

CITIZEN POLICE ORGANIZED HERE

Unit of the Department of Constabulary for Genoa Protection

INSPECTOR L. J. KESSEL HERE

Members are Duly Authorized Constables in Any Part of State Outside Chicago

Genoa residents can sleep in peace insofar as worry over raids by Chicago outlaws is concerned. It was announced yesterday that a citizen police, properly armed and trained, has been organized for the purpose of taking care of any emergency which may tax the resources of the regular police officers.

A unit of the Department of Constabulary has been organized here by Inspector L. J. Kessel, chief organizer for the department. The purpose of the constabulary is to prevent crime and in the event of crime being committed to assist in the apprehension of the criminals. Its members are duly authorized constables with all the powers of the constable in any part of the state, except in the City of Chicago where the municipal court act has abolished the office. In Chicago the members of the organization work in cooperation with the police and the sheriff's office, and have taken part in the capture of some of the most notorious criminals including that of Edward Morris, the gunman who killed Policeman Mullen.

It is expected that similar cooperation will exist between the Genoa authorities and the Genoa branch of the constabulary. The department of constabulary originally existed as an anti-crucifix society, but in the war period, with many of the most efficient police officers on the firing line it became expedient to form a citizen police composed of reputable business men, in order to cope with the crime wave which swept Chicago. So successful was the organization in Chicago that at the request of a number of other cities branches were organized there and finally it was decided to make the organization statewide.

Although the state organization is still in process of formation the various units in the towns and cities outside of Chicago are functioning very effectively and the record for the last year was so successful that Indiana business men appealed to Walter P. Stuart, general superintendent of the organization, to form a constabulary in Indiana. This is being done now.

In the last year the constabulary in Chicago alone recovered an average of one stolen car a day, obtained more than 1,000 convictions of criminals and assisted in the apprehension of the most desperate criminals known to the police. Among them were Morris, slayer of Mullen, members of the notorious Cardinelli gang and the Gold Coast burglars. A long list of men wanted by the police were picked up by constabulary members and turned over to the police.

In addition, the constabulary made it possible for the sheriff to clean out a number of notorious vice resorts and to break up a number of hangouts of crooks in the towns adjacent to Chicago.

In addition to having an organized citizen police force membership in the constabulary, it gives Genoa the right to call upon the central office in Chicago for any assistance it may need in the event of an unusual invasion of crime. The central office is always ready to furnish experienced men, speed automobiles and cooperation from every unit in the territory affected in the event of an emergency arising in any town in which a unit of the organization exists.

THE BUZZ SAW

Clarence Eiklor is carrying his right arm in a sling, it having come out second best in a contest with a buzz saw last Friday. The flesh was badly lacerated between wrist and elbow, but no arteries nor cords were touched. Mr. Eiklor was about to oil the saw bearings when the sleeve of his jacket was caught by the saw.

RATS!

Rat Exterminator E. J. Seaver of Beloit, Wis., has been engaged to rid the city of Harvard of its rats and mice. He will be paid $500 for the job which will start soon.

MANY WERE FINED

Seventy Thousand Innocently Fined To Comply With Law

Due, in the majority of cases, to misunderstanding of exemptions, more than 70,000 persons last year were assessed a nominal penalty of from $5 to $10 for failure to file an income tax return for 1919, although their income for that year was not taxable.

The delinquents last year were persons whose income exactly equaled the amount of the allowable exemptions and who considered it unnecessary to file a return and others whose income because of dependents was nontaxable, but who nevertheless were required by law to make returns. The bureau of international revenue therefore, this year is emphasizing the fact that the requirements to file a return are based solely on a person's marital status and the amount of his or her income for 1920. Single persons with net incomes for 1920 of $1,000 or more and married persons with net incomes of $2,000 or more, must file a return regardless of whether their incomes are nontaxable.

Returns of Married Persons

The exemption of $2,000 allowed married persons applies to the combined income of husband and wife, to which must be added the income of dependent or minor children. A common error is for both husband and wife to claim exemption, which is designed to cover essential living expenses. This exemption may be claimed by either or may be apportioned between them as they may elect.

If the income of either husband or wife for the year 1920 was more than $5,000, each should file a separate return. This is for the purpose of computing correctly the surtax on incomes in excess of $5,000, which applies separately to the net income of husband and wife, and not to the combined net income.

Exemption Not For All

Not every married person is entitled to the $2,000 exemption. The claim is dependent upon whether man and wife are living together within the meaning of the revenue act. In the absence of continuous residence together, whether a man or woman, depends upon the character of separation.

Unavoidable absence of a wife or husband at a sanatorium on account of illness, does not preclude a claim for exemption. If, however, the husband voluntarily and continuously makes his home at one place and the wife at another, they are not living together within the meaning of the income tax laws regardless of their personal relations. In case of separation by mutual agreement each must make a return of income of $1,000 or more. The same rule applies in case of divorce or legal separation. A maid or widow not the head of a family without dependents is entitled only to a $1,000 exemption.

ANNUAL MEETING

Twelfth District of Illinois Agricultural Association

H. T. Marshall of Serena was again chosen to represent the 12th district on the executive committee of the I. A. A. at the annual meeting in Chicago on January 13 and 14. Mr. Beckett is one of the eight members to return for another year of work on this governing committee. Seven new members were elected to take the place of retiring committee men. As the committee meets from one to two days in Chicago every month and the individual working committee are composed of executive committee members, a great deal of service is required by these representatives.

Howard Leonard of Woodford Co. was re-elected as president, by acclamation. Z. H. Holmes of Peoria county was also re-elected as vice-president. The two days' session was taken up with business matters, election of officers, and speeches by agricultural leaders.

DeKalb county was represented by nine men. They were H. A. Lanan, G. W. Dunton, C. B. Wetson, A. U. Dodge, A. J. Plapp, F. B. Townsend, G. W. Dunton and N. E. Clausen. The voting delegate from this county were G. W. Dunton, F. B. Townsend and H. A. Lanan.

THEY MADE HIM HONOR THE FLAG

Huntley Man Forced to Apologize for Alleged Disloyal Statements

EX-SERVICE MEN ARE ANGRY

They Take Jaster to Legion Rooms For Hearing and Make Him Carry Flag

Elgin News: Enraged at reports of disloyal statements alleged to have been made by August Jaster, wealthy farmer residing three miles from Huntley, ex-service men of Huntley Saturday captured the fifty-two year old dairyman while he was taking milk to a station near his home and secured from him public statements of his loyalty.

Jaster, who was born in Germany is a naturalized American citizen, was quoted by ex-service men of Huntley as having made statements claiming that the United States was wrong in going to war against Germany and that funds of the Red Cross and Salvation Army which were not used in the war would be given to England, and therefore would not contribute.

The rumors of statements said to have been made by Jaster have enraged the Huntley ex-service men ever since their return from war and they have conducted an investigation. As the war ended, Jaster became more bold, the service men claimed, and he made statements a number of times in which he declared "Germany has not been treated right."

Forced to Carry Flag

Saturday in the Legion hall at Huntley Jaster denied that he was unpatriotic and swore allegiance to the United States and to the American flag forever.

After the session in the Legion chambers in which he was given a severe grilling and warned against disloyalty, an American flag which is the property of the Huntley post of American Legion was unfurled and the farmer was made to carry it through the streets of Huntley before the large crowds from Huntley and surrounding places. Jaster bore the flag without flinching and showed no signs of anger during the parade through the streets.

It was while Jaster was on his way to Ceyne station to send milk away to Chicago that he was taken by service men of Huntley, numbering more than thirty, and taken into Huntley to show why he should not be classed as disloyal.

