F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1001.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and today, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. ## At Swords' Points;

A SOLDIER OF THE RHINE.

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

CHAPTER XV .-- (Continued.) in imagination, Paul could already see the formal character of the order which gave him a footing among the soldiers of the King, and directed him how to reach the front. He was therefore never more surprised in his life than when, upon opening the letter, he discovered that, Instead of the printed form he had expected, he saw feminine chirography.

He looked up, frowning. "You have made a mistake," he said. "Surely not. Look on the other side," returned the messenger, eagerly. Here was his name beyond a perad-

"Herr Paul Rhinelander. "Hotel Royale."

With a feeling of astonishment he again whipped the paper over, and this time his eye ranged from the "Dear Friend" at the top to the sigmature that he discovered below. Then it was an electric snock permeated his whole system.

For that name was "Hildegarde!" He somehow or other forgot all about the important order he had been expecting-love takes preference even shove the ambitions of martial glory.

When Paul read the contents of the note he was stirred, and for the time being reason gave way to impulse.

Hildegarde was in Berlin-unexpected trouble had come upon her and she needed a friend's advice and assistance -could she presume upon his courtesy to assist her in solving a perplexing dilemma, and, if thus inclined, would he speed without delay to the house at which she was stopping, since to-morrow might be too late? Would he go? Well-it must be something very unusual that could stop But where—the note failed to mention the name and number of the strasse where she awaited him. Again he turned to the messenger.

The lady gave you this letter her-"With her own charming hand, myn-

'You can take me to her at once."

"That is what I am here for, myn-

"Lead me to her, friend, said Paul, endeavoring to still the exultant strain in his voice.

"At once, mynheer. Pray follow, came the reply.

They set off. The messenger seemed fully at home in the great German capital, and led Paul hither and thither with the utmost freedom "Indeed, if his movements had been especially intended to confuse the American, and make him lose all sense of his bearings, they could hardly have been better arranged.

Those numerous bridges over the Spree seemed so much alike that Rhinelander found himself utterly unable to declare which side of the river the stood upon.

A stranger in Berlin can easily be lost in some of the districts that compare with London's Whitechapel.

Paul was not paying much attention to these things, his mind being upon facts that seemed of more importance to him, facts that concerned the writer of that note.

Why had Hildegarde come to Ber-

There must be some mystery back of it, some story which she was desirous of confiding to him.

This thought increased his eagerness to reach her side.

She spoke of peril-how gladly would the throw himself into the breach to ward off any impending disaster-it was a blessed privilege for which he could not be too thankful Finally his guide led him into a house. Paul had a vague feeling that the neighborhood was hardly up to the standard of respectability he might have set but such minor matters should not be allowed to disturb his pleasant frame of mind, as he anticipated a speedy interview with the obsect of his regard.

As he sat in a stuffy little parlor and awaited the coming of Hildegarde, he remembered the occasion in Heidelberg when he had last seen her, when she blushed so beautifully under his compliments, and aroused within his heart so furious a holy passion that the very thought of it still had power to elec-

Then some one burst upon his startled sight, a vision of beauty and shimmering garments, such as might have aroused the admiration of an anchorite but the effect upon Paul was only that of sudden, keen and terrible chagrin and cruel disappointment, for he looked not upon the blushing countenance of Hildegarde, but the bold, handsome, triumphant face of Countess Aimee.

CHAPTER XVI. The Countess Springs the Trap.

**** Copyright, by STREET & SMITH, New York. When this singular and remarkable termination to his dream occurred Rhinelander was in a state bordering on chagrin and anger. He realized that he had indeed made a fool of him-

"And pray why?" with an arch

"Because I have been such a fool not to see your hand back of the game," he said, in so positive a manner that the adventuress winced.

"Ah, you are not complimentary. Well, mark my words, fire will melt ice, and in war the soldiers of King William cannot stand up before the brave charges of my countrymen. I hear you have seen the Crown Prince and that he has promised to place you near his person."

