THE TEACHER'S VIEW

OF THE TOWNSHIP HIGH SCHOOL PROPOSITION

EXPRESSED BY PROF. STOUT

What the Progressive, Ambitious Teachers Want is Better Schools—Not Concerned with Taxes

The mooted question in the matter of a township high school is the matter of taxes. The teacher is not particularly concerned in this matter for he seldom accumulates enough property to make his taxes very formidable no matter what the rate of taxation. What the ambitious, progressive teachers want is better schools. If he is circumscribed in the matter of funds as is the condition at present in Genoa his possibilities for running an ideal school are correspondingly limited. For many years the rate of school taxation in Genoa has been as high as it could be placed within the limit of the law, viz., two and one-half per cent. The school can be kept up to the present standard probably but the possibilities of advancement are not great.

While our present school will, it is thought, measure up well with the standard of any town of its size in the state, yet in the opinion of the writer there are many grievous faults in our high school which can only be corrected by a greater outlay of money for high school purposes. Our greatest obstacle is the matter of electives. For illustration, as our course is now laid out practically everyone who attends must in order to graduate, take more or less of Latin. Latin no doubt has a value for some but not for others. The reason all of our pupils have to take Latin is because we have nothing else to offer in the place of it. Our high school course as at present constructed has no electives to offer in the first two years. In the third and fourth years German is now offered instead of Latin. Also in the fourth year a year of commercial work is offered. These electives just named are an immense help for German has a far greater value for some than for others, and also has greater value for some than has the Latin.

If we could offer a commercial course of merit including typewriting and stenography we could save many dollars to the community and at the same time solve the question of elective work and it would increase the attendance twenty-five per cent. That would just add that much more value to the community.

Another place where we are extremely weak is that we are not training the hands of our pupils. We are endeavoring to cultivate their minds as best we can but the most of these people, both boys and girls, will ultimately do most of their life's work with their hands. The time is rapidly coming when the general public will demand of the high school that the boy be taught some useful trade or at least the rudiments thereof. Also that the girl be taught the reasons for some of the things that the good housewife does or doesn't do.

We have boys right in our own high school that do not take an interest in the book work given them. It is very hard to get them to get right down and "bone" on a book. If we only had a department of manual training where we could set these same boys at work with a hammer and saw and have him making something useful it would be almost as hard to get him to quit work as it is now to get him at it. The evidence of this crops out in many ways. This is important. These same boys who do not like to work at their books are the most willing and able to do any little odd job about the building that their teachers ask. In other words, a boy who has to be driven to get his Latin conjugation will almost fight for the opportunity to hang a picture for his teacher if there is such a piece of work to be done. It is said there are tramps in this country that can read their Virgil with ease but that the number of tramps who have learned a useful trade are scarce.

With a township high school manual training courses and commercial courses and domestic science are not only possible but probable. The farming portion of our community which is largely antagonistic to a township high school, would, with such courses as the above established, soon feel a just pride in such a school and as one after another of the rising generation from the rural districts completed the splendid courses offered we would see all objections fade away as the dew before the morning sun. This is the history of other township schools, why shouldn't it be so of ours? The community life would be elevated, many pupils who now get no high school education would get a better one than it is now possible to offer, and the school would be not only the pride of the village but of the whole township as well. MURDERERS EXPIATE CRIME

Kingston Man's Telegram did Not Stop Hanging

Just before the hanging of the two murderers in Chicago last week Jailer Whitman received a telegram ordering him to stop the hanging of the two criminals as the conviction was not legal. The message did not seem to have the desired effect for not long after something dropped.

The Chicago papers Saturday stated that the telegram was sent by a man from Genoa to Chief Deputy Sheriff Peters. Such was not the case, however. It is true that the message was sent from the Genoa station, but by a man named Young who resides near Henrietta in Kingston township. He issued the message at the depot in this city shortly after ten o'clock Friday morning and made Operator Canavan get down and dig in order to save the two convicts.

This is not the first time Young has shown his displeasure with the actions of a court or jury.

VALENTINE PARTY

Miss Marjorie Rowen Entertains a Number of Friends

Miss Marjorie Rowen entertained a number of friends at her home last Wednesday evening, the event being in the nature of a valentine party. The house was decorated with hearts, a Cupid's art gallery being an interesting feature. The game of "hunt your fortune" caused no end of amusement.

At eleven o'clock refreshments were served, the party breaking up at 11:30. The following were present: Misses Marjorie Rowen, Louise Stewart, Sabie Leonard, Eva Sager, Zada Corson and Margaret Hutchison. Messrs. Fred Browne, Floyd Stevens, Carl Harvey, Lawrence Kiernan and Abraham Crawford.

Booklet on Fairyland

The artistic booklet on the fairyland of California resorts issued to-day by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway in the interest of its Overland Limited service surpasses anything ever attempted by a western railway. In beauty of design, wealth of color and shading and excellence of half-tone work the pamphlet easily is the feature of the season's advertising. The production is limited, and the distribution soon will end unless the company decides to prepare a second edition. Local artists contributed some of the color groups and scenes.—Chicago Evening Post. Sent to any address for six cents' postage. F. A. Miller, General Passenger Agent, C. M. & St. P. Ry., Chicago.

Card of Thanks

From this community $61.55 was sent to Mr. C. Stiegler at Bismark, Alberta, Canada. He received the money and sends his heart felt thanks for the generous gift, saying it was a help just in time, delivering him from great need and distress.

FOR BETTER DAIRIES

EXHIBITION BEING HELD AT COLISEUM IN CHICAGO

GREAT CROWDS ATTENDING

C. E. Lee of the University of Illinois Blames Farmers for Impure Butter on Market

Many dairymen and butter-makers from all parts of the county are attending the sessions of the National Creamery Butter Makers' association at the Coliseum in Chicago this week. Incidentally they are enjoying the sights offered by the national dairy pure food show.

Lax methods of farmers in caring for dairy cattle and in keeping the cream which is used to make butter were assailed by speakers at the convention. C. E. Lee, instructor in the agricultural department of the University of Illinois, led the fight for a purer product, pointing out the causes which are responsible for the large quantities of impure butter which are placed on the market and suggesting remedies for the evil.

"As instructor and traveling inspector for the butter making school of the University of Illinois," said Mr. Lee, "I have made a careful study of the conditions which are to blame for the impure butter which the public is compelled to buy. The farmer is primarily responsible. A great majority of them do not give their cattle proper care and proper food. Their barns are dirty and not well ventilated. They keep their cream too long and in undesirable places, with the result that it is often curdled when it reaches the creamery."

"While the root of the evil is in the lax methods of the farmer, the butter maker should also be held responsible for the impure product because he consents to buy cream which he knows is unfit to be used to manufacture high grade butter. It is within the power of the creamery man to correct the present conditions and it is one of the most important objects of this convention to impress upon your minds that it is your duty to take the initiative."

Other speakers were President H. J. Nietert, F. B. Thurber, H. A. Emerson, Professor J. O. Emery, A. J. Glover, J. G. Moore and C. H. Smalley.

While the creamery men were holding their convention in the annex, hundreds of persons gathered in the Coliseum proper to inspect the exhibits at the dairy show. The crowd increased as the afternoon progressed. Every booth was surrounded with a curious and interested throng of men and women. Everything connected with a dairy farm from a feed bucket to the latest cream separator, was on exhibition and a corps of willing attendants were kept busy explaining the construction and uses of the various devices which make the work of the dairyman easier.

SEED AND SOIL SPECIAL

Attracts Large Number to Illinois Central Depot Tuesday

The Illinois Central "corn special" which passed thru this station Tuesday attracted a large number of farmers and others despite the inclement weather.

Two cars were used as assembly rooms. In one a lecture on seed corn was given and in the other a lecture on soil, the visitors choosing the one in which they were most interested. There was not sufficient time in which to go into full details in the selection of seed corn and conditioning of the soil as is practiced at the Illinois University, but enough was said to give those present an idea of the great work which is being done at the experimental

Trade Chips

For a number of years C. F. Hall Co., of Dundee have had a standing offer to feed and stable the horses of any customer who traded $500. More recently they have added a new offer and now any customer who trades $500 may, if he prefers, get a check for 20 cents worth of goods in their newly established 5 and 10 Cent Dept. Serving to introduce this department, these checks are called Introduction Tickets but among the clerks are known as "trade chips." Several thousand have already been issued and over sixty of them have been cashed in a single day.

BUILD AUTOMOBILES

GENOA MEN FORM COMPANY FOR MANUFACTURE

LIGHT, PRACTICAL MACHINE

Patent Rights and Title Purchased by T. G. Sager, John Hadsall, T. J. Hoover and J. B. Stephens

Genoa is to have an automobile factory, small it is true, but from this small beginning there are possibilities of a large concern in the not distant future.

The patent rights and title of the Culver automobile of Aurora have been purchased by John Hadsall, T. G. Sager, T. J. Hoover of this city and J. B. Stephens of Sycamore. The stations, the effect of which is far reaching.

With experiments extending over twenty-seven years backing his statements the lecturer on soil spoke of the absolute necessity of enriching the soil by adding the kind of plant food in which it is deficient and which the crop must have for a large yield.

Anyone interested in Illinois agriculture can have his name placed on the free mailing list for all bulletins and circulars, upon his own request, which should be made by letter or postal card addressed to Agricultural Experiment Station, Urbana, Illinois.

The machine is called the Culver Practical automobile.

