt, a few gratings of nutmeg, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter and one egg well beaten. Add enough milk to make of the right consistency to shape. Roll in crumbs and fry in deep fat.

French Pancakes.—Beat the yolks and whites separately of four eggs. To the yolks add two cupfuls each of milk and flour, a teaspoonful of grated lemon rind and one-half tablespoonful of melted butter. Fold in the whites beaten stiff and bake on a hot greased griddle. Make the cakes large and spread with butter and put together with grated maple sugar. Cut to serve like pie.

Baked Codfish.—Soak salt fish in water until soft. Flake one cupful slice four cold boiled potatoes and arrange alternately in a buttered dish with the codfish. Sprinkle each layer with chopped stuffed olives, using one-half cupful. Make a sauce, using one and one-half cupfuls of tomatoes, a tablespoonful each of butter and flour one small onion, chopped, salt and pepper to taste. Cover with coarse bread crumbs stirred in melted butter and bake until the crumbs are brown.

A clam is a simpler organization than we are, but because our teeth ache we do not wish to be a clam. High organization is complex, not simple; but it may work with perfect ease and smoothness none the less.

SOME MEXICAN DISHES.

For those who enjoy the spicy, peppery dishes of the South, these dishes will appeal:

Scrambled Eggs With Chili.—Break six eggs add a tablespoonful of water and a dash of chili powder for each egg; also salt and pepper to taste. Beat lightly until the eggs are well mixed.

Pour into a heated pan greased with bacon fat or sweet dripping. Stir until thick and creamy. Serve on hot buttered toast.

Combination Salad.—Use one cucumber, two young onions, three small radishes, four stalks of celery, two firm ripe tomatoes, all cut in pieces; place in a salad bowl lined with lettuce leaves. Prepare a dressing of one-half cupful of vinegar, one tablespoonful of oil, one teaspoonful of salt and one tablespoonful of chili powder. Bring to a boil, then cool and pour over the salad.

Tomato Jelly.—Cook one quart of tomatoes for ten minutes, add one teaspoonful of chili powder and cook again ten minutes. Strain in one-third of a package of gelatin softened in cold water; stir until well dissolved, strain and add salt to taste, then set away to cool. When the jelly is firm cut in cubes; serve on lettuce with mayonnaise.

Chili Con Carni.—Take one pound of beef from the round, one-third of a pound of pork steak, chop fine. Fry two slices of diced bacon; brown or cook the meat in the bacon fat. Into a kettle put one quart of tomato, add one chopped onion browned in the bacon fat. Putting the tomatoes through a sieve improves the dish. Add meat and simmer one hour. Just a few minutes before serving add one can of red kidney beans. For seasoning add one tablespoonful of chili powder, salt to taste and one chili pepper dropped into the kettle and cooked with the mixture. The pepper is removed before serving.

Veal Goulash.—Put into a saucepan two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two minced onions, and a few slices of bacon. Cover and cook until brown, then add veal cut in bits, salt and shall powder to season. Do not put any water into the dish but cook until tender.

Poland Not Going Bankrupt and Is Thankful to America for Loan.

By IGNACE PADEREWSKI, Polish Leader.

All Poles are exceedingly glad that Poland has obtained the long wished for loan of $250,000,000, equivalent to 14,000,000,000 Polish marks. For some time to come Polish finances will be in a bad way. But we are not going bankrupt, and America will never regret having lent us money in our hour of need.

Our position since the beginning of the war has been very difficult. We were devastated by the Germans, who advanced, and the Russians, in retreat; nevertheless 80 per cent of our land is under cultivation again. We had a hard winter, owing to early frosts, which destroyed the potato and beet crops all through the winter. The fact is that we shall be dependent on America for food for some time to come.

As to bolshevism, I don't fear it. We have had plenty of bolshevik propaganda, but the peasants don't want it. We have had to build up the country's internal administration from A to Z and at the same time fight the bolshevik. But I hope we shall soon be able to set about reconstructing our country quietly.

Our most urgent needs transport. We have nothing like the necessary number of trains and engines. And the war with the bolsheviks has absorbed much rolling stock for the supplies of our army which could well be employed in carrying coal from our mines to the large industrial centers. Though the winter was very severe indeed, many thousands of us had no coal at all, not because of the lack of it at the pits' mouths, but for sheer lack of transport. We hope to get some more new machines from America and be able to build and import trucks before long.

America must remember that we are still at war, and this impedes our exports. On the other hand, neither France nor Italy is exporting, and we have been more hit by the war than either of them in the matter of devastation. But we have enough timber to bring in $3,000,000,000 and shall soon begin to export that. We have plenty of coal, salt, potash and petrol for export as well. All we want is the means of transporting it to Danzig.

A country with such resources in raw material and with the will to work will not go bankrupt. In metals and coal and timber we are very rich, and we want to work. We want to organize our country and make it strong and prosperous. We have terrible sufferings behind us and many thousands of us are suffering yet. But, though we face great difficulties now and in the near future, we mean to pull through, pay all our debts and get onto our feet again as a thoroughly modern democratic state.

All Poles are united in their confidence in our president of the republic, Mr. Pilsudski. When he was first elected, the older men and conservatives said he would not do, and he was almost entirely supported by the young men. But a year of office has shown old and young alike that he is the man for the country, and so all support his policy and confide in his good judgment.

Hence the "Save the Redwoods League" for the Redwoods National Park.

By MADISON GRANT, in Zoological Society Bulletin

The fundamental tragedy of the whole redwood situation lies in the fact that these great trees are nearly all in the hands of private owners who can not reasonably be expected to sacrifice their holdings for public benefit. The state and nation, however foolish they may have been in giving these lands, must now buy back at least a large portion of them.

It is scarcely necessary to dwell on the crime involved in the destruction of the oldest and tallest trees on earth. The cutting of a Sequoia for grape-stakes or railroad-ties (and an eighteen-foot tree was cut this summer for that purpose along the new state highway) is like breaking up one's grandfather's clock for kindling to save the trouble of splitting logs at the woodpile, or lighting one's pipe with a Greek manuscript to save the trouble of reaching for the matches.

It will cost money to preserve the redwoods—many millions; but California has no choice. Either the amount needed to save the groves must be supplied today, or else a far greater sum will be required ten years hence to purchase a butchered and isolated tenth part of the forests. Those are the only alternatives. If the groves are bought in their present condition and at relatively small cost, it will be a great irremediable because heretofore Americans have followed the wasteful policy of recklessly exploiting wild life, forests, and streams, and then as soon as the destruction is complete, the policy is changed, game is reintroduced, and attempts are made to reforest the mountains at vast cost. But redwoods never can be replaced.

"Japan Must Be Made the Mightiest Nation in the Whole World."

By W. M. McGOVERN, in "Modern Japan."

Japan must be made the mightiest nation in the world, is the idea inculcated through textbooks in the minds of all Japanese. Extensive nationalism is the predominant feature of Japanese life, and this nationalism far transcends all party divisions.