Paul was secretly surprised. This fact, how could she know it when so far as he was aware, it might be deemed a secret between himself, Karl and the Crown Prince? Evidently she had means of discovering things that were supposed to be unknown outside of the council chamber of the palace. "I have offered my services to His Royal Highness, and, on account of the friendship formerly existing between himself and my father, have been accepted. I shall go to the war." "Perhaps."

The peculiar manner in which she uttered this one word caused him to ook at her keenly.

"Perhaps?" he repeated. "Why do you say that, ma'mselle?"

"Well, I have no doubt His Excellency is enough of a philosopher not to appear very much surprised if, say, early to-morrow morning he received very polite note from you, respectfully declining the honor he has been good enough to offer you."

"Do you mean that you would send such a note?" he demanded, with some show of anger.

"Yes! In the cause of love, I would not even hesitate to do that, believing was acting for your good."

"You would not dare send that letter!" "There is nothing I would not dare

-for you!" fixing her lustrous orbs upon him. He shivered, whether with rage or alarm he knew not; perhaps something of both.

Surely never before was man in this humor wooed—and Paul did not fancy being a pioneer in the courts of Love. How soft and entreating her voice -the sirens of the ancient Greek mariners were not in the same class with this modern Circe.

Fortunately Paul did not have to steel his heart against it since Hildegarde occupied that throne, and there was no room for two.

"It would be folly worse than madness to do anything of the sort, and you know it as well as myself. good-night, countess!"

This exclamation fell from her lips in a sort of exultant satisfaction.

For Paul, turning to leave the apartment as he had entered it, was thunderstruck to discover no signs of a doorway in the wall-everywhere the same white expanse, without any apparent means of making an exit.

When Rhinelander made this remarkable discovery he realized that he had been caught napping and was in a him, while the woman held her breath. "Well, now that's very odd," he remarked, just vexed a trifle, apparently, 'What has happened?" she asked. "The door has disappeared."

"Indeed, so it has!" He threw himself into a chair.

Her eyes glistened at this sign of his careless indifference. 'Then you are not going yet, Paul?"

He looked at her steadily. "Well, no; not just yet. My mind has changed, and there is not as much need of haste as I supposed." "Mon Dieu! excellent, superb! You are what I should call a philosopher, this matter calmly. I grant that you have brought me here in a manner that does you credit, and I seem to be in something of a hole. Perhaps we can arrange it all in some sort of compromise.'

Womanlike, the countess took this as a sign of weakness and became more positive in her demands.

"The paper will not be sent upon only one condition, monsieur."

"Ah! yes, and that?" "You will renounce forever all desire to make this girl, Hildegarde, your wife, and agree to bestow upon me the regard I crave."

He sat in silence for several minutes, knowing that he was inflicting torture upon her with each passing second of time.

"Well, have you decided, monsieur?"

"And the result?" bending forward eagerly. "I must respectfully decline the proposition." She bit her lips-hope had made her heart throb like a triphammer, but now it seemed to hang almost dead and lifeless within her. "You know the consequences?" "Not wholly, but I am prepared to meet them as they come." "I am surprised!"

"You expected me to be overwhelmed. My dear countess, I have spent my boyhood on the plains of Texas among cowboys, who early learn to depend upon themselves in an emer-We Americans do not easily yield."

What would his generous benefactor think when he failed to show up in the morning?

He groaned in spirit and his feeling toward the adventuress drew rapidly toward the line where hatred would supplant indifference. Paul had half turned with the intention of making vigorous demands upon his fair jailer, when, without the least warning, as if in response to some signal of the countess, the lights went out. Instinctively the American sprang out of his chair and sought to lay hold of the woman to keep her as a hostage, but his arms only clasped the chair in which she had been seated, which, unable to withstand his sudden assault, fell over to the floor, taking it along with it. He heard the swish of silken garments, following the miserable chair. He was not in any too good humor after the little episode, since he had bruised his hand, and made a fool of himself generally, as he believed.