No Violence Tolerated

William Amos, vice commander of the Huntley American Legion, who was in charge of the morning's affair told the service men before going after Jaster at 6:45 o'clock:

"Boys! remember there must be no violence. We must give him a chance to state his case and we must show him why he is wrong."

The grilling in the Legion headquarters took considerable time and it was after 9 o'clock when Jaster, with the flag and accompanied by the service men came down stairs from the hall and began his march up the main street. He had sworn to always be loyal to the United States and the flag.

The demonstration ended at 10 o'clock and Jaster left smiling. During the demonstration one of his sons attempted to stop the activities but was told not to interfere. The ringing of the fire bell called residents out for the affair.

The only son of Jaster that was eligible for the draft was exempted on plea of his father who said he needed him for work on his farm.

TO BEAUTIFY CAMPUS

Normal School Grounds to be Ornamentally Lighted

If elaborate plans now before the legislature and in other stages of promotion are consummated there will be some marked improvements in the equipment at the state normal in DeKalb.

One of the improvements is up to the contractors for bids and will probably be reported on in a few days. It is the lighting of the normal grounds with a handsome boulevard light system which has been planned for some time.

The system as laid out includes 39 handsome lights which would fringe the grounds and all the drives, making the pretty campus as beautiful by night as it is by day.

CONFUSION IN RELIEF

Two Distinct Funds Being Raised in This Country

Confusion in the public mind regarding the scope of the European Relief Council of which Herbert Hoover is chairman, has resulted in diversion of subscriptions meant for the Near East Relief to the former organization.

The Near East Relief is the only relief agency operating in Asia Minor, having taken over the work of the Red Cross. It is incorporated by Congress and gives aid to the homeless and hungry from the Caucasus on the north to Jerusalem on the south and from Constantinople on the west to Erivan capital of Armenia, on the east.

The people aided in this great area are former allies of the United States in the world war. They include Greek refugees fleeing before the Turkish Nationalists, and Armenians who are the prey of Turks, Kurds and most recently, the Russian Bolsheviks.

The European Relief Council was not organized to feed STARVING children. Its aim is to furnish additional food to the UNDERNOURISHED children of former enemy countries of the United States. The bulk of this relief is needed and will go to Germany, Austria and Hungary. The Hoover organization plans to furnish one meal a day in the homes, schools and public gathering places of Central Europe and because but one meal is provided, it is possible to provide this aid for one child until the next harvest for $10.

The European Relief Council does not operate in the Near East where the objects of relief—STARVING children—have no homes, no school-houses and no public gathering places but the deserts and are wholly dependent upon the philanthropy of Americans for all or any of their meals.

Because of the similarity of names and purpose, hundreds of persons are under the impression that the European Relief program includes feeding of starving Armenians. This is an error.

OLD LANDMARK BURNS TO GROUND

Residence Known as the Foote House in West End of City

DESTROYED TUESDAY MORNING

Fire Department Called Out Twice—No Water Main Near the Scene

The residence known as the "old Foote house" in the west end of the city was burned to the ground early Tuesday morning. The fire department made a brave attempt to reach the flames, but the nearest hydrant is located at the piano factory, the end of the water main, and the fourteen hundred feet of hose was about two lengths too short. The chemical engine was called into service, but nothing could be accomplished as water in the cistern was low and soon gave out. All that could be done then was to remove the furniture and watch the old landmark burn. The house at the time was occupied by Eugene Mallioux and family.

The first alarm was turned in shortly before one o'clock by C. W. Parker, who resides near the scene of the fire, he having been requested to do so by Mr. Mallioux. Firemen found a smouldering fire beneath the floor and soon had it extinguished. Chief Jeffery remained on the job until 2:30 and then being assured by Mallioux that he would watch vent home.

The semesters are here. Some of us are going to be relieved and happy, and as is always the way, a few will feel somewhat like Napoleon felt after Waterloo; only Napoleon felt that his mind would be mighty lucky.

Perhaps after the load is off our minds we can wake up. We've been as dead as Methuselah was old. Other schools are wide-awake, up and doing. So was the G. T. H. S. once; why not now? We have everything needed but pep. Of course the "Freshies" have an abundance of it as is usually the case, but they are young and thoughtless. Would that the rest of us were! The aged and dignified Seniors look back with seeming disdain upon the records of the actions of their youthful, irresponsible years. But they sigh and murmur to themselves, "Them was the days," and roll beseeching eyes upward.

Those days will come again if, by discovering some long lost, mysterious method, we can inoculate ourselves with that elusive germ, Pep.

NOTES

The Senior program for last week was conducted by Earle Obright. Reports were given by Paul Molthan and Floyd Gustafson, humorous reading by Ruth Austin, and a piano solo by Frieda Kohn.

The chairman for next week's program is Eunice Berkley. Those on the program are Zelma Storm, Evelyn Patterson, Earle Obright, and Ervin Locker.

Miss Irvin of Chicago will take Mrs. Moore's place after the first semester.

Miss Nelson of Belvidere has taken the place of Miss Hensler who has been teaching the third grade.

The final examinations will take place in the latter part of this week, beginning Wednesday afternoon and finishing Friday afternoon.

CAN'T BE DONE

City of Peoria Must Refund to Soft Drink Dealers

By a recent decision of the supreme court cities and villages of Illinois may not impose a license for the sale of soft drinks. In Westville, Ill., it was determined to test the ordinance imposing a license and one dealer was arrested, and the case carried to the supreme court. The finding establishes an important precedent under which the city of Peoria will have to refund over $9,000.

The soft drink license ordinance in Peoria, imposing an annual license of $50 payable quarterly at the option of the dealer, became effective July 1, 1920. Under it 375 dealers paid $12.50 for the quarter ended October 1, and several paid for the entire year, amounting to nearly $5,000. On October 1, 1,335 dealers paid $12.50 each for the quarter ending January 1, amounting to over $4,000.—Streator Daily Independent Times.

A want ad will find a buyer.

Shortly before five o'clock Mallioux again called Mr. Parker and requested him to turn in the alarm. This time the firemen found the blaze near the ceiling, but owing to the fact that no water was available, all that could be done was to remove the furniture and let the house burn.

The Foote property, which included about one acre of ground, was recently put up at auction and purchased by "Skip" Weber of Kingston.

Both house and furniture were insured.

IN SIX WEEKS

PERHAPS LONGER

Prosperity will Again Arrive in the United States of America

"BIG BUSINESS" IN PREDICTION

Shelves of the Nation are Depleted—Factories Must Get Busy Soon

A Washington letter says that Congress is doing but little chancing, and the appropriations for the year's business will doubtless exceed four billion dollars. Mr. Burleson's airplanes will be suspended, and mails will return to the railroad routes. The Shipping Board will be given equally reduced appropriations—and in these measures a few "measly millions" will be saved—it partially wrecking our new merchant marine for want of sufficient money to permit it to function is "saving." In any event burdensome taxes cannot be escaped in the present year. In Washington one watches the figures of the Treasury, the Federal Reserve Board, the results of the many surveys of agriculture, industry, labor, crop reports, etc. That forms the basis for identifying Government's relation to progress. The financial reports are very good, the situation with agriculture is equally bad—very bad. Over two million laboring men are unemployed. There are a lot of business smashes taking place, but the shelves of the nation are depleted—bare, in many cases. Factories must get busy. From the angle, therefore of Federal vision, the situation is 50-50.

"Big business" chips in its voice to observe, from its conning towers of industry and finance that "confidence is strong." And its prognostications are that in consequence there will be a revival of business activity. Government authorities are agreed with private institutions that the period of liquidation has about finished its work.

