That it is one the choicest brands of Minnesota Flour made. None superior.

That every barrel or sack will give unbounded satisfaction, in fact will please every consumer. Could anything more be asked?

It is made at Mankato, Minnesota, in the "big Woods Region," long celebrated as the finest agricultural portions of Minnesota. The Scotch Fife wheat from this timber region is especially sought after by millers on account of its remarkable quality. This choice wheat, with the selection from our own line of wheat houses in Minnesota and Dakota, where we take the grain direct from the farmers, gives us exceptional advantages aside from our plant, which is one of the most complete in the United States. Our Flour shows it.

Not a bushel of elevator wheat mixed, scoured, and "doctored" for the big markets ever comes into our mill. Hence we can and do warrant our flour, as above, and to run uniform every day in the year. We ask only a trial, the flour will do the rest. For sale by H. H. Slater, Genoa, Ill.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

An Instructive Lesson Drawn From the Sagacity of Birds.

If Mankind Was as Instinctively Religious as the Fowls of the Air, They Would Escape the Pinching Frost of Sin.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage made selection of the following sermon on "October Thoughts" for publication this week: It is based on the text:

The stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed time: and the turtle and the crane and the swallow observe the time of their coming: but my people know not the judgment of the Lord.—Jeremiah viii. 7.

When God would set fast a beautiful thought, He plants it in a tree. When He would put it afloat, He fashions it into a fish. When He would have it glide the air, He molds it into a bird. My text speaks of four birds of beautiful instinct—the stork, of such strong affection that it is allowed familiarly to come, in Holland and Germany, and build its nest over the doorway; the sweet-dispositioned turtle dove, mingling in color white, and black, and brown, and ash, and chestnut; the crane, with voice like the clang of a trumpet; the swallow, swift as a dart shot out of the bow of Heaven, falling, mounting, skimming, sailing—four birds started by the Prophet twenty-five centuries ago, yet flying on through the ages, with rousing truth under glossy wing and in the clutch of stout claw. I suppose it may have been this very season of the year—autumn—and the prophet out of doors, thinking of the impenitence of the people of his day, hears a great cry overhead.

Now, you know it is no easy thing for one with ordinary delicacy of eyesight to look into the deep blue of noontide heaven; but the prophet looks up, and there are flocks of storks, and turtle doves, and cranes and swallows, drawn out in long lines for flight southward. As is their habit, the cranes had arranged themselves in two lines, making an angle, a wedge splitting the air with wild velocity, the old crane, with commanding call, bidding them onward; while the towns, and the cities, and the continents slid under them. The prophet, almost blinded from looking into the dazzling heavens, stoops down and begins to think how much superior the birds are in sagacity about their safety than men about theirs; and he puts his hand upon the pen, and begins to write: "The stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times; and the turtle and the crane and the swallow observe the time of their coming; but my people know not the judgment of the Lord."

If you were in the field to-day, in the clump of trees at the corner of the field, you would see a convention of birds, noisy as the American congress the last night before adjournment, or as the English parliament when some unfortunate member proposes more economy in the queen's household—a convention of birds all talking at once, moving and passing resolutions on the subject of migration, some proposing to go to-morrow, some moving that they go to-day, but all unanimous in the fact that they must go soon, for they have marching orders from the Lord written on the first white sheet of the frost, and in the pictorial of the changing leaves. There is not a belted kingfisher, or a chaffinch, or a fire-crested wren, or a plover, or a red-legged partridge but expects to spend the winter at the south, for the apartments have already been ordered for them in South America, or in Africa; and, after thousands of miles of flight, they will stop in the very tree where they spent last January. Farewell, bright plumage! Until spring weather, away! Fly on, great band of heavenly musicians! Strew the continents with music, and whether from Ceylon Isle or Carolinian swamps, or Brazilian groves, men see your wings, or hear your voice, may yet bethink themselves of the solemn words of the text: "The stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times; and the turtle and the crane and the swallow observe the time of their coming; but my people know not the judgment of the Lord."

I propose, so far as God may help me, in this sermon, carrying out the idea of the text, to show that the birds of the air have more sagacity than men. And I begin by particularizing and saying that they mingle music with their work. The most serious undertaking of a bird's life is this annual flight southward. Naturalists tell us that they arrive thin and weary, and plumage ruffled, and yet they go singing all the way; the ground, the lower line of the music, the sky, the upper line of the music, themselves the notes scattered up and down between. I suppose their song gives elasticity to their wing, and helps on by the journey, dwindling a thousand miles into four hundred. Would God that we were as wise as they in mingling Christian song with our every-day work! I believe there is such a thing as taking the pitch of Christian devotion in the morning, and keeping it all the day. I think we might take some of the dullest, heaviest, most disagreeable work of our life, and set it to the tune of "Antioch" or "Mount Pisgah."