There is military instruction in all schools and rifle practice is taught in the secondary and higher schools, so the average middle schoolboy would make, without further training, a most excellent soldier.

In the literature classes stories of military prowess are read and expounded, while in the history classes the Japanese youngster is reminded that Japan never has been beaten in any war, and that no foreign invader ever has secured a foothold on her soil; that Japan's place in the sun is gradually expanding and that sooner or later, to use the words of the textbooks, "Japan must be made the mightiest nation in the world."

With respect to the Japanese army, about which it is difficult to obtain precise information, efforts are being made so that by 1930 the first line may consist of 740,000 men, the second line of 780,000 men and the third of 3,850,000.

The result of the great war has not caused Japan to modify her program and if the proposed disarmament takes place Japan will be left as the greatest military power on earth.

SUPPLY-VARIETY IN FAMILY DIET

Eggs Are More Plentiful and Comparatively Reasonable in Price.

SOME NEW DISHES OUTLINED

They Furnish as Many Possibilities for Delectable Food for Luncheon or Supper as They Do for the Morning Meal.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Now that eggs are a little more plentiful and comparatively reasonable in price they can provide a welcome variation in the family diet. In many families eggs are seldom served except at breakfast, but they furnish just as many possibilities for delectable dishes for luncheon or supper as they do for breakfast. They can well take the place of a meat dish, for, like meat they furnish protein, fat, and mineral matter and the yolk is also a good source of vitamin. A few recipes for attractive dishes suitable to serve in place of meat for the midday or evening meal follow. These recipes were tested in the experimental kitchen of the United States department of agriculture.

Combinations of eggs with bread-crumbs, rice, or some starchy cereal to give body to the dish are always good.

Shirred Eggs With Rice.

Fill a baking dish half full of hot boiled rice. Break six eggs and carefully drop them in the rice, taking care not to break the yolks. Pour a cupful of cheese sauce over the eggs and rice and bake in a moderate oven until the whites of the eggs are set.

To make the cheese sauce: Melt one tablespoonful of butter and stir into it one tablespoonful of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, and an eighth of a teaspoonful of white pepper. Add one cupful of cold milk, and stir over the flame until thick and creamy. Add four tablespoonfuls of grated cheese and stir until melted.

Creole Eggs.

Hard-cook six eggs. Cook half cupful of washed rice in two quarts of boiling water containing one teaspoonful of salt.

Make a sauce in the following way: Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter in a skillet and add four tablespoonfuls of chopped onions. Cook until the onion is soft, but not brown. Add one and a half cupfuls of canned tomatoes and two finely-chopped green peppers, and half teaspoonful of salt. Cook for 15 minutes. Place a layer of boiled rice in a baking dish, cover with slices of hard-cooked eggs and cover the sliced eggs with creole sauce. Repeat until baking dish is full. Grate cheese over the top and bake for 20 minutes in a moderate oven.

Eggs in Tomato Cups.

When fresh tomatoes are in season no more attractive way of serving eggs can be found than this.

Select the desired number of good-sized tomatoes, allowing one to each person. Cut off the blossom end, scoop out the seeds, and stand the tomatoes in a baking pan in the oven until they are partly cooked. Put a half teaspoonful of butter and a dusting of salt and pepper into the bottom of each and break in one egg. Place in the oven until the eggs are "set" to the desired hardness. Have ready a round of toasted bread well buttered, and place each tomato in the center of a round of toast. Serve hot.

Eggs Coddled in Tomato Sauce.

Make a tomato sauce by melting two tablespoonfuls of butter and stirring into it three tablespoonfuls of flour, half teaspoonful of celery salt, quarter teaspoonful of pepper, and two teaspoonfuls of salt. Strain two cupfuls of tomato pulp and juice through a sieve and add to the butter and flour. Cook until thickened. Place one-half of the tomato sauce in a baking dish, break six eggs, one at a time, and carefully slide each egg into the sauce, taking care not to break the yolks. Cover with the remaining sauce, sprinkle with grated cheese, and bake in the oven until the egg is set. It is well to serve each egg on a round of toasted bread, or each may be baked in an individual ramekin if preferred.

Eggs Coddled in Tomato Sauce Are Very Good and So Are Eggs in Tomato Cups.

PROPER WAY TO MIX INEXPENSIVE CAKES

Plenty of Eggs and Butter Are Chief Requisites.

Specialists in Home Economics Kitchen Have Been Making Extensive Experiments—How Best Results Are Obtained.

If your experience has been that cheap cakes have a poor flavor and a coarse texture it is because you have not been putting them together in the right way. An inexpensive cake requires careful mixing. No difficulty should be experienced in compounding a cake which is excellent in texture and has a delicious flavor when plenty of eggs and butter are available. It is when it is necessary to economize on these expensive materials that the cook who is not skillful has her troubles.

Food specialists in the home economics kitchen of the United States department of agriculture have been making extensive investigations in cake baking, especially in the baking of one-egg cakes. Their experiments with cheap cakes show that the best results are obtained when the batter is beaten very little after the baking powder is added and when the cake is baked in a very slow oven.

The recipe which was used in the experiments follows:

One-Egg Cake.
 3 level tablespoonfuls 1½ cups flour
 fat 2½ teaspoonfuls bak.
 ¼ cup granulated ing powder
 sugar 1 teaspoon vanilla
 1-3 to 2-3 cup milk 1 egg
 Cream fat and sugar together, add beaten egg and heat alternately, about one-third of each at a time. Beat the batter thoroughly after all flour and liquid have been added. Vanilla may be added during this beating. Last of all scatter the baking powder over the surface of the batter and fold it in lightly with six or eight motions of the spoon so as to get it thoroughly mixed with every part of the batter. Do not beat the batter after adding the baking powder but turn it at once into a cake pan and bake.

This cake may be baked as cup cakes in muffin pans, or in layers, or in a loaf. If it is baked as a loaf of the size given above it should be put into a very slow oven, which is allowed to warm up gradually (280 to 375 degrees F. for one hour is suitable even temperature). At the first trial one is more sure of success in baking the small cakes than the loaf.

The cake can be put together by other methods than the one described above. Any approved method may be selected, but the two points which give the most difficulty are the too vigorous beating of the batter after the baking powder has been added, and baking the loaf in too hot an oven.

If directions in the above recipe are carefully followed the resulting cake should be light, of even texture and uniform grain, tender and moist. It should not be coarse and muffin-like in texture, nor dry and compact.

Handsome curtains can be made of good material.

Soak handkerchiefs in a pail of salt and water before putting them into the ordinary wash water.

If you need to keep cheese any length of time, you may prevent mold from appearing on the cut surface by coating it thinly with butter.

When whisking an egg, be sure the basin, knife, etc. are perfectly dry and then you will have no difficulty in getting it to froth.