He Was Not a Bird.

No one who sees Justice Gray of the United States supreme court, sitting solemnly upon the bench, would believe he is susceptible to humor. In fact, throughout his long service on the bench only one instance is recorded where he deigned to exhibit a ocular mood. It was the day when Judson L. Harmon, the attorney-general, was making an argument before the court. He had occasion to display a map showing the loyalty in which the land in dispute was situated, and held it up for the inspection of the court. It was a very small map and difficult to see from the beach. Mr. Harmon referred to it as "a birds-eve view." Justice Gray squinted him eyes in the effort to discern the map. 'Mr. Attorney-General," he said in despair, "I regret to tell you that I am not a bird." And then the justice, chuckling over the outburst of humor, headquarters at Peoria. There has been a persistent rumor for some time past that the Wabash Railway Employes' Hospital association would remove the hospital, established in Springfield some eighteen years ago, to Decatur. It now seems probable that the change will be made during the summer the reasons being that the building here is not large enough nor well adapted for being added to, and it is not as near the shops and station of the company as Seymour, of the Springfield Episcopal diocese, has announced that he will make his annual visit to the Alton Episcopal church, St. Paul's, on May 15, at which time the rite of confirmation will be performed on a class of candidates. Bishop Seymour will preach his annual sermon in Alton on that day.

Surety Company to Be Responsible for His Appearance When Wanted.

DUE TO HANNA'S FRIENDSHIP

Senator from Ohio Has Been Untiring in His Efforts to Befriend the Man Who, in His Opinion, Did Not Have a Fair Trial.

Senator Hanna has won the first ound in his fight for his friend Rathbone. Within a day or two Major Rathbone will be released from prison in Havana. A telegram was sent to Governor Wood from the war department, by instructions of President Roosevelt, ordering the acceptance of a bond for bail for Rathbone's appear-

Several days ago Senator Hanna arranged with the Fidelity Bonding company of Baltimore to guarantee the $100,000 bail which the court had demanded. To the surprise of every one the court refused to accept the Fidelity as security and asked that a cash deposit of $100,000 be made before Rathbone was released from prison.

When this report was made to him Senator Hanna replied with a good deal of emphasis that he would not put up a hundred thousand dollars to be placed in the control of the Cuban courts, for if he did he should want ome good guarantee, better than anyone is able to furnish at the present time, that in case he produced his man when wanted the money in turn should be forthcoming.

This demand for the cash nettled the senator from Ohio and he started out to see if a civilized method of doing business could be applied to Cuba, at least as long as the island is under American control. The result was the order which Secretary Root sent Gov. Wood. As soon as the details can be arranged the bond of the Fidelity company will be accepted and Major Rathbone will walk out of jail.

It is a curious fact that Senator Hanna's earnest stand for his friend has attracted a vast amount of attention throughout the country. Hundreds of letters and telegrams are pouring in upon him, commending his course. Many of the writers say that they do not know whether Rathbone is innocent or guilty, but they like a man who sticks up for his friend in an hour of trouble. In the attitude of Mr. Hanna concerning the affair the American people appear to see a quality which they like.

Mr. Hanna is more than ever convinced of Rathbone's innocence. He has personally interviewed a number of men. Americans, who attended the trial every day and who declare there was not a scintilla of real evidence that Rathbone was guilty of stealing or embezzling and that the case brought against him would not have secured conviction of a tramp in any American police court. Three Ameritrial day after day say Rathbone was convicted unjustly, and that he could never have been convicted at all had it not been for the inflaence which Governor Wood exercised upon the court. The five judges who tried the case there before no jury were all appointees of Wood.

It is said that nearly everyone in Havana—Americans, Cubans and Spaniards-believes Rathbone innocent. Scores of visitors call to see him every day. After his bail has been accepted he will wait till President Palma takes office and demand a new

GEN. WADE HAMPTON IS DEAD Veteran Southern Soldier and Statesman Victim of Heart Disease.

