LARGEST ENROLLMENT IN HISTORY OF GENOA SCHOOLS

Gain of Twenty-nine Over Last Year—Football Team Organized—Several School Notes

By Abiram Crawford
School opened last week Monday with the largest enrollment in its history. Two hundred fifty-one reported Monday and there are at least six more, who are now in Wisconsin, to report later.

The enrollment last year was 228 and the year before 211. The increase this year has been at both ends, there being 27 entering the primary room. The grades show up as follows:

High School.....61
Grammar, grades 7 and 8.....42
Intermediate, grades 5 and 6.....40
2nd primary, grades 3 and 4.....63
1st primary, grades 1 and 2.....45

The high school has had a steady increase since last year, the total attendance then being 49. There are nineteen tuition pupils in the high school, nearly one-third the total number. There are seven tuition pupils in the grades, making a total of 26.

The boys, for the first time in the history of the school, are trying hard to organize a football team. They are practicing three and four nights a week. It has been figured that a team can be made with an average of at least 140 pounds. Many parents are opposed to the game, but Prof. Stout will let no candidate don a suit on the gridiron without a doctor's certificate and parents' consent. Lencil Foote and Alva Sowers have consented to coach the team and their services are much appreciated.

Geo. Evans of the class of '05 left Tuesday morning for the state University at Champaign where he will take up a four years' business course, this making four in attendance from here. His many school friends wish him a successful career at college.

John Downing started to school again Monday, being absent the first week on account of sickness.

Misses Gish and Kline are the new assistants in the high school. They are capable young ladies coming from well regulated schools.

Elmer Harvey, class '05, is now working at the Galewood yards on the C. M. & St. P. this side of Chicago.

The seats have been removed from the old grammar room which is now being used for scientific purposes. Mrs. Haines now has charge of the 7th and 8th grades.

The girls are working in for basket ball by playing tennis, on a court at the rear of the school building.

Tortured Farmers

Three robbers battered in the door of the house of Andrew and John Forhen, wealthy farmers living near Algonquin Monday night, bound the two men after giving them a severe beating and took $360 from them. The thugs then placed burning newspapers at the feet of the farmers in an effort to find out the location of valuable papers which they are reputed to keep hidden about the place. Although suffering intense agony both refused to reveal the secret. After searching the premises the thieves left in two carriages.

Butter Still at 21

The price of butter on the Elgin board of trade still sticks at 21 cents. There were no sales Monday. The same price prevails in New York.

A WONDERFUL MACHINE

The Steam Dredge Which is Working North of Genoa

The steam dredge which is being employed in widening the ditch on the Simes, Gilkerson and St. John farms northeast of Genoa is a wonderful machine and it is well worth traveling the distance to see it in operation. Excavation is made by means of two huge buckets or scoops which hold nearly a yard of dirt. The scoops work with remarkable rapidity and throw out a large quantity of earth in the course of a day. Operations were commenced last Monday at the creek east of the Simes residence, north of the St. John school house. One hundred rods were covered during the week, and the machine left behind a perfect ditch with sloping banks.

Considerable difficulty was experienced in running thru the Simes property owing to the nature of the soil and bottom. The land is nothing but spongy bog, actually floating on quick sand. When the ditch was dug thru this the sand would cave in, making it necessary to cover the same ground twice to clean up.

With judicious tiling this piece of land which is now practically useless will be worth $100 per acre and raise excellent crops, there being no less than four feet of black soil above the sand.

The dredge is operated entirely by one man who has a bewildering number of levers before him while four or five others are occupied in laying the track.

WHO WERE THEY?

Two Genoa Boys "Blow Out the Gas" at Belvidere

(From the Belvidere Republican)

"Two young men from Genoa 'blew out the gas' at the Julien House on Thursday night and an open window is all that saved them from asphyxiation.

"They came into the hotel at midnight and secured a room, retiring almost immediately. They had been having a strenuous day at the fair and about town, but did not appear at the time to be much the worse for wear.

"Next morning they did not arise very early and they were awakened by hammering on the door. Both of them were sick, but able to get up and dress and leave the room, murmuring 'O, what a feeling in the morning.' It was soon discovered, however, what the matter was with them. The gas jet was wide open and gas pouring into the room. The fact that the window was wide open and that it was late when they went to bed saved them from a worse experience and probably death.

"One of them stated that he knew all about this gas business, having slept in the hotel when he was at the fair last year, but that he had left the matter to his friend, who must have blown the gas out."

John Hammond Dead

John Hammond, the aged father of Contractor Jas. J. Hammond of this city, died at his home in Hampshire Monday after a lingering illness. The funeral was held at the Catholic church in Hampshire yesterday forenoon at ten o'clock, Rev. Father Huth officiating. Our fellow citizen has the sympathy of all in his bereavement. His father was one of those good hearted souls whom it was always a pleasure to meet. In his death Hampshire has lost one of her oldest settlers and best citizens.