It is a good sign when you hear a man whistle. It is a better sign when you hear him hum a roundelay. It is a still better sign when you hear him sing the words of Isaac Watts or Charles Wesley. A violin chorded and strung, if something accidentally strikes it, makes music, and I suppose there is such a thing as having our hearts so attuned by Divine grace that even the rough collisions of life will make a heavenly vibration. I do not believe that the power of Christian song has yet been fully tried. I believe that if you could roll the "Old Hundred" doxology through the streets it would put an end to any panic! I believe that the discords, and the sorrows, and the sins of the world are to be swept out by heaven-born hallelujahs. Someone asked Haydn, the celebrated musician, why he always composed such cheerful music. "Why," he said, "I can't do otherwise. When I think of God my soul is so full of joy that the notes leap and dance from my pen." I wish we might all exult melodiously before the Lord. With God for our Father, and Christ for our Saviour, and Heaven for our home, and angels for future companions, and eternity for a lifetime, we should strike all the notes of joy. Going through the wilderness of this world, let us remember that we are on the way to the summery clime of Heaven, and from the migratory populations flying through this autumnal air learn always to keep singing.

Children of the heavenly King,
As ye journey, sweetly sing;
Sing your Saviour's worthy praise,
Glorious in His works and ways.

Ye are traveling home to God;
In the way your fathers trod;
They are happy now, and we
Soon their happiness shall see.

The church of God never will be a triumphant church until it becomes a singing church.

I go further, and remark that the birds of the air are wiser than we, in the fact that in their migration they fly very high. During the summer, when they are in the fields, they often come within reach of the gun; but when they start for the annual flight southward they take their places mid-heaven and go straight as a mark. The longest rifle that was ever brought to shoulder could not reach them. Would to God that we were as wise as the stork and crane in their flight heavenward! We fly so low that we are within easy range of the world, the flesh and the devil. We are brought down by temptations that ought not to come within a mile of reaching us. Oh, for some of the faith of George Muller, of England, and Alfred Cookman, once of the church militant, now of the church triumphant! So poor is the type of piety in the church of God now that men actually caricature the idea that there is any such thing as a higher life. Moles never did believe in eagles. But, my brethren, because we have not reached these heights ourselves shall we deride the fact that there are any such heights? A man was once talking to Brunel, the famous engineer, about the length of the railroad from London to Bristol. The engineer said: "It is not very great. We shall have, after awhile, a steamer running from London to New York." They laughed him to scorn; but we have gone so far now that we have ceased to laugh at anything impossible for human achievement. Then, I ask, is anything impossible for the Lord? I do not believe that God exhausted all His grace in Paul, and Latimer and Edward Payson. I believe there are higher points of Christian attainment to be reached in the future ages of the Christian world. You tell me that Paul went up to the tiptop of the Alps of Christian attainment. Then I tell you that the stork and crane have found above the Alps plenty of room for free flying. We go out and we conquer our temptations by the grace of God and lie down. On the morrow those temptations rally themselves and attack us, and by the grace of God we defeat them again; but, staying all the time in the old encampment, we have the same old battles to fight over. Why not whip out our temptations, and then forward march, making one raid through the enemy's country, stopping not until we break ranks after the last victory. Do, my brethren, let us have some novelty of combat, at any rate, by changing, by going on, by making advancement, training off our stale prayers about sins we ought to have quit long ago, going on toward a higher state of Christian character, and routing our sins that we have never thought of yet. The fact is, if the church of God—if we, as individuals, made rapid advancement in the Christian life, these stereotyped prayers we have been making for ten or fifteen years would be inappropriate to us as the shoes, and the hats, and the coats we wore ten or fifteen years ago. Oh, for a higher flight in the Christian life, the stork and the crane in their migration teaching us the lesson!

Dear Lord, and shall we ever live,
At this poor dying rate—
Our love so faint, so cold to Thee,
And Thine to us so great?