GRAIN SAMPLING DEVICE IS MADE

Anyone in United States May Make and Use It Without Payment of Royalty.

QUITE EASILY CONSTRUCTED

Sample of Grain Is Evenly Divided and One-Half Is as Representative of Whole Original Sample as the Other.

A device with which a sample of grain, to be used in grading a given lot, can be evenly divided so that one-half will be as representative as the whole original sample, has been designed and patented by the United States department of agriculture, and anyone in the United States is free to make and use it without the payment of a royalty.

A representative sample of a given lot or shipment of grain which is secured by means of a probe, usually has to be divided into smaller portions for one or more of the tests to be applied in determining its grade. Haphazard reduction of the size of the sample has been found wholly unreliable, and consequently the device shown in the accompanying photographs, known as a Modified Boerner Sampler, has recently been put out by the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture. It is similar in principle to a sampler designed by the bureau a year or two ago, but is so designed that it can easily be constructed of block tin or brass by any tinsmith at about one-third the cost of the original.

Working of Device.

The sampler is cylindrical and stands about thirty inches. The sample to be halved is poured into a hopper at the top, which is emptied by pulling a lever that removes a cap over the lower end of the hopper. As the grain flows downward it strikes the apex of a baffle, in the form of a cone.

Encircling the base of this cone are a series of small chutes whose distance apart is exactly the width of these openings. Half of the grain flows in these chutes, and half between them. The latter portion flows directly into the uppermost of two pans placed one above the other at the base of the sampler. The half falling into the chutes is diverted into a funnel, the lower end of which leads to a protected opening in the center of the upper pan, thereby permitting this half of the grain to flow into the lower pan. In this fashion the original sample is evenly divided into two parts, one of which is certain to be as representative of the original lot as is the other.

Standard Equipment.

One of the duties of the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, is to administer the United States grain standards act, and because it desires to make standard equipment for grain grading easily obtainable by all dealers, country as well as city, the bureau has devised this comparatively inexpensive apparatus to take the place of the more expensive Boerner sampling device. The sampler and a few other pieces of apparatus are all that are required for grading grain, according to practice recommended by the United States department of agriculture.

DEEP PULVERIZING OF SOIL

Plants Will Not Thrive If Soil Is Coarse and Lumpy Just Below the Surface.

Few gardeners realize the importance of pulverizing the soil as deeply as it is plowed. No matter how perfectly the surface is prepared, if the soil is coarse and lumpy below the plants will not thrive. Large air spaces in the soil are a detriment, but a large number of very small air spaces in the soil are a benefit.

FARMERS ORGANIZED FOR SELLING STOCK

One Example of Help Given by County Agent.

Farm Bureau Marketing Association Formed in California to Dispose of Hogs—System Applicable to Other Products.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Selling live stock by auction, a plan started in Kern county, California, in 1917, has now spread through a considerable area of the interior of the state, especially where large numbers of hogs are grown. Last year seven counties—Kern, Kings, Merced, Madera, Stanislaus, Tulare and Fresno—formed the California Farm Bureau Marketing association and joined in conducting auction sales. This association employed a manager and assistant manager who were responsible for the success of the sales. In addition, each county farm bureau has a committee in charge of the sales locally. Auction sales were also held in San Joaquin and Shasta counties. It is expected that this system will expand throughout the state during the coming year and that it will prove applicable to other products which are capable of standardization.

The business last year included 183 auction sales at which 543 carloads of live stock were sold for $1,790,330.73. It is estimated that the sales brought a direct increased return to the farmers of $169,346.97 over the prices the stock would have brought otherwise.

This is but one example of the help given by the county agent in organizing farmers for selling live stock. One hundred and three county agents in 19 states report this service as an important feature of the work last year. Furthermore, 133 county agents in 14 states report that they assisted in organizing live-stock shipping associations in their counties.

TOMATO TRELLIS IS USEFUL

Nothing Better Than Hinged Arrangement Shown in Illustration—Is Easily Made.

The following description of a support for tomato vines is taken from Suburban Life. For supporting tomato plants, in the small suburban garden, there is nothing better than the hinged tomato trellis—a tent-shaped structure, easily made at home. Take four wooden strips, 2 by 1 inch and about four feet long. Place each pair of them together, at one end, and hinge them with two strips ten feet long. These two long strips form the ridge-pole of the trellis, so to speak. Nail several other ten-foot strips across each side of the tent-like structure and the trellis is completed.

The hinged top of the trellis, as shown on the diagram and marked H, permits it to be spread the exact width of the row, or it may be spread widely so that the plants in two rows may be supported. When not in use, the trellis may be closed up and kept with the garden tools.

ESSENTIALS TO GARDEN SITE

Certain Amount of Sunlight, Fairly Fertile Soil and Cool Drainage—Other Points.

There are three essentials to the garden site, experience has shown. They are:

Sunlight at least six hours a day; a soil sufficiently fertile for weeds to grow upon it; sufficient drainage, either natural or artificial, to prevent flooding or excessive moisture.

If a site is notably deficient in any of these three essential characteristics, it is not suited for garden purposes unless the fault can be corrected.

If one is fortunate enough to be able to choose among several possible locations, the New York state college at Ithaca suggests it may be well to consider the following points.

Nearness to the house for convenience in working the garden and in gathering the products and, in the case of a town garden, for protection against trespass and theft.

A water supply to insure against drought.

A gentle south or southeast slope.

A windbreak to the north.

A good, rich loam, that is, a mixture of sand and clay with plenty of humus or decomposed plant material. Fertility and abundant humus are generally indicated by a dark color of the soil.

MILKWEED SHOOTS ARE GOOD

Cut Just as They Come Through Ground They Are Crisp and Tender—Make Excellent Dish.

It may not be known to many farmers that the young milkweed shoots are edible, that when cut just as they come through the ground while still white, crisp and tender and cooked like asparagus, they make an excellent dish.

MURDER REVEL YIELDS EIGHT DEAD

Hatchet Weapon Used in Wholesale Killing on Dakota Farm.

Turtle Lake, N. D.—Eight persons were found dead at the farm home of Jacob Wolf, three miles north of here, the victims of a mysterious murder. The dead:

Jacob Wolf and his wife; their five daughters, Bertha, aged thirteen; Edna, eight; Mary, ten; Lydia, five, and Martha, four, and Jake Hofer, who was employed on the farm.

Indications are that the crime was committed in the kitchen of the Wolf home, and that the weapon used was a hatchet. The bodies of the mother, three daughters and the hired man were thrown into the cellar by the slayer or slayers, and those of the father and two daughters put in a cowshed and barn and covered with hay.

When John Kraft, a neighbor, entered a barn on the farm he found the bodies of Wolf and one of his daughters lying on the floor. Not seeing the rest of the family, Kraft went down into the basement, where he found the bodies of Mrs. Wolf, the other children, and the farm laborer. Later the eighth body was found.

