Leroy E. Leipe and Miss Pearl M. Davis of Elkhorn, Wis.

CEREMONY WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wylde Is Scene of Pretty Marriage—Couple Take Honeymoon

At the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. William Wylde on Wednesday evening occurred the marriage of the latter's sister, Miss Pearl M. Davis, to Leroy E. Leipe, both of Elkhorn, Wisconsin.

The wedding had been announced for Tuesday evening but owing to the great floods in many of the towns of Wisconsin, where railroad bridges were completely wrecked, the bridal party was unable to arrive here at the stated time and the ceremony was changed to one day later.

The ceremony was performed at 6:30 o'clock in the presence of a few relatives of the bride, the simple ring service being used. Rev. T. E. Ream, pastor of the M. E. church, spoke the words uniting the two lives. Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served. Congratulations and good wishes for the success of the latest and most important step in their career was freely tendered them.

The groom is one of Elkhorn's popular business men, having been in the music business there for some time. The bride is also a favorite and extremely popular among her friends, who wish them many happy years of wedded life. Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Leipe left at 8:30 over the Illinois Central R'y for Chicago, when, after a few days here, they will return to Elkhorn to make their future home.

TRIAL OF VAN FLEET

Jury Will Probably Retire Thursday Evening

Before a court room packed to the limit by spectators who are interested in the outcome of the already famous case, the trial of John Van Fleet, alleged wife murderer, is being held before the circuit court at Geneva. Since the examination of jurors began early last week each day has found a large crowd before the court room door clamoring for admittance.

At noon Tuesday the prosecution rested its case, after William Denney, an Aurora undertaker, Coroner Mead and Chas. Lewis, a member of the coroner's jury, had given testimony. It is claimed that the prosecution has presented a strong case in point of circumstantial evidence. None was present except Van Fleet and his wife at the time of the murder. For this reason testimony was disconnected from the time that the place was visited by a friend until the time of the arrival of Mrs. Angell and her husband, who rushed to the scene when Alice, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Van Fleet gave the alarm after the shooting.

Efforts are being made to establish the quiet habits and excellent character of the accused man. It is predicted that all testimony will be in early and that the jury will not retire until Thursday evening.

BAD SEED CORN

Fearful That Much of the Grain is Not Mature

The state weather report says: "Much damp, soft corn remains in the hands of the farmers, and opinion is freely expressed that considerable damage will ensue when the weather moderates. Cars are scarce for moving the grain, and in some instances it is spoiling in elevators. A matter of concern in many localities is vital seed for planting. Much of the grain was immature before gathering and experience has shown that reliable seed will not be plentiful."

Interesting Notes from the Near-by Publications—Wise and Otherwise

William McBride, one of the oldest citizens of Boone county, died Sunday morning at his home in Belvidere. He came here in 1837. The funeral was held on Wednesday, Rev. E. D. Hull officiating.

J. G. Lucas is laid up at his home in Belvidere, having fallen down a flight of stairs during the icy period. As he stepped from his door Monday morning he took a header, one of the sharp angles of the steps striking him across the ribs with a force that seemed to cave them all in. He is badly bruised as a result of his experience.

It is said that six lawyers have entered the race for Judge George W. Brown's seat on the circuit bench in the sixteenth district. Judge Hull of Naperville, R. A. Childs of Hinsdale, John C. Murphy, R. P. Goodwin, M. O. Southworth and N. J. Aldrich of Aurora have announced their candidacies. John M. Raymond, mayor of Aurora, may seek the nomination.

Judge George W. Brown, of the firm of Knight & Brown, has effected a settlement with the Chicago & Northwestern Railway company for the death of Rev. J. H. Polly, wife and two children, at Carey on the night of January 26. The company pays $7,500 each for Mr. and Mrs. Polly and $3,000 for each of the children, making a total of $21,000.

The Northwestern railway has established a school of instruction for the benefit of station agents, the division officers being the teachers and the object being to make the men more familiar with modern methods for station work. On the Northwestern, one of the main objects of the course of instruction which is being given is to obtain a material reduction in the time consumed by trains at stations. The agents are therefore being instructed in methods which will result in speedier handling of baggage, express and freight at all points.

Would Spoil This Story to Tell It in the Headlines

To use an eighteenth century phrase, this is an "o'er true tale." Having happened in a small Virginia town in the winter of 1902, it is a story very much of the present. Up to a short time ago Mrs. John E. Harmon of Melfa Station, Va., had no personal knowledge of the rare curative properties of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. "Last January," she says, "my baby took a dreadful cold and at one time I feared she would have pneumonia, but one of my neighbors told me how this remedy had cured her little boy and I began giving it to my baby at once and it soon cured her. I heartily thank the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for placing so great a remedy within my reach. I cannot recommend it too highly or say too much in its favor. I hope all who read this will try it and be convinced as I was." For sale by Hunt's Pharmacy.