Again, I remark, that the birds of the air are wiser than we, because they know when to start. If you should go out now and shout: "Stop storks and cranes, don't be in a hurry!" they would say: "No, we can not stop; last night we heard the roaring in the woods bidding us away, and the shrill flute of the north wind has sounded the retreat. We must go. We must go." So they gather themselves into companies, and turning not aside for storm or mountain-top, or shock of musketry, over land and sea, straight as an arrow to the mark they go. And if you come out this morning with sack of corn and throw it in the fields and try to get them to stop, they are so far up they would hardly see it. They are on their way to the south. You could not stop them. Oh, that we were as wise about the best time to start for God and Heaven! We say: "Wait until it is a little later in the season of mercy. Wait until some of these green leaves of hope are all dried up and have been scattered. Wait until next year." After awhile we start, and it is too late, and we perish in the way when God's wrath is kindled but a little. There are, you know, exceptional cases, where birds have started too late, and in the morning you have found them dead on the snow. And there are those who have perished halfway between the world and Christ. They waited until the last sickness, when the mind is gone, or they were on the express train going at forty miles an hour, and they came to the bridge and the "draw was up," and they went down. How long to repent and pray? Two seconds! To do the work of a lifetime and to prepare for the vast eternity in two seconds! I was reading of an entertainment given in a king's court, and there were musicians there with elaborate pieces of music. After awhile Mozart came and began to play, and he had a blank piece of paper before him, and the king familiarly looked over his shoulder and said: "What are you playing? I see no music before you." And Mozart put his hand on his brow, as to say: "I am improvising." It was very well for him, but oh, my friends, we can not extemporize for Heaven. If we do not get prepared in this world, we will never take part in the orchestral harmonies of the saved. Oh, that we were as wise as the crane and the stork, flying away, flying away from the tempest!

Some of you have felt the pinching frost of sin. You feel it to-day. You are not happy. I look into your faces, and I know you are not happy. There are voices within your soul that will not be silenced, telling you that you are sinners, and that without the pardon of God you are undone forever. What are you going to do, my friends, with the accumulated transgressions of a lifetime! Will you stand still and let the avalanche tumble over you? Oh, that you would go away into the warm heart of God's mercy. The southern grove, redolent with magnolia and cactus, never waited for northern flocks, as God has waited for you, saying: "I have loved thee with an everlasting love. Come unto me, all ye who are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Another frost is bidding you away—it is the frost of sorrow. Where do you live now? "Oh," you say: "I have moved." Why did you move? You say: "I have moved." Why did you move? You say: "I don't want as large a house now as formerly." Why do you not want as large a house? You say: "My family is not so large." Where have they gone to? Eternity! Your mind goes back through that last sickness and through the almost supernatural effort to keep life, and through these prayers that seemed unavailing, and through that kiss which received no response, because the lips were lifeless, and I hear the bells tolling and I hear the hearts breaking—while I speak, I hear them break. A heart! Another heart! Alone! Alone! Alone! The world, which in your girlhood and boyhood was sunshine, is cold now, and oh! weary dove, you fly around this world as though you would like to stay, when the wind and the frost and the blackening clouds would bid you away into the heart of an all-comforting God. Oh, I have noticed again and again what a botch this world makes of it when it tries to comfort a soul in trouble! It says: "Don't cry!" How can we help crying when the heart's treasures are scattered, and father is gone, and mother is gone, and companions are gone, and the child is gone, and everything seems gone. It is no comfort to tell a man not to cry. The world comes up and says: "Oh, it is only the body of your loved one that you have put into the ground!" But there is no comfort in that. That body is precious. Shall we never put our hand in that hand again, and shall we never see that sweet face again? Away with your heartlessness, oh, world! But come, Jesus! and tell us that when the tears fall they fall into God's bottle; that the dear bodies of our loved ones shall rise radiant in the resurrection; and all the breakings down here shall be liftings up there, and they shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them nor any heat, for the Lamb, which is in the midst of the throne, shall lead them to living fountains of water, and God shall wipe all the fears from their eyes."

The Saviour calls,
Ye wanderers come,
Oh, ye benighted souls,
Why longer roam?
The Spirit calls to-day,
Yield to His power;
Oh, grieve Him not away,
'Tis mercy's hour.

"Being and doing good is essential to Christian character. No man liveth unto himself. All who win the precious boon of eternal life, will exemplify in life the life of Jesus Christ."

A subscriber writes, asking the meaning of the "silent watches of the night." We answer with pleasure that they are those which the owners neglect to wind up before retiring.—Tit-Bits.

AT FRIGHTFUL COST.

A Mob Repulsed and the Law Vindicated in Bloodshed.

Would-Be Lynchers Attempt to Secure Possession of a Colored Brute—Three Are Killed and Twelve Wounded.

WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, O., Oct. 19.—Three men were killed and almost a dozen injured, some fatally, by the militia here Wednesday evening in the endeavor to keep mobs from lynching William Dolby, colored.