There was no evidence of any struggle, and as Wolf is not known to have had any enemies, the sheriff's office is unable to offer any theory for the tragedy.

The only member of the family that escaped was the youngest child, a baby eight months old. The child was almost famished, indicating that the murders had been committed at least 24 hours before.

Wolf was about forty-five years old, and was popular in Turtle Lake.

NO HIDDEN TREASURE THERE

United States Marines Searched Ocean Floor, Found Nothing; That Settles It.

Savannah.—If there is any hidden treasure lying on the bottom of the ocean near Parris Island, and legend says there is, United States marine searchers have given up hopes of finding it.

Bell divers of the marine corps are operating off the coast of the island, in an attempt to salvage boxes, metal and odds and ends of cargoes lost overboard from vessels during the last few years. This is a side line for the marines, who so far have been satisfied with patrolling the land, sea and air, and have never gone in for deep-sea diving.

Negro residents of this vicinity have faith in an old-time myth that there is hidden treasure on or near the island, supposed to have been left by Jean La Fitte, the pirate, on one of his coastwise wanderings. The "sub" marines say the legend won't hold water.

Lady Love Profiteer Calls Victims Gorillas

Vancouver, Wash.—Opposite the name of Babe Lewandawski on the police blotter is the word "profiteer."

Miss Lewandawski reached Vancouver recently from Detroit. She inquired for Jack Sullivan, saying she had come to marry him, the climax of a mail order courtship. When Sullivan hove into sight the lady burst into violent tears. When three other suitors appeared all saying they had sent Babe $125 for expenses to Vancouver, Miss Lewandawski became hysterical.

"I thought I could pick one out of the lot," she wept. "But look—somebody left the gorilla cage open."

The quartet had her arrested.

Girl Chased Man Who Hugged Her, New York.—After a strange man embraced her in the hallway of the factory where she is employed, Miss Esther Miller, seventeen years old, formed a posse of employees and they caught him after a chase of several blocks.

Harvest time is approaching. We see the foul weeds at their worst as they shoot above the grain at this time of year. But come out next Sunday evening at 6:30 to the M. E. Church, and in the discussion of the topic "The Results of Our Words and Deeds" hear how we may bear better fruit than that of sin, and help us by your own experiences. Ile of Napoleon's Exile.
False conceptions prevail of St. Helena, where Napoleon lived and died after his defeat and humiliation at Waterloo. It is credited with being a most ugly island. Exactly the opposite is the case. Not only is it not a rock, but a very beautiful, well-wooded and well-watered island, and also, on the whole, if one had to choose the most perfect climate existing anywhere in this world, the prize would have to go to St. Helena, and especially that part in which Longwood (Napoleon's residence) is situated.

"DOUBLE PERSONALITY."

SYNOPSIS.—Alighting from a train at Denver a well-dressed traveler is familiarly accosted by a man about his own age. The traveler ignores the advance. A few minutes later he is greeted as "Will" by an elderly lady and gentleman, who stop their auto to speak. He imagines it a case of mistaken identity and announces himself as "Richard Clinton," on his way to the coast. The couple appear greatly surprised, and learning he is to be in town until midnight, the lady, introducing herself as Mrs. Kirkland, and her husband as Doctor Kirkland, invites him to dinner, explaining the action by his truly remarkable resemblance to a friend of theirs. He accepts. At the Kirkland home he meets a young lady who greets him as her fiancée. She is Ellen Kirkland, and plainly is greatly hurt by his assertion that he is "Richard Clinton."

"Miss Kirkland!" he begged. "Calm yourself. This—it is most unfortunate. Had you first seen your mother—had she explained to you—prepared you."

"Explained? Prepared?" "But I must insist, Miss Kirkland, that I—"

"He glanced past her and smiled with relief. 'Here is your mother.'"

The girl darted along the porch to clasp her mother's arm. "Mamma!" she appealed. "What is it? Tell me! Will insists he is not—not himself. It—it frightens me!"

"My dear," soothed Mrs. Kirkland, "there is no reason, none whatever. Had you been in your room—"

She smiled at the guest. "You will understand, Mr. Clinton, the resemblance being so absurdly close. The child is excited—not quite herself. So great a shock. If you will kindly excuse us a few minutes."

"I am very sorry," he said. "Perhaps it would be better if I should go." "Oh! no, no! Do not go!" hysterically cried the girl.

"Hush, dear," reproved her mother. "Mr. Clinton is not going. He is to stay and dine with us."

"If you really wish it," he assented. "Then you'll not go?" exclaimed the girl.

"Of course not, Ellen," said her mother. "Come in with me."

CHAPTER II.

Bonds.

Left alone on the porch the guest again faced the sunset. But the dazzling glories of red and gold were already fading into the gray of twilight. He looked absently at the blackened bulk of the mountains, his expression shifting between annoyance and amusement, curiosity and apprehension.

He was still evidently considering the situation when a small touring car came whirling along the street in the clear twilight. It stopped before the house and Doctor Kirkland sprang out with a briskness unusual in a gentleman of his portly figure. He came up to the porch, his alert gaze on the lone guest.

"What's this?" he demanded. "Don't mean to say you've been left all this time to entertain yourself?"

"Not all the time," smilingly replied the guest. "On the contrary Miss Kirkland and I—" His look became grave. "Much to my regret Miss Kirkland made the same mistake as Mrs. Kirkland and yourself."

"Naturally. But if her mother—" "She had gone in when Miss Kirkland came around the house. I regret that my insistence on my identity rather overcame her."

"Not surprising, when she is engaged to you, is it?" "Engaged to me! You mean of course—"

"To your double, to Will Lowrie," explained the physician. "Do you need further proof that you are his double?"

"No more. She was still quite positive, I fear, after all my attempts to convince her of the mistake. However, Mrs. Kirkland came, and no doubt has explained the mistake to her."

"Very likely," agreed the physician. "I would have gone had they not very kindly insisted that I must remain."

"You must." "It is very hospitable of you to insist. Still I do not wish to cause your daughter the slightest distress."

"Nothing would distress her more than—the physician considered the point—than to have you refuse our hospitality."

"That being so I am very glad to stay. I've been recalling the fact that men even of national prominence have doubles who are mistaken for them. My resemblance to Mr. Lowrie is not so strong as I at first thought."

"Not at all," replied Doctor Kirkland, his shrewd eyes twinkling. "The guest stepped into the reception hall, and found himself in a well-furnished, comfortable home. The rooms were bright with the mellow radiance of indirect electric lighting. The little housemaid appeared, to take the stairway to his room.

When he came down he found his host and hostess waiting for him in the drawing room. The doctor still wore his professional frock coat. As he rose to meet his guest the maid announced dinner. Miss Ellen was not with her parents.

Mrs. Kirkland chatted familiarly with Clinton as she led him into the dining room. She observed him look at the housemaid with amused expectancy.