PROMISING

In the early days of my university sojourn (it would be absurd to call it a career) I was considered promising. The provost himself, when I went to breakfast with him on the last day of the summer term, was good enough to tell me so.

"The college," he remarked, "expects great things from you, Mr. Vansittart."

"I wish, sir," I rejoined, "that the college may not be wrong."

"With a little more application," he pursued, "a first class is, in the opinion of the college, well within your reach."

I believe I blushed. The young lady sitting opposite to me flung up her eyelashes for a demure, amused glance.

The provost smiled kindly.

"Yes, you are a promising young man, Mr. Vansittart," said he. "God bless my soul! It's 10 o'clock, and the vice chancellor is waiting for me!"

"Oh, papa!" said the young lady opposite to me.

The provost held out his hand. I clasped it. I believe that he supposed me to be going at the same time. He went. I remained.

"It is," I observed, with a profound sigh, "the last day of term."

"Yes," said the young lady.

"I," said I, "you were to come and unlock the gate at the bottom of your garden I could reach my rooms that way."

"Would it be the shortest?" she asked.

"It will be much too short anyhow," said I.

A few minutes later I sat down on a bench. Daisy stopped, looked doubtful, shook her head, sat down. We pursued the conversation which we had begun as we came along.

"Papa would never hear of it," she said.

"I should not wish him to—just yet," I observed, "but when I've taken my degree—"

"That's two years off at least," she interrupted.

"What do you mean by 'at least'?" I asked, rather hurt.

"People don't always get things the first time they try."

"You're thinking of the first time?"

"No, I'm not," she cried, blushing amazingly. "I meant you'd probably be plowed."

"I'm going to get a first," said I. "Nonsense!" said Daisy.

I drew a little nearer.

"You read the article?" I asked.

"The fellow showed quite plainly that it could be done on £300—with careful management, you know."

Daisy nodded sagaciously.

"And I don't see why I shouldn't have £300 in—well, in about three years."

I spoke as though three years were a moment of time.

"I shall be twenty," mused Daisy in an awestruck tone.

"It's not a bit too old!" I cried.

"N-no, I suppose not," she conceded, "but it's a terribly long time, Dick."

A pause followed. I hammered my cap against the bench.

"It's a beast of a world!" I burst out. "Why the deuce can't—"

"There's the dean just got married!"

"The dean must be forty," observed Daisy.

"He says he's twenty-nine." And we both laughed. I happen to know now that the dean spoke the truth.

"Dick," said Daisy in a wistful tone, "I wish you were rich, like Mr. Franklin Ford."

"Ford's a beast," said I.

"I didn't say he wasn't that, Dick, but—"

"Of course if money's what you want!"

"You know I don't, but I suppose there is no harm in wishing that we—"

I recovered my good temper. I always did when she said "we."

"I can make as much as he's got," said I confidently.

"Oh, can you, Dick? How soon?"

I was not going to boast. Assuming a calm and wise air, I answered:

"By the time I am thirty anyhow."

Daisy's face fell woefully.

"Oh, thirty!" she moaned. Then she turned to me, with a smile, saying:

"Never mind, Dick, dear. We shan't want quite as much. Why, he's got £5,000 a year!"

"How do you know?"

"Mrs. Jackson told me so. Oh, what do you think, Dick? She said that if I liked I might—she said she was sure I might— Where are you going, Dick?"

"If you're only going to tell me what that wretched old woman says I'm going back to my rooms. What did she say?"

"I won't talk about it if you don't!"

"Oh, what did she say?"

"Oh, well—why, that Mr. Franklin Ford—you'll break the corner of your cap in a minute, Dick—only that Mr. Franklin Ford—there, I knew you would! Your cap is in an awful state, Dick, so is your gown—only that Mr. Franklin Ford—oh, how stupid you are, Dick! You know perfectly well what she said!"

I flung the battered cap upon the bench, thrust my hands into my pockets, rested my chin on my necktie and stared moodily at my toes. There was a long pause. Presently I felt the lightest touch on my arm. I took no notice. The touch grew more insistent.

"Poor boy!" said Daisy. "Dick, I told her that I thought Mr. Ford horrid."

"Did you?" I cried, my hands flying from my pockets to—elsewhere.

"I wish papa wouldn't insist on going abroad all the long vacation. He says he can work better there. Never mind, Dick. It's only till October."

"Only!" said I in tones a Hamlet might be proud of.

