amples" set by commanding officers in the Cromwell. Prior to being ordered to the Somfield, who constituted themselves the last reviewing authority, was that of a quarter-breed Seminole Indian who, enlisting in the United States army, endeavored to betray the brave little band of Maj. Dade to the hostile reds in the everglades of Florida. The story of this of his father's political influence. When he execution and of the circumstances leading to it is but little more to-day than an army tradition, the whole thing being involved in much mystery. Not long after the shooting of the ored father." Spencer went along, however, quarter-breed. Dade's entire command was annihilated by the Seminoles

Almost the only thing on public view to-day which recalls that tragedy of the swamps, is a plain white marble shaft, which rises at West Point not far from Kosciusko's garden, to commemorate the death of Dade and of his 300 intrepid followers.

Osceola, the chief of the Seminoles, saw a number of his subordinate leaders sign a treaty with the whites, by which the Indians' land was to be given up. Osceola, asked to sign the paper, stepped forward, drew his hunting knife and stuck its blade through the document and deep into the desk upon which it lay. "There is my signature," he said, and strode from the room. From that instant war was on. One of the witnesses of this fearless act was the soldier whose blood was one-quarter Indian. It stirred in him an admiration for Osceola that made him swear to himself later to aid the Indian chief's cause.

A familiarity with the country on the part of the quarter-breed led Dade to select him as guide. The soldier led the command straight to an ambush, which was discovered by a fortunate circumstance, just in time to save the command from the annihilation which, however, came later. There was a drumhead court martial. The guide was sentenced to be shot at sunrise. His last request was granted. He removed from his person all signs of the uniform of the United States. He put on leggings and hunting shirt of deerskin. Then this man, three-quarters white and only onequarter red, sang the ceath song of the Seminole Indians, and died with five bullets in his

If a man will picture to himself the sensation that there would have been in the United States if Admiral Dewey had strung up to the yardarm "until he was dead," the son of the secretary of war, on the charge of mutiny, and had done this without communicating with the authorities at Washington, he may get some adequate idea of the excitement of the American people in the year 1843, when it was learned that Capt. Alexander Slidell Mackenzie, of the brig Somers, had hanged Ensign Philip Spencer, the son of President Tyler's secretary of war, John C. Spencer.

This execution took place on the high seas, and with Ensign Spencer were hanged Ordimary Seaman Small, and Boatswain's Mate ers, Spencer had been on a vessel in the south Atlantic squadron, and while there had become involved in some practices which secured his removal from his vessel. He was saved from dismissal from the service by sheer force was ordered to Capt. Mackenzie's brig, that officer objected to the assignment, saying that he had no use for the "base son of an honand for a while behaved himself fairly well. There were 12 officers on the brig with a crew of 12 able seamen, and about 90 apprentice boys. The Somers' destination was the African coast, where it was to aid in the protection of American commerce. When it was about half way across it was noticed that Spencer was hobnobbing with the crew; that he was giving some of the men money, and others brandy and tobacco.

One night a seaman named Wales imparted secretly to Mackenzie the details of a plot concocted by Spencer to murder all the officers and to seize the brig for the purpose of entering upon a career of piracy. The story that Wales told was so horrible in its outlines that Capt. Mackenzie treated it at first with ridicule, but the actions of certain members of the crew soon showed that there was something in the wind. The officers held a consultation and agreed that Spencer's arrest was imperative. The crew was assembled at evening quarters, when the son of the secretary of war was arrested. Upon his person was found the details of the plan for killing the officers, seizing the ship and the throwing overboard of the younger apprentices, whom the paper referred to as "useless biscuit consumers." The document was written entirely in Greek, Spencer being a classical scholar. Luckily there was another officer on board who read the lan-