"No," she remarked, quick to catch his thought. "Mary will not be calling you Mr. Lowrie. She was not with us when you—when Will left."

"And Miss Kirkland?" he asked. "Have you convinced her?"

The lady smiled the least bit forced. "Have no fear. Ellen now knows the truth."

"That is good. I can understand how it must have seemed to her. I wonder if you can realize my embarrassment? Think of a young lady mistaking one for her fiancé!"

"Good joke that," put in the physician. "How many kisses?"

"Karl!" reproved his wife. They entered the dining room, the lady indignant, her husband chuckling and the guest a trifle constrained. Ellen stood at the far side of the oval table arranging the lilies in the center. She was pale and her eyelids were slightly swollen. When she looked up and saw Clinton across from her she did not blush. If anything she became still more pale. He was quick to observe her appearance.

"I am very sorry, Miss Kirkland," he murmured. "It must have been quite a shock."

"You must not blame yourself," she replied. "It was simply that I did not understand. Now, you see, I am quite over my excitement." She smiled uncertainly at her father. "Between courses papa can give me a sedative suggestion."

"Do you really use suggestion in your practice?" Clinton inquired of the physician as they seated themselves.

"Suggestion—little else," replied Doctor Kirkland. "You must bear in mind my specialty. Not but what, in time, the entire profession will be using suggestion as promiscuously as the Christian Scientists."

"How the Scientists would be scandalized if they heard you!" said Mrs. Kirkland. "The slightest intimation that their treatment is related in any way to suggestion—"

"There is no matter; therefore everything is immaterial; therefore it is immaterial what they think," solemnly reasoned the physician.

"Isn't it?" queried Clinton. "It is not immaterial," his host flatly contradicted himself. "What they think—what anyone thinks—is exceedingly important."

"Not to our knowledge. Worry over their loss induced such alarming psychological conditions that the great specialist in charge of the sanitarium prescribed an absolute change. He has been temporarily cut off from everything related to his life here. The last report received by me was that he had been sent abroad in the care of one of the staff. Since then we have heard nothing."

"There is the saying, 'No news is good news,'" remarked Clinton. "If only we could believe that!" sighed Mrs. Kirkland. "Do you wonder that I was delighted when I saw you there at the depot, looking so strong and well?"

"Mistaking me for this unfortunate Mr. Lowrie," sympathetically replied Clinton.

The physician had drawn out his watch. "I must return to the sanitarium. If you can keep Mr. Clinton entertained I shall be back—soon—seven-thirty or eight."

He was up and away with his usual briskness. A few minutes later they left the table and went in to what Mrs. Kirkland aptly termed the living room. With a matter-of-course bearing Ellen at once seated herself at the piano and began to search in her music cabinet. Mrs. Kirkland excused herself to Clinton and went out a side doorway. Owing to the twisted corner of a rug the door did not close fast. A draft swung it ajar as Clinton drew back farther from the girl and seated himself on the chair at the far side of the doorway.

He leaned back at ease and quietly took in the tasteful unpretentiousness of his surroundings. Ellen continued her search through the thick piles of music in the cabinet. She had made three or four selections and was looking for others when the muffled, broken murmur of a woman's voice came to Clinton through the narrow opening of the door. He was not in a position to see through the crack, but there could be no doubt that Mrs. Kirkland was at a telephone some distance away, probably at the end of a narrow passage.

Kirkland, "such cases are far more numerous than is commonly known. As I informed you, everybody is strictly speaking, more or less insane."

"There he goes again!" put in Mrs. Kirkland. "We're all not quite ourselves!"

"Some are much less so than others," added her husband. "A few are not themselves at all. By the way, Mr. Clinton—to change the subject—I am interested in a small psychological experiment. It is to have one state, without pausing to think, the ideas suggested to him by a given word."

"None whatever." Mrs. Kirkland and Ellen exchanged swift glances.

"The physician smiled blandly. "Then if you'll answer quickly the ideas suggested by—bonds."

As he spoke the word he eyed his guest with intense keenness. The ladies involuntarily leaned forward to catch the answer. Clinton smiled and responded without a trace of hesitancy: "Bonds—cash, bank accounts, trip to California—"

"Enough, thank you," interrupted the physician, his eyes twinkling with complacent self-satisfaction. "If there is any other word you wish to try I shall be pleased to answer," said the guest.

"No, that was the only one. My real purpose in using it was to fish in your subconsciousness."

"And you caught—"

"Merely a confirmation of certain optical impressions."

"May I ask why you spoke of bonds?"

Mrs. Kirkland interposed. "I fear that you would hardly be interested in the matter."

"Why, mamma," said Ellen, "how could he be other than interested?"

"Perhaps, perhaps," qualified her father. He looked at the guest with a shrewd glance. "It is rather a private matter, Mr. Clinton."

"Then of course— Pardon my curiosity."

"We can trust you not to repeat what I tell you. Shortly before Will—Mr. Lowrie—accepted my advice to go to the sanitarium he was sent to Pueblo to negotiate for an issue of bonds. The parties whom he represented were allotted one hundred thousand dollars of the issue, and the bonds in that amount were delivered over to him. Soon afterward Charlie Benn, who had run down to Pueblo in his touring car, came upon Will sitting in the station grounds. He had missed his train. Charlie took him in, suitcase and all, and brought him to Denver. Late that evening he came home with his suitcase but without the bonds. He had not turned them in at the bank, and he could not remember what he had done with them. Except for a vague recollection of riding with Charlie and of wandering through City park, he could remember nothing since early that morning. The bonds have not yet been found."

"Has he never recalled what he did with them?"

"Not to our knowledge. Worry over their loss induced such alarming psychological conditions that the great specialist in charge of the sanitarium prescribed an absolute change. He has been temporarily cut off from everything related to his life here. The last report received by me was that he had been sent abroad in the care of one of the staff. Since then we have heard nothing."

"There is the saying, 'No news is good news,'" remarked Clinton. "If only we could believe that!" sighed Mrs. Kirkland. "Do you wonder that I was delighted when I saw you there at the depot, looking so strong and well?"

"Mistaking me for this unfortunate Mr. Lowrie," sympathetically replied Clinton.

The physician had drawn out his watch. "I must return to the sanitarium. If you can keep Mr. Clinton entertained I shall be back—soon—seven-thirty or eight."

He was up and away with his usual briskness. A few minutes later they left the table and went in to what Mrs. Kirkland aptly termed the living room. With a matter-of-course bearing Ellen at once seated herself at the piano and began to search in her music cabinet. Mrs. Kirkland excused herself to Clinton and went out a side doorway. Owing to the twisted corner of a rug the door did not close fast. A draft swung it ajar as Clinton drew back farther from the girl and seated himself on the chair at the far side of the doorway.