A CALIFORNIA LETTER

R. S. LORD AND FRIENDS ENJOYING THE COAST CLIMATE

Describes the Peculiar Sensations as Experienced in an Earthquake—No Rain for Months

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 4, '05. Mr C. D. Schoonmaker, Editor Republican-Journal Genoa, Ill.

Dear Sir:— Perhaps you would like to know how the Genoa people in Los Angeles are standing hot summer weather. I can say that at the present writing we are all well and enjoying fine health and good appetites, especially the latter since quitting the restaurants and obtaining board in a private family, where we get grub more on the order of home cooking. But I am willing to wager most anything that all of us would be glad to put our feet under mother's table again.

Last week was the first week of hot weather we have had this summer, which is said to be remarkable for this climate, as the hot weather generally begins early and lasts until the first rains of winter. Nearly every morning has been foggy and cool until ten or eleven o'clock when it would clear up and for the rest of the day be bright and fair, not even getting hot enough to be disagreeable. But last week Monday it came upon us all of a sudden with 95 degrees in the shade. Tuesday it got up to 101, but since then it has been gradually cooling off until today and especially tonight a coat feels good. We have had no rain for several months, but if it arrives as early as last year we will have a good shower in about three weeks, and it certainly would be pleasing to everyone.

Also there has been no rain it does not seem to effect the quality or quantity of fruit or vegetables in the local market. Watermelons and muskmelons are grown here in large quantities. Watermelons can be had at five cents apiece and you can get almost as many muskmelons as you can carry away for that amount. Peaches and pears are simply elegant and at the same time cheap. Berries of all kinds are nearly always on the market.

No doubt you have read of the earthquake that Los Angeles experienced last Saturday evening, but unless you have been in one you cannot experience the peculiar sensations that come over a person when he realizes what it is. I was lying in bed at the time, and I'm right here to tell you, as George Burkank would say, that the sensation of fear that took possession of me when the furniture about the room began to rattle, was different than anything I ever experienced before. Not much damage was caused about town other than cracking a few walls and chimneys. This was the first earthquake in this vicinity since a year ago last Christmas, and which was of about the same severity as this.

On Sunday morning Irvin and I had a most delightful visit with Miss Mary Donahue, who was in the city for three days on her way home to Illinois. She has been in California about eight months and thinks it about right as nearly everyone else does who comes here. It is without doubt a fine place to come to to escape the hard winters back east, but for my part I don't think, with its dust laden air in the summer, it is the healthiest place on earth.

Los Angeles is certainly a most remarkable city in more ways than one. It has doubled its population in five years, the school census which was recently completed giving it a population of over 200,000. Large business blocks are being erected in all parts of the city and are nearly always rented before completed. It is the second city in the United States in the number of automobiles owned and operated, only New York City outranking it. It has the finest street car systems in the world and new lines are being added every week.

Miss Laura Gilbert, one of Irvin's former teachers, recently made him a pleasant call at his place of work and I wish to say right here that if any Genoa people come to Los Angeles, we will certainly be glad if they do not call on us at 402 Temple St.

Please give our best wishes and regards to all our friends and hoping you are enjoying life and health the same as we, I will close for this time. As ever yours,

ROBERT H. LORD

P. S. The Republican-Journal is a very welcome weekly visitor to our room and is always thoroughly read as soon as received.

WOLVES ARE BOLD

SEVERAL IN THIS VICINITY WORRYING FARMERS

Several Hunters Out After Them Saturday but were Unsuccessful—Loss of Pigs and Lambs

It would behoove all little boys and girls to get in early nights for bold, bad wolves are in the land looking for whom they might devour. Up to this time, however, the prowlers have given their attention to lambs and little pigs and seem to have no desire to meet a member of the human race. The animals have made their presence known for some time and in several ways but are extremely cunning, even more so than their ancestors who were numerous in this part of the country years ago. They are never seen in daylight, but at night they pay their visits to the barn yards. Just how many there are is not known, but judging from stories told by farmers north of the city there must be several. They are particularly partial to Floyd Rowen's sheep and have caused him no little annoyance during the past month. Their barking has frequently been heard. C. A. Goding went out with his beagle hounds last week and traced the animals to a place on Deer creek, but as the hounds are not built for wolf hunting they refused to approach the lair.

Six or seven hunters went out Saturday and found several caves or holes in the ground on the Co-hoon place but the wolves were evidently not at home.

DESTROYED THE SHOES

Shoes Made by "Unfair" Company Burned by Union at Marengo

The fight of the union men against an "unfair" shoe company in Elgin has resulted in the burning of every shoe made by that company, which could be found in Marengo stores. The unions there are allied with those of Elgin and the bonfire of footwear was made in an effort to assist the strikers of the latter place.

Every shoe dealer in Marengo was visited by a committee from the Molders' union and every "unfair" shoe found was purchased. They were gathered together and placed on a pile of wood in the main street of the town. The wood was ignited. When the flames caught the shoes the crowd cheered.

Hostilities against the shoe factory began in Elgin three months ago when the men were locked out. A month ago the company opened its factory, announcing that its employees would be hired on individual contracts only.