Columbus, S. C., special: General Wade Hampton died not altogether unexpectedly at 9 o'clock Friday morning. He had celebrated his eightyfourth birthday anniversary last week. Death was due to valvular disease of the heart. He had been unconscious for several hours. Twice this winter he had sustained attacks that had greatly weakened him, but he rallied wonderfully. He was out driving a week ago, but it was evident that his strength was deserting him.

The family of Gen. Hampton objected to a state funeral. Bells were tolled in all towns of the state when the news was received and many schools were closed.

SOULPTOR CAME TO MEND BUST. And the Irate Janitor Took Him for a Plumber. Daniel Chester French, the sculptor, is an Exeter boy and a graduate of Phillips Exeter academy. Like all Exeter men, he is very loyal, and has generously donated examples of his work to both town and academy.

A few years ago one of the busts in the academy chapel had the misfortune to lose a nose, and as Mr. French was visiting the town he kindly offered to replace it.

Now, it happened that the bust was not the only thing in the academy that needed mending, for the night before a cold snap had frozen and burst the main water pipe. The plumber, as usual, was late in appearing, and the old janitor was terribly upset. Mr. French put on his studio rig, packed what few sculptor's materials he had with him into a bag, and went to the academy. He didn't know what part of the building the statue was in, says the New York Times, so he rang the bell, called up the janitor, and asked:

"I've come to mend the bust." "Indade, it is hoigh toime, I t'ought ye'd never come," stormed the irate janitor. "The wather is jist runnin" arl over the buildin'!"

A Nasty Practice.

A nasty practice is what the Chicago Inter Ocean calls the pasting of repeated layers of wall paper, one upon another, thus covering up the filth and germs of disease that may be propagated in the very absorbent and de-caying mass of flour paste, paper, animal glue, colors, etc.

They give opinions of eminent ealth officers and sanitarians, urging that such practice should be stopped by legal enactment, and also take occasion to say that these sanitarians recommend Alabastine as a durable. pure and sanitary coating for walls. The Inter Ocean says:

House Passes All Bills Reported for Benefit of Former Soldiers, 177 in All Also One of $5.000 for the Widow of the Late President.

Wednesday, April 9. Throughout the senate session the Chinese exclusion bill was under consideration. Mr. Gallinger and Mr. Dillingham opposed it and Mr. Turner supported it. Mr. Gallinger urged that the bill was unnecessary, unjust and un-American, and was clearly in contravention of this country's treaty obligations with China. He maintained that American labor ought not to be pauperized and paganized by the admission of Chinese, and said any experiment looking to their admission would be needless and wicked. In an extended address Mr. Turner appealed to the senate to pass the bill, not merely for the protection of the people of the Pacific coast, but to prevent the entire body politic from being contaminated by the Chinese. Mr. Dillingham advocated the re-enactment of the present Geary law. He declared that representatives of the Pacific states had expressed themselves as perfectly satisfied with the operation of existing law, and said there was no proper reason for a change, particularly as the change would involve great trouble and expense. Mr. Fairbanks reported favorably from the committee on immigration the Uninese exclusion bill passed by the house. It was placed on the calendar. Mr. Patterson offered a resolution, which was adopted, calling on the secretary of the treasury for certain regulations regarding the exclusion of Chinese. Adjournment was taken after a brief executive session.