Just how correct the guesses may be, we cannot state—but a digest of all their predictions and prophecies, puts "Prosperity" still out at sea, and sailing towards American shores on a ship that will arrive within six weeks to six months. If she does not land somewhere within that broad interval of time, then every statesman, every prophet, and every son of a prophet, is very much mistaken in signs.

HAVE THEM IN JAIL

Men Who Robbed DeKalb Store Some Weeks Ago

The case against Edward Erickson, alias E. Eggerson, alias E. Mosher, and Herbert E. Jenkins, alias Harry Hayes, alias B. Tucker, etc., charged with burglarizing the clothing store of Carlson & Benson at DeKalb was taken up in Justice Mitchell's court in Sycamore on Monday, but a change of venue was taken to Justice W. F. Sell. Erickson was discharged and Jenkins held. In the case against these defendants, charged with burglarizing the Swanson home, north of Sycamore, Erickson and Jenkins were held to the grand jury under $2,500 bonds each. Not being able to give bail they were taken back to the jail to await trial. Erickson and Jenkins, were the occupants of the mysterious mud-spattered Jeffery car, who were arrested at Kenosha, Wis., released under suspicion at the Illinois state line and told "to move on." The mysterious Jeffery appeared at the Ward House, where it was left out doors all night, while the occupants registered under other names than their own. This car was seen at the Swanson home where the robbery was committed, and at DeKalb where the Carlson & Benson robbery was committed.

Upon investigation it was learned the auto license was issued to Edward Erickson of Peoria, Ill., but the address proved to be a vacant lot.

Finally the suspects were arrested at Rock Island and brought to Sycamore by Sheriff Decker. In Erickson's shoe, under false sole, was found $600 besides about $125 in his pockets. The cases are attracting much attention.—True Republican.

For Readjustment of the Salaries of the Fourth Class Postmasters.

By SENATOR GEORGE H. MOSES, of New Hampshire.

The present plan of compensating postmasters of the fourth class, adopted in 1882, is by a system of percentage of the value of stamps cancelled on outgoing mail by those postmasters. The incoming and outgoing mail in those days were very nearly equal. But the introduction of the parcel post increased the volume of the incoming mail without compensation. A conservative estimate would place the incoming mail at six times the number of pieces outgoing.

The plan which I propose for compensating this class of postmasters is based on percentages of receipts. It follows the same plan used in determining salaries of postmasters of the first, second and third classes. It secures the same results as a salary plan while avoiding its discrepancies. It assures accuracy, reduces to the minimum the possibility of mistakes and assures their detection and correction should any occur. It requires no extra blank forms, books or records, and reduces to the minimum extra work for both the Postoffice department and the postmasters. It removes entirely the possibility of dishonesty, as receipts are recorded and checked quarterly by the auditor for the Postoffice department. It is equally fair to all offices of this class—large and small—regardless of the amount of receipts. It obviates the necessity of cancellation records, reducing the work of the postmaster and simplifying the accounting in the auditor's office.

It recognizes the fundamental principle upon which the fourth class office is established, namely, that fourth class postmasters must depend upon their business for a part of their livelihood until their offices attain the status of third class. The provision for an allowance of twenty per centum of the compensation for rent, fuel and light is very conservative. The provision that gives to the fourth class postmaster, who must furnish the equipment, the whole of the box rents collected is based on fairness.

This bill affects 41,600 fourth class postmasters, of whom 15,000 are in a class having from $100 to $300 of annual receipts; 5,000 having $350 to $400 annual receipts, and 20,800 with receipts ranging from $450 to $1,490. Their compensations in all these three groupings will range from a minimum of $125 to $999, thus bringing their salaries within the classification necessary for promotion to third class postoffices.

The "Movie Star" Business Has Been Overdone; Its Day Has Passed.

By J. STUART BLACKTON, Pioneer Producer.

While the services of famous actors and actresses, of both the so-called legitimate stage and the silent drama, will always be in demand, the time has passed when photoplays will be generally written, produced and directed simply to exploit the special charms and accomplishments of some particular person. That sort of thing has been much overdone by producers in the past, and as a consequence the productions have suffered. The great motion picture-going public has come to resent this policy on the part of the producers, and it is the taste of this public that producers must please.

The films of the future will be made from scenarios, either specially written for the pictures or adapted from stories and novels of the world's greatest writers. The productions will not necessarily be extravagant, but must be faithful to real life, and the direction of the pictures will not permit the star to carry off all the honors.

I do not feel that it is yet time to write, or even begin to write, anything like a history of the motion picture business. I believe that the photodrama of the present and of the future will play an all-important part in shaping the destinies of the world.

America Practical and Materialistic, But Idealistic in an Emergency.

By V. BLASCO IBANEZ, in American Magazine.

It is probably true that Americans try to earn money harder and with more persistence than people elsewhere. Americans enjoy money-making as a sport; and, besides, they feel that money is something necessary to their existence.

But Americans have learned, also, how to spend money with great generosity and for public and community good. Great universities, museums, public libraries and other institutions, established by the legacies of wealthy men and maintained by contributions from men actually living, are characteristic of America. The wealthy people of Europe do not, as a rule, spend their private fortunes that way. Europe does not know this great humanitarian impulse which is the glory of the United States.

The United States is a practical and materialistic people; and on this national trait American power in the world is based. But the United States becomes an idealistic people the moment a crisis in human affairs demands heroism and idealism. And this will be the grandeur of America in history.

Advantages of City Life on Surface; of Country Life Underlying.

By J. W. COVERDALE, American Farm Bureau Federation.

The drift from the farm to the city is not altogether due to the higher wages obtainable in the industrial centers. The city has been advertised beyond all reason. The appeal of the printed word is strong. The desire to get something for nothing, to earn a living without the prescribed sweat of the brow, is characteristic of all of us.

There is no spectacular side to country life. It has to do with the fundamentals. The advantages of city life are on the surface. The advantages of farm life are substantial and underlying.

There are very few real advantages of the city that cannot be brought to the country, but the fundamental advantages of free life in the country can never be transplanted to the city except to a very limited degree. For every advantage of the city there is a corresponding advantage of the country. For every disadvantage of the farm there are innumerable drawbacks to urban existence.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Organized Fight of Capital on the Closed Shop Becomes More Imminent.

ACTION BY MANUFACTURERS

Machinists Accuse the Railroad Companies—Plan to Stop Immigration Probably Killed—Harding Inauguration to Be Simple—Affairs in Europe.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

American industries and American business generally are beginning to "speed up" and the more optimistic, like Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation, declares there is nothing unfavorable to prosperity on the horizon. Prices of many commodities, including some lines of building materials, are coming down steadily, and in many plants wages are being reduced, in some instances the reduction being made by the employers and accepted by the men and in others being suggested by the workers themselves in order that the plants may be enabled to continue in operation.

All this is quite satisfactory to the ordinary citizen, but there is one dark cloud, despite the assertions of the optimists. This is the coming fight between organized labor and capital over the open shop. There are many signs that the issue will be joined soon. Last Wednesday the representatives of twenty-two state manufacturers' associations, in conference in Chicago, adopted resolutions pledging support for the open shop movement. In the discussion many speakers declared they would not employ union labor in their factories and mills, but when the vote was taken it was made clear that the resolution did not propose any discrimination against the holder of a union card. In substance the resolution was:

"It is recognized as fundamental in this country that all law-abiding citizens or residents have the right to work when they please, for whom they please, and on whatever terms are mutually agreed upon between employer and employee and without interference or discrimination upon the part of others."

"We hereby express our purpose to support these fundamental principles of American plan of employment by the maintenance of the open shop."