The car is extremely light in proportion to its available power and powerful in proportion to its weight, being perfectly balanced on perfect springs. It is intended for practical use for busy business and professional men as it can be used throughout the entire year, traveling nearly everywhere where a horse and buggy can travel, it being particularly adapted for hill climbing and muddy roads. The wheels are high as shown in the accompanying cut giving a clearance of thirteen inches.

This claim of the inventor was put to a severe test last week when a sample machine was run from Aurora to Genoa thru the rain, mud and slush by Amory Hadsall and T. G. Sager. The trip was made in good time.

The machine was invented and built by Dr. D. D. Culver one year ago. In studying automobiles Dr. Culver hit upon the idea of an entirely new machine. He drew the plans and built it in Reid's shop in Aurora in a comparatively short time.

The auto looks very much like a carriage with automobile attachment. It has high wheels with narrow solid tires and is designed to go on any road. It is a two cylinder, air cooled machine. The maximum speed is thirty miles an hour.

Dr. Culver drove his car between four and five thousand miles last summer and had very little trouble with it. He made only the one and that was delivered to the Genoa company to be used as a model. The new company will sell the machines at $650.

The doctor incorporated the Practical Automobile company to manufacture the machines last summer, but did not have the time to carry out the organization and Thomas Greer of Fletcher & Co., who had the promoting of the company in charge was called away before it was accomplished. Several concerns were after the right to manufacture and the doctor finally decided to sell the patents, rather than attempt to manufacture himself.

This is a machine that is bound to find favor with doctors and others who find it necessary to travel in all kinds of weather and if the hopes of the four gentlemen are realized a big factory is not among the impossibilities.

We have a complete line of Sanford's inks, mucilage paste and etc. Hunt's Pharmacy.

BASE BALL SEASON

Will Open in a Few More Weeks—Fans Anxious

The opening of the base ball season is not far distant and the fans are already exercising their vocal organs to better fit them for the work of a real rooter. The season will be opened early in the spring by the high school team which gives promise of being equal, if not better than last year. Several contests will be scheduled with neighboring cities.

The regular town organization is still in existence with Chas. Sager as manager. No definite plans have yet been made for the season's work. The line up of the team will probably be about the same as last year with the exception of Kirby at first base.

MONROE IS NOT IN IT

BOTH BOYS' AND GIRLS' TEAMS OF GENOA WIN

GREAT GAME FRIDAY NIGHT

Boys' and Girls' Teams of Genoa and Rockford High Schools to Meet at Crawford's Hall

The boys and girls did not like to do it, but the memory still fresh in their minds of what happened in a basket ball game at DeKalb the week previous, prompted them to trim some unsuspecting victim and the victim happened to be the luckless team from Monroe Center.

It is a positive fact the Genoa girls "hated" to do it—it was so easy. The visitors seemed to lack not only speed and team work, but actual knowledge of the game. Such was the appearance, but it might have been due to the comparison with the Genoa teams which is considered far above the average. The score after the first half was 15 to 2. In the second half the Genoa girls increased the score to 27, while Monroe could only make the entire score three points.

The boys' game was surprising to many, for the Monroe team was considered fast, and, in fact, has won several good contests this winter, but they had not a ghost of a show, pitted against the Genoa team. The score at the end of the first half was 27 to 4. In the second half the first Genoa team was removed from the field and the second team substituted with hopes of making the contest more even. But the seconds only allowed the visitors four more points while they themselves made 15 more, thus making the final score 42 to 8.

The Monroe boys were fast and played a good, clean game, but if they had ever developed any team work they could not use it here.

Both visiting teams were composed of ladies and gentlemen.

Rockford Friday Night

On this (Friday) evening the strong teams from the Rockford high school will meet the Genoa boys and girls at Crawford's hall. Neither one of the Genoa teams have been defeated on the home court this year, but the chances are that the Rockfords will make them go some to hold that record. It will not be a one sided contest, but a battle royal, worth coming miles to see. If you are the least inclined to appreciate the clean sport of basket ball, do not miss the fun tonight.

CEMENT BLOCKS

Now Being Manufactured by Smith & Abraham

Smith & Abraham have installed their cement block machine in the basement of the old Pacific hotel and are now turning out cement blocks for the trade. Only a conservative amount will be manufactured until perfection is assured.

A. C. Senska has also purchased a machine and will manufacture the blocks as ordered.

E. C. Crawford has turned out a great pile of blocks which are to be used in the construction of the new addition to his store building. He will be ready for building as soon as the frost is out of the ground.

M. W. A. Notes.

The entertainment committee will be on hand at every meeting hereafter and make it pleasant for all who come out.

Three new applicants were acted on at the last meeting. It is no unusual thing for the hustling deputy, J. T. Dempsey, to send in a handful of applications.

It is quite likely that the DeKalb county picnic which will take place in Genoa this year will soon be under discussion as to the date, also the date of memorial service.

Taxes! Taxes! Taxes!

The tax books are now opened at Perkins & Rosenfeld's store. Pay your taxes to the collector now and save inconvenience of sending to Sycamore.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK

Bible Sunday School Institutes at Kingston, Sandwich and DeKalb

There will be a series of Bible Institutes held under the auspices of DeKalb Co. Sunday School associations and conducted by State worker, Geo. Miller of Paris Ill., assisted by county and local workers. Time and place as follows: Tuesday, Feb. 27, at Kingston; Wednesday, Feb. 28, at DeKalb; Thursday, March 1, at Waterman; Friday, March 2, at Sandwich. These institutes have been placed within easy reach of a large number of our Sunday schools. There will be three sessions at each of these places, morning, afternoon and evening, thus we hope to accommodate all, so that every officer and teacher will be able to attend one or more sessions of these very helpful institutes, and try to learn more of the best ways to present the Bible to be able to win more souls to Christ through the teaching of the word in the Sunday School. We hope large numbers will avail themselves of these institutes. An earnest invitation is extended to all who can come. Bring a friend with you.

Entertaining Address

Prof. A. W. Patten, representing Northwestern University, pleased a good sized audience at the M. E. Church last Sunday evening with his lecture on "Education." Mr. Patten is a fluent speaker and thoroly in sympathy with his subject. Those who were present feel that they were well repaid in attending.

Jealousy Prompts Crime.

Prompted by jealousy, Roy Crist 352 Slade avenue, Elgin, driver on the Aldrich mail wagon, twice shot and seriously injured his sweetheart, Miss Anna Groesser, 421 Brook street, Thursday evening. Evidently believing he had killed her the young man turned the deadly weapon on himself and pulled the trigger twice. He was found some minutes later, dead in the Aldrich barn.

JOAN OF THE SWORD HAND

By S. R. CROCKETT, Author of The Raiders, etc.
(Copyright, 1898, 1900, by S. R. Crockett.)

CHAPTER XXVI.

Theresa Keeps Troth.

But they had reckoned without Theresa von Lynar. Conrad and Joan came back from the ruined fortification, silent mostly, but thrilled with the thoughts of that which their eyes had seen, their ears heard. Each had listened to the beating of the other's heart. Both knew they were beloved. Nothing could alter that any more forever. As they had gone out with Theresa watching them from the dusk of the garden arcades, their hands had drawn together. Eyes had sought answering eyes at each dip of the path. They had listened for the finest shades of meaning in one another's voices, and taken courage or lost hope from the droop of an eyelid or the quiver of a syllable.

Now all was changed. They knew that which they knew.

And now Theresa von Lynar, the woman who had given her beauty and her life like a little Valentine's gift into the hand of the man she loved, content that he should take or throw away as pleased him best—Theresa von Lynar met these two, who in their new glory of renunciation thought that they had plumbed the abysses of love, when as yet they had taken no more than a single sound in the narrow seas. She stood looking at them as they came toward her, with a sympathy that was more than mere tolerance.

"You have faced the sunshine!" Thus she greeted them as they came. "Sit awhile with me in the shade. I have here a bower where Maurice loved to play—before he left me. None save I hath entered it since that day."

It was a small, rustic, eight-sided lodge, thatched with heather, its latticed windows wide open and crepe-green, to which Theresa led them. It had been well kept; and when Joan found herself within, a sudden access of tenderness for this lonely mother, who had offered herself like a sacrifice upon an altar, took possession of her.

For about the walls was fastened a dead child's pitiful armoury. Home-made swords of lath, arrows winged with the cast feathers of the woodcock, crooked bows, the broken crests of a hundred imagined banquets—these, and many more, were carefully kept in place with immediate and loving care. Maurice would be back again presently, they seemed to say, and would take up his play just where he left it.

There was silence in the arbor for a space, a silence which no one of the three was anxious to break. For Joan thought of her promise, Conrad of Joan, and Theresa of her son. It was the last who spoke.

"Somehow to-day it is borne in upon me that Kernsberg has fallen and that my son is in his enemy's hands!"

Joan started to her feet, and thrust her hands a little out in front of her as if to ward off a blow.

"How can you know that?" she cried. "Who—No; it cannot be. Kernsberg was victualled for a year. It was filled with brave men. My captains are staunch. The thing is impossible."

Theresa von Lynar, with her eyes on the waving foliage which alternately revealed and eclipsed the ruddy globes of the apples on the orchard trees, slowly shook her head.

"I cannot tell you how I know," she said, "nevertheless I know. Here is something which tells me." She laid her hand upon her heart. "Those who are long alone beside the sea hear voices and see visions."

"But it is impossible," urged Joan, "or, if it be true, why am I kept here? I will go and die with my people!"