"Will it seem very long?" she asked, drooping her lashes.

"As if you didn't know!"

"Yes—but, Dick, I may like to be told all the same, you know."

So I told her, and eons and eons of weary waiting rose before us at the bidding of my words.

"And in all that time," she said, "are you sure you won't forget? Oh, well, then I believe you won't. Think, Dick, what it will be when you come back! You must look out of your window all the first day—and perhaps I may come by."

"And look up?"

"Perhaps."

"Perhaps you'll have forgotten."

"Oh, Dick, that is horrid of you! I never forget my friends."

"Friends!" I echoed indignantly.

"Well, you know what I mean," said she indulgently.

As she spoke the great clock in the tower struck 11. She sprang to her feet.

"Don't go," I urged. "Daisy, it's the last time."

"Oh, but I must. So must you."

She seemed resolute.

"Well, then, before you go promise!" I urged.

"But I have promised. Well, then, yes, I promise, Dick."

"You'll think of no one else the whole time?"

"No, of no one else."

The garden seemed peaceful and quiet. We sat down on the bench again for a moment—or it was meant to be a moment. But such moments are endowed from heaven with blessed elasticity.

Then, at a cry from Daisy, I looked up.

A tall, stout man in gold spectacles stood looking down at us, a curious, only half unkind smile on his face. It was the provost. I felt crimson all over and sat speechless.

"Pray, what's the meaning of this, Mr. Vansittart?" he asked, the mixed smile still on his lips.

I looked at him in fright for an instant; then a pride arose in me. I cleared my throat and began, "Sir, I am promising—"

The demon of irony raked up in the provost's mind the memory of his last words to me. Oh, that I had found another exordium for my heroic speech!

"Upon my word," said he, thrusting one hand into his cross cut trousers pocket and pulling at his whisker with the other, "you are promising, for your age, very promising, Mr. Vansittart."

The bubble was broken. Daisy hung her head. I was red and hot again.

"Very promising!" chuckled the provost, jingling the money in his pocket. "Very promising indeed!"

I could have struck him for his mocking iteration.

"Daisy, go indoors," said he, "and, Mr. Vansittart, may I lend you my key of the garden gate? Pray be so good as to return it to the porter."

He handed it to me, with a polite bow. Daisy was in retreat, hurrying in sad shame toward the house. I took the key.

"I meant it, sir," I stammered.

"You're a young fool," said he and held out his hand.

"Yes, a young fool," he said again as he shook hands. I went.

He stood, watching my exit. I looked back as I reached the gate. He was there still, and behind him, in the porch, waved a handkerchief. I passed through the gate and locked it behind me.

And was the long vacation very long? And did I forget her in the "long?"

I am willing to answer, at any cost to my own character, all material questions, but that question is immaterial, for she forgot me in the long.

Dear me, I hope she's happy somewhere!—Anthony Hope in Idler.

A BABOON HERO.

An Incident of a Stirring Monkey Hunt in Africa.

The German naturalist, Herr Brehm, tells this story of his adventure with baboons in Africa:

"Our dogs, beautiful, slender greyhounds, accustomed to fight successfully with hyenas and other beasts of prey, rushed toward the baboons, which from a distance looked more like beasts of prey than like monkeys, and drove them hastily up the precipices to right and left. But only the females took flight. The males turned to face the dogs, growled, beat the ground with their hands, opened their mouths wide, showed their glittering teeth and looked at their adversaries so furiously and maliciously that the hounds, battle hardened and usually bold, shrank back discomfited and almost timidly sought safety beside us.

"Before we had succeeded in stirring them up to show fight the position of the monkeys had changed considerably, and when the dogs charged a second time nearly all the herd were in safety.

"But one little monkey, about half a year old, had been left behind. It shrieked loudly as the dogs rushed toward it, but succeeded in gaining the top of a rock before they had arrived. Our dogs placed themselves cleverly, so as to cut off its retreat, and then we thought that they would catch it.

"That was not to be. Proudly and with dignity, without hurrying in the least or paying any heed to us, an old male stepped down from the security of the rocks toward the hard pressed little one, walked toward the dogs without betraying the slightest fear, held them in check with glances, gestures and sounds that seemed almost like intelligible speech, slowly climbed the rock, picked up the baby monkey and retreated with it before we could reach the spot and without the slightest attempt to prevent him on the part of the dogs.

"While the patriarch of the troop performed this brave and unselfish deed the other members, densely crowded on the cliff, uttered sounds which I had never before heard from baboons. Old and young, males and females, roared, screeched, snarled and bellowed all together, so that one would have thought that they were struggling with leopards or other dangerous beasts.