Dolby was brought here on Tuesday, and Tuesday night the first mob rumors took shape. The local militia was ordered out, and later two companies from Columbus reached here. Much indignation was manifested at the action of the officials in thus putting a bar between the mob and their prey, and on all sides denunciations were frequent. All classes were represented among those who took this view of the situation, though many deplored the lawless spirit manifested.

Later in the day a special grand jury was impanelled and the negro was indicted. The militia companies, formed at the west side of the court house while the sheriff and Deputy James Busick went to the jail for the prisoner.

Struck Down by a Soldier.
The sheriff and his deputies had hardly emerged from the jail door

200 additional troops. "If you want me to bring the man to Columbus," said Col. Coit, with characteristic emphasis, "I will do it, but it will cost blood." Col. Coit then made a speech to the crowd.

"It looks very much," said he, "as if you intend to make an attack on the legal authorities. There will be trouble if you do. I call on law-abiding citizens to disperse and go to their homes."

Attacked the Courthouse.

This was received as other warnings had been. The prisoner had been taken to a back room in the sheriff's office on the third floor. At 6:10 the crowd, largely augmented, surrounded the building and with huge improvised battering rams battered the doors in rapid succession. The troops were hastened together in the courthouse at all entrances. The doors were barricaded from within and furniture piled against them. The soldiers stood with pieces cocked and bayonets fixed and waited till the doors would yield. Huge stones were thrown against the doors and the noise was deafening. All the time loud and angry yells came from the crowd. Col. Coit went into the crowd and said: "If any man of you hit one of my men I will direct him to aim directly at that man's heart."

Fired on the Mob.

At 7:55 the south doors were broken and immediately there was a deafening and continuous volley from two score of muskets. A pandemonium of yells and curses and a dense smoke filled the corridors. The law had been

DAGMAR MARIE FEODOROVNA, EMPRESS OF RUSSIA.

Recent reports are to the effect that the Czarina will be the virtual ruler of the Russian empire until her husband's recovery from his present serious illness, or his death. The empress is forty-seven years of age, a daughter of the King of Denmark and sister of the Princess of Wales. She is said to be a woman of remarkable executive ability and almost marvellous tact, and has always shown a keen interest in the welfare of the Russian people.

when the acknowledged leader of the crowd, Henry Kirk, who married Mrs. Boyd's sister, rushed toward the trembling wretch, protected by the sworn officers of the law, and breaking the thin ranks of the stalwart guard seized the culprit with a hand of iron. Quick as a flash the musket of a soldier was swung with great force and Mr. Kirk was dealt a blow in the face. The angry crowd rushed madly forward and in the rush swept one gallant boy around the corner and away from his company but he quickly returned to his post.

The curses and imprecations of the thoroughly maddened crowd grew in volume and the wretched prisoner trembled like an aspen. His saddle color became purple and he had to be supported. Col. Coit rallied his men for a supreme effort and the prisoner was almost carried up the steps and into the courthouse. There was then a scene of intense excitement, men armed with staves and any form of weapon rushed blindly almost onto the bayonets of the soldiery and some so far forgot themselves as to rush almost on the troops.

Warned the Mob.

Col. Coit, commanding the troops, stopped on the steps of the courthouse to warn the excited people to disperse, and after his earnest warning had fallen on deaf ears, he shouted: "Load," and there was a uniform clicking of hammers and every soldier prepared his piece for trouble, if trouble must come.

Pleaded Guilty.

Once up to the third floor of the courthouse and into the room where the trial is held, Dolby was soon legally declared a criminal. At exactly 8:52 he was led into the courtroom, pleaded guilty, and in three minutes he was sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment, ten days in each year in solitary confinement.

Meanwhile the mob was clamoring for admission. The crowd grew in numbers and the accessions proved an inspiration to the tired leaders, who had exhausted themselves.

Called for Reinforcements.

Col. Coit at this juncture telephoned the adjutant general at Columbus for vindicated at frightful cost, for this was the list of dead and of wounded:

The Victims.
KILLED—James Judy, aged 25; Smith Welch, aged 19, and Mack Johnson, of Williamsburg, Clermont county.

WOUNDED—Hugh Ammerman, shot through the hips, dangerous; F. L. Nitterhouse, shot through both ankles, one foot almost severed, since amputated; Rial Parrott, shot in foot; John McCune, shot in leg; John Korn, shot in foot; Emert Ellis, thumb shot off; George Keating, 14 years old, shot in both legs and groin; William Sams, fatally shot through the bowels; Frank Smith, flesh wound in face; DeWitt Dale, shot in arm; William Laum, shot in abdomen; Ellis Webster, shot in body.

It was reported at midnight that three attempts had been made to place dynamite under the courthouse. It was said that a large quantity of the explosive was wheeled to the building in a hand cart, and that the dynamiters were frustrated by the militia in each attempt.