"It is my son's will," said Theresa—

stein so long as your son lives. My father's compact and condition are of no effect. The Diet of the Empire would cancel them in a moment. I will therefore take no rest until this thing is made clear. I swear that your son shall be Duke Maurice and sit in his father's place, as is right and fitting. For me, I ask nothing but the daughter's portion—a grange such as this, as solitary and as peaceful, a garden to delve and a beach to wander upon at eve!"

As she spoke Theresa's eyes suddenly brightened. A proud high look sat on the fulness of her lips, which gradually faded as some other thought asserted its supremacy. She rose, and going straight to Joan, for the first time she kissed her on the brow.

"Now do I know," she said, "that you are Henry the Lion's daughter. That is spoken as he would have spoken it. It is greatly thought. Yet it cannot be!"

"It shall be!" cried Joan imperiously.

"Nay," returned Theresa von Lynar. "Once on a time I would have given my right hand that for half a day, for one hour, men might have said of me that I was Henry the Lion's wife, and my son his son! It would have been right sweet. Ah, God, how sweet it would have been!" She paused a moment as if consulting some unseen presence. "No, I have vowed my vow. Here was I bidden to stay and here will I abide."

"Maurice of Hohenstein shall sit in his father's seat," said Joan firmly. "I have sworn it. If I live I will see him settled there with my captains about him. Werner von Orseln is an honest man. He will do him justice. Von Desseiner shall get him recognized, and Hugo of Plassenburg shall stand his sponsor before the Diet of the Empire."

"I would it could be so," said Theresa wistfully. "If my death could cause this thing righteously to come to pass, how gladly would I end life! But I am bound by an oath, and my son is bound because I am bound. The tribunal is not the Diet of Ratisbon, but the faithfulness of a woman's heart. Have I been loyal to my prince these many years so that now shame sits on my brow as gladly as a crown of bay, that I should fall him now? Low he lies, and I may never stand beside his sepulchre. No son of mine shall sit in his high chair. But if in any sphere of sinful or imperfect spirits, he is hell or purgatory, he and I shall encounter, think you for an empire I would meet him shamed. And when he says, 'Woman of my love, hast thou kept thy troth?' shall I be compelled to answer 'No'?"

"But," urged Joan, "this thing is your son's birthright. My father, for purposes of state, bound my happiness to a man I loathed. I have cast that bond to the winds. The fathers cannot bind the children; no more can you dishonor your son."

Theresa von Lynar smiled a sad, wise smile, infinitely patient, infinitely remote.

"Ah," she said, "you think so? You are young. You have never loved. You are his daughter, not his wife. One day you shall know, if God is good to you!"

At this Joan smiled in her turn. She knew what she knew.

"You may think you know," returned Theresa, her calm eyes on the girl's face, "but what I mean by loving is another matter. The band you broke you did not make. I keep the vow I made. With clear eye, undulled brain, willing hand I made it—because he willed it. Let my son Maurice break it, if he can, if he will—as you have broken yours. Only let him never more call Theresa von Lynar mother!"

Joan rose to depart. Her intent had not been shaken, though she was impressed by the noble heart of the woman who had been her father's wife. But she also had vowed a vow, and that vow she would keep. The Sparhawk should yet be the Eagle of Kernsberg, and she, Joan, a home-keeping housewife nestled in quietness, a barn-door fowl about the orchards of Isle Rugen.

"Madam," she said, "your word is your word. But so is that of Joan of Kernsberg. It may be that out of the unseen there may leap a chance which shall bring all to pass, the things which we both desire—without breaking vows or losing of the bands of obligation. For me, being no more than a daughter, I will keep Duke Henry's will only in that which is just."

"And I," said Theresa von Lynar, "will keep it, just or unjust!"

Yet Joan smiled as she went out. For she had been countered and checkmated in sacrifice. She had met a nature greater than her own, and with the truly noble that is the pleasure of pleasures.

All the while Conrad sat very still, listening with full heart to that which it did not concern him to interrupt. But within his heart he said, "Woman, when she is true woman, is greater, worthier, fuller than any man—ay, were it the Holy Father himself. Perhaps because they draw near Christ the Son through Mary the Mother!"

But Theresa von Lynar sat silent, and watched the girl as she went down the long path, the leafy branches spattering alternate light and shadow upon her slender figure. Then she turned sharply upon Conrad.

"And now, my Lord Cardinal," she said, "what have you been saying to my husband's daughter?"

"I have been telling her that I love her!" answered Conrad simply. He felt that what he had listened to gave this woman a right to be answered.

"And what, I pray you, have princes of Holy Church to do with love? They seek after heavenly things do neither marry nor are given in marriage."

"I know," said Conrad humbly, and without taking the least offense. "I know it well. But I have put off the armor I have not proven. The burden is too great for me. I am a soldier—I was trained a soldier—yet because I was born after my brother Louis, I must perform become both priest and holy cardinal. Rather a thousand times would I be a man-at-arms and carry a pike!"

"Then am I to understand that as a soldier you told the Duchess Joan that you loved her, or that as a priest you forbade the bans. Or did you wholly forget the circumstance that once on a time you yourself married her to your brother?"

"I did indeed forget," said Conrad, with sincere penitence, "yet you must not blame me too sorely. I was carried out of myself—"

"The duchess, then, rejected your suit with contumely?"

Conrad was silent.

"How should a great lady listen to her husband's brother—and a priest?"

"It shall not be!" cried Joan, imperiously.

Theresa went on remorseless. "What said the lady Joan when you told her that you loved her?"

"The words she spoke I cannot repeat, but when she ended I set my lips to her garment's hem as reverently as ever to holy bread."

The slow smile came again over the face of Theresa von Lynar, the smile of a war-worn veteran who watches the children at their drill.

"You do not need to tell me what she answered, my lord," she said, for the first time leaving out the ecclesiastical title. "I know!"

Conrad stared at the woman.

"She told you that she loved you from the first?"

"How know you that?" he faltered. "None must hear that secret—none must guess it!"

Theresa von Lynar laughed a little mellow laugh, in which a keen ear might have detected how richly and pleasantly her laugh must once have sounded to her lover when her pulses beat to the tune of gladness and the unbound heart.

"Do you think to deceive me, Theresa, whom Henry the Lion loved? Have I been these many weeks with you two in the house and not seen this? Prince Conrad, I knew it that night of the storm when she bent her over the couch on which you lay. 'I love,' you say boldly, and you think great things of your love. But she loved first as she will love most, and your boasted love will never overtake hers—no, not though you love her all your life. Well, what do you propose to do?"

Syracuse (N. Y.) Woman a Successful Electrical Contractor.

One little woman in Syracuse, N. Y., wasted no time in search for the aesthetic when she wasted a life business. Rose B. Richardson is her name, spinster is her state. She is the only electrical contractor in petticoats in the United States—anywhere in the world, it may be. Her list of customers is large, and she employs a goodly force of high-priced workmen. Miss Richardson enjoys her work, though it isn't one of the prettiest occupations. "I'm in the business because I like it," she says. "I was the first telephone operator in Syracuse, and always had a liking for things relating to electricity. My brother-in-law wished me to go into the contracting business with him and I consented. He died three years ago, and since then I have run it alone. Several contractors have tried to get me to take them as partners, but I prefer to have it all to myself. Some persons hesitate about employing a woman to do their work for them, as they fear she could not make her workmen attend to their duties, but I have no trouble that way. FARM MISCELLANY.

Feeding Meat and Cooked Food.

My experience in feeding meat in any form to poultry is quite limited. In summer I give as good as unlimited range to my fowls, which does away with the necessity for such feed. While I have faith in the balanced ration theories, yet I believe if an "old hen" has the opportunity she will balance her rations better than her owner.

I have never fed blood meal, and my experience in feeding commercial meat meals has been confined to beef meal, fed late in fall, winter and spring. I am sure it added materially to the general health and vigor of the fowls and of course increased the egg production. The cost of the meal reduces its general use. It is too high in price to assure its general use.

It is almost impossible to convince any one that feeds his flock and keeps them up to date on feed and care, that the meal pays sufficiently to justify the price charged, $2, $2.50 and $3 per 100.

I feed corn in the evening, cutting up in short pieces (in cutting a great deal shells), and throwing to the fowls in litter, so as to enable them to do as much work as possible to get it. The morning meal is a mash of bran, with possibly and usually some ground oats and barley, seasoned with a little salt and occasionally black or red pepper. At noon I feed them on oats, barley and wheat mixed, and for change sometimes feed these separately.

In the line of cooked foods I use a 50-gallon cooker, heating water and scalding the bran mash, or cooking in the cooker feed composed of wheat, barley and oats ground together, and sometimes the whole grains unground, and this last mode pleases me the best. Without actual test I believe it does the birdy the most good.—T. J. Mawhorter, Noble, Co., Ind., in Farmers' Review.

Feed the Sow Properly.

It must be remembered that the sow that is in gestation is not only supporting her own body out of the food she eats, but is also building new tissues for her unborn young. The elements fed her must therefore be of a kind that will give material for muscle and sinew-making as well as material for the construction of bone. The sow that is fed a ration consisting only of corn is not only being deprived of the material out of which to build up her own body, but is also being deprived of the material out of which to construct the frames of her pigs. Carbon and water cannot build a good healthy frame, and corn is composed mostly of carbon and water. The mineral elements are very scarce. The sow to do her best as a creator must have not only corn, but also milk, middlings, ground oats, and roots if they are obtainable. Bran furnishes some of the most important elements for body building, but should not be fed in a very large quantity at any one time.