The company spoken of is the Selz, Schwab company, against whom the Elgin union shoe workers declared strike July 17th of the present year. The sympathy of the Marengo union people has given encouragement to the local union arrayed against the "unfair" company, says the Belvidere Northwestern.

Pleasantly Entertained

A small party of friends were entertained by Mrs. J. A. Patterson at her home on Sycamore street last Thursday evening in honor of the Misses Laura and Lillie Catillier and Mrs. Alma Garean of Chicago. The evening was pleasantly spent at card tables and a delicious lunch was served. Miss Catillier and Mrs. C. A. Patterson rendered several instrumental selections. The following were present:

BELVIDERE DEFEATED

In a Loosely Played Game Sunday the Goats take Another

The Goats won another game Sunday, the Belvidere Grays being the victims on their own grounds. The Grays are strong and are an even match for Genoa. The Belvidere Republican has the following to say regarding the game:

"Hard luck came to town yesterday and camped on the trail of the Belvidere Grays.

"After they had the ball game with Genoa practically won and were living on Easy street with a score of 4 to 1 chalked up on the blackboard, Mr. Hard Luck stepped into the game, passed out a base on balls and other kinds of disaster, and then in the ninth inning, with two out and two strikes on the third man, he put a crimp in Buckman's dexter finger, and the next minute a wild pitch shot over toward the backstop, while the winning run came trotting in from third.

"Just to show what Hard Luck is, it may be stated that Buckman struck out three men in the ninth inning with the score a tie. He had the third man all but down and out when the catastrophe happened.

"For seven innings the game was a fine contest. Belvidere got one in the second, two in the third and one in the fifth, getting an aggregate of six hits. Genoa got one in the second and were blanked for six of the first seven innings. In the eighth a base on balls, a series of errors and a hit netted three runs, and the winning was scored as above detailed. A close decision at second had an important bearing upon the final result of the game.

"The Genoa team played a good game of ball and ended strong."

BIG WAR VESSEL IS DESTROYED

Admiral Togo's Flagship, the Mikasa, Blows Up in Harbor at Sasebo.

FIVE DEAD, WITH 251 MISSING

Japanese Grieve Over Loss of Battleship That Had Become Endored to Them Through Success in Battle Under Togo.

London, Sept. 13.—The loss of Togo's flagship, the battleship Mikasa, sunk Monday morning in the harbor of Sasebo, comes as a tragic anti-climax to the horrors of the war.

According to the official report given out by the Japanese navy department at Tokio Tuesday morning, 599 lives were lost when the Mikasa was destroyed.

Later reports seem to mitigate the horrors of the disaster. A dispatch to the Times says that the casualties include five men killed, 343 wounded, and 251 missing.

These figures which total 599, indicate that at least 343 men were rescued from the battleship, wounded, but still alive; that five of the dead have been recovered and that 251 are missing. The presumption is that the 251 missing men either were killed by the explosion or drowned when the ship went down.

Another dispatch from Tokio says that of the officers on board one was killed and eleven wounded, while five are missing.

There is also some indication that the battleship is not so seriously damaged as first reports indicated. Dispatches from Tokio say the ship sank in shallow water and that it probably can be refloated and repaired.

Story From Tokio. Tokio, Sept. 13.—Admiral Togo's flagship the battleship Mikasa, was destroyed by the explosion of its magazine at 1 o'clock Monday morning, in the harbor at Sasebo.

The official announcement of the disaster stated that 599 lives were lost. The explosion of the magazines was caused by a fire, which was discovered in the hold, at the base of the mainmast, shortly after midnight. The origin of the fire is unknown.

The flames spread in the interior of the battleship with great rapidity. Other warships lying at anchor in the harbor at once sent detachments of officers and men to assist in the work of fighting the fire.

The presence of the men from the other warships on board added to the casualties, as many of them were killed or drowned. Thus many of the warships in the Japanese navy are represented on the death list.

The crews of the several ships fought the flames heroically despite the constant danger of the explosion of the magazines.

The energies of the officers and men were directed to preventing the flames from reaching the big forward magazine, it being believed that the magazine aft was in less danger of being reached by the flames.

An hour after the discovery of the fire the aft magazine exploded, blowing a great hole in the port side of the battleship. The huge craft sank almost in an instant.

Nearly all of the men on board at the moment of the explosion were below decks, fighting the flames. When the explosion came the magazine was surrounded by swarms of men. Some of them were killed instantly. Others were either so badly wounded or so completely stunned by the concussion that they were unable to reach the deck or even a porthole.

Many of those who were on deck and well forward sprang or were thrown into the water and were picked up by boats from the other ships.

The disaster to the battleship Mikasa has cast a gloom everywhere. The Mikasa was Togo's flagship and was endored to the hearts of the people. Great relief was felt throughout Japan when it was learned that Admiral Togo was not on board the ship at the time of the fire.

An investigation is now being held to determine the cause of the fire.

MINISTERS QUIT THEIR LEGATIONS

Foreign Representatives Are Forced to Take Refuge in City of Tangiers.