After the seizing of Spencer, many of the crew became disobedient, sullen and mutinous in action. Then Capt. Mackenzie ordered the arrest of Small and Cromwell. After this the sullen ones among the crew behaved worse than ever. The officers held a consultation, and it was agreed that unless an example were set, the Somers would meet the fate of the Bounty. They signed a recommendation that the three ringleaders be hanged at the yardarm. The three culprits were strung up, Spencer and Small confessing their guilt, and saying that they deserved their fate. When the Somers reached New York, Capt. Mackenzie communicated with the navy department. A court of inquiry was ordered and he was cleared of any blame. In spite of this fact, his chief, the secretary of the navy, ordered his arrest on the charge of murder. He was tried and acquitted by a hoard of officers, and President Tyler approved the verdict.

After the close of the civil war, Gen. Custer

when he returned to civilization to at least have it said to done well." Instead of this verbal patting on the back from his superiors, however, Custer was ordered into arrest on charges of exceeding his authority in the field. It was declared at the time that Custer had ordered a detail of men under a non-commissioned officer to go out from camp and bring back some men who having secured some liquor, were having a jollification at a distance, on the prairie. It was charged that he gave the sergeant certain orders which were carried out, and they were of a nature to anger the authorities. Despite Custer's magnificent career in the civil war, this taking of the law into his own hands was not condoned, and he was sentenced by a court martial to two years' sus> pension from rank, pay and command. The army execution most pathetic in detail and surroundings, and yet which was wholly justifiable apparently by the circumstances, was the shooting of Private C. B. Henry, by order of Lieut. Greely, in the far north. Greely's party was starving to death. Its condition was getting more terrible each day. A few shrimps and a little edible moss was all that the explorers could get to sustain life. Some of the men were already dead from starvation. Henry was detected on several occasions stealing more than his share of food. He was warned three times, and his offense was condoned. The other members of the party saw Henry gaining in strength day by day, while they weakened with starvation. Then once more he was detected stealing food. Greely wrote out an order of execution, loaded three rifles, two with ball, and one with blank cartridge, and gave the weapons with the death warrant, to three men. An hour later, from far over the ice floe came the reports of three rifles. Henry was dead. After the rescue the report of the execution was sent to Washington. One of the shortest orders ever issued from the war department was the answer: "No court of inquiry necessary. R. C. Drum, adjutant general.

When the second sergeant in charge of recruits at Fort Myer, Virginia, called the reveille roll one day, at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, he dwelt momentarily on the last name in the list, the name of a man now dead. The recruit who answered. "Here," on that morning, as a private in the ranks, was an elderly man, a West Point graduate, an ex-United States engineer officer, and an ex-United States paymaster. He is dead, I believe, and he shall be nameless here, for he lived down his past and fought for his country in an attempt to redeem his career. I have said that he shall be nameless, but I will call him Williams.

It is hard to define just what was passing in Williams' mind while the sergeant in the gray light of the Virginia morning was running

During Williams' career as a paymaster, the troops were paid every 60 days, and the sum of his actual duties comprised possibly four or five short railroad trips, or at worst, a few stage trips, taking up about five days of every two months. He was "Williams" to all his equals and superiors in rank, and "Major" to all his juniors, and he was an honored guest at every army social affair.

THE SEMINOLES

OSCEOLA, CHIEF OF

Private Williams, Third cavalry, Fort Myer, Va., met the major of his squadron. The major and he walked post together at West Point. They may have been the most intimate friends. In the army it is possible that they messed together. Private Williams looked at his major, his right went to his cap in the salute which every inferior must pay to his superior in rank. The salute is returned formally, and Private Williams and the major have passed each other as if they never met before, and had never heard of each other.

Private Williams, in attending stable call, groomed his horse under the eye of a second lieutenant who was unborn when Williams wore the shoulder straps of an engineer officer. It may be that the stripling soldier, meanly inclined, some day may have spoken harshly to the veteran. By going back into the ranks for the express purpose of doing what he could to redeem his past, Williams showed that he was one of the kind who will suffer and make no sign.