Feeding Farm Horses.

L. A. Merrill, Utah, speaking to a concourse of farmers, said the amount of hay fed on the ordinary farm may be greatly reduced, so far as horses are concerned. This, he said, would be a saving to the farmers and would result in reducing the digestive disorders to which the horses are subject. Horses should receive most of the hay at night, very little in the morning and none at all for the noon meal. Always water before feeding. Oats make the best grain feed for horses, but these can be replaced by bran or shorts or supplemented by the use of corn. Carrots and sugar-beet pulp have a marked beneficial effect in horse feeding, serving as a laxative and tonic, as well as enabling the horse to digest the hay and grain more effectively. Horses may eat as much as 40 pounds of sugar beet pulp daily.

Oats Injured by Rust.

In this vicinity about 40 per cent of all the plowed land is in oats. This makes it a very important crop with us. We have had considerable trouble from rust and I think the losses have been considerable. But as yet the farmers are doing nothing to check the spread of this fungus. We sow our oats in spring as soon as the frost is out of the ground. About the only preparation the land receives is one discing. The oat straw is mostly fed on the farms, but of course much of it goes into bedding. The great obstacle in this locality to the successful production of oats is rust. I do not think we can greatly increase the yield here unless we first treat the oats so that the Wagner will be free from rust.—O. J. Wadner, Livingston County, Ill.

Cactus a Coming Stock Food.

That cactus is to be a stock food of considerable value is certain. Even now considerable quantities are being fed, but this amount is smaller than it should be, due to the trouble in getting the spines out of the way, which is now done by singeing and steaming. It is obvious that this requires a good deal of hand labor. All kinds of farm animals take kindly to this class of food when the spines are out of the way. The cacti carry a large amount of water and are thus especially adapted to furnish succulent food in the semi-arid regions in which they grow. Dairy cows eat from 40 to 70 pounds of this kind of food per day, and oxen will take up to 200 pounds per day when given nothing else.

TERRIBLE SCALY ECZEMA.

Eruptions Appeared on Chest, and Face and Neck Were All Broken Out—Cured by Cuticura.

"I had an eruption appear on my chest and body and extend upwards and downwards, so that my neck and face were all broken out; also my arms and the lower limbs as far as the knees. I at first thought it was prickly heat. But soon scales or crusts formed where the breaking out was. Instead of going to a physician I purchased a complete treatment of the Cuticura Remedies, in which I had great faith, and all was satisfactory. A year or two later the eruption appeared again, only a little lower; but before it had time to spread I procured another supply of the Cuticura Remedies, and continued their use until the cure was complete. It is now five years since the last attack, and have not seen any signs of a return. I have more faith in Cuticura Remedies for skin diseases than anything I know of. Emma E. Wilson, Liscomb, Iowa, Oct. 1, 1905."

Was a Lucky Calamity.

As time passes it becomes more and more evident that the big fire of two years ago was a lucky calamity for Baltimore. In two days it cleared away acres and acres of ancient, tumble-down buildings that in the ordinary course of events might have obstructed the progress of the city for years. It awakened enterprise; it opened the way for new ideas and new men; it aroused the city to the need for a general municipal house-cleaning and it provided an opportunity to widen narrow streets, to improve useless docks and to do other things. True enough, a great many Baltimoreans were ruined by the fire and their fate excites sympathy, but a great many more in the two years that have passed have profited. To-day Baltimore is the better for that terrible Sunday—more alert, more modern, more prosperous and more progressive.—Baltimore Herald.

Foundation of the New Poultry House.

After building a number of poultry houses one has certain important facts impressed upon him. One of these that comes home with a good deal of force to the writer is the matter of foundation. If he builds another poultry house he will see that the foundation is perfect and that it will be more than strong enough. A poultry house that is not properly built in this respect will be a nuisance in several ways.

It is customary to build poultry houses on slopes where it can be done, and that is proper, as it gives good drainage. But in case the foundation proves to be poor and needs to be supported it will generally be found very difficult to do anything without raising the house by means of jack screws. The writer has had a very vexatious task of this kind. The trouble is that one end of the house is set so close to the ground that one cannot get under it or even get at the parts that need to be supported.

When a poultry house has to be erected that is twelve feet or more wide there should be a row of supports running the length of the house under the very middle. Almost all amateurs make the mistake of supporting the house only on the sides and ends. The twelve-foot joists, even though they be six inches deep and two thick, have a very great amount of vibration and it is unpleasant to walk over a floor laid on such joists. But if the time ever comes that the house has to be used for another purpose than poultry keeping, this kind of a floor will be found to be unendurable. This possibility should be borne in mind, for numerous poultry houses become transformed in time into houses for other purposes, especially if they are of good size.

A fault that is very noticeable in the building of most of the houses used by our poultry is that they are merely set on posts stuck in the ground for perhaps two feet. In a few years some of these posts rot and others get a lean on them out of plumb due to the ground on one side of the poultry house being softer than on the other side. The rain gets into the holes and the soil there becomes softer than at any other point, and this does not improve as the years go by. Settling goes on year after year. I have in mind a poultry house that cost nearly a hundred dollars. It was set on cedar posts and the posts are badly rotted now in spite of the fact that cedar is supposed to be resistant to rot. Some of the cedar posts have also got out of plumb, and the house has moved over several inches to accommodate the posts. What the end will be nobody knows.

Build the foundations strong in the first place. If the building is to rest on supports of any kind dig deep holes in the ground and put in brick or stone fully cemented. Have a big timber running the length of the building and also resting on the same kind of piers. This will cost a little more than the posts, but it will be more satisfactory, and years afterward the owner will be glad that he so invested the money that the good foundations cost.

Cost of Transporting Fowls.

Late in the fall or early in the winter is the best time for the farmer to buy poultry to replenish his stock or to give him a high quality of breeders. These should be mated early in February. I think it is better for him to buy male birds, but he can do much by buying both kinds. He need not be afraid to buy birds at a considerable distance from him, as they can be shipped long distances without deterioration. The cost of shipping birds is not great when we consider the bulk of the bird and the trouble any living thing is to the transportation companies. I shipped one bird to Cripple Creek, Col., for $1.25, cost of transportation. On one shipped to Los Angeles the cost of transportation was $1.60. I have shipped several to Kansas at the rate of 80 cents each. I find that birds can be shipped in winter without being in danger of taking cold, if they are boxed right. Whether the birds are taken care of on the railroads is a thing we cannot know, as that depends on the employes. Some are careful of such things and some are not. Some farmers are afraid to buy from flocks at a distance because they are afraid of roup and other contagious diseases. I can only say to that, that it is necessary to deal with a reputable dealer, and that is true whether he lives nearby or far away. The only way that a farmer can know that he is getting good birds and not scrubs when he buys poultry is to educate himself along the line of poultry, judging all he buys by a book called the American Standard of Perfection, which describes all the classes of poultry now in general use, with the exception of a few breeds brought out recently, which the American Association of Poultry Raisers do not yet admit as standard breeds. If a man pays for a first-class bird and when it arrives finds it is not what he paid for, the remedy is for him to ship it back at once.—Marcan P. Seavey, Cook Co., Ill.

Rank of Lieutenant General.

In an army no larger than that of the United States the grade of lieutenant general is superfluous. Hitherto it has been used in recognition of distinguished military service rather than as a useful or necessary rank in the army. The office may be left unfilled and public sentiment should make it impossible for any president to fill it on any other ground whatever than that of eminently distinguished service in actual warfare. The rank of lieutenant general of the United States army should be a reward for special distinction in actual military service. It need not be abolished, but it should be kept sacredly by presidents and by people as a mark of special honor.—New York Sun.

Electric Blasting.

Electric blasting methods for use in mining operations have been developed by a British firm. The advantage of the electrical method of ignition over the time-honored fuse method is quite evident. The moment of explosion may be controlled at will and perfect safety is thereby secured. The ignition chord, surrounded by the igniting powder, consists either of a wire brought to incandescence by the current or by a conductor with a break for the passage of a spark. The former alternative should be preferred as being more trustworthy, while dispensing with the use of the perfect insulation required in the case of the sparking method.

TWITCHING NERVES

A Serious Hereditary Trouble Cured By Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Sufferers from ailments that have afflicted in regular succession one generation after another of their family are, as a rule, inclined to submit to them as inevitable. The case which follows proves that such hereditary difficulties are not beyond the reach of curative forces and should inspire hopefulness and a readiness to try remedies that have effected signal cures, such as that which is here given.

Mrs. Elizabeth Rannels, of No. 408 East Seventh street, Newton, Kansas, gives the following account of her ailment and her cure:

"For two years I suffered from a trying nervousness in my lower limbs from my knees down, as my mother and my grandmother had suffered before me. The situation was for many years accepted as unavoidable because hereditary. But about two years ago, when my son was realizing benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I thought there might possibly be some good in them for me. My trouble had then become so serious as to make it difficult for me to sleep. I often had to walk the floor in restlessness the whole night. After taking some six boxes the twitching disappeared and I ceased to use the remedy. I evidently stopped a little too soon for nervousness came back after a month or so and I used the pills again for a short time. Relief came at once and since I stopped using them the second time I have been free from any return of the twitchings or from any interference with my sleep."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured the worst cases of bloodlessness, indigestion, influenza, headaches, lumbago, sciatica, neuralgia, nervousness, spinal weakness and the special ailments of girls and women. For further information, address the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Bad Stomach Makes Bad Blood.