FORMER BANDIT IS DEFENDED

Soldiers Refuse to Assist Raisuli in His Efforts to Defeat Rebels, Claiming Sultan Has Recalled His Appointment as Governor.

Tangier cable: Samuel R. Gummere, the American minister to Morocco, was compelled to abandon his legation in the suburbs of Tangier Sunday and take refuge in the heart of the city, owing to the battle between the insurgent tribesmen and the force under Raisuli, the former bandit chief.

The battle, which began Saturday morning, continued through the day, the firing being so close to the outskirts of the city that the entire population is panic stricken.

All foreign legations have been closed, the ministers coming into the city with their families. Many of the foreigners are taking refuge in shipping in the harbor.

Fear Clash Inside City. There is a general fear that the rebels will force their way into the city and that the fighting will be transferred to the streets.

Raisuli has summoned all his followers to his aid. He has 500 Moorish cavalry under his orders and four companies of Moorish infantry.

The city is crowded with thousands of refugees from the surrounding districts.

The Moroccan authorities admit their inability to protect lives and property of foreigners except within the walls of the city.

The rebel tribesmen are the Angeras and they number several thousand well armed, mounted men.

Villages Are Raided. Early in the present month the Angeras raided three villages under Raisuli's authority near Tangier, driving off large herds of cattle and sheep, a portion of which was the property of Europeans. Raisuli collected a band of followers and started in pursuit, and in several skirmishes that ensued several men on both sides were killed or wounded.

At the same time the rebels burned Seinat, where Raisuli has established his headquarters, a day's march from Tangier.

Raisuli's mother was taken prisoner, and her fate is not known.

Sultan Sends Troop. Couriers were at once dispatched to Fez with intelligence of the uprising and the sultan was urged to send troops to put down the rebellion.

The troops arrived, having been seven days on the road. They are quartered within the walls of the city and so far have not taken any part in the fighting.

The danger in the situation lies in the fact that the sultan's troops refuse to assist Raisuli in his efforts to defeat the rebels. It is claimed that the sultan has dismissed Raisuli, whom he recently appointed governor of the roads between Tangier and Fez.

It is believed that the English and French governments will send warships to Tangier at once.

The American people are beginning to discover that the Golden Gate is the front door to the orient. While the nations officially are contending for political settlement in Asia, the flood of travel has started through San Francisco bay in pursuit of commercial opportunity in every region beyond the Pacific slope. Time was, not long ago, when the point to move from was on the other side of the continent. But that is changed now. The momentum is westward and the activity radiates from the metropolises of California. The people who think of going to the orient realize that when they pass the Golden Gate they enter at once into an extensive area of unexploited possibilities. — Arthur I. The Short Knitted Jacket

JOAN OF THE SWORD HAND

By S. R. CROCKETT, Author of "The Raiders" &c.
(Copyright, 1898, 1900, by S. R. Crockett.)

CHAPTER I.

The Hall of the Guard.
Loud rang the laughter in the hall of the men-at-arms at Castle Kernsberg. There had come an embassy from the hereditary Princess of Plassenburg, recently established upon the throne of her ancestors, to the Duchess Joan of Hohenstein, ruler of that cluster of hill statelets which is called collectively Masurenland, and which includes, besides Hohenstein, the original Eagle's Eyrie, Kernswald also, and Marfenfeld.

Above, in the hall of audience, the ambassador, one Leopold von Dessauer, a great lord and most learned councillor of state, sat alone with the young duchess. They were eating of the baked meats and drinking the good Rhenish up there. But, after all, it was much merrier down below with Werner von Orseln, Alt Pikker, Peter Balta, and Joha of Thorn, though what they ate was mostly but plain ox-flesh, and their drink the strong ale native to the hill lands, which is called Wendish mead.

"Get you down, Captains Jorian and Boris," the young duchess had commanded, looking very handsome and haughty in the pride of her twentieth years, her eight strong castles, and her two thousand men ready to rise at her word; "down to the hall, where my officers send round the was-sail. If they do not treat you well, even come up and tell it to me."
"Good!" had responded the two soldiers of the Princess of Plassenburg, turning them about as if they had been hinged on the same stick, and starting forward with precisely the shame stiff hitch from the halt, they made for the door.

"But stay," Joan of Hohenstein had said, ere they reached it, "here are a couple of rings. My father left me one or two such. Fit them upon your fingers and when you return give them to the maidens of your choice."

And with their rings upon their little fingers the two burly captains went down the narrow stair of Castle Kernsberg. Being arrived at the hall beneath they soon found themselves the center of a hospitable circle. Gruff, bearded Wendish men were these officers of the young duchess; not a butterfly youngling nor a courtly carpet knight among them, but men tanned like shipmen of the Baltic, soldiers mostly who had served under her father Henry, foraging upon occasion as far as the Mark in one direction and into Bor-Russia in the other, men grounded and compacted after the hearts of Jorian and Boris.