He leaned back at ease and quietly took in the tasteful unpretentiousness of his surroundings. Ellen continued her search through the thick piles of music in the cabinet. She had made three or four selections and was looking for others when the muffled, broken murmur of a woman's voice came to Clinton through the narrow opening of the door. He was not in a position to see through the crack, but there could be no doubt that Mrs. Kirkland was at a telephone some distance away, probably at the end of a narrow passage.

Only disjointed fragments of her talk were audible:

"Amy—alone?—How shall I tell you!—this afternoon—dined—No, no!—looks splendid, but— not Will. Not the slightest remembrance—must not despair—Yes, I'm certain, if anyone can cure him—be prepared—believes himself—Clinton—"

As he realized that he was listening to talk that had reference to himself, the young man thrust out his hand to close the door. The sound attracted the attention of Ellen. She looked about at the guest, the corners of her perfect mouth drooping.

She bent over the keyboard and began to play something soft and low that ran into eerie minor notes. He stood at the corner of the piano gazing down at her with a look of frank enjoyment. She was undoubtedly beautiful and she played well.

When she looked up her eyes were suffused with tears, but there was eager expectancy in her glance. In his eyes was only the politely reserved admiration of a stranger. Her lips began to quiver. A tear overflowed and ran down her white cheek. She bowed forward with her face in her hands, sobbing in an uncontrollable outburst of grief.

He was overcome with consternation. "Miss Kirkland! I—what can I have done? Believe me, I would not for anything—"

"It's—it's not what you've done!" she sobbed. "It's what you've not done!"

"What I've not done?" he asked. "If only you'll tell me!"

"You don't even remember it—our favorite!" she cried.

"You mean—surely you cannot expect me to remember something I never— It's not possible you still believe that I am not myself."

"But it's—it's you who deny it; you who—"

She looked up at him, her tear-streaming eyes full of pitiful entreaty. "Oh, Will! won't you please try to remember who you are?"

"Miss Kirkland, pray be calm. I assure you that I am Richard Clinton. I can easily prove that I—"

"Look!" she interrupted, holding up her slender left hand, on which sparkled the diamond of a single ring. "Try to think! You must remember; you cannot have forgotten about—"

A rosy blush swept down over her pale face—"about when you put it there, dear!"

About her slender neck was a fine gold chain, from which an oval locket hung pendant on her heaving bosom. She caught up the locket and touched the spring. The jeweled front of the locket opened. Within was a miniature painting.

"Who is this—tell me, who is this?" she asked.

To see the miniature it was necessary that he should bend down close to the blushing girl. His own face flushed with embarrassment, but he seated himself on the end of the bench and leaned over with his square jaw beside her rounded white shoulder. Had he looked only at the girl it would not have been surprising.

As it chanced, however, the young man glanced first at the miniature. At once the incredulity of his expression gave place to surprise and perplexity. He leaned over for a closer look, his cheek only a few inches from the cheek of the girl. Except for a certain pinched look about the nose the absence of the mustache and a marked thinness of jaw and cheek, the face in the miniature was his own—it was his face as it might look in ill health.

The young man drew back, his face clearly expressive of his astonishment. "It is a—most remarkable resemblance, Miss Kirkland. I no longer wonder that you were deceived at the first, and this continued delusion on your part can, no doubt, be accounted for by the intensity of that first impression."

"You still refuse to believe!" she cried. "You do not recognize your own picture! Can nothing make you remember?"

NOTE TELLS PURPOSE

Suicide Deliberately Planned to Open Up New Future to Youthful Bride With Whom He Had Eloped.

Walsenburg, Colo.—His hand clutching a scrawled note, the import of which was his suicide had been planned in order to open a new future for his nineteen-year-old wife and alleged niece, the body of Dr. K. L. Clock, fifty-seven years old, company physician for the Victor-American coal mine at Ravenwood, three miles south of here, was found in his tightly sealed room. The suicide had ended his life with chloroform.

Note to Child Wife.

To his child wife, Catherine, who, according to report, he had hypnotized into marriage a little more than a year ago, in Des Moines, Iowa, and who is now attending a private boarding school in Pueblo, his last communication was left.

The note follows: "Dearest Catherine—I promised you I would postpone this act, but I am breaking it today as I think it is the best for you. Am leaving a check for the balance of my bank account after expenses of simple burial held here. Please have no ceremony. You will understand, as we have talked this matter over pertaining to your future. With my removal the matter can be more readily solved. I am to blame for mismanagement of this affair and ask your forgiveness. I asked Mr. Pendleton to assist in settling my financial matters if I signed the initial 'K'—so here goes. Goodby, I hope to meet you in heaven."

Physician Had Tortuous Past.

Upon hearing of the physician's death Mrs. Julia Clock, living in Fort Lupton, asserted that he had been involved in various love tangles, had been married at least three times. She said that she had been divorced from

He then went to California, where he conducted a drug business for a year and a half. Later he changed his residence to Illinois, where he married Dr. Martha Haywood.

His marriage with Dr. Haywood, however, was of but three weeks' duration and a rupture occurred, after which they separated, she asserted.

After unsuccessful attempts to get into the army, Dr. Clock went to Des Moines, where he became infatuated with his nineteen-year-old niece, Catherine Clock, and later eloped with her. He then went to Walsenburg, where he was given the position of company physician with the mining company.

Friends believe that incompatibility of the middle-aged man and his youthful bride led to an agreement by which he was to put himself out of the way that she might marry someone nearer her own age.

Northeast Curry, Me.—The piercing cry of the wildcat strikes terror in the hearts of some children and even adults, but not that of Louise Smith, nine years old, of this town. This little huntress trapped one of these animals bigger than herself in the woods near here, beat him over the head with a club until he forever ceased to snarl and then carried him home on her back, all unaided.

Louise is 4 feet 3 inches in height. The cat measured 4 feet 7 inches and weighed 36 pounds.

The Customer: "Well, I am used to Triner's Bitter Wine and can depend on it. I would rather pay more for Triner's than for any other substitute." Take example from this man who knows the eminent medicinal value of Triner's remedy. Insist upon Triner's also in other cases (Triner's Angelica Bitter Tonic, Triner's Liniment, Triner's Cough Sedative, Triner's Antiputrin, Triner's Red Pills), and your druggist or dealer in medicines will give you the genuine preparation. ### Little Jimmy's Answer to Leading Question Distinctly in Nature of a Compromise.

Annt Marie was very good, indeed, to her five-year-old nephew, James. She gave him everything his little heart desired. But still she was often inclined to tease him and whenever he showed resentment she teased him still further by threatening to take away something she had given him.

The other night she began her usual teasing, taking for the subject herself and her charms. "Why, Jimmie thinks I'm a wonder," and she turned to little James provokingly and asked: "Don't you think I'm pretty? Don't you think I'm good?"

The little fellow was disturbed. He wanted to tell the truth, and he also wanted to keep auntie's favor. Finally he found his tongue. "Well, I do think you're pretty good," he said truthfully.