You can not make sweet butter in a foul, unclean churn. The stomach serves as a churn in which to agitate, work up and disintegrate our food as it is being digested. If it be weak, sluggish and foul the result will be torpid, sluggish liver and bad, impure blood.

The ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery are just such as best serve to correct and cure all such derangements. It is made up with a drop of alcohol in its composition; chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead of the commonly employed alcohol. Now this glycerine is of a valuable medicine, instead of a deleterious agent like alcohol, especially in the cure of weak stomach, dyspepsia and the various forms of indigestion. Prof. F. P. Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says of it:

"In dyspepsia it serves an excellent purpose. It is one of the best manufactured products of the present time in its action upon enfeebled, disordered stomachs; especially if there is a tic-tac or catarrh of the stomach (catarrh of inflammation of stomach). It is a most efficient preparation. Glycerine will relieve many cases of pyrosis, heartburn and excessive gastric acidity. It is useful in chronic intestinal dyspepsia, especially the flatulent variety, and in certain forms of chronic constipation, stimulating the secretory and excretory functions of the intestinal glands."

When combined, in the right proportions, with Golden Seal root, Stone root, Black Cherry bark, Queen's root, Bloodroot and Mandrake root, or the extracts of these, as in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, there can be no doubt of its great efficacy in the cure of all stomach, liver and intestinal disorders and derangements. These several ingredients have the strongest endorsement in all such cases of such eminent medical authorities as Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, Chicago; Prof. Robert A. Hare, M. D., of Medical Department University of Pa.; Prof. Lawrence Johnson, M. D., Medical Department University of New York; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago; Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., and Prof. John King, M. D., authors of the American Dispensatory, and scores of others among the leading medical men of our land. Who can doubt the curative virtues of a medicine the ingredients of which have such a professional endorsement? Constipation cured by Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. One or two a dose.

Expedition to Arctic in Scientific Interests

ERNEST DE HAVEN LEFFINGWELL

Leffingwell and Mikkelsen's expedition to the arctic seas in search of undiscovered lands and for the purposes of study of geography, geology and other fields of scientific interest is expected by professors at the University of Chicago to result in more real benefit to science than a dash in search of the north pole. Both men have figured on trips to find the pole and believe that undertaking is unattainable.

Among the various things which Leffingwell and Mikkelsen will attempt to study are the history of the Eskimos, the geography of the frozen north, the hydrography, meteorology, and the temperature and climatic conditions of the new lands.

"Our trip is in the interests of science first of all, and we do not intend to go north merely for the purpose of planting the American flag on an unknown land," said Ernest D. Leffingwell in discussing the contemplated expedition. "There is an abundance of land there which any one could have and which to my knowledge is not of much money value. "My special work will be the study of the geology of the country, which exists there, I am practically certain. Whalers and Eskimos driven out of their course by storms have reported that a body of land was there. The character of the land is not like that of Greenland. It is not covered with glaciers. The amount of precipitation is not sufficient, I believe to cause snow fields.

"It must be for the most part a desolate country of wastes of bare rock, with little vegetation growing. Perhaps we may find a little moss. There surely is, however, plenty of game. Muskoxen and reindeer exist there, I am sure.

"Our chances of getting to the country are good. Every summer there is open water in the proximity. Whalers have cruised near in the summer. Considerable copper has been reported there and we will make a study of the ore.

"I do not know whether the land is made up of islands or is another continent. There is plenty of room for a seventh continent, but I doubt if such exists. It is my impression, although I have practically nothing to base my belief on, that there are a number of islands rather than a continent."

As Miss Cornwallis West her marriage fourteen years ago with Prince Henry of Pless, whom she met at her first ball, created a great sensation. Tall and fair, "Princess Daisy," as she is known to her friends, possesses, in addition to her exceptional beauty, a lovely voice—and brains. Her father-in-law, Prince Henry XI. of Pless, is the owner of large territories and valuable mines in Silesia, being, in fact, reputed one of the three richest individuals in Germany, the two being Fraulein Krupp and Baron Bleichroder, the Berlin banker. He has handed over Furstenburg, the ancestral castle, to his son and daughter-in-law, where they entertain their English friends every year in splendid fashion.

Effects of Forests on Rivers.
At the recent meeting of the international navigation congress at Milan, some interesting data were furnished respecting the influence which the destruction of forests exerts on the discharge of rivers. A summary of seven important papers read at the congress shows that it was allowed by all the authors of these papers that the removal of forests, especially in hilly countries, has a marked effect on the water supply of the neighboring rivers. Where deforestation has taken place, brooks have disappeared and small rivers cease furnishing power for mills have ceased to be sufficient for this purpose.—New York Herald.

Parliamentary "Poet Laureate."
It is pretty well known that Sir Wilfrid Lawson is the recognized poet laureate of the British parliament. He is always on the lookout for "incidents," the little episodes that enliven the dull routine of parliamentary life and that lend themselves to utilization as a couplet or a quatrain. His extemporaneous verses make a crenel of the house to an accompaniment of subdued chuckles. They are sometimes handed by a minister to the speaker, who reads them with a professionally dignified countenance and then pays them the compliment of a momentary twinkle of his awful eye.

Wrinkle Comes From Mental Effort.
There is a new wrinkle. It is located at the corners of the eyes and it is a wrinkle which indicates deep thought. The wrinkle—or the group of wrinkles—when first seen may seem indicative of old age. But actually the lines are formed by study, by reading, by thought and by constant and repeated efforts of mentality.

The age at which you may expect these wrinkles naturally is 40. But, if they appear under that, then it is a mark of too much brain work.

Senator Finds Work Hard.
Senator Knox of Pennsylvania, in conversation with a friend the other day, laughingly observed that if he had any idea as to the amount of work he would have to perform he never would have taken the job as a member of the United States senate. "There seems to be absolutely no end to it," he said. "My secretary tells me that I answer on an average 125 letters a day." The correspondence of a senator, although the dreariest drudgery, is not so laborious as the hard work of committees which he is called upon to perform, nor does it consume as much of his time as the endless routine of social engagements.

Peculiar Habits of Royalty.
The sovereigns of Europe have all their own peculiar habits. For example King Edward has a way of passing his finger backward and forward under his chin; the German emperor twirls his mustache with energy, while the king of Italy strokes his gently and affectionately; the emperor of Austria combs out his whiskers, and the czar frequently passes his hand over the top of his head. Lastly the retiring president of France, M. Loubet, has a trick of shrugging his right shoulder and at the same time smoothing the front of his coat with his right hand.

Those Who Suffer Most.
Prosperous men and women are frightened at the possibility of a strike and make their protests heard, but the class that suffers is without influence and dumb. To raise the price of a necessity comes hard upon you and upon us, but only on our pocket-books. There are others, many thousands, who must pay for dearer coal, not by diminishing their possessions but in the coin of actual pain and even death. Vast, indeed, and terrible is the responsibility that lies upon both parties to a quarrel for which myriads of human beings must pay so dear.—Collier's Weekly.

Doom of the Luncheon.
When you go for a long tramp do not bother to take a lunch with you. Just put half a dozen lumps of sugar in your pocket and eat them when you get tired and hungry. You will at once find your strength and freshness renewed. This is what Dr. Lee, professor of physiology at Columbia university, and author of several important works on the vital processes of life, firmly asserts. Fatigue, according to Prof. Lee, is a result of certain chemical changes in the body, due to muscular exertion. Sugar, taken internally, arrests and prevents these changes. The sugar, to be specific, replenishes the carbohydrates that are wasted by exertion and causes the fatigue due to this waste to disappear.—New York Mail.

Von Moltke's Taciturnity.
Count Von Moltke, the great Prussian general, was a fine chess player and once wished to try his strength against a famous professional. A match was arranged, but the professional was warned not to be talkative, as Moltke hated people who had a lot to say. Whether Moltke overheard the warning to the professional or not is not told. At any rate, the match came off and the professional was very careful not to utter a word. At last, however, he took the liberty of saying one ominous word, "Mate." Moltke rose, went to the door, opened it, and before going out turned round and said, "Confounded chatterbox."

Speaking of Ancestry.
Mr. Chase has such an exaggerated respect for the blue blood of Boston which runs in his veins that his manner is slightly patronizing. He was lately introduced to a Syrian of good birth and education, who lives in this country.

"And may I inquire," he said, blandly, in the course of the conversation, "if you are of the Christian religion?"

"My family was converted to Christ's teaching at the time of John's second visit to Lebanon," quietly replied the Syrian.—Youth's Companion.

CHRISTMAS EVE IN THE DESERT.

The edge of Death Valley, where annually many treasure hunters have perished in their search for gold, was the scene of one of the most pleasing incidents in the initial trip of the Los Angeles Limited. The shadows of night had fallen upon the desert when that point was reached on the homeward run, and the thoughts of most of the eastern newspaper representatives in the brilliantly illumined train were centered upon their far-away homes, wondering what the little ones were doing—probably yearning to be with them. While they were thus engrossed Santa Claus was busily engaged planning a surprise; and a delightful surprise it proved to be.

When everything was ready the guests of the Union Pacific Railroad Company were called into their special car, a state-room door swung back on its hinges, and there stood revealed a Christmas tree, glittering with tinsel and filled with presents, one or more for each guest. As his name was called each stepped forward and was handed a pretty souvenir, to which was added a large glass object encasing a generous sample of California's justly famed vintage. This delightful little incident relieved such mental tension as had existed, for it was a manifestation of the true Christmas spirit that was appreciated as much as it had been unexpected. It was one of the touches of "nature that make the whole world kin," for it served to bring still closer together the entertainers and the entertained on the initial trip of the Los Angeles Limited. For this reason, gregarious as its reputation is, Death Valley will always be associated with a pleasant memory in the minds of the newspaper representatives.—Telegraph Gazette, Pittsburg.