It was small wonder that among such congenial society the ex-men-at-arms found themselves presently very much at home. Scarcely were they seated when Jorian began to brag of the gift the duchess had given him of the maiden of his troth.

"And Boris here, that hulking colobd, that Hans Klapper upon the house-tops, had well-nigh spoiled the jest; for when her ladyship asked him for a second time in her sweet voice for the name of his betrothed, he must needs lay his tongue to Gretchen, instead of 'Katrin,' as he had done at the first!"

Werner von Orseln, the eldest and gravest of all, glanced round the full circle of his mess. Then he looked back at the two captains of the embassy guard of Plassenburg with a pitying glance.

"And you lied about your sweet-hearts to the Duchess Joan," he said.
"Ha, ha! Yes! I trow yes," quoth Jorian jovially. "Wine may be dear,

"But stay," Joan of Hohenstein had said, but this ring will pay the sweets of many a night!"

"Ha, ha! It will, will it!" said Werner, the chief captain, grimly.
"Aye, truly," echoed Boris, the mead beginning to work nuttily under his steel cap, "when we melt this—ha, ha!—Katrin's jewel, we'll quaff many a beaker. The Rhenish shall flow. And Peg and Moll and Elisabeth shall be there—yes, and many a good fellow—"

"Shut the door!" quoth Werner, the chief captain, at this point. "Sit down, gentlemen! Captains Jorian and Boris, you do not seem to know that you are no longer in Plassenburg. Here are no tables of Karl the Miller's Son to hamper our liege mistress. Do you know that you have lied to her and made a jest of it?"
He spoke very slowly, leaning toward them and punctuating his meaning upon the palm of his left hand with the fingers of his right. "If I, Werner of Orseln, were now to walk upstairs, and in so many words tell my lady, 'the sweet, easy princess,' as you name her, Joan of the Sword, as we are proud—"

"Joan of the Sword! Hoch!"
The men-at-arms at the lower table, the bearded captains at the high board, the very page boys lounging in the niches, rose to their feet at the very name, pronounced in a voice of thunder-pride by Chief Captain Werner.

"I thank you, gentlemen, on behalf of my lady, in whose name I command here," said Werner, bowing ceremoniously to all around, while the others settled themselves to listen. "Now, worthy soldiers of Plassenburg," he went on, "be it known to you that if (to suppose a case which will not happen) I were to tell our Lady Joan what you have confessed to us here and boasted of—that you lied and double lied to her—I lay my life and the lives of these good fellows that the pair of you would be awing from the corner gallery of the Lion's Tower in something under five minutes."

Jorian rose to his feet. "Up, Boris!" he cried; "no-Bor-Russian, no keru of Hohenstein that ever lived, shall over-crow a captain of the armies of Plassenburg and a soldier of the Princess Helene—Heaven bless her. Take your ring in your hand, Boris, for we will go up straightway, you and I. And we will tell the Lady Duchess Joan that, having no sweetheart of legal standing, and no desire for any, we choused her into the belief that we would bestow her rings upon our betrothed in the rose gardens of Plassenburg. Then we will see if indeed we shall be awing in five minutes. Ready, Boris?"

"Aye, thrice ready, Jorian!"

"About then! Quick march!"

A great noise of clapping rose all round the hall as the two stout soldiers set themselves to march up the staircase by which they had just descended.

"Stand to the doors!" cried Werner, the chief captain, "do not let them pass. Stand up and drink a deep cup to them, rather! To Captains Jorian and Boris of Plassenburg, brave fellows both!"

The toast was drunk amid multitudinous shoutings and handshakings. The two men had stopped perforce, for the doors were in the hands of the soldiers of the guard, and the pike points clustered thick in their paths. They turned now in the direction of the high table from which they had risen.

"Sit down, gentlemen, and I also will sit. Now hearken well," said Werner; "these good fellows of mine will bear me out that I lie not. You have done bravely and spoken up like good men taken in a fault. But we will not permit you to go to your deaths. For our Lady Joan—God bless her—would not take a false word from any one, not if it were on Twelfth Night or after a Christmas merry-making. She would not forgive it from your old Longbeard upstairs, whose business it is—that is, if she found it out. 'To the gallows!' she would say, and we—why, we should sorrow for having to hasten the stretchings of two good men. Keep your rings, lads, and keep also your wits about you when the duchess questions you again. Nay, when you return to Plassenburg, be wise, seek out a Gretchen and a Katrin and bestow the rings upon them—that is, if ever you mean again to stand within the danger of Joan of the Sword in this her castle of Kernsberg!"

"Gretchen are none so scarce in Plassenburg," muttered Jorian. "I think we can satisfy her—but at a cheaper price than a ring of rubies set in gold!"

CHAPTER II.

The Baiting of the Sparhawk.

"Bring in the Danish Sparhawk, and we will bait him!" said Werner. "We have shown our guests a poor entertainment. Bring in the Sparhawk, I say!"