"We urge upon our members to secure by discussion and education the active support of workers, merchants, bankers and professional men and all other elements of their prospective communities in favor of American ideals and the open shop."

Only a few days previously an attorney for the International Association of Machinists presented to the interstate commerce commission a petition charging that the larger railroad companies have united in an open shop movement designed to disrupt unionism, and that they are this year "milking the United States treasury to the tune of $750,000,000 through their car repair manipulation." The companies, it is asserted, are closing their repair shops and giving the work to outside concerns which charge exorbitant rates, and in this way more than 30,000 workers have been thrown out of employment. According to the machinists, this drive on railroad shop workers is only one phase of a capitalistic "open shop" movement developing throughout the country, which has for its real object "disruption of all legitimate labor organizations and trade union agreements."

Closely connected with the question of labor is that of immigration and its restriction. The forces of organized labor have been in favor of the Johnson bill, which would stop all immigration for one year, and so have many other elements of the population, but late dispatches from Washington indicate that the bill is to be sidetracked by the senate committee and nothing done until the senators can formulate a permanent policy on immigration. In this they are yielding to the opinion of representatives of certain classes of employers, including the railroad, steel and coal people, who told the committee that the threatened "flood of immigrants from Europe" is a myth, and that there is no emergency warranting the passage of the Johnson measure.

Secretary Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor told the committee that the federation's demand was for straight-out protection from alien labor for a period of two years. He said that reports just received from labor officials in 141 cities showed the total number of unemployed in these places to be 1,819,372, and said he would not "dare estimate what the total of all cities would show."

Figures were submitted by Mr. Morrison showing the unemployed in Greater New York to be 300,000; Detroit, 150,000; Philadelphia, 235,000; Chicago, 200,000; Cleveland, 118,000; St. Louis, 40,000; Boston, 50,000; Milwaukee, 40,000; San Francisco, 15,000; Seattle, 9,000, and Pittsburgh, 20,000. In contrast to this, he showed, the net immigration, at present rates, would be 784,000 a year.

Avoided in order to set an example of economy and democratic simplicity, Mr. Harding last week caused to be canceled all the arrangements for an elaborate ceremony on the occasion of his inauguration March 4. At his request the citizens' committee called off the celebration it had planned and also the ball, and the joint congressional committee agreed that there shall be nothing doing except the administration of the oath to the President-elect and the delivery of his address, probably from the east porch of the capitol. This course naturally has peeved the business men and hotel keepers of Washington, but everyone else in the country heartily commends it.

Mr. Harding's conferences with prominent men are about over. Very soon he will leave Marion for Florida, where he will write his inaugural and presumably finish making up his mind as to his cabinet. Concerning the latter, it was interesting if not pleasant to read last week that the hyphenated German-Americans, newly organized into a league, were virtually to ask Mr. Harding to give a place in the cabinet to a German-American. A committee was selected to carry to Marion a list of men from which the President-elect might make a choice. The avowed desire of the new league to create an era of good feeling at home and abroad would meet with greater sympathy if it did not insist on the "German," and if it were not for the fact that one of its leaders is George Sylvester Viereck, editor of a magazine that was formerly the Fatherland and notorious for his pro-German activities during the war.

General Crowder is helping Cuba to get out of her political and financial tangle and the prospect is now that he will succeed. First he has taken up the matter of the recent presidential elections, recommending that the thousands of charges of fraud be cleared up speedily by grouping them and deciding representative cases. Then he will undertake to arrange the island's money troubles. The Cuban senate already has passed a measure for the extension of the moratorium for four months on a modified basis, a plan approved by President Menocal and probably by General Crowder. The Cubans are strongly opposed to the plan of the American bankers for taking over their financial institutions, which were collapsing. They said the bankers asked too high a rate of interest and too long a period for the loan offered. It is said the situation is unpleasantly complicated by the activity of our acting secretary of state, Norman H. Davis, who is reputed to have made a fortune in Havana under the regime of Gomez, one of the claimants to the presidency.

Discord between the British and French over the question of German reparations is further revealed by the downfall of the Leygues ministry in Paris. A large majority of the chamber of deputies fell in with the popular belief that Premier Leygues and his colleagues were too much under the influence of the British cabinet, which wishes that a reparations total be named far below what the French people have been led to expect. Because Leygues refused to outline his foreign policy before the meeting with Lloyd George, which was set for this week, the chamber declined to give him a vote of confidence and he and his fellows resigned. It was said in Paris the adverse vote was due partly to the action of the American government in withdrawing from the council of ambassadors, many deputies regarding this as showing America's lack of confidence in the French government.

Tchitcherin, foreign minister of soviet Russia, has defied the League of Nations to send an international army to the plebiscite region of Lithuania, and in a note to the Polish government has warned the allies that the soviet armies will attack any such force. He asserts the Vilna affair is not of concern to Poland and Lithuania alone, but that Russia also is vitally interested.

The Germans are tremendously excited concerning another proposed plebiscite, that in the coal region of Silesia, for they have convinced themselves that Poland is planning to seize that territory before the vote is held. It is said in Berlin that an army of 175,000 Poles has been concentrated near the Silesian border and at Posen for this purpose. The Poles certainly are getting ready for action, and are reorganizing their armies along French lines, but ostensibly they are preparing to meet the expected offensive of the Reds.

Mustapha Kemal Pasha has administered a severe blow to the Greeks in Asia Minor. Concentrating heavy forces secretly, he made a surprise attack on the Smyrna front, breaking through the Greek lines in three places and so threatening an encirclement that the Greeks were forced to retire toward the coast. The Turks captured several towns as well as many prisoners, and it looks as if they might bottle the Greeks up in Smyrna.

King Constantine thinks the French are carrying on a campaign to force the revision of the treaty of Sevres and to compel the Greeks to get out of the Smyrna region—and it is likely he is correct in his belief. He announced last week that he would not abdicate even if the allied nations should refuse to recognize him as the ruler of Greece.

Austria's distressful condition is growing worse daily, if that is possible. A few days ago it was reported that the government had notified the allied nations that it was ready to quit and turn over the country to the League of Nations to manage. The economic and political situation there seems hopeless. Nearly everyone has quit work, and a general strike has been ordered to begin Thursday of this week. Workmen declare they will remain idle until profiteering ceases, and demand that the deduction of the income tax from their pay envelopes stop until the capital levy law is put in force. The government has made drastic regulations against profiteering, but these often are disregarded and extortionate prices are asked for all commodities not under government control. The communists, of course, are ready to take advantage of the situation and start more trouble.

The treaty of Chicago, the pact which brings peace to the warring factions in baseball, was adopted and signed last week, and Judge Landis is now the supreme ruler of the national game. The magnates of the various leagues agreed to give him full power when they incorporated in the document a clause reading thus:

"In case conduct detrimental to baseball is charged, alleged or suspected, the commissioner (Landis) shall have jurisdiction to investigate and determine the facts; upon such determination he may take such preventive, remedial or punitive action as he deems appropriate, against any party hereto, any minor league club connected with the National association, or any individual, as the case may be."

GUINEA FOWL IN GREATER DEMAND

Of Big Value in Various Sections as Substitute for Many Game Birds.

MAKES GOOD AS POLICEMAN

Hotels and Restaurants in Large Cities Eager to Secure Young Birds Which Are Tender and of Fine Flavor.

The great majority of guinea fowl are raised in small flocks of from 10 to 25 upon farms in the Middle West and in the South, but a few of the large poultry raisers, particularly those who are within easy reach of the large Eastern markets, make a practice of raising a hundred or so guineas each year. Many farmers keep a pair or a trio of guineas as a novelty than for profit, and from these a small flock is raised.