Nervous Women

Their Sufferings are Usually Due to Female Disorders Perhaps Unsuspected

A MEDICINE THAT CURES

Mrs. M. E. Shotwell

Can we dispute the well-known fact that American women are nervous? How often do we hear the expression, "I am so nervous, it seems as if I should fly," or, "Don't speak to me." Little things annoy you and make you irritable; you can't sleep, you are unable to quietly and calmly perform your daily tasks or care for your children.

The relation of the nerves and generative organs in woman is so close that nine-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous debility, the blues, sleeplessness and nervous irritability arise from some derangement of the organism which makes her a woman. Fits of depression or restlessness and irritability; spirits easily affected, so that one minute she laughs, the next minute weeps; pain in the abdominal region and between the shoulders; loss of voice; nervous dyspepsia; a tendency to cry at the least provocation—all these point to nervous prostration.

Nothing will relieve this distressing condition and prevent months of prostration and suffering so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. M. E. Shotwell, of 103 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"I cannot express the wonderful relief I have experienced by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered for a long time with nervous prostration, back ache, headache, loss of appetite. I could not sleep and would walk the floor almost every night.

"I had three doctors and got no better, and life was a burden. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has worked wonders for me.

"I am a well woman, my nervousness is all gone and my friends say I look ten years younger."

Will not the volumes of letters from women made strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound convince all women of its virtues? Surely you cannot wish to remain sick, weak and discouraged, exhausted each day, when you can be as easily cured as other women.

Your farm pays for itself in the Southwest.

It is not an uncommon thing for a farmer in the Southwest to pay for his farm in one year. This could only be done where the crops are big, the prices good, and the land inexpensive. Precisely these three conditions exist in the Southwest. Good rich land can be bought for a small part of what land costs in your locality. This land will yield 50 bushels of corn to the acre, 30 bushels of wheat, 90 bushels of oats, as a regular thing. The average prices of grains sold by farmers in the Southwest during the past five years was higher than the prices secured by farmers in your neighborhood. Under such favorable conditions, the Southwest farmer is bound to prosper.

Now is your opportunity to exchange your few acres at home for a bigger and more productive farm in the Southwest. You can sell your present farm, pay off the mortgage and have enough left to buy a big farm in the Southwest that will make you independent in a few years. Write us what you want and we can place you in touch with the very thing you are looking for. The M. K. & T. Ry. Land Bureau is an organization of reliable men whose business it is to find better locations for those who want to improve their condition.

The "Coming Country" Free!
The "Coming Country" is a very interesting paper published monthly and devoted to the Southwest. This publication will post you on conditions in the Southwest better than anything that you could read. It will be glad to have the publisher place your name on the mailing list and send you a free copy of the paper regularly for one year. Write today while you think of it for a free copy of the "Coming Country," and everything will be done to furnish you with information about the Southwest.

How Best to Preserve Good Looks.

The young girl just blossoming into maidenhood, on the peculiar border line between maidenhood and womanhood, should have every care. Parents are often to blame for endangering their daughters' health by allowing them to overwork, allowing them to attend parties and other places of amusement and the indulgence of other habits which tend to excite the nervous system. There should be a good understanding both on the parent's part and that of the young girl, and we can heartily recommend a book called the "Common Sense Medical Adviser," edited and published by Dr. R. V. Pierce, at Buffalo, N. Y., which contains a full and complete list of one-cent stamps for a copy of the cloth bound, or 21 one-cent stamps for the paper cover, which will be sent by express or mail. The young girl and the young woman at this time in her life is weighted down by periodical disabilities which become hard to bear. What is needed is a tonic for the womanly system. Something over a third of a century ago, Dr. R. V. Pierce, the specialist in woman's diseases, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., hit upon certain roots, herbs and barks, which made into a liquid tonic, gave relief and strength to the womanly system. During the past thirty-eight years this vegetable compound has sold more largely than any other medicine intended only for woman's diseases. It is called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Few women in the United States have not heard of its splendid remedial qualities, for it is a Prescription that can always be depended upon when women suffer.

Every woman should be careful that the liver is active and the poisons are not allowed to clog up the system—get rid of these poisons by taking a vegetable laxative occasionally—such as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They do not gripe and will not harm the most delicate system. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets clear the muddy complexion.

Consumption

There is no specific for consumption. Fresh air, exercise, nourishing food and Scott's Emulsion will come pretty near curing it, if there is anything to build on. Millions of people throughout the world are living and in good health on one lung.

From time immemorial the doctors prescribed cod liver oil for consumption. Of course the patient could not take it in its old form, hence it did very little good. They can take and tolerate it for a long time. There is no oil, not excepting butter, so easily digested and absorbed by the system as cod liver oil in the form of Scott's Emulsion, and that is the reason it is so helpful in consumption where its use must be continuous.

We will send you a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

Startling But True
People the world over were horrified on learning of the burning of a Chicago theater in which nearly six hundred people lost their lives, yet more than five times this number or over 3,000 people died from pneumonia in Chicago during the same year, with scarcely a passing notice. Everyone of these cases of pneumonia resulted from a cold and could have been prevented by the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. A great many who had every reason to fear pneumonia have warded it off by the prompt use of this remedy. The following is an instance of this sort: "Too much cannot be said in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and especially for colds and influenza. I know that it cured my daughter, Laura, of a severe cold, and I believe saved her life when she was threatened with pneumonia." W. D. Wilcox, Logan, New York. Sold by G. H. Hunt.

ADVENT CHURCH DAMAGED

Fire Discovered this (Thursday) Morning
by Miss Drake

The Advent church was greatly damaged by water this (Thursday) morning as the result of an incipient blaze in the basement near the furnace.

A class of the second primary department of the public school is quartered in the church, and at the time of calling order this morning Miss Drake, the teacher, discovered the fire. She gave the alarm and the pupils left the building in good order. In a remarkably short time the fire department was on hand, finding smoke emerging from the siding on the east side of the building. The interior was flooded with water and the flames soon extinguished. After the smoke cleared away it was found that the flames had not reached beyond the joists in the basement.

CANNOT EVADE RATE PROVISION

Railroads Must Receive Full Tariff for Carrying Commodities.

ATTEMPT TO NULLIFY THE LAW

New York, New Haven and Hartford Company Bought Coal at the Mines and Sold It at Destination Irrespective of Charges.

Washington special: Justice White Monday delivered the opinion of the supreme court of the United States in the cases of New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company vs. the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission vs. the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad company, affirming the decision of the United States circuit court for the western district of Virginia. The cases involved the question of discrimination in freight rates on coal by the Chesapeake and Ohio in favor of the New York, New Haven and Hartford road as against other shippers. The decision was against the railroad company.

Decides Question of Rates. Putting aside for the time all other questions, Justice White took up the case as it appears under the interstate commerce law and stated the question to be decided to be the following: "Has a carrier engaged in interstate commerce the power to contract to sell and transport, in completion of the contract, the commodity sold when the price stipulated in the contract does not pay the cost of purchase, the cost of delivery and the published freight rates?"

Violates Second Section. Justice White said there were practically no previous decisions of the court to quote as precedents. "It cannot," he said, "be challenged that the great purpose of the act to regulate commerce, while seeking to prevent unjust and unreasonable rates, was to secure equality of rates as to all and to destroy favoritism. Now, in view of the positive command of the second section of the act, that no departure from the published rate shall be made, 'directly or indirectly,' how can it in reason be held that a carrier may take itself from out the statute in every case simply by electing to be a dealer and transport a commodity in that character?"

Would Nullify the Law. The judge added: "Now, if by the mere fact of purchasing and selling merchandise to be transported a carrier is endowed with the power of disregarding the published rate it becomes apparent that the carrier possesses the right to treat the owners of like commodities by entirely different rules. Thus the statute, while subjecting the public to the prohibitions, would exempt the carrier and would thereby enormously increase the opportunities of the latter to do the wrongs which the statute was enacted to prevent.

Strengthens Injunction. Coming to the consideration of the case at issue, Justice White said the court thought it established beyond doubt that, desiring to stimulate the production of coal along its line, the Chesapeake and Ohio bought and sold the coal without reference to whether the net result to it would realize its published rates.

The cross appeal of the Interstate commerce commission was considered briefly and the general conclusion reached "that the injunction below should be modified and enlarged by perpetually enjoining the Chesapeake and Ohio from taking less than the rates fixed in its published tariff of freight rates by means of dealing in the purchase and sale of coal. And, as thus modified, the decree below is affirmed."

J. A. McCALL DEAD AT LAUREL HOUSE

Former President of New York Life Company Dies of Broken Heart

BREAKDOWN DUE TO EXPOSURE

Revelations Before Legislators Cause Man Who Was Regarded as Foremost Insurance Chief to Lose Health and Fall Last Hours with Bitterness.

New York special: John Augustine McCall, former president of the New York Life insurance company, resident of a $100,000 a year salary and until a few months ago looked upon as the foremost insurance man in America, if not in the entire world, is dead at the palatial Laurel house in Lakewood, N. J., of a broken heart. He died discredited and denounced, and the closing hours of his life were filled with bitterness. Only his family remained faithful and believed in him to the end.