Through the black oblong of the dungeon doorway there came a lad of seventeen or eighteen, tall, slim, dark-browed, limber. He walked between two men-at-arms, who held his wrists firmly on either side. His hands were chained together, and from between them dangled a spiked ball that clanked heavily on the floor as he stumbled forward rather than walked into the room. He had black hair that waved from his forehead in a backward sweep, a nose of slightly Roman shape, which, together with his bold eagle's eyes, had obtained him the name of the Spar or Sparrowhawk.

Werner von Orseln turned to his guests and said, "This Sparhawk is a little Dane we took on our last foray to the north. It is only in that direction we can lead the foray, since you have grown so law-abiding and strong in Plassenburg and the Mark. His uncles were all killed in the defense of Castle Lynar, on the Northern Haf. We know not which of these had also the claim of fatherhood upon him. At all events, his grandad had a manor there, and came from the Jutland sand-dunes to build a castle upon the Baltic shores. But he had better have stayed at home, for he would not pay the Peace Geld to our Henry. So the Lion roared, and we went to Castle Lynar and made an end—save of this spitting Sparhawk, whom our master would not let us kill, and whom now we keep with clipped wings for our sport."

The lad listened with erected head and haughty eyes to the tale, but answered not a word.

"Now," cried Werner, with his cup in his hand and his brows bent upon the youth, "dance for us as you used upon the Baltic, when the maids came in fresh from their tiring and the newest kirtles were donned. Dance, I say! Foot it for your life!"

The lad Maurice von Lynar stood with his bold eyes upon his tormentors. "Curs of Bor-Russia," he said at last, in speech that trembled with anger, "you may vex the soul of a Danish gentleman with your aspersions, you may wound his body, but you will never be able to stand up to him in battle. You will never be worthy to eat or drink with him, to take his hand in comradeship, or to ride a tilt with him. Pigs of the sty you are, man by man of you—Wends and boors, and no king's gentlemen!"

"Hans Trenck, lift this springald's pretty wrist-bauble!" said Werner.

At the word the man laid down his partisan and lifted the ball high between his two hands.

"Now dance!" commanded Werner

"Pigs of the sty you are—man by man of you!"

von Orseln, "dance the Danish milk-maid's coranto, or I will bid them drop it on your toes. Dost want them jelled, man?"

"Drop, and be cursed in your low-born souls!" cried the lad fiercely. "Untruss my hands and let me loose with a sword and ten yards clear on the floor and, by Saint Magnus of the Isles, I will disembowel any three of you!"

"You will not dance?" said Werner, nodding at him.

"I will see you fry in hell fire first!"

"Down with the ball, Hans Trenck!" cried Werner. "He that will not dance at Castle Kernsdorf must learn at least to jump."

"Ware toes, Sparhawk!" cried the soldiers in chorus, but at that moment, suddenly kicking out as far as his chains allowed, the boy took the stooping lout on the face, and incontinently widened the superficial area of his mouth. He went over on his back amid the uproarious laughter of his fellows.

The fellow rose, spluttering angrily.

"Hold his legs, some one," he said. "I'll mark his pretty feet for him. He shall not kick so free another time."

A couple of his companions took hold of the boy on either side, so that he could not move his limbs, and Hans again lifted high the ball.

"Now, then, for marrow and mashed trotters!" he cried, spitting the blood from the split corners of his mouth.

"Halt!"

A Filmflam.
Senator Depew was explaining to a clergyman the slang term of "filmflam."

"To filmflam," he said, "is to confuse a man's mind to such a degree that he actually consents to, and concurs in, his own cheating."

"Now, permit me to give you an illustration of filmflam."

"A boy goes to a grocer and asks for a pint of molasses."

"Put the molasses, sir," he says, "in this pitcher."

"The grocer draws the molasses in a pint measure, pours it into the pitcher and hands it to the boy."

"But the boy, looking at the measure, exclaims:

"See here, you haven't given me all my molasses. There's some still sticking to the bottom of the measure."

"Oh, that's all right, sonny," says the grocer easily. "There was some in the measure before."

"Thereupon the filmflammed boy goes off content."

Beating of Dead Hearts.
Hearts of cold-blooded animals will beat for a comparatively long time after death or removal from the body (if kept cool and moist), because of powerful internal collections of nerves, known as ganglia, whose automatic impulses cause the regular contractions of the muscles. Similar ganglia exist in man and other warm-blooded animals, but their action is less prolonged. Scientists have ascertained that a turtle's heart will beat after removal, if put on a piece of glass, kept cool and moist, and covered with a bell-jar. I believe it has been known to beat 36 or even 48 hours; 12 or 14 hours is a common record.—St. Nicholas.

THE STORY OF THE TELEPHONE

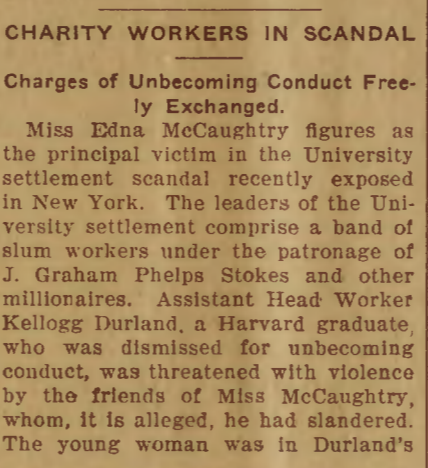

Bell Family Peculiarly Adapted to Work Out Problem.