Warms of Marauders. The guinea fowl doubtless would be more popular on farms were it not for its harsh and, at times, seemingly never-ending cry, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Peculiar Cry of Guinea Gives Warning of Marauding in Poultry Yard.

Agriculture. However, some people look on this cry as an argument in the guinea's favor, as it gives warning of marauders in the poultry yard. Similarly, their pugnacious disposition while sometimes causing disturbances among the other poultry also makes them show fight against hawks and other common enemies, so that guineas sometimes are kept as guards over the poultry yard. Often a few guineas are raised with a flock of turkeys and allowed to roost in the same tree, where they can give warning if any theft is attempted during the night.

Used as Substitute. The value of the guinea fowl as a substitute for game birds such as grouse, partridge, quail and pheasant is becoming more and more recognized by those who are fond of this class of meat and the demand for these fowls is increasing steadily. Many hotels and restaurants in the large cities are eager to secure prime young guineas, and often they are served at banquets and club dinners as a special delicacy. When well cooked, guineas are attractive in appearance, although darker than common fowls, and the flesh of young birds is tender and of especially fine flavor, resembling that of wild game. Like all other fowl, old guineas are very likely to be tough and rather dry.

RIDDING HENHOUSE OF MITES

Cleanliness and Disinfection Required to Destroy Parasites That Live on Fowls.

To rid the henhouse of the little red mite that stunts the hens so much requires cleanliness and disinfecting. The fith must be cleaned up, the house ventilated and the sunlight let in. Removable roosts and drop boards will help clean up the house. To disinfect the roosts and house everything should be painted or sprayed with a solution of two parts of oil and one part of stock dip. Applications should be made in pairs about five or six days apart in order to kill the mites that have hatched since the last spraying.

GREAT ASSISTANCE OF BIRDS

Little Feathered Songsters Do Much Toward Good Crop of Fruit by Devouring Insects.

A good crop of birds goes a long way toward a good crop of fruit. Encourage the children to feed the birds during the cold, stormy weather and in spring they will pay you a hundred-fold by clearing the orchards of insect pests.

SQUEALING PIG BEST

The pig that keeps still is the pig that sucks the most swill, runs a saying. Maybe so, but we have observed that the hungry porker who is always complaining to high heaven about his appetite usually proves a growthier, thrifter, and consequently more profitable individual than his tongue-tied brother.

CUSTOMERS SECURED FOR POULTRY SHOWS

Persons at Summer Resorts Buy Produce in Winter.

City People Have Inspected Producer's Farm and Know Under What Conditions Foodstuffs Are Raised—One Case Cited.

Many producers living near summer resorts supply produce in the summer months to the persons at the resorts, and during the other months of the year ship produce to these persons while they are in the city. This, say marketing specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, is one of the best methods of obtaining customers for direct marketing, as the producer and consumer have some acquaintance. In most instances the customers have been at the producer's farm and know under what conditions the articles are produced.

One man who lives near a summer resort in Indiana is about twelve miles from the nearest town of any size. He does not desire to drive to this town to dispose of his farm produce and is not satisfied with the prices that the bucksters pay. Consequently he built up a business of supplying products to resorters in the summer and of shipping produce by parcel post and express to these persons at their city homes in the winter.

The principal products shipped are butter, eggs and dressed poultry. This producer uses good shipping containers and packs produce attractively. As he is acquainted with his customers, he renders statements of accounts only once a month. In this way the matter of making payments is simplified for the customers.

This producer has had no trouble in establishing his business nor in retaining customers. He states that his only trouble has been in getting enough high-grade produce to supply all of his customers.

OBTAIN BEST HATCHING EGGS

One Male Should Be Used With Every 15 Hens Breeds Like Orpingtons or Rocks.

The male must be in the flock from ten to fourteen days before the eggs laid can be used for hatching purposes. After the male has been removed from the flock, hatchable eggs will be laid for about three weeks thereafter. To secure good, hatchable eggs, provide one male to every twenty leghorn or other egg breeds; use one male to every fifteen Rocks, Reds, Wyandottes or Orpingtons, and one male to each twelve Langshans, Brahmans or other meat breeds.

BARIUM POISONOUS TO RATS

Tests Indicate That a 20 Per Cent Mixture With Food Makes Most Satisfactory Bait.

A study of barium carbonate as a rat poison, made by the United States Department of Agriculture, indicates that a 20 per cent mixture with food makes a satisfactory bait. With this percentage a rat ordinarily needs to eat only one-third or three-eighths of a meal of average size to get a fatal dose. It was found that with this dose many of the rats poisoned died within 24 hours, though an occasional rat was found which survived an even larger amount, thus indicating that 100 per cent mortality is not to be expected in any case.

A summary of results of experiments conducted by various persons with a view to determining the deadliness of barium to different animals shows the fallacy of the assumption that barium is poisonous only to rats. It is pointed out that the fatal dose of barium per pound tends to decrease relatively as the size of the animal increases, and that a bait calculated to be fatal to rats may be assumed to be more or less dangerous to small domestic animals also.

SUCCULENT FEED FOR FOWLS

Now That Good Qualities of Forages Are Well Known Hens Should Be Given Ample Supply.

Everyone knows that a hen lays best when she gets the succulent grasses that first shoot out of the earth in spring. Most successful feeders use in their mashies a base of some heavy, nonfattening, yet nutritious food. For a long time the best feeders of the country used wheat bran for this base, but now that the good qualities of forages are well known the bill of fare should be changed to suit.

Feel All Worn Out?

Has a cold, grip, or other infectious disease sapped your strength? Do you suffer backache, lack ambition, feel dull and depressed? Look to your kidneys!

An Iowa Case John Newton, farmer, Anamosa, Iowa, says: "I had an attack of lumbago. A cold settled in my kidneys and back and caused severe pains in my hips and back. My back ached so I could hardly get around. I read in the paper about Doan's Kidney Pills, and I bought a box. They cured me entirely of the attack."

The major and I were raising his head, in the hope that some flutter of life might remain, when I heard a well-remembered voice at my side, and there was De Lissac, leaning upon his elbow, among a litter of dead Guardsmen. He had a great blue coat muffled round him, and his hat, with the high red plume, was lying on the ground beside him. He was very pale and had dark blotches under his eyes, but otherwise he was as he had ever been, with the keen, hungry nose, the wiry mustache and the close-cropped head, thinning away to baldness upon the top. His eyelids had hardly seen drooped, but now one could hardly see the glint of his eyes from beneath them.

"Halloo, Jack!" he cried. "I didn't thought to have seen you here, and yet I might have known it, too, when I saw friend Jim."

"It is you that have brought all this trouble," said I.

"Ta, ta, ta!" he cried in his old, impatient fashion. "It is all arranged for us. When I was in Spain I learned to believe in fate. It is fate which has sent you here this morning."

"This man's blood lies at your door," said I, with my hand on poor Jim's shoulder.

"And mine on his, so we have paid our debts." He flung open his mantle as he spoke, and I saw with horror that a great lump of clotting blood was hanging out of his side.

"This is my thirteenth and last," said he, with a smile. "They say that thirteen is an unlucky number. Could you spare me a drink from your flask?"

The major had some brandy and water. De Lissac sipped it up eagerly. His eyes brightened, and a little fleck of color came back into each of his haggard cheeks.

"It was Jim did this," said he. "I heard some one calling my name, and there he was, with his gun against my tunic. Two of my men cut him down just as he fired. Well, well, Edie was worth it all. You will be in Paris in less than a month, Jack, and you will see her. You will find her at number eleven of the Rue Miromesnil, which is near the Madeleine. Break it very gently to her, Jack, for you cannot think how she loves me. Tell her that all I have in is two black trunks, and that Antoine has the keys. You will not forget?"