At one of the western camps a rookie had been made the victim of so much gulling that he had long since given up the idea of taking any statements seriously. One night while on guard a tall figure loomed out of the darkness.

"Who's there?" challenged the recruit.

"Major Moses," replied the figure. "Glad to meet you, Mose. Advance and give the Ten Commandments."—American Legion Weekly.

Analyzing Waste Food.

America leads all other nations in analyzing the value of the foods we eat and the best way to make them nourish us. Scientists have found that we often get little of the real value of our foods so that a great deal goes to waste. It is exactly as if you took just one squeeze out of a juicy orange and then threw it away. The new science has been developed largely since the outbreak of the war. Many interesting experiments have been carried on in Teachers' college in New York which are being watched by scientists all over the world. Some tests are made with white rats, others with human beings. The war department has utilized this information in fixing the rations for our soldiers. In a few years people will look back upon our wasteful, unscientific habits of today with amazement.—Boys' Life.

History of Petroleum Industry.

The story of the petroleum industry in the United States dates back to 1859, when, on August 28, oil was struck in the Drake well, near Titusville, in northwestern Pennsylvania. When the pumping began the oil flowed in a tiny stream of 40, and later only 15, barrels a day; 5,000,000 barrels were produced in 1870, 26,000,000 in 1880, 45,000,000 in 1890, 63,000,000 in 1900, 209,000,000 in 1910 and 353,000,000 barrels in 1913. The output last year is perhaps 30,000,000 barrels in excess of the 1913 record.

Tercentenary of the Pilgrim Fathers

Plymouth Rock

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN.

CONGRESS has passed a joint resolution authorizing an appropriation for the participation of the United States in the observance of the three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims at Provincetown and Plymouth, Mass. This joint resolution is substantially as follows: Resolved, etc., That there is hereby established a commission to be known as the United States Pilgrim Tercentenary commission (hereinafter referred to as the commission) and to be composed of 11 commissioners as follows: Three persons to be appointed by the president of the United States; four senators by the president of the senate; and four members of the house of representatives by the speaker of the house of representatives. The commissioners shall serve without compensation and shall elect a chairman from among their number.

Section 2. (a) That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated the sum of $400,000 to be expended by the commission in accordance with the provisions of this resolution.

(b) One hundred thousand dollars of such appropriation may be expended under the direction of the commission and in co-operation with the Provincetown tercentenary commission, the town of Provincetown, Mass., and such other agencies, public or private, as the commission may determine for the purpose of completing and improving the approaches to and the grounds of the Pilgrim monument at Provincetown, Mass.; of erecting suitably inscribed tablets or markers in the towns of Provincetown, Truro, Wellfleet and Eastham, and for other work in connection therewith, in accordance with plans adopted by the Provincetown tercentenary commission.

(c) Three hundred thousand dollars of such appropriation may be expended under the direction of the commission and in co-operation with the Pilgrim tercentenary commission, the town of Plymouth, Mass., and such other agencies, public or private, as the commission may determine for the purpose of restoring and improving Plymouth Rock and the shore line of the locality adjacent thereto, of protecting and improving the burial grounds upon Coles Hill and Burial Hill in Plymouth, Mass.; of erecting tablets or markers at appropriate places in the Old Colony, and for other work in connection therewith, in accordance with plans adopted by the Pilgrim tercentenary commission.

Section 3. That no expenditure shall be made or authorized by the commission until the Commonwealth of Massachusetts has, as determined by the commission, expended or contracted to expend the sum of $300,000 for the same purposes for which the commission may under the provisions of this resolution make expenditures.

Massachusetts has already appropriated the money specified in the resolution and Plymouth and other cities and scores of organizations have raised additional funds. So the resolution is effective.

Heretofore the nation has participated in commemorating great historical events by contributing a sum of money to states and associations which have conducted fairs and expositions. The people of Massachusetts, however, have decided through a commission appointed by the legislature rather to celebrate the tercentenary by making public improvements. Of course, there will be a wide celebration—international, in fact—by historical exercises, parades and pageants. These will be held for the most part, as was set forth in the debate with the house, during the summer of 1921. The Massachusetts commission began its work five years ago, but the Great War interfered with its plans for a 1920 celebration.

While it is to be hoped that every good American knows the words "Plymouth Rock" and "Landing of the Pilgrims" and what they should mean to all Americans, it is quite likely that many do not know just where Provincetown comes in. Very briefly the story is this:

The Mayflower sailed from Plymouth, England, September 6, 1620, for Virginia. It was driven north by storms. It then made an attempt to reach the mouth of the Hudson river (New York). This failed and the Mayflower finally sought shelter inside of Cape Cod, that gigantic sand spit that extends like the blade of a sickle from the Massachusetts coast into the Atlantic. Here, in Cape Cod harbor, November 11, 1620, (old style)—which is November 21, according to the new style—the Pilgrims, in the cabin of the Mayflower drew up and signed the famous "Mayflower Compact." And on this date they first set foot on American soil.

This landing was at Provincetown, which occupies the extreme end of Cape Cod. The records of the Pilgrims show that they put in the time until December 21 exploring the country, the Mayflower remaining at anchor. Finally, on December 21, ten men in the Mayflower's small boat landed on Plymouth Rock. They returned and reported that they had found a place suitable for a permanent home. On or about December 26 the Mayflower arrived off Plymouth and the landing was made.

Restoration of the Plymouth shore about Plymouth Rock to its original appearance at the time when the Pilgrims landed in 1620 has been decided upon. Wharves, fish houses, sheds and other structures disfigure the present shore line. The contemplated change will embrace all the water front from Town brook on the south to Brewster street on the north.

This rediscovered shore will be established by filling in and creating a new rocky shore line. The base of the rock still rests upon the sea level, at high water mark, and will so remain, but its smaller part, split off in 1774 and several times transported about the town before being placed under the present canopy, will be lowered upon the base from which it was separated, and the parts united.

The early graves of the Pilgrims, who died the first winter, and whose bones are now lying under a much-traveled street, will be preserved by the removal of two or three houses and the changing of the line of the street. The spot will be marked by a suitable memorial.

The senate passed the resolution practically without debate. In the house there was debate for an hour. Much of what was said adds neither to the knowledge nor happiness of the American people. There were, however, some things said that are worth reproduction. For example, Mr. Gullivan read into the record the following excerpt from the report of Mr. Luce of Massachusetts in presenting the resolution, characterizing it as a "classic":

"This resolution contemplates that the nation shall play a fitting part in the commemoration of an epoch-making voyage.

"Three hundred years ago a small company of devout men and women, upheld by conscience and inspired by faith, braved the dangers of the sea in order that in a new world they might found a Christian commonwealth.

"They landed first at the end of Cape Cod, where now is Provincetown. There in the cabin of the Mayflower they signed a compact that has taken its place among the momentous documents of history, for then Englishmen first joined by mutual covenant to form a civil body politic. Because this was the germ of the idea that was to grow into the Constitution of the United States every American owes gratitude to its authors and should honor the spot where it was conceived.