It is possible that the man grooming his steed on Williams' right or left may have been some veteran soldier who at one time served under his command. There probably Private Williams did not look in vain for sympathy

Private Williams' club life of former years, his short hours, and his luxurious living as a staff officer gave place to a routine which included rising at six o'clock, breakfast of hash, coffee and hard bread at 6:30, and drill and fatigue work for the rest of the day. There was wood sawing, rubbish raking and ditch digging for Private Williams, and it may be that some of this work was done by Private Williams within full range of the windows of his major's quarters, where his menial toi was seen by women with whom in the dead years he danced or dined.

For 18 years Williams' career in civil life had been above reproach. He had stood much when, in certain places, the history of his wrong-doing leaked out, but the hardest struggle of his life was to come. His squadron went to the Philippine islands, and there, under the eyes of scores of his old army chums. Private Williams worked to win on the field of battle the credit which would restore him to that place in man's ranks from which a court martial of his fellows once deposed him

URGES CONSERVATION OF THE NATION'S RESOURCES

President Taft Sends Special Message to Congress Recommending Prevention of Land Frauds, Control of Water Power, Fostering of Soils and Kindred Subjects

the complete text of the special message on the conservation of the nation's resources sent to the senate and house of representatives by Pres-

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

In my annual message I reserved the subject of the conservation of our national resources for disposition in a special message, as follows:
In several departments there is prented the necessity for legislation looking to the further conservation of our national resources, and the subject is one of such importance as to require a more national resources, and the subject is one of such importance as to require a more detailed and extended discussion than can be entered upon in this communication. For that reason I shall take an early opportunity to send a special message to congress on the subject of the improvement of our waterways, upon the reclamation and irrigation of arid, semiarid and swamp lands; upon the preservation of our focests and the re-foresting of suitable areas; upon the re-classification of the public domain with a view of separating from agricultural settlement mineral, coal and phosphate lands and sites belonging to the government bordering on streams suitable for the utilidering on streams sulfable for the utili-tation of water power.

In 1860 we had a public domain of 1,055,-911,288 acres. We have now 731,354,081 acres, confined largely to the mountain ranges and the arid and semi-arid plants. We have, in addition, 368,035,975 acres of Disbursement of Public Lands.

Disbursement of Public Lands.

The public lands were, during the earliest administrations, treated as a national asset for the liquidation of the public debt and as a source of reward for our soldiers and sailors. Later on they were donated in large amounts in aid of the construction of wagon roads and railways, in order to open up regions in the west then almost inaccessible. All the principal land statutes were enacted more than a quarter of a century ago. The komestead act, the pre-emption and timber-culture act, the coal land and the mining acts were among these.

The rapid disposition of the public lands under the early statutes, and the lax methods of distribution prevailing, due, think, to the helief that these lands should rapidly pass into private ownership, gave rise to the impression that the public domain was legitimate preyfor the unscrupulous and that it was not contrary to good morals to circumvent the land laws. This prodigal manuer of contrary to good morals to circumvent the land laws. This prodigal manner of disposition resulted in the passing of large areas of valuable land and many of our national resources into the hands of persons who felt little or no responsibility for promoting the national welfare through their development.

The truth is that title to millions of acres of public lands was fraudulently obtained and that the right to recover a large part of such lands for the government long since ceased by reason of statutes of limitations. There has developed in recent years a deep concern in the public mind respecting the preservation and proper use of our natural resources. This has been particularly directed toward the conservation of the resources of the public domain. A vast amount of discussion has appeared in the public prints in generalized form on this subject, but there has been little practical suggestion. It has been easy to say that Fraudulent Titles. suggestion. It has been easy to say that the general public is in accord with this proposition, as they are with most truisms. The problem, however, is how to save and how to utilize, how to conserve and still develop, for no sane person can contend that it is for the common good that nature's blessings are only for unborn generations.