"I will remember."

"And madame, your mother?—trust that you have left her very well. And monsieur, too, your father? Bear them my distinguished regards." Even now, as death closed in upon him, he gave the old bow and wave as he sent his greetings to my mother.

"Surely," said I, "your wound may not be so serious as you think. I could bring the surgeon of our regiment to you."

"My dear Jack, I have not been giving and taking wounds this fifteen years without knowing when one has come home. But it is well, for I know that all is ended for my Little Man, and I had rather go with my voltigeurs than remain to be an exile and a beggar. Besides, it is quite certain that the Allies would have shot me, so I have saved myself from that humiliation."

"The Allies, sir," said the major, with some heat, "would be guilty of no such barbarous action."

But De Lissac shook his head with the same sad smile.

"You do not know, major," said he, "do you suppose that I should have fled to Scotland and changed my name if I had not more to fear than my comrades in Paris? I was anxious to live, for I was sure that my Little Man would come back. Now I had rather die, for he will never head an army again. But I have done things that could not be forgiven. It was I that led the party that took and shot the Duc d'Enghien. It was I—ah, mon Dieu, Edie, Edie, ma cherie!" He threw out both his hands, with all the fingers feeling and quivering in the air. Then he let them drop heavily in front of him, and his chin fell forward upon his chest. One of our sergeants laid him gently down, and the other stretched the big blue mantle over him, and so we left those two whom fate had so strangely brought together, the Scotchman and the Frenchman, lying silently and peacefully within hand's touch of each other upon the blood-soaked hillside near Hougomont.

CHAPTER XV.

The End of It.

And now I have very nearly come to the end of it, and precious glad I shall be to find myself there, for I began this old memory with a light heart, thinking that it would give me some work for the long summer evenings, but as I went on I awakened a thousand sleeping sorrows and half-forgotten griefs, and now my soul is all as raw as the hide of an ill-sharred sheep. If I come safely out of it, I will swear never to set pen to paper again, for it is so very easy at first, like walking into a shelving stream, and then, before you can look round, you are off your feet and down in a hole, and can struggle out as best you can.

We buried Jim and De Lissac with four hundred and thirty-one others of the French Guard and our own light infantry in a single trench. Ah, if you could sow a brave man as you sow a seed, there should be a fine crop of heroes coming up there some day! Then we left the bloody battlefield behind us forever, and with our brigade we marched on over the French border on our way to Paris.

I had always been brought up during all these years to look upon the French as very evil folk, and as we only heard of them in connection with fighting and slaughtering by land and by sea, it was natural enough to think that they were vicious by nature and ill to meet with. But then, after all, they had only heard of us in just the same fashion, and so, no doubt, they had just the same idea of us. But when we came to go through their country and to see their bonny little steadings, and the donee, quiet folk at work in the fields, and the women knitting by the roadside, and the old granny with a big white smutch smacking the baby to teach it manners, it was all so homelike that I could not think why it was that we had been fearing and hating these good people for so long. But I suppose that, in truth, it was really the man who was over them that we hated, and now that he was gone, and his great shadow was cleared from the land, all was brightness once more.

We jogged along happily enough through the loveliest country that ever I set my eyes on, until we came to the great city, where we thought that maybe there would be a battle, for there are so many folk in it that if only one in twenty comes out it would make a fine army. But by that time they had seen that it was a pity to spill the whole country just for the sake of one man, and so they had told him that he must shift for himself in the future. The next we heard was that he had surrendered to the British, and that the gates of Paris were open to us, which was very good news to me, for I could get along very well just now on the one battle that I had had.

But there were plenty of folk in Paris now who loved Boney, and that was natural when you think of the glory that he had brought them, and how he had never asked his army to go where he would not go himself. They had stern enough faces, for us, I can tell you, when we marched in, and we of Adams' brigade were the very first who set foot in the city. We passed over a bridge which they call Neully, which is easier to write than to say, and then through a park, the Bois de Boulogne, and so into the Champs d'Elysees. There we bivouacked, and pretty soon the streets were so full of Prussians and English that it became more like a camp than a city.

The very first time that I could get away I went with Rob Stewart, of my company, for we were only allowed to go about in couples—to the Rue Miromesnil. Rob waited in the hall, and I was shown upstairs, and as I put my foot over the mat there was Cousin Edie, just the same as ever, staring at me with those wild eyes of hers. For a moment she did not recognize me, but when she did she just took three steps forward and sprang at me with her two arms round my neck.

"Oh, my dear old Jack!" she cried, "how fine you look in a red coat!"

"Yes, I am a soldier now, Edie," said I, very stiffly, for as I looked at her pretty face I seemed to see behind it that other face which had looked up to the morning sky on the Belgian battlefield.

"Fancy that!" she cried. "What are you then, Jock? A general? a captain?"

"No, I am a private."

"What! Not one of the common people who carry guns?"

"Yes, I carry a gun."

"Oh, that is not nearly so interesting," said she, and she went back to the sofa from which she had risen. It was a wonderful room, all silk and velvet and shiny things, and I felt inclined to go back to give my boots another rub. As Edie sat down again I saw that she was all in black, and I knew that she had heard of De Lissac's death.

"I am glad to see that you know all," said I, "for I am a clumsy hand at breaking things. He said that you were to keep whatever was in the boxes, and that Antoine had the keys."

"Thank you, Jock, thank you," said she. "It was like your kindness to bring the message. I heard of it nearly a week ago. I was mad for the time—quite mad. I shall wear mourning all my days, although you can see what a fright it makes me look. Ah, I shall never get over it. I shall take the veil and die in a convent."

"If you please, madame," said a maid, looking in, "the Count de Beton wishes to see you."

"The Ark of the Covenant. The Ark of the Covenant was the sacred chest which the Lord directed Moses to make to contain the tables of the law which he had received on Mount Sinai. It was four and one-half feet long, two and one-fourth feet wide and two and one-fourth feet high. It was covered within and without with gold and was carried by staves inserted in rings on the corners. This Ark of the Covenant was the most sacred possession of the Israelites. It was placed in the holy of holies in the tabernacle and later in a similar position in Solomon's temple. The ark was carried from one place to another and what finally became of it is unknown."

desolated. And would you mind going out by the side door instead of the main one? Thank you, you dear old Jock; you were always such a good boy, and did exactly what you were told."

And that was the last I was ever to see of Cousin Edie. She stood in the sunlight with the old challenge in her eyes and flash of her teeth, and so I shall always remember her, shining and unstable like a drop of quicksilver. As I joined my comrade in the street below I saw a fine carriage and pair at the door, and I knew that she had asked me to slip out so that her grand new friends might never know what common people she had been associated with in her childhood. She had never asked for Jim, nor for my father and mother, who had been so kind to her. Well, it was just her way, and she could no more help it than a rabbit can help wagging its scut, and yet it made me heavy-hearted to think of it. Two months later I heard that she had married this same Count de Beton, and she died in child-bed a year or two later.

And as for us, our work was done, for the great shadow had been cleared away from Europe, and should no longer be thrown across the breadth of the lands, over peaceful farms and little villages, darkening the lives which should have been so happy. I came back to Corntemur after I had bought my discharge. When my father died, I took over the sheep farm, and married Lucy Deane of Berwick, and have brought up seven children who are all taller than their father, and take mighty good care that he shall not forget it. But in the quiet, peaceful days that pass now, each as like the other as so many Scotch tufts, I can hardly get the young folks to believe that even here we have had our romance, when Jim and I went a-wooing, and the man with the cat's whiskers came up from the sea.