A writer in Harper's Weekly makes some interesting remarks concerning Alexander Melville Bell, the father of the distinguished patentee of the telephone, who died recently. The sequence of studies that led to the telephone is interesting to trace. We have Bell, the grandfather, a teacher of elocution; Bell, the father (who has just died), trained by his father in a mastery of vocal speech and devoting most of his life to teaching the deaf to speak. He is credited with the invention of invisible speech and with the method of lip-reading which enables deaf persons to see the spoken words they cannot hear. Bell, the son (Alexander Graham Bell), trained to the hereditary profession and taught to concern himself with sounds and the conveyance of them, was also devoted in early life to the training of the deaf to speak and in the use of visible speech. The great development in the use of electricity that came thirty-five years ago found him with his mind already occupied with problems of sound and its transmission, and the Bell telephone followed.

CHARITY WORKERS IN SCANDAL

Charges of Unbecoming Conduct Freely Exchanged.

Miss Edna McCaughy figures as the principal victim in the University settlement scandal recently exposed in New York. The leaders of the University settlement comprise a band of slum workers under the patronage of J. Graham Phelps Stokes and other millionaires. Assistant Head Worker Kellogg Durland, a Harvard graduate, who was dismissed for unbecoming conduct, was threatened with violence by the friends of Miss McCaughy, whom, it is alleged, he had slandered. The young woman was in Durland's employ and he is said to have broken off an engagement with her, alleging that she was addicted to the use of opiates.

RUSSIAN AND JAP COMPARED.

Envoys of Warring Countries Both of Pronounced Type.

A London writer says Sergius Witte belongs to the mastiff type, Baron Komura to that of the weasel. The Russian envoy's manners are notoriously bad, so bad that he rarely enters the czar's presence without making some courtier's hair stand on end. Genial as he is by nature, he is often rough and off-hand, and sometimes he is quite brutal in his callousness; he tramples conventionality under foot ruthlessly and calls spades spades in a fashion that his enemies dub indecent. The Japs' manners, on the contrary, are exquisite. His courtesy is as kindly as it is ceremonious, and there is something quite touching in the gentle deference he shows to all whom he meets, even while allowing not one of them to approach him too nearly. Just as M. Witte is a staunch democrat, Baron Komura is an aristocrat by instinct.

No Gambling at State Fair.

Springfield will probably have a state fair week this year without public gambling. If so it will be without precedent. State's Attorney Hatch has opened war on the resorts in the city, and irrespective of any arrangements the city officials have made, is raiding the gambling houses and making numerous arrests.

Minister Weds Missionary.

Rev. Dr. A. Lewis of Williamsport, Pa., was married at O'Fallon to Miss Georgia Hill of that city. The groom is pastor of the First Baptist church at Williamsport. The bride is a missionary and only recently returned from Cuba.

Girl Wearies of Life.

In an attempt to commit suicide, Miss Bessie Lum, of Morrison, filled her eyes with cayenne pepper and turned on the gas in her bedroom. When rescued the pepper had blinded her for life and she was declared insane.

Perry County Jailer.

Sheriff Henry Winthrop, of Perry county, has appointed Capt. Jeff King, of Pinckneyville, as deputy sheriff and jailer to succeed Ezra Woods, who died recently at Tamaroa.

Motor Car Auction.

In London the business of auctioning off automobiles of all vintages has been established for more than two years, and the scale on which it is done is eye-opening. The extent of such transactions may be imagined from the fact that it is said that one house alone in the world metropolis shows an average weekly turnover of $50,000. The establishment in question seldom houses less than $100,000 worth of cars at a time, all of which are on view at the bi-weekly sales.—Motor World.

SUIT TO TEST DIVORCE LAWS

Period of Insanity Between Alleged Cruelty and Wife's Plaint.

A peculiar suit for divorce has been filed in Whiteside county, involving the construction of the law which prohibits the granting of a legal separation because of insanity. So far as is known no similar proceedings have ever been filed in Illinois. Mrs. Georgia Kitzmiller, wife of former Representative James V. Kitzmiller, is the complainant. Cruelty is the charge and the acts complained of date back thirteen and fourteen years. They consist for the most part of threats. In 1903 Kitzmiller was adjudged insane and was sent to the hospital at Jacksonville. He has spent much time there, and it is understood that he has quite recovered his reason. Recently he returned to the home of his father in Girard, where he is now living. Whether the acts of cruelty complained of and which occurred so many years ago can be set up as proper grounds for divorce in a case where a period of mental irresponsibility has intervened, is the important question to be decided. Kitzmiller at one time was prominent in central Illinois politics. He was a man of more than ordinary energy and ability.