Noteworthy Reforms. Among the most noteworthy reforms initiated by my distinguished predecessor frauds and the bringing to public attention of the necessity for preserving the remaining public domain from further spoliation, for the maintenance and extension of our forest resources, and for the enactment of laws amending the obsolete statutes so as to retain governmental control over that part of the public domain in which there are valuable deposits of coal, of oil, and of phosphate, and, in addition thereto, to preserve conand, in addition thereto, to preserve con-trol, under conditions favorable to the public, of the lands along the streams in which the fall of water can be made to generate power to be transmitted in the form of electricity many miles to the point of its use, known as "water power" public land laws and the prosecution of land frauds have been vigorously con-tinued under my administration, as has been the withdrawal of coal lands for classification and valuation and the tem-porary withholding of power sites. Since March 4, 1909, temporary withdrawais of power sites have been made on 102 streams and these withdrawals therefore cover 229 per cent. more streams than were covered by the withdrawals made

The present statutes, except so far as they dispose of the precious metals and the purely agricultural lands, are and the purely agricultural lands, are not adapted to carry out the modern view of the best disposition of public lands to private ownership, under conditions offering on the one hand sufficient inducement to private capital to take them over for proper development, with restrictive conditions on the other which shall secure to the public that character of control which will prevent a monopoly or misuse of will prevent a monopoly or misuse of the lands or their products. The power of the secretary of the interior to with-draw from the operation of existing statutes tracts of land, the disposition of which under such statutes would be detrimental to the public interests, is not clear or satisfactory. This power has been exercised in the interest of the public, with the hope that congress might affirm the action of the executive by laws adapted to the new conditions. Unfortunately, congress has not clear or such statutes would turn hillside soils, rotate crops on all soils, find grasses and legumes for all soils, feed grains and mill feeds on the farms where they originate, that the soils from which they come may be enriched. tive by laws adapted to the new conditions. Unfortunately, congress has not thus far fully acted on the recommendations of the executive, and the question as to what the executive is to difficulty. It seems to me that it is the duty of congress now, by a statute, to validate the withdrawals which have been made by the secretary of the interior and the president and to use the secretary of the interior temporarily to withdraw lands pending submission to congress of recommendations as

Washington, Jan. 14 -- Following is to legislation to meet conditions or the complete text of the special mes. emergencies as they arise.

Properly to Classify Lands. One of the most pressing needs in e matter of public-land reform is at lands should be classified accordto their principal value use. This ht to be done by that or department use force is best adapted to that k. It should be done by the interdepartment through the geological vey. Much of confusion, fraud, and tention, which has existed in the rentention which has existed in the present has arisen from the lack of an official and determinative classification of the public lands and their ricultural lands as such, and at the same time to reserve for other disposition the treasure of coal, oil, ashphaltum, natural gas and phosphate contained therein. This may be best accomplished by separating the right to mine from the title to the surface, when the research was of someth of to mine from the title to the surface, giving the necessary use of so much of the latter as may be required for the extraction of the deposits. The surface might he disposed of as agricultural land under the general agricultural statutes, while the coal or other mineral could be disposed of by lease on a rovalty basis, with the provisions requiring a certain amount of development each year; and in order to prevent the use and cession of said lands with others of similar character so as to constitute a monopoly forbidden by law, the lease should contain suitable provision subjecting to forfeiture the interest of persons participating in such monopoly. Such law should apply to Alaska as well as to the United

Public Land Along Streams.

With respect to the public land which lies along the streams offering opportunity to convert water power into transmissible electricity, another important phase of the public land question is presented. There are valuable water power sites through all the public land states. The opinion is held that the transfer of sovereignty from the federal government to the power. I cannot conceive how the power in streams flowing through public lands can be made available at all except by using the land itself as the site for the construction of the plant by which the power is generated and converted and securing a right of way thereover for transmission lines. Under these condition, if the government owns the adjacent land—indeed, if the government is the riparian owner—it may control the use of the water power by imposing proper conditions on the government is the riparian owner—it may control the use of the water power by imposing proper conditions on the disposition of the land necessary in the creation and utilization of the water

Value of Water Power.