"The landing of the Pilgrims symbolizes one of the world's great adventures. The hardships of the voyage, the perils of the wilderness, the ravages of that dreadful winter—these are but circumstances that frame the picture. Acting for the nation, our concern today with the solemn story is that it rivets the imagination on the noblest phases of human nature—lofty purpose, dauntless courage, steadfast endurance, pious enthusiasm, holy faith.

live their respect for those institutions, spread understanding of what they mean, insure their safety, encourage their growth. Never has it been more important for us to teach the lesson of liberty through law, of sacrifice for common gain, of righteousness for its own sake."

Mr. Luce, in his remarks during debate, brought out this noteworthy point:

"One feature of their first year or two here that is not commonly known would be of especial value to bring to the knowledge of all the people of the land by this commemoration. They attempted a communistic settlement. Communism, the cry of the hour by so many radicals—communism at the very outset of the foundation of New England had its full and fair test, and communism failed. Only when they had abandoned the communistic idea and secured an agreement that each should enjoy the fruits of his labors, that what each might wrench from the stubborn soil should be the reward of his efforts, that their fields and homes should no longer be held in common, only then was the colony put upon a basis of possible permanence."

A mistake commonly made by people who should know better is that they make no distinction between Pilgrims and Puritans. There is all the difference in the world. Mr. Fess of Ohio touched upon this difference when he said:

"I want to note one general error in history when the conduct of early New England is a matter of discussion: We usually speak of the persecution that was exercised in this part of the country, especially in Massachusetts, and we identify it with this particular Massachusetts settlement. That is not accurate. That is not historic. The persecution that caused a good many persons to leave the Massachusetts colony was not by the Pilgrims. The Massachusetts colony of 1628 was not identical with the Pilgrims of 1620. The persecution was by the Puritans, and the historian will not make the mistake of confusing the Pilgrim with the Puritan, although the latter term was generally applied to all the people who landed. However, they were two entirely different peoples."

Mr. Fess might have gone farther and made the difference between the Pilgrims and the Puritans more plain: The main distinction is religious, and is aptly illustrated by the old saying, "The Puritan's fell first upon their knees and then upon the aborigines."

Which is to say: The Pilgrims came to America to worship after their own fashion and cared nothing how others might worship. The Puritans came here to worship after their own fashion and to make everybody else worship after that fashion.

Moreover: The Pilgrims came first in 1620. They never were very many. They did little colonizing. They are not the people who settled New England. They were passive rather than aggressive. They were "separatists." They had separated from the Church of England and had no farther concern with the established church of their native land.

The Puritans began to arrive in 1630. In the next decade they came by tens of thousands. The Puritans never separated from the Church of England. Instead they boasted that they brought it with them to reform it. Hence the "persecution" of which Mr. Fess speaks. The Puritans would have none who would not worship as they themselves did. They converted the Indians. They executed and whipped Quakers and drove out Baptists, Episcopalians and others. Their "persecutions" drove Roger Williams to Rhode Island to found Providence, and Hooker and Davenport to Connecticut to found Hartford and New Haven. They even split up among themselves; about every generation a church would find itself divided into factions, whereupon one faction would leave and found a new town and church.

It is from the Puritans that we get the celebrated "Puritan conscience"; not from the Pilgrims.

However, from a political viewpoint the influence of the Pilgrims and Puritans was the same. The Pilgrims politically represented what the Puritans furthered. Out of these church settlements grew the town meeting and local self-government and later the constitutional supremacy idea of government.

In contrast with the Plymouth idea is the Jamestown idea—out of which ultimately came the doctrine of state rights.

It is interesting to note that today the state rights doctrine is by no means confined to the south, while the centralization of government idea is probably stronger in the south than in the north.

INVESTMENTS

In the present period of the adjustment of the country's industrial and commercial affairs it is well for investors to exercise the utmost caution in the selection of investments.

Investors should scan these securities very carefully. Where there is the least doubt, caution will dictate looking a little farther for an investment where safety and peace of mind are absolutely assured. Preferring to sacrifice a part of big income to a greater degree of safety, the conservative investor prospers to a larger extent in the end than the investor whose first thought is income, the quality of the security being a minor consideration.

Write for booklet, "Investment Steps," and for detail circulars describing the First Mortgage 6% Real Estate Serial Notes of $100 and $500 denominations we are offering and recommend as conservative, high-grade, safe investments.

The Mercantile Trust Company is a member of the Federal Reserve System, and by reason of such membership is under the supervision of the United States Government. This means that every loan we make, including "First Mortgage Real Estate Serial Loans," is subject to examination by Government Bank Examiners. These loans are also examined by the St. Louis Clearing House Bank Examiners and the official Bank Examiners of both the State of Missouri and the State of Illinois.

We particularly invite comparison between these loans and the average real estate mortgage loans, with reference to excellence of location, class of construction and actual (not estimated) income.

Delivery of notes purchased by non-residents will be made at our own risk to any bank or post office. Send for Circulars describing the First Mortgage 6% Real Estate Serial Notes we are now offering.

Frantic With Pain

Doan's However Brought Complete Recovery and Trouble Has Never Returned

"My kidneys were weakened by exposure in Alaska," says Hermann Schrader, 325 Park Ave., Hoboken, N. J., "and my misery at times became so great I thought I would lose my mind. I had terrible pains in my back, and a constant desire to urinate. My back felt as if it were in sections with each crushing against the other. Finally I was taken desperately ill. It seemed as if something were crushing out my life. Before long I passed a gravel stone the size of a pea. If the pain had been any more intense I think I would have died. I was having practically no flushing of the kidneys and my weight had reduced from 178 pounds to 125. The doctor told me I had gravel and small stones filling up the passages of the bladder. After all of this I began to use Doan's Kidney Pills and soon improved. In a short time I was well and my cure has lasted fifteen years. Today I am in perfect health."

Published For Cassius Poust,
Lawyer,
Sycamore, Ill.

Candidate for the Republican nomination for States Attorney
DeKalb County,
Ill.

TO THE VOTERS OF DEKALB COUNTY:

I want to be the next States Attorney of this county.

I have no slander for the present occupant of the office, or any other man who may seek the position. I ask your support on my merits, not on the demerits of another.

No man has ever been President of the United States more than two (2) terms; neither has any man ever been States Attorney of DeKalb County for more than two (2) terms. Hence I feel justified in becoming a candidate at this close of two terms of office by the present States Attorney.

I feel that I will make as good, if not a better, States Attorney than any this county has ever had.

I am independent of all factions, individuals, or combinations. The lawyers of this county believe me qualified.

I pledge faithful devotion to all the duties of the office, day or night, rain or shine; impartial administration of the law, and a square deal to every man no matter what his creed, color, politics, appearance or finances may be.

I will appreciate your vote, your voice and your support.