[THE END.]

CARRIED "HONESTY" TOO FAR

Trusted Clerk Rather Overdid It, and Lost the Confidence of His Employer.

Cash registers became an institution as a means of compelling honesty among employees handling money. There was a time when their installation was taken as an affront by every clerk concerned, but a new generation has accepted them as a matter of course. That they still have their use in the original sense, however, was demonstrated recently by one employer—a grocer—who was telling his story over the counter the other evening to a belated customer.

"Last summer," the grocer said, "my family was living down at the beach and I used to leave for a late dinner, and I had a clerk that I trusted to lock up and put the cash register would show in the morning what he had rung up."

"For a few days I thought it was working fine. He was a good clerk and I thought he was honest. Then when I got to thinking about it I decided he was too honest. For ten days that register and the cash agreed to a penny. Now that's better than I could make it do myself. It ain't natural."

"Then I decided to try a little scheme. Just before I left I rang up $2.75 on the register and put nothing in the till. Next morning the cash and the register agreed as usual. That was enough for me. Any man who is so honest he will make up mistakes out of his pocket must have plenty of money to do it with."

"No, he isn't working for me now."—New York Evening Sun.

As the Ancients Believed, According to the Puranas of Hindu mythology the earth is circular and flat, like the flower of a water lily. Its circumference is 4,000,000,000 miles. In the center is Mount Soomeroor. On this mountain are three peaks formed of gold, pearls and precious stones, where the deities reside. At its base are three mountains on each of which grows a tree 8,000 miles high. The furthest country from these mountains is bounded by the salt sea. Beyond this sea there are six others—of sugar cane juice, of spirituous liquors, of clarified butter, or curds, of milk and nectar. Each sea is surrounded by a separate continent.

TO CALL SPECIAL SESSION APRIL 4

Harding to Summon Congress to Deal With Taxation and Tariff Questions.

DATE REVEALED BY FORDNEY

Emergency Tariff Bill Reported—Ten Amendments, Broadening Measure to Include Practically All Farm Products, Added.

Washington, Jan. 19.—Congress will be called into special session April 4, according to information given members of the house ways and means committee by Chairman Fordney on his return from Marion, where he conferred with President-elect Harding. Mr. Fordney discussed with the President-elect general taxation and tariff questions, which will be among the more important subjects to come before the special session of the new congress.

The chairman was understood to have told Mr. Harding the date of the session had a direct bearing on the tariff revision hearings, which the committee is now conducting, and it was said that Mr. Harding informed him that April 4 practically had been decided upon.

Carrying amendments which many proponents believed spell its doom in the senate, the Fordney emergency tariff bill was reported out by the senate finance committee.

Supported by agricultural interests during the week of hearings on the bill, as affording vital protection to farm products, the measure on the other hand was strongly attacked by others as an instrument for maintaining abnormal price levels.

Ten amendments, broadening the measure to include practically all farm products, instead of the limited number approved by the house, had been added to the bill by the committee and opponents had served notice that an attempt would be made to load on more when the measure reached the senate floor.

Several senators who opposed the bill in committee were understood to be prepared to repeat their attempt, unsuccessful in committee, to add such extraneous legislation as the bill to reconstitute the federal laws and the soldiers' bonus bill. The determined and apparently growing opposition to the measure in the senate promised a long struggle with hours of debate before final action.

Decline to Attend Charity Ball at Washington Inauguration Night, It Is Announced.

Washington, Jan. 19.—President-elect and Mrs. Harding have declined an invitation to attend a charity ball to be held here March 4 as a substitute for the discarded inaugural ball. The committee in charge announced that Mr. Harding had replied that he could not with propriety attend a ball of any sort at the time, in view of the opinions he had already expressed against holding an inaugural ball. The charity ball plan will not be abandoned, however, it was added.

LIMIT U. S. ARMY TO 175,000

Senate Reconsiders Its Decision Last Week to Reduce to 150,000 Men.

Washington, Jan. 10.—By a vote of 41 to 33 the senate set aside its decision of last week to reduce the army to 150,000 men. Upon reconsideration of the vote the senate defeated a motion to fix the army at 150,000 instead of 175,000, as proposed in a resolution by Senator New (Rep.) of Indiana.

After rejecting the plan for an army of 150,000 men, the senate adopted the original resolution directing the secretary to stop army recruiting until the army is cut to 175,000 men.

LYNCHING

There were sixty-one cases of lynching in this country last year—in America where we read with horror stories of the crimes of the bolsheviks and the Turks. Undoubtedly the majority of the victims of mob rule deserved the full penalty. Were they all guilty? No one knows for not one of the sixty-one victims (one of them a woman) was given the benefit of the doubt, none were given a trial. All were entitled to the presumption of innocence until, by due process of law, they were proven guilty.

Can it be that American people are reverting back to savagery, forgetting the modern laws of justice? We prefer to think that these people do remember the law, are not naturally inclined to blood-thirstiness, but to have before them thoughts of the procrastination in applying the laws. We do not believe that any person should be executed as a result of conviction thru purely circumstantial evidence, but do believe that there would be fewer lynchings were the spirit of the laws allowed to take its course and take that course quickly. There is something radically wrong with court procedure when one man is convicted and executed by circumstantial evidence and another, caught red-handed in cold blooded murder, defeats justice for months and years and often escapes the nose or electric chair thru technicalities.

GENERAL SANBORN

The removal of General Sanborn from the state tax commission is an act not at all in keeping with the idea of appreciation as fostered by ex-service men. Members of the American Legion thruout the state are emphatically protesting. In dropping General Sanborn, Governor Small is not quite consistent. In his address he advocates financial aid, or a bonus, for ex-service men, but at the same time plans to shelve one of the most popular of them all. There is no doubt as to General Sanborn's ability, but he evidently stands in the way of campaign obligation fulfillment. This may be politics, but it is the kind with which people are becoming disgusted. All things being equal, naturally to the victor belongs the spoils. After coming out of several campaigns as a victor in the service of his country, one would naturally think that General Sanborn might be allowed to hold his own as against a politician.

THE PROPER SPIRIT

In refusing to contenance an elaborate inaugural celebration, President-elect Harding has no doubt caused regret among the elect of Washington society, but on the other hand he has proven to the nation that he is opposed to anything that smacks of foolish and useless extravagance. If President Harding carries out this sentiment during the coming four years, the feeling of unrest, dissatisfaction and bitterness caused by the display of wealth will have been eradicated. It is not the mere fact of wealth that causes dissatisfaction among the less fortunate, but the unnecessary and foolish display of that wealth. As a result of his decision President Harding will stand nearer the people. To induct him into office to the accompaniment of a hundred thousand dollar celebration would place him on an imaginative pinnacle above the masses.

Mr. Harding's letter to the chairman of the inaugural committee follows:

"I beg respectfully to suggest to your committee the complete abandonment of all plans for an inaugural celebration. Heretofore I have been very reluctant to express my personal views to your committee because I know of the cherished regard in our National Capitol for this quadrennial event and the generosity of the citizens of the District in making provisions for it.

"You were good enough to accept the chairmanship at my request and you and your associates have won my lasting gratitude for the time and labor you have given to the preparation. However if it is becoming to express my preference, I wish you and your committee to know that the impression of extravagant expenditures and excessive cost would make me a very unhappy participant. I know full well that the government outlay is relatively small, and that the larger expenditure comes from the generous contributions of the District citizenship, but it is timely and unwholesome to practice the utter denial of public expenditure where there is no real necessity, and it will be a wholesome example of economy and thrift if we save the many, many thousands which the inaugural celebration would call from the private purses of those attending.