Mr. McCall was 60 years old and in strong health and spirits when the Armstrong legislative committee was called together to investigate the affairs and methods of the great life insurance companies. His breakdown and death were caused directly by the sensational revelations which followed—revelations that called down on McCall's head the wrath of an angry nation and forced him in haste to resign and to sell under the hammer his beautiful summer palace at Long Branch, N. J., which cost him close to $100,000.

Alexander Near Death. Nor does it end here. While Mr. McCall lies dead at Lakewood, executed as it were by outraged public opinion, James W. Alexander, former president of the Equitable Life, stripped of his fortune, is seriously ill and not expected to live, and Richard A. McCurdy, former president of the Mutual Life, is preparing to exile himself from his native country in order to escape legal proceedings which, however, he probably has delayed too long to do, as steps to force him to refund money belonging to the Mutual Life are already about to be taken. When the proceedings are over it is predicted by many that Mr. McCurdy will be left practically a poor man to begin life all over again.

Unconscious Fourteen Hours. John A. McCall died at 5:33 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Laurel house in Lakewood, where he had been taken three weeks ago in the hope that the change might benefit his health, which had suffered a breakdown two months ago. The news of the death was not given out by the family until some time after the end. Then Mr. McCall's son, John C. McCall, briefly announced: "The end has come. My father has passed away."

Mr. McCall had been unconscious since about 1 o'clock Sunday morning except possibly for one brief minute in the afternoon when his eyes opened and looked into the face of his wife, who was bending over him. He smiled and, as he did so, his eyes closed again and he remained in the coma until the end.

GIVES LIFE TO SAVE FRIEND Girl Runs on Trestle Before Freight Train and Rescues Companion. Glasgow, Mo., dispatch: In saving her friend from being crushed by a freight engine, Miss Anna Mae Diggs Sunday afternoon lost her life on the west approach of the Chicago & Alton bridge.

Miss Diggs, Miss Louise Arthur and two other young women had walked across the bridge and were nearing the end of the west approach when they heard a train behind them. All four ran, and three got safely off the embankment, but Miss Arthur stumbled and fell on the tracks. Miss Diggs ran to her and threw her from the tracks. At the same instant the pilot of the locomotive struck the rescuer, killing her instantly.

HUSBAND GOES BLIND; WIFE'S ILLNESS CAUSE Protracted Weeping of Boarding House Keeper Results in His Losing Eyesight in His Grief.

New York dispatch: As a result of a protracted fit of weeping brought on by the announcement of his wife's approaching death, Ebert Terry, a boarding house keeper at East Moriches, N. Y., became totally blind Sunday.

Mrs. Terry, who was suffering from a dangerous malady, visited East Hampton a short time ago, hoping that the change of air might restore her to health. Since then her husband eagerly awaited news of her condition. At last came the announcement of a sudden change for the worse. Terry was seized with a violent fit of weeping. The sympathy of his friends only tended to augment his grief.

When from sheer exhaustion his tears ceased to flow it was discovered that his eyesight was almost gone. He was undergoing treatment for cataracts, which doubtless would have resulted successfully, but he is likely now to be totally blind for life.

Despite his infirmity, Terry has rejoined his wife that he may hold her hand even though he cannot see her face in her last hours of life.

DRAG WOMEN FROM PRAYERS Troops Also Ride Down Crowds in the French Church Riots.

Brest cablegram: The efforts of the authorities to take an inventory of church property have resulted in serious riots at Roscoff. The crowds were charged by troops and men and women were struck with the flats of sabers and trampled under the hoofs of the horses. The people threw showers of stones, seized the brides and prodded the horses. When the church door was broken down with axes the choir was found filled with women who, with their arms crossed, were weeping and shouting. The noise was deafening. The gendarmes finally dragged them away, as they refused to walk.

Congressional Proceedings

Thursday, February 15, 1906. The Senate today began the consideration of the joint statedhood bill and for an hour and a half listened to a speech by Mr. Dick in support of the measure as reported from the committee on territories. Mr. Dick did not conclude his remarks. A bill prohibiting the unlawful wearing of the insignia of the G. A. R. and other soldier organizations was passed. At 3:45 p. m. the Senate went into executive session, and at 5:15 adjourned until Monday.

The House today passed a bill to increase to $20,000 a year the annual federal appropriation to each state and territory for the support of agricultural experiment stations and another measure repealing the present law granting American registers to foreign ships wrecked and repaired on the American coast, in the discretion of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, and requiring a special act of Congress to grant such registers. Mr. Payne sought to get through his bill for the consolidation of customs collection districts, but a furious opposition developed and by a roll call a large majority voted against it. An indirect compliment was paid to Mr. Longworth by the House when, at 5:18 p. m., adjournment was taken until Monday.

Monday, February 19, 1906. Senators Perkins and Patterson presented petitions signed by thousands of colored and white women, requesting that Reed Smoot be ousted. Discussion of the pure food bill occupied most of the day. A message was received from the President submitting the reports of the consulting engineers in regard to the type of the Panama Canal and the report was referred to the committee on interoceanic canals. Mr. Hale presented the conference report on the urgency deficiency appropriation bill, which was adopted after debate. At 5:15 p. m. the Senate adjourned until to-morrow.

Under suspension of the rules three bills were passed. The first, aimed at Arizona and New Mexico, where gambling is licensed, profits gaming in the territories of the United States. The second provides for additional work by the census bureau by requiring statistics on insurance, fisheries, electrical industries, savings banks and crimes. City of Mexico dispatch: The Mexican postoffice department has endeavored to perfect arrangements with the Chinese government whereby a packet post and postal money order business could be established for mutual benefit of both countries and especially in aid of the Chinese subjects here, who make continuous remittances to China, but the reply is that as China does not belong to the postal union nothing can be done and it is intimated that China prefers direct shipments of cash to that country.

PRESIDENT'S DAUGHTER A HAPPY BRIDE

Ceremony that United in Marriage Miss Roosevelt and Congressman Nicholas Longworth Takes Place in the Famous East Room in the Executive Mansion at Washington

Before perhaps the most conspicuously august assembly that ever graced the famous East Room in the Executive Mansion, Miss Alice Roosevelt, eldest daughter of the President, was united in marriage to Nicholas Longworth, Congressman from Ohio, shortly after 12 o'clock Feb. 17. It was the first White House wedding in nearly twenty years, and, according to the usual reckoning, the twelfth in number.

Since the day that Frances Folsom became the bride of Grover Cleveland at the White House many things have happened. A new era has dawned upon the country. Nations pay the United States homage now; there were but the formal amenities then. And, moreover, that was the quietest of weddings, where this one was all that taste and display and unlimited social power could make it.

And so, to say nothing of the great

House wedding the occasion of having eighteen bridesmaids. If Miss Alice Roosevelt had bidden eighteen of her girl friends to be maids she would have been obliged to ask fifty if she would not give offense. The result was that it was decided not to have any bridesmaids or even maid-of-honor. Her sole attendant was her little half-sister, Miss Ethel Roosevelt, flower girl.

With Mr. Longworth it was a simpler proposition. He had the conventional wedding party of eight ushers and a best man. His best man was his brother-in-law, the Viscount de Chambrun, who married Miss Longworth. The Viscount is also one of Miss Roosevelt's closest men friends.

Thousands of other brides the land over have given their hearts and their hands to exactly the same words as Miss Roosevelt gave hers Saturday. The simple ceremony occupied barely Grant. This was in front of the large center windows on the east side of the room, which open out on the esplanade.

Never was a bride in a more imposing room than the great East Room, the show place of the beautifully simple White House. It is large and airy, and not incumbered with heavy hangings. It is finished in delicate white and gold, quite the appropriate setting for a beautiful wedding.

Of course the White House conservators were drawn upon largely for the flowers and plants. Orchids, white roses, carnations and white hyacinths were all used in profusion, with masses of potted azaleas and banks of palms and ferns. There was a floral bower over the prie-dieu, made of bride roses and white ribbons and twined with Southern smilax and laurel.

At one end of the room stands a dent of France will receive the President of the United States' daughter at some state function yet to be decided upon. Should Germany be included in this second wedding trip the Kaiser can be reckoned upon to show distinction and hospitality upon the daughter of the President.

The bride's trousseau has been the subject of much consideration. Every bit of it is American made, save those things which have come to her as wedding gifts. The single exception is just a few bits of lingerie from Paris.

Mrs. Longworth's going away gown was of Alice blue, with a hat to match. She wore her beautiful silver fox fur to set off the costume. The skins are a portion of the much-discussed twenty-three boxes of things which followed Miss Roosevelt from the Orient. These skins are of rare value and have been fashioned into a wondrous set.

interest that attached to the charming personality of the President's daughter, it was indeed a truly imposing function. Beside it the wedding of Nellie Grant to Algernon Sartoris more than thirty years ago seems indeed of little moment. The nation was then just emerging from the gloom of four years' civil war. Times were hard; foreign nations gave but scant notice to a land that had just barely preserved its unity and was billions in debt.

But to-day all is changed. Another President's daughter is married. Kings and potentates, senators and ruling assemblages of all lands hastened to do the bride honor and thereby to honor her father and the great world power over which he has been elected the Chief Magistrate.

A most notable company was present. Every ruling sovereign was represented in person. High officials were there; gold lace tricked out hundreds there. No American assemblage gathered together ever had the éclat of this.