The development in electrical appliances for the conversion of the water power into electricity to be transmitted long distances has progressed so far that it is no longer problematical, but it is a certain inference that in the future the power of the water falling in the streams power of the water failing in the streams to a large extent will take the place of natural fuels. In the disposition of the domain already granted, many water power sites have come under absolute ownership, and may drift into one ownership, so that all the water power under private ownership shall be a monopoly. If, however, the water power sites now owned by the government—and there are enough of them—shall be disposed of to private persons for the investment of their capital in such a way as to prevent their union for purposes of monopoly with other water power sites, and under conditions that shall limit the right of use conditions that shall limit the right of use to not exceeding thirty years with renewal privileges and some equitable means of fixing terms of rental and with proper means for determining a reasonable graduated rental, it would seem entirely possible to prevent the absorption of these most useful lands by a power monopoly. As long as the government retains control and can prevent their improper union with other plants, competition must be with other plants, competition must be maintained and prices kept reasonable

Soils Must Be Conserved. In considering the conservation of the natural resources of the country, the feature that transcends all others, including ture that transcends all others, including woods, waters, minerals, is the soil of the country. It is incumbent upon the government to foster by all available means the resources of the country that produce the food of the people. To this end the conservation of the soils of the country should be cared for with all means at the government's disposal. Their productive powers should have the attention of our scientists that we may conserve the personal country the powers. scientists that we may conserve the new soils, improve the old soils, drain wet soils, ditch swamp soils, levee river overflow soils, grow trees on thin soils, pasture hillside soils, rotate crops on all soils, discover methods for cropping dry the public domain, the area of the homestead has been enlarged from 160 to 320 acres has resulted most beneficially in the extension of "dry farming" and in the demonstration which has been made of the possibility, through a variation in the character and mode of culture, of raising substantial crops without the presence of such a supply of water as has been heretofore thought to be necessary for agriculture.

But there are millions of acres of completely arid land in the public domain which, by the establishment of reservoirs for the storing of water and the irrigation of the lands, may be made much more fruitful and productive than the best lands in a climate where the moisture comes from the clouds. Congress recognized the importance of this method of artificial distribution of water on the arid lands by the passage of the reclamation act. The proceeds of the public lands creates the fund to build the works needed to store and furnish the necessary water, and it was left to the secre-

lands creates the fund to build the works needed to store and furnish the necessary water, and it was left to the secretary of the interior to determine what projects should be started among those suggested and to direct the reclamation service, with the funds at hand and through the engineers in its employ, to construct the works.

No one can visit the far west and the country of arid and semi-arid lands without being convinced that this is one of the most important methods of the conservation of our natural resources that the government has entered upon. It would appear that over 30 projects have been undertaken, and that a few of these are likely to be unsuccessful because of lack of water, or for other reasons, but generally the work which has been done has been well done, and many important engineering problems have been met and solved.

Funds Inadequate for Service.

Funds Inadequate for Service.

One of the difficulties which has arisen is that too many projects in view of the available funds have been set on foot. The funds available under the reclamation statute are inadequate to complete these projects within a reasonable time. And yet the projects have been begun; settlers have been invited to take up and, in many instances, have taken up, the public land within the projects, relying upon their prompt completion. The failure to complete the projects for their benefit is, in effect, a breach of faith and leaves them in a most distressed condition. I urge that the nation ought to afford the means to lift them out of the very desperate condition in which they now are. Funds Inadequate for Service.

excessive waste or any corruption on the part of the reclamation service. It only indicates an over-zealous desire to extend the benefit of reclamation only indicates an over-zealous desire to extend the benefit of reclamation to as many acres and as many states as possible. I recommend, therefore, that authority be given to issue, not exceeding $30,000,000 of bonds from time to time, as the secretary of the interior shall find it necessary, the proceeds to be applied to the completion of the projects already begun and their proper extension, and the bonds running ten years or more to be taken up by the proceeds of returns to the reclamation fund, which returns, as the years go on, will increase rapidly in amount.