"I have sent a message of like purport to the congressional committee and expressed the wish that no preparations or outlay of any kind be made. It will be most pleasing to me to be simply sworn in, speak briefly my plight of faith to the country and turn at once to the work which will be calling."

As a matter of fact we might almost as well call it a Three-Ton Truck, for it very rarely carries a smaller sized load. The owners of the Ford truck take advantage of the high qualities of materials which are known to be put in the Ford car, take advantage of the high quality of Ford workmanship which characterizes Ford cars and they overload to the limit. Well, the Ford truck has never broken down with any of these overloads. It delivers expectations and double expectations, so far as carrying capacity is concerned, and while that is not fair to the truck still the owners are satisfied.

But the Ford one-ton truck, with its aluminum bronze worm drive, its greater weight and strength of frame and its incomparable power plant, is without a reasonable competitor in price, in service, in cost of operation. It is the lowest priced truck on the market, of equal capacity. No other truck operates so economically and we believe there is no other truck that will give as satisfactory and profitable results. Our allotment is limited. Better leave your order without delay.

ABLE TO DO HER WORK

After Long Suffering Mrs. Siefert Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Pottsville, Pa.—"I suffered with female trouble for four or five years and was very irregular. I was not fit to do my work at times and took medicine from a doctor and got no benefit. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the newspapers and took it and got all right. I gained twenty pounds or more and am now able to do my work. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and you may use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. SALLIE SIEFERT, 813 W. Fourth Street, Pottsville, Pa.

The everyday life of many housewives is a continual struggle with weakness and pain. There is nothing more wearing than the ceaseless round of household duties and they become doubly hard when some female trouble makes every bone and muscle ache, and nerves all on edge.

If you are one of these women do not suffer for four or five years as Mrs. Siefert did, but profit by her experience and be restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

That's Different. Violet—"Maise and Dick are dreadfully stuck up." Margot—"But they never stick up for each other, though."

CHEERY FAVORITE IN NEW SKIRTS

A FEW cheerful pipings of spring precede its full chorus in the display of blouses and separate skirts that make their initial appearance in January. They are the straws that tell the direction of the winds of fashion and likely to be the very best efforts of designers, working with new fabrics. Just now the shops are staging the new styles in skirts and blouses, and already some of them have made a fine success. A favorite in separate skirts has been chosen for illustration here, made of a fabric that has been developed in a variety of ways, and designers show themselves ingenious in the use of these striped goods.

In this particular wool fabric there are stripes of black and white shepherds' check alternating with plain black stripes, but there are several combinations in different colors, showing the checked stripe alternating with stripes that are barred with alternating colors also. In the skirt pictured, the material is arranged in box plaits with the checked stripe folded uppermost and the plain stripe under, so that the plain stripe does not show except when the plaits spread apart. This arrangement is reversed in other skirts of the same or similar material, especially where the alternating stripe is not plain, but one of the models out-rank the one pictured for trim, neatness and crispness, or for all-round usefulness. It follows the trend of new style in its narrow belt fastened with bone buttons at the front and the same buttons are set in prim rows on each side.

The well-tailored separate skirt is fully established in the regard of women as tailored suits are and almost as indispensable, providing a very welcome change in the same character of clothes. The skirt pictured, in light weight wool, is a spring garment that will be useful all summer.

Spring Sewing Carries On

NOW that sales of white goods and all well-regulated dry goods stores, making of undermuslins, sewing for the house and for the children goes merrily forward. The annual sales make it easy to systematize the work of the seamstress who counts upon maintaining her house furnishings at least, and occasionally takes up the pleasant task of preparing to furnish up her home with new curtains and draperies when spring comes. But with every spring the wardrobes of the children need replenishing and pretty, new wash fabrics invite their elders' attention to this fact.

For girls from seven to twelve there are some cleverly designed new models in which plain cotton materials, selected in two colors that combine well, are made up together. Such frocks need very little in the way of trimming; some simple stitching in floss usually provides the finishing touches. A dress of this kind appears at the left of the two shown in the picture above. The body of the dress is in the lighter of two colors, with collar, cuffs, belt, pockets and band about the skirt in the darker color. The elbow sleeves have their cuffs slashed in accordance with the mode, and the collar follows their lead in this particular. As for the pockets, they are both pockets and drapery, but a panel of the light-colored material at the front of the skirt is an entirely new feature which distracts one's attention from the unusual pockets. On the belt and above it a little stitchey outlines points in the simplest of finishing touches.

The white dress shown at the right might be made in organdy or other sheer fabrics and in light colors. It has a flounced skirt, elbow sleeves finished with a frill and round neck with turn-down collar. The bodice is shirred across the front and the full sash tied at the back is made of the material.

Reminiscences of Sharp-Voiced Woman Woke Young Man to Possibilities of Situation.

"Charles," said a sharp-voiced woman to her husband in the smoking compartment, "do you know that you and I once had a romance on a train?" "Never heard of it," replied Charles, in a subdued tone. "I thought you hadn't, but don't you remember it was a pair of slippers I presented to you the Christmas before we were married that led to our union? You remember how nicely they fitted, don't you? Well, Charles, one day when we were going to a picnic, you had your feet upon a seat, and when you weren't looking I took your measure. But for that pair of slippers I don't believe we'd ever have been married."

A young, unmarried man, sitting near by with a girl, immediately removed his feet from the seat.

SLEUTHS' INTUITION AT FAULT
Investigation of Suitcase Convinced Them That They Had Stumbled On a Misleading Clue.

Two federal prohibition field agents were seated in a train bound from North Vernon to Indianapolis. "Ah, ha!" exclaimed one, as he nudged his companion in the ribs. "Look!"

The two thereupon watched an elderly colored couple. The man had a suitcase which seemed heavy, and he handled it gingerly as he placed it under the seat. The agents studied the situation and then decided to act. "Excuse me," said one of the agents addressing the colored man. "We will have to bother you to let us see what you have in that suitcase."

"Yes, sir; yes, sir," came the reply. "Help yourself."

Expectantly the agents opened the suitcase and peered within. It contained six cans of home-preserved fruit.—Indianapolis News.

DEKALB MAN KILLED

Mangled in Ash Conveyor at Normal Building

DeKalb Chronicle: Falling from the platform in front of the boilers at the Northern Illinois State Normal school into an unprotected ash conveyor and death trap, Bert Lindsey, 56 years of age, was instantly killed last Wednesday evening. His son Sidney Lindsey, discovered his father a moment later and shut off the motor.

However, the heavy sprocket chain driving the conveyor was broken before the son's endeavor to save his parent's life was successful. The accident, the first of a serious nature to happen at the normal school, is the most horrible to be recorded in the annals of DeKalb's tragic deaths. The body was mangled and chewed by the conveyor beyond recognition, and considerable time was necessary to remove the remains from the pit.

The coroner's jury found during its investigation Thursday that the ashpit and conveyor at the state school are a veritable death trap, the verdict being that Mr. Lindsey came to his death while at work using a shaker on a boiler, which slipped off, thus causing him to fall backward into this unprotected device for removing ashes. The coroner's jury did not make any recommendations following its verdict.

ALBERTSON AS STAR

Walter Albertson, graduate of the Genoa high school, who is attending the DeKalb Normal school, is keeping up his record as a basket-ball player. In its write up of the Normal-Batavia game last week, the DeKalb Chronicle says: Albertson played center for Normal and outplayed his opponent in every way. He was also the bulk of Normal's defense, never letting Batavia in for short shots and was always breaking up the opponent's passes and returning them to DeKalb's end of the floor. Albertson was without doubt the best defensive man Batavia had been up against for they could not get by him at all."