But for all that, there was the purely romantic side. It is a love match pure and simple. Young Mr. Longworth had to plead his suit very diligently. There were plenty of others who might have aspired; many of them far richer than this young Congressman from Cincinnati. But it was not a match for money. The Longworths are well-to-do, but there are thousands of richer persons in the land. The Roosevelts are comfortably fixed, but by no amount of figuring could any of the President's family be made out as any way approaching a fortune of a million. Miss Alice has an income herself of $3,000 a year from her mother's estate.

Young Mr. Longworth first met Miss Roosevelt when he came to Washington to serve his first term as Congressman, a little over two years ago. They were thrown together almost from the first, and though gossip mentioned a possible engagement months ago, nothing was made public until last December, when the President made formal announcement of the betrothal.

Miss Nellie Grant made her White

ten minutes. The music lengthened this to about twenty minutes.

Custom requires no altar in a private dwelling. Instead there was a prie-dieu, at which the couple knelt during the prayers, and nothing more. Miss Roosevelt joined her father upstairs and came down the grand staircase on his arm. Preceded by the ushers and little Miss Ethel, with her basket of flowers, she entered the room with her father.

At the right of the clergymen Mr. Longworth was standing with his best man. Mr. Roosevelt handed his daughter to the bridegroom and stepped aside to the left. When Bishop Satterlee asked, "Who giveth this woman?" Mr. Roosevelt stepped forward and placed Miss Alice's hand in that of Mr. Longworth. Stepping back again, that ended his part in the ceremony.

The wedding marches from "Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Lohengrin" were played as processional and recessional. Then there were two hymns, "Be Thou Faithful Unto Death" from "Elijah" and "Is Our Wedding Morn," by Pontiatowski. The vested choir from St. John's sang and afterward the Marine Band played.

Miss Roosevelt was married in exactly the same spot as Miss Nellie grand piano, covered entirely with gold leaf and hand painted in exquisite panels. On the sides of the instrument are the coats-of-arms of the thirteen original States, and inside the lid is a beautiful allegorical painting. This piano was used as an accompaniment to the choral music.

There followed a reception lasting till 3 o'clock, but the happy couple hurried away before that for their honeymoon, to be spent down South at the estate of a wealthy friend of the Roosevelts. When Congress adjourns Mr. and Mrs. Longworth will take an extended jaunt in Europe. There Mrs. Longworth will be presented at the court of each country she visits by the American Ambassador or Minister.

And first of all, it will be at the Court of the King of England, at the hands of Ambassador Reid. Doubtless His Majesty will entertain Mrs. Longworth himself at some notable function. The Reids will also give a series of brilliant affairs at which the President's daughter will meet the cream of Britain's nobility and gentry, as well as royalty.

And then there will be delightful visits to Paris, where the Longworths will be the guests of the Viscount and Viscountess de Chambrun, the latter Mr. Longworth's sister. The Presi-

There is a wide collar with stole effect, which reaches down the back and almost to the hem of her skirt in front. There is a muff to match of the prevailing large, flat shape. This lining of the furs is of pale gray brocade satin.

Miss Roosevelt as Mrs. Longworth will have two homes. One will be in Cincinnati—beautiful home of the bridegroom's mother. It derives its name from the number of rocks that make their home in the ancient trees about the place. It is the home, too, of the beautiful china originated by Mrs. Bellamy Storer, wife of Ambassador Storer, who is a member of the Longworth family.

The other is the Washington home. This is the Jones house, in Eighteenth street. It was built by the late John Davies Jones of Cincinnati. It is extremely bright and attractive, standing on the corner of Eighteenth and I streets, N. W.

And it is whispered that some day Miss Roosevelt hopes to have another Washington home—the White House.

She has told her fiancé that he must be re-elected Congressman, and then she looks forward to another such career for her husband as her father has had, with the Presidency as its ultimate goal.

RIGHT TO MADE LAND CLAIMED

Contest State's Effort to Secure Pay for Riparian Accretion.

Knapp, Haynie & Campbell, counsel for the Illinois Steel company, have filed an answer to the information filed against the company in the superior court at Chicago by State's Attorney Healy some time ago to declare the title to the reclaimed lands in the state of Illinois and to compel the Illinois Steel company to recompense the state for the time the lands it has in Lake Michigan have been used, and also to order the company to surrender the lands and pay proper compensation for the use of the property. The answer admits that much of the land now occupied by the company is reclaimed or "made" land, and declares that, although the title to the submerged lands along the shore is in the state, abutting property owners have the right to use the lands. It is alleged that if the company should be forced to remove buildings now on the land in dispute that the mill would have to suspend operation and many thousands of employees would be without work. The jurisdiction of the court and the right of the state's attorney to bring the information are also contested.

SUNDAY CLOSING SUIT PLANNED

Reform League Asks a Rehearing on Mandamus Application.

Mandamus proceedings to compel Mayor Dunne of Chicago to close the saloons on Sunday will be instituted in the Cook county courts by the Sunday Closing league, if the state supreme court rules favorably on a motion presented at Springfield for a rehearing of the proceedings which the league recently sought to institute before that tribunal. The court at that time refused the league permission to file a petition for a mandamus, on the ground that the supreme court could not take original jurisdiction of the proceedings. The ruling went further, however, and declared that mandamus proceedings against the mayor for the purpose desired would not lie in any court. This barred the league from the lower courts as well, but Attorney Robert J. McMurphy, representing the league, hopes to persuade the court to reverse its ruling so far as the merits of the case are concerned.

The number of persons employed on Illinois railroads in 1905 was 115,447, an increase of 9,617 over 1904, while there was paid to officers and employees $1,267,797.

PLAN TO PRESERVE THE BLUFFS

Historic Elevations Along Rock River Are Claiming Attention.

An endeavor to preserve the historic and picturesque bluffs along Rock river and preliminary steps in the commercialization of the beautiful valley are being pushed simultaneously. Members of the Historical society are behind the former project and business men of Dixon, Oregon, Grand Detour and other places are directing their efforts toward the success of the plan to convert the stone of the historic bluffs into a valuable commodity—cement.

Navigation of the stream for a distance of thirty miles, between Sterling and Oregon, is one of the schemes which enter into the present status. Prosaic business men and the Historical society are nearer of a common opinion on that phase of the situation than upon any of the other numerous interests to be considered. Congress will be petitioned to require a sufficient lock for small steamers to be placed at the Grand Detour dam, which the house and senate at this session granted the Sandusky Portland Cement company of Sandusky, O., permission to construct.

If congress requires the locks placed at the dam it will be possible for small sized steamers to ply between Dixon and Oregon.

Emulating the example of Col. Frank O. Lowden, a number of wealthy people have bought up tracts along the Rock River valley and these they will model into ideal country places. Value of navigation, principally for the fascinating diversion of boating and the number of people who would be attracted to the valley in consequence, is foreseen by those who are now preparing a long petition which will be presented to congress.

Congressman R. R. Hitt introduced the bill permitting the construction of a dam at Grand Detour and he will be appealed to by the petitioners who desire that adequate locks be provided.

Meanwhile preparations of the Sandusky Cement company, which is building a huge cement mill near Dixon, are being pushed. The company will expend hundreds of thousands of dollars in the construction of the Grand Detour dam and their cement mills. Utilizing the latent power of the Rock river, the cement company will convert it into electricity, which will be used in running the cement mills.

Surveyors for the Northwestern and Illinois Central railway companies are laying plans for the building of a joint switch to the cement properties. These preparations to level the historic Rock river bluffs, with their legends of the Black Hawk war, while being sorely disappointing to members of the Historical society, are looked upon favorably by other interests.

SCHOOL FUNDS ACT IS UPHELD

Joliet Court Sustains Rights of Township Treasurer.

Judge Debell of the Circuit Court at Joliet decided that the act passed by the Illinois legislature changing the custody of the city school funds from the city treasurer to the township treasurer is valid. The city treasurer claimed that the act was illegal, and refused to turn over the city money to the township treasurer. The town collector has school tax money to deposit, and appealed to the court for a ruling. The case probably will go to the Supreme Court.

Jealous Lover Shoots Girl.

Jealous of the attentions paid Miss Anna Greesser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Greesser, by a rival, Roy Christ, aged 23 years, shot the young woman four times at Elgin. The tragedy occurred at the corner of Kimball and Center streets. Leaping back to the seat of the United States mail wagon, which he was driving, Christ whipped up the horses and after he had gone about half a mile put a bullet through his heart and fell over dead.

Gives City 200 Acres.

A tract of land containing 200 acres was donated to the city of Dixon by Miss Charlotta Russell Lowell of New York city, to be used for a public pleasure ground, to be called "Lowell park." The land adjoins "Hazelwood," the summer home of State Senator H. Hughes. The tract was purchased by her father, Charles Russell Lowell, an officer in the union army during the civil war and who died in 1864.

UNCOVERS MORE RASCALITY

Deed of People's Bank Made Out to Rev. Mr. Simmons.

Receiver John B. Wilton of the People's Savings bank discovered the deed to the bank building, which had been missing since the minister killed himself. While the building was bought with the funds of the bank, the deed was made out to George H. Simmons only, thus revealing an effort to swindle his partner, Rev. E. L. Kelly, who owned a half interest with him. The discovery of the deed has caused consternation among the 900 depositors of the bank. It had been regarded as the chief asset, its value being placed at $40,000. As it is in the name of Dr. Simmons the widow will receive her dower rights and the personal creditors of the estate an allowance of their claims, the residue, if any, going to the depositors pro rata.