There is no doubt at all that if these bonds were to be allowed to run ten years, the proceeds from the public lands, together with the rentals for water furnished through the completed enterprises, would quickly create a enterprises. would quickly create a sinking fund large enough to retire the bonds within the time specified. I hope that, while the statute shall provide that these bonds are to be paid out of the reclamation fund, it will be drawn in such a way as to secure inout of the reclamation fund, it will be drawn in such a way as to secure interest at the lowest rate, and that the credit of the United States will be pledged for their redemption.

I urge consideration of the recommendations of the secretary of the interior in his annual report for amendments of the reclamation act, proposing other relief for settlers on these projects.

New Law Requisite. Respecting the comparatively small timbered areas on the public domain not included in national forests because of their isolation or their special value for agricultural or mineral purposes, it is apas to invite the private capital necessary to their development on the one hand, and the maintenance of the restrictions necessary to prevent monopoly and abuse from absolute ownership on the other. These recommendations are incorporated n bills he has prepared, and they are at the disposition of the congress. I earnest-y recommend that all the suggestions ly recommend that all the suggestions which he has made with respect to these lands shall be embodied in statutes and, especially, that the withdrawals already made shall be validated so far as necessary and that doubt as to the authority of the secretary of the interior to withdraw lands for the purpose of submitting recommendations as to future disposition of them where new legislation is needed shall be made complete and unquestioned.

shall be made complete and unquestioned Disposition of Forest Reserves. The forest reserves of the United States, some 190,000,000 acres in extent, are agriculture, with authority adequate to preserve them and to extend their growth so far as that may be practicable. The importance of the maintenance of our forests cannot be exaggerated. The possibility of a scientific treatment of forests so that they shall be made to yield a large return in timber without really reducing the supply has been demonstrated in other countries, and we should work toward the standard set by them as far as their methods are applicable to our

of forest land in this country are in private ownership, but only three per cent. of it is being treated scientifically and of it is being treated scientifically and with a view to the maintenance of the forests. The part played by the forests in the equalization of the supply of water on watersheds is a matter of discussion and dispute, but the general benefit to be derived by the public from the extension of forest lands on watersheds and the promotion of the growth of trees in places that are now denuded and that once had great flourishing forests, goes without saying. The control to be exercised over private owners in their treatment of the forests which they own is a matter for state and not national regumatter for state and not national regu-lation, because there is nothing in the constitution that authorizes the federal government to exercise any control over forests within a state, unless the forests are owned in a proprietary way by the

they would relieve the railreads or supplement them in respect to the bulkier and cheaper commodities is a matter of conjecture. No enterprise ought to be undertaken the cost of which is not definitely ascertained and the benefit and advantage of which are not known and assured by competent engineers and other authority. When, however, a project of a definite character for the improvement of a waterway has been developed so that the plans have been drawn, the cost definitely estimated, and the traffic which will be accommodated is reasonably probable I think it is the duty of congress to undertake the project and make provision therefor in the proper appropriation bill.

One of the projects which answers the description I have given is that of introducing dams into the Onio river from Pittsburg to Cairo, so as to maintain at all seasons of the year, by slack water, a depth of nine feet. Upward of seven of these dams have already been constructed and six are under construction, while the total required is 50. The remaining cost is known to be $63,000,000. It seems to me that in the development of our inland waterways it would be wise to begin with this particular project and carry it through as rapidly as may be. I assume from reliable information that it can be constructed economically in ten years. I recommend, therefore, that the public lands, in river and harbor bills, make provision for continuing contracts to complete this improvement, and I shall recommend in the future, if it be necessary, that bonds be issued to carry it through.