Thursday, April 10. An effort was made to obtain an agreement for a vote on the Chinese exclusion bill in the senate, but it was unsuccessful. The indications are that the vote will be taken next Tuesday. The measure was under discussion during the entire session, except for about an hour, during which time the postoffice appropriation bill was considered and passed. An amend- speeches on both sides of the question ment was agreed to eliminating section 56 of the exclusion bill and substituting a provision that nothing in the act should be construed to prevent any foreign exhibitor from any country from bringing to the United fusal to allow speeches to be printed States such assistants as might be in the record. The speakers were necessary to enable him to make an exhibition at any fair or exposition (Ga.) for the measure and Messrs. authorized by the government. Mr. Depew spoke briefly against the adoption of the resolution providing for the election of senators by popular vote. In effect he served notice on those states which had limited their suffrage that if the resolution was enacted a demand would be made on them to accord all their citizens the right to vote or suffer a loss of representatives in congress. He offered this amendment: "The qualification of citizens entitled to vote for United States senators or representatives in congress shall be uniform in all the states and congress shall have the power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation and to provide for the registration of citizens entitled to vote, the conduct of such elections and the certificate of the result." nesday at 1 o'clock. Mr. Teller of Colorado supported the measure in a brief speech, maintaining that it was necessary and that it was not in contravention of treaty obligations with hina. Senator Hawley presented a protest from the American Federation of Labor, the International Seamen's Union and the California Chinese Exclusion committee against the substitute for the pending bill suggested by Senator Platt (Conn.). The senate then went into executive session, and at 4:45 p. m. adjourned.

In the house the speaker announced the appointment of the following committee to attend the funeral at Arlington cemetery, Washington, of General Rosecrans: Mr. Hepburn (Iowa), Mr. Grosvenor (Ohio), Mr. Loud (Cal.), Mr. Steele (Ind.), Mr. Lessler (N. Y.), Mr. Elliott (S. C.), Mr. Clark (Mo.), Mr. Cummings (N. Y.) and Mr. Clayton (Ala). The postoffice bill was sent to conference. Saturday, April 12.

Continuation of the debate on the Chinese exclusion bill occupied most of the day in the senate. The conference report on the postoffice appropriation bill was agreed to, and a bill authorizing the Quincy Railroad Bridge Company to rebuild the draw span of its bridge across the Mississippi River at Quincy, Ill., was passed. An executive session preceded adjournment at 4:15 p, m.

The house calendar was entirely cleared of private pension bills, all of those reported being passed, 177 in all, and including that giving $5,000 a year to Mrs. McKinley. Bills were also passed providing for an additional circuit judge in the second judicial circuit of New York and for the creation of the petrified forest national park in

The Chinese exclusion bill occupied the day in the senate. Senators Foraker and McLaurin (S. C.) made extended speeches in opposition to it. Mr. Foraker contended that the measure was violative of the treaty with China and was calculated to prevent America's commercial expansion in the far East. While strongly supporting the policy of the government to exclude Chinese laborers, he mainconsent of the house to disagree to tained this could be best accepted by an extension of the present law. Mr. Teller briefly responded to Mr. Foraker, urging that the right to abrogate treaties was fully recognized. Mr. lødge gave notice of an amendment striking out the much-discussed clause prohibiting the employment of Chinese sailors on American ships. After a brief executive session, the senate at 4:20 p. m. adjourned.

Interest in the Cuban reciprocity debate seemed to be waning, judged house, but the earnestness of the increased rather than decreased in intensity. That the Republican opponents of the bill are determined to prolong the struggle as much as possible was made manifest by their re-Robertson (La.) and Stevens (Minn.) against it. Mr. Robinson (Ind.) opposed annexation on the ground that it would threaten the welfare of the American wage earner. ## LIFE SENTENCE FOR MILLER

Murderer of Miss Jennett in Prison 72 Hours After Deed.

Seventy-two hours after Prof. Joseph M. Miller murdered Miss Carrie M. Jennett with a hatchet at Detroit, Mich., he was in Jackson prison, sentenced to spend the rest of his life there at hard labor. He was arraigned of murder. His attorney, who was appointed by the court, raised the question of Miller's sanity and Judge Murphy appointed a commission of three alienists, Drs. Emerson, Hitchcock and Miller, to examine Miller. After a careful examination the physicians came into court and announced that they were agreed that there was no symptom of insanity in the defendant. Miller was then ordered to plead, and the self-confessed murderer said in a loud voice: "Guilty." Evidence was then introduced to prove the death of Miss Jennett. In sentencing Miller Judge Murphy called him a laskatoon, Saskatchewan, One of the Favored Districts.