RICH SON MUST ASSIST FATHER

Court Orders Ironmaster to Contribute to Support of Aged Parent.

Frank Henneboehle, wealthy South Chicago ironmaster, who refused to make his aged father, Casper Henneboehle, spending money, because, as he said, he used it to buy lottery tickets and visit fortune tellers, was ordered to contribute $3 a week to his support by Judge Wheatley in the county court at Chicago. The elder Henneboehle, who is 77 years old, told the court that he did not want to live with his son, who has one of the finest residences in South Chicago. "I am ready to take him under my roof whenever he wants to come," the son told Judge Wheatley. "I will not give him money because he uses it to visit fortune tellers and to buy lottery tickets." Judge Wheatley ordered the son to pay $3 a week.

AIDS ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Edgar Eldredge, the newly appointed assistant attorney general of Illinois, has practiced law for fifteen years, and was assistant state's attorney of La Salle county from 1896 to 1900. He was born at Peru in 1867, was educated at Brown university, and after attending the Harvard law school was admitted to the bar in 1890. Mr. Eldredge is at present a member of the law firm of Fullerton & Eldredge of Ottawa. He is the second assistant to Attorney General Stead, the first assistant being former Judge George B. Gillespie.

DAMAGE SUITS.

James Holland, an engineer in the Illinois Central railroad yards at Centralia, has brought suit for $20,000 damages against the railroad company for injuries received while in its employ. Edward Cains, locomotive fitterman, is suing the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad company for $30,000 damages for personal injuries. Taylor, a detective, recognized Thomas Marshall, colored, who is wanted at Springfield on a charge of robbery, while at a South Side amusement park at Chicago, and after following the man for ten minutes she caused his arrest. Miss Taylor recognized the man from a photograph as a fugitive wanted for robbery at Springfield.

Opposes Traction Line.

Injunction proceedings have been begun by the village of Ridgely, a north suburb of Springfield, to restrain the McKinley syndicate from building an interurban railway line through the village. This may cause an indefinite delay in the construction of the road from Bloomington and Lincoln to Springfield.

Fights City Ownership.

The corporation controlling the street car system and other utilities is to continue its fight against the transfer of the plant of the Springfield electric light, heat and power company to the city. It is said the injunction case pending in the circuit court will not be abandoned.

ROBBERS TORTURE BROTHERS

Apply Fire to Feet of Aged Men in Effort to Get Wealth.

Bound, gagged and tortured by fire by three bandits who sought to make them reveal the hiding place of treasure they thought concealed in the house, Andrew and John Fohren, old and wealthy farmers, living near Spring Lake, twelve miles north of Elgin, are in a serious condition and it is feared that the shock and injuries may prove fatal to Andrew, the elder of the two brothers.

Andrew, after the robbers had searched the house and taken $360, managed to free himself from the thongs which bound him, and started across the fields to secure help. The soles of his feet were blistered, however, and before he had gone far he fainted and fell in a ditch, where he lay until after daylight. Finally he revived and made his way to a cheese factory, where he gave the alarm, but the bandits had gained a start of several hours and could not be found.

The bandits appeared at 11 o'clock Saturday night, and when refused admittance battered in the door and overpowered the old men after a brief struggle. They then searched the house and finding only $360 concluded that a larger sum was concealed somewhere. They beat and choked their victims and finally applied lighted papers to the soles of their feet to make them tell where the supposed treasure was hidden.

After half an hour of excruciating torture John Fohren fainted from pain, and the robbers left. John was still unconscious when assistance arrived Sunday morning, but revived and is in a less serious condition than his elder brother.

Reopen Mine Dispute.

A committee appointed at a mass meeting of machine miners of coal in the Chicago and Alton subdistricts to protest against the action of the state executive board of the United Mine Workers of America in signing an agreement with operators that no shot firers be employed in machine mines, sent a telegram to National President John Mitchell at Indianapolis, appealing from the decision of the state executive board. The telegram asks that President Mitchell render a decision in the matter.

Suspect Maniac of Murder.

The strange death, in pastures only a few miles apart, of two Jackson county boys within a week, from wounds resembling that of a knife thrust, has given the authorities a deep mystery. The first victim was Heber, 8 years old, and the second, Willis, the 9-year-old son of William Clutts. It is believed that the boys were killed by a maniac. The country and town are terrorized, and mothers keep children at home.

VOLUME TWO

With this issue the Republican-Journal begins the second volume. During the coming year as in the past it will be the publisher's ambition to publish all the news that is fit to print. We realize that many personal items are overlooked. This is not thru any negligence on our part however, but a case of not knowing the facts. It is simply impossible for one person to hear all these little news items unless he is assisted by others. For this reason we earnestly desire the assistance of all friends of the paper. Stop the editor on the street or wherever you see him and tell him a few things he does not know. It will be appreciated.

With this issue the paper is enlarged from a six page six column to an eight page seven column, thus adding thirteen columns of reading matter. This change has been made only after careful study of the situation. We know that the result will be beneficial to the publisher and are confident that our readers will also like the change.