What has been said of the Ohio river is true in a less complete way of the improvement of the upper Mississippi from St. Paul to St. Louis to a constant depth of six feet, and of the Missouri, from Kansas City to St. Louis to a constant depth of six feet and from St. Louis to cairo of a depth of eight feet. These projects have been pronounced practical by competent boards of army engineers, their cost has been estimated and there is business which will follow the improvement.

is business which will follow the improvement.

As these improvements are being made, and the traffic encouraged by them shows itself of sufficient importance, the improvement of the Mississippi beyond Cairo down to the gulf, which is now going on with the maintenance of a depth of nine feet everywhere, may be changed to another and greater depth if the necessity for it shall appear to arise out of the traffic which can be delivered on the river at Cairo.

Cheap Rail Rate Necessary.

I am informed that the investigation by the waterways commission in Europe shows that the existence of a waterways by no means assures traffic unless there is traffic adapted to water carriage at cheap rates at one end or the other of the stream. It also appears in Europe that the depth of the streams is rarely more than six feet, and never more than nine. But it is certain that enormous quantities of merchandise are transported over the rivers and canals in Germany and France and England, and it is also certain that the existence of such methods of traffic materially affects the rates which the raliroads charge, and it is the best regulation of those rates that we have, not even excepting the governmental regulation through the interstate commerce commission. For this reason, I hope that this congress will take such steps that it may be called the inaugurator of the new system of inland waterways. For reasons which it is not necessary here to state, congress has seen fit to order an investigation into the interior department and the forest service of the agricultural department. The results of that investigation which I have recommended in respect to the public lands and in respect to reclamation. I carnestly urge that the measures be taken up and disposed of promptly without awaiting the investigation which has been determined upon.

Zoological Puzzle.

Italian zoologists have a puzzle to solve, owing to the discovery on Mount Blanc of the body of a white bear, which has been brought to Aosta. It was thought at first that the bear must have died some three hundred years ago, and must have been preserved by the ice, since it has always been held that white bears vanished from the Alps three centuries ago. But it has since been demonstrated that death could only have taken place a few days previous to discovery. At this would seem to show that there are still white bears in the Alps, expeditions are to be sent to test the

When shown positive and reliable proof that a certain remedy had cured numerous cases of female ills, wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering with the same trouble?

Here are two letters which prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Fitchville, Ohio.-"My daughter was all run down, suffered from pains in her side, head and limbs, and could walk but a short distance at a time. She came very near having nervous prostration, had begun to cough a good deal, and seemed melancholy by spells. She tried two doctors but got little help. Since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier and Liver Pills she has improved so much that she feels and looks like another girl."—Mrs. C. Cole, Fitchville, Ohio.

Irasburg, Vermont.—"I feel it my duty to say a few words in praise of your medicine. When I began taking it I had been very sick with kidney and bladder troubles and nervous prostration. I am now taking the sixth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and find myself greatly improved. My friends who call to see me have noticed a great change."—Mrs. A. H. The world is fast learning the value of its forests and is taking steps to LIMITED AND MAIL COLLIDE protect or reclaim them. Wanton waste during centuries of ignorance to the verge of a desolation like that of the Sahara, but repentance and reforestation have in every instance been followed by immediate rewards. Take the case of the Karst, a stretch of barren limestone land along the Austrian shores of the Adriatic. The navies of Venice were built of timber from the Karst, and most of eastern Italy drew its supplies of wood from the same supposedly inexhaustible source. The result was depletion-the Karst was turned into a seemingly irredeemable waste. At last Austrian loresters turned their attention to the 600,000 barren acres; taxes were remitted and money was remitted to tree planters; technical advice and encouragement was supplied. This work train rounded the sharp curve and began in 1865. To-day over two-thirds crashed into it head-on before the of the Karst, or 400,000 acres, has been crew could make a move to stop. The bank did not open for business

"This bank is closed temporarily by order of the directors, pending an examination of its affairs. It is the opinion of the directors that the depositors will be paid in full without loss. The affairs of the bank are now in the hands of J. C. Johnson, national bank examiner.'