The following clipped from the corespondence columns of the Eau Claire (Wisconsin) Leader is but one of many etters of a similar character that might be published concerning Western Canada, the land of No. 1 hard wheat and the best cattle on the continent. It is a simple matter to reach the lands spoken of, the Canadian Government having agencies established at St. Paul and Duluth, Minnesota; Grafton, North Dakota; Watertown South Dakota; Omaha, Nebraska; Kansas City, Missouri; Des Moines, lowa; Wausau and Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Chicago, Illinois; Indianapolis, Indiana: Sault Ste. Marie and Detroit, Michigan; Toledo and Columbus, Ohio, and by writing to or calling upon any of these agents at these points full information can be secured. This is a great opportunity to secure a home free of cost or if you desire to purchase lands they can be bought now at prices much lower than will exist in a few months. But read what the correspondent referred to has to say of one particular district. "To the Editor of the Leader-The rush of the land seekers will be to the prairie provinces of the Dominion of Canada. The allurements of a soil that yields 40 bushels of wheat to the acre are too great to be resisted and an immense migration from this country may be confidently predicted. People here laughed at first at the idea of any one leaving the United States for Canada, but the Dominion authorities knew they had a good thing and they stuck to it. Their officials evidently knew the value of printers' ink. They spared no expense in letting the people of this country know that these lands were there and that they were exactly as represented. They did more. They sent out specimens of the crops raised and samples of the grain. We have had them here at four consecutive street fairs, presided over by one of their ablest immigration officers. This gentleman spared no pains. He explained the value of the lands and the richness of the soil from morning to night to all comers. "All this told in the long run. Several went up from here to spy out the land and like Caleb, the son of Jepunneh, and Joshua, the son of Nun, brought back a good report, and now some ten families will leave here in a few weeks for Saskatoon to settle upon farms there, and others are preparing to follow. Of course many will appear shocked at the idea of any one leaving the stars and stripes for the Union Jack, but patriotism is but a nomenclature after all, and our experience has been that in nine hundred and ninety-nine cases out of a thousand a man is the most patriotic where he can make the most money and do the most harm to those whom he hates.'

SERGEANT JEREMIAH MAHER, of Ard-cath, Royal Irish Constabulary, says: "My friend, Mr. Thomas Hand, has been a great sufferer from rheumatism in the back and joints for the last four years, during which time he has employed many different methods of treatment, but obtained no relief been unable to walk without a stick, and sometimes two sticks, and was in great pain constantly. I induced him to procure a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, which he applied with the most astonishing and marvellous effects. Before he had finished using the contents of the first bottle he could walk readily without the aid of a stick, and after a few applications from the second bottle he was free from pain, and has been ever since; and although fifty years of age and a farmer, he can walk and work without experiencing any pain or difficulty whatever."

MEALTHAMPALLITS BLESSINGS

Health will come with all its blessings to those who know the way, and it is mainly a question of right-living, with all the term implies, but the efforts which strengthen the system, the games which refresh and the foods which nourish are important, each in a way, while it is also advantageous to have knowledge of the best methods of promoting freedom from unsanitary conditions. To assist nature, when nature needs assistance, it is all important that the medicinal agents used should be of the best quality and of known value, and the one remedy which acts most beneficially and pleasantly, as a laxative, is-Syrup of Figs-manufactured by

With a proper understanding of the fact that many physical ills are of a transient character and yield promptly to the gentle action of Syrup of Figs, gladness and comfort come to the heart, and if one would remove the torpor and strain and congestion attendant upon a constipated condition of the system, take Syrup of Figs and enjoy freedom from the aches and pains, the colds and headaches and the depression due to inactivity of the bowels. In case of any organic trouble it is well to consult a competent physician, but when a laxative is required remember that the most permanently gratifying results will follow personal cooperation with the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs.