"I learned later that this was the monkeys' battle cry. It was intended to intimidate us and the dogs; possibly also to encourage the brave old giant who was running into such evident danger before their eyes."—Youth's Companion.

Acids and Water.

Acids have a strong affinity for water, which they will even extract from any substance containing it with which they are brought in contact; hence when an acid comes in contact with the mucous membrane of the mouth and throat the watery secretion which keeps these parts moist and flexible is so far absorbed as to give rise to that dry, harsh and stringy sensation which is commonly spoken of as "drawing" the mouth, and so as a result a copious supply of fresh saliva is produced.

Mineral acids, by their chemical action, not only draw the mouth and set the teeth on edge as they are taken, but also injure the enamel of the teeth, unless the precaution is taken to suck them in through a glass tube or quill.

TWO CARLOADS of Buggies and Farm Machinery

THE FOLLOWING LINES ARE THE BEST FOR THE MONEY

THE EUREKA BUGGIES

WHEELS

Second-growth hickory, screwed rims, 1/4-inch round edge steel tires, bolted between each spoke. Wheels are the foundation; we use the best and strongest.

BODIES

Ash sills, whitewood panels, swelled sides, concave risers. Our bodies are made of thoroughly seasoned woods, put together by hand in the best possible manner, will not split or open at the corners. The risers and side panels are made from one piece.

TRIMMINGS

We use nothing but the best No. 1 machine buffed leather in our tops, and 28 ounce rubber in the leather quarter tops. The best grades of wool-dyed broadcloth and all-wool Bedford and whipcords are used. Rubber mats are used in most of our buggies, but good carpets will be furnished if desired. Surreys are fitted with good carpets. Dashes are all artistic patterns, made from the best patent leather. Cushions and backs are hair stuffed, spring cushions and backs. Besides using good materials in our trimmings, they are well made in artistic designs. Tops are built on the seats they go with, which makes them set perfectly.

PAINTING

This is our strongest talking point. We do not use any patent system, but depend on pure oils and lead for our foundation coats. We carry our work from three to four months in paint. Our painting cannot be surpassed.

FARM MACHINERY

THE ADVANCE FERTILIZER DISTRIBUTOR

The Advance Manure, Lime and Fertilizer is the simplest devised for the purpose. It retains all the points that years of experience have proved valuable, and added new ones that place it beyond successful competition. In its entire combination it is the most effective and durable distributor ever invented and produces results impossible with any other. As many farmers know, this is the latest improved machine on the market. It is simple in construction, built of the best material by skilled workmen and is easily operated.

STERLING PLOWCUT DISC HARROW

The Plowcut Disc Harrow is constructed on the same lines as the Sterling Concave Harrow, the difference being in the shape of disc blades. The plowcut blade is designed to turn the soil over and work up all the land between the discs. The Sterling Plowcut has proved to be a satisfactory tool and will do any work required of a Disc Harrow, and do it in a manner most satisfactory. Implement dealers will find the Plowcut Disc Harrow a profitable addition to their line. It is made in all sizes.

STERLING NARROW TRACK FORCE FEED SEEDER

The Narrow Tread Construction—Overcomes the tendency on rough ground to lurch, on end of the seeder plunging ahead of the other, the pole whipping against the horses, etc. The Sterling Narrow Track Force Feed Seeder is an eleven foot.

The Force Feed Device—is the same as used on our regular "High Wheel Sterling Force Feed Seeder," and will be found accurate in every respect. In employing narrow tread construction it is necessary to use drop spouts, but these are protected on the "Sterling" by a bar and are not liable to breakage.

STERLING CORN PLANTER

The Sterling Planter enjoys the distinction of being the only planter on the market that has always worked satisfactorily. It has gained the confidence of the dealer and is placed in the hands of his customers without the slightest question or doubt about giving satisfaction. Anyone who can set up and operate any planter will have no trouble with the Sterling. The Sterling Planter combines simplicity, convenience, accuracy and durability which are the qualifications sought after in a planter. The regular 28 inch wheel.

THE THOMPSON 2-ROW CULTIVATOR

In placing upon the market the 2-row Cultivator, we were meeting a demand which has grown out of the strong tendency of the present day to accomplish the largest results with the smallest outlay of time, labor and expense. It is not so many years ago that in the cultivation of fields the hoe was displayed by the one-horse walking cultivator. That in turn gave way to the two-horse cultivator, where the operator had still to walk behind the machine. Keeping pace with progress in all directions, the two-horse riding cultivator displaced the walking cultivator; and for a number of years farmers were content to cultivate single rows of corn or other farm product, glad that they were saved the labor of walking behind the machine from morning until night.