It is understood the controller of the for the bank at the present time. It is the opinion of the directors that the depositors will be paid in full, and it is believed the stockholders will be assessed to the full value of their Capital and Surplus Wiped Out. A leading banker of the city said he had been reliably informed that the losses would wipe out the capital, surplus and undivided profits, which would make a loss of $267,000. The action taken by the directors is the result of an investigation of the oans of the bank by the national bank examiner. Mr. Johnson refused to discuss the condition of the bank in detail, but stated that he had examined all of the Evansville banks and with the exception of the Citizens' found them in excellent condition. Bad Loans the Cause.

The suspension of the Citizens' bank is due, it is said, to the discovery of bad loans of long standing and of such an amount as to seriously impair its capital. At this time no certain estimate of the loss can be made, as many of the loans now regarded as weak may be collected.

It is stated that Capt. S. P. Gilthat William L. Swormstedt, cashier, however, it is said, has made over his

BANK CLOSES DOORS 90,000 AMERICAN SETTLERS GO TO CANADA

THE YEAR 1909 HAS SHOWN AN INCREASE OF OVER EIGHTY PER CENT IN AMERICAN SETTLEMENT.

Recent advices from Canada, our next door neighbour, the neighbourly country across the boundary line. are that upwards of ninety thousand settlers from the United States went into Western Canada during the past year, most of them for the purpose of taking up and settling upon the vacant lands, 160 acres of which are given free by the government, and lands adjoining held by railway and land companies are selling at from nine to fifteen and twenty dollars per acre. Even if thirty and forty dollars per acre were paid, the price would be low, as the lands produce wonderfully, and at these higher figures there is a large interest on the money and labor invested. The ninety thousand settlers of last year, followed about sixty thousand of the previous year, and for several years the number has been running into these large figures. There must be a reason for it. It may be found in the single phrase, "they are satisfied." Nothing attracts people more than the success of others, and the news of this reaching other thousands, causes them to investigate. The investigation in this case is always satisfactory. The splendid land of Iowa, of Indiana, of Nebraska, Kansas, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio and other States has risen to a high value, and it is worth every dollar asked for it. But there is not room now for all on these lands. With the ever increasing demand for grain, there comes the ever increasing demand for land. Canada is the only country on the continent in a position to supply it. Land there that costs. say fifteen dollars an acre, produces on a reasonable calculation, 25 bushels of wheat to the acre, or about $20.00. The most liberal calculation as to cost makes the cost to produce $7.50 per acre, leaving a balance of $12.50 per acre. The $7.50 carries good wages for the farmer, and all other conceivable contingencies. With conditions like this, covering the entire area of about 500,000 square miles, it is readily understood why 90,000 Americans should follow the sixty thousand of the previous year. Canadian Government Agencies at different points in the Union are always ready to give information regarding the free homestead lands, ready to advise the settler as to the districts which would suit him best.

WHEN DINNER COMES

A good appetite is the best sauce Many persons have found that Grape Nuts food is not only nourishing but

It is especially the food to make :

"I am 57 years old," writes a Tenn grandmother, "and have had a weal stomach from childhood. By great care degree of health, but never found any thing to equal Grape-Nuts as standby.

"When I have no appetite for break fast and just eat to keep up my strength, I take 4 teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts with good rich milk and when dinner comes I am hungry While if I go without any breakfast never feel like eating dinner. Grape Nuts for breakfast seems to make a healthy appetite for dinner.

"My 13-months-old grandson had been very sick with stomach trouble growing plump and well. When asked if he wants his nurse or Grape-Nuts he brightens up and points to the cupbeard. He was no trouble to wear at all-thanks to Grape-Nuts." Reac the little book, "The Road to Well ville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."