The leaders stated at midnight that the plan to lynch Dolby would probably be abandoned but that he would be riddled with bullets when led from the courthouse to the railroad train. Fully two-thirds of the active members of the crowd were armed with revolvers.

Dolby Taken to the Penitentiary.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 20.—Dolby, the assaulter of Mrs. Mary C. Boyd, was successfully taken from the county jail at Washington Court House early Thursday morning and brought to the penitentiary under escort of four companies of the Fourteenth regiment.

Two More Victims.

William Sams and Hugh Ammerman, wounded in the riot, have since died. This increases the death list to five.

Paid the Usual Dividend.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Unusual interest is attached to the annual meeting of Pullman's Palace Car company held Thursday on account of the part taken by that company in the last big railroad strike. As expected, President Pullman in his report referred to the strike at some length denying the charges of inhumanity which have been made against him from time to time. The usual quarterly dividend of two dollars a share was declared, which shows that the company was affected but little by the cessation of work at the Chicago shops.

YOUTHFUL VICTIMS.

Flames Destroy Four Young Lives at Nyack, N. Y.

Grandchildren of the Methodist Missionary Bishop of Africa, Rev. William Taylor, Burned to Death—Three More Injured.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—A terrible fire occurred at South Nyack Monday morning, destroying the elegant new residence of Rev. Ross Taylor, son of Rev. William Taylor, Methodist bishop of Africa, burning to death four of Mr. Taylor's children and seriously injuring three workmen. The children burned to death were: Harriet Taylor, Ada Taylor, Arthur Taylor, Schultz Taylor. Two other children of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, Stewart and William, escaped by jumping from an upper window. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, who barely escaped with their lives, were taken to the home of a neighbor near by. They are prostrated with grief at the terrible misfortune which overtook them. The bodies of the four children who lost their lives were recovered from the ruins of the burned home at 7 o'clock a. m. Their remains were removed to an undertaking establishment. The Taylor residence was built of stone and had been occupied by the family only two weeks. The financial loss has not yet been estimated.

At 4:10 a. m. a big blaze of leaping flames was seen on the south mountain, which was reflected on every building in the lower part of the town, and the dense darkness that preceded the dawn was lightened by the fierce firelight. The scene of the fire was at once located as being the new house of Rev. Mr. Taylor. The house was quickly enveloped in flames. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were almost blinded by the smoke, which was growing more and more dense every moment, and they saw at once that the most they could attempt would be to get out and even that seemed impossible. By hard effort, however, they succeeded in escaping from the building. Then they saw that their property must go and with it their children, whose escape and rescue were cut off. A laborer named Michael Mullaley and two decorators, Edward Sinta and William Ruth, jumped from a third story and were badly hurt.

All three were carried to Adolph Guerber's residence, on Washington avenue, and were afterward taken to Bellevue hospital, New York, by the steamer Christenah.

The funeral of the four children who were burned to death was held at St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church at 11 o'clock a. m. All four charred bodies were placed in one rosewood casket. Rev. J. B. Taylor, pastor of the church, officiated, and Rev. Ross Taylor, the bereaved father, was present alone and made a few remarks, telling several pathetic incidents. He said a regular Sunday evening prayer and praise service was held at their house and the last act of the children before going to sleep was to pray.

BIG FIRE RAGING.

Timber and Farming Lands Near Akron, O., Ablaze.

AKRON, O., Oct. 23.—For forty-eight hours a fierce fire has been raging west of this city. It started in a swamp, but has spread into the highlands, and 700 acres of timber and farming land have been burned over. The damage already done will amount to $25,000. All day Sunday, Sunday night and Monday men and women fought the flames. Many fences and haystacks have been burned. Houses and barns are safe, unless a strong wind should come from the west or north, in which case many could not be saved. One call has come to the city for 300 men to fight the fire, but fearing they would not be able to collect their pay, only a few responded.

THE IRON HALL.

Affairs of the Defunct Association Soon to Be Closed Up.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 23.—The affairs of the Iron Hall are to be practically closed within the next ten days. Monday morning the first general report of the permanent receiver, James F. Failey, was filed. Only two shares of the bankrupt trust association remain, the life division and the payment of matured certificates. Three hundred thousand dollars will be reserved to pay these trusts, and $250,000 will be reserved to protect imperfect claims, of which there are 1,100. Attorneys in ten months are known to have received $34,550.25.

AT A RIPE OLD AGE.

Mrs. Chaffie, 102 Years Old, Dies at Adrian, Mich.

ADRIAN, Mich., Oct. 23.—Mrs. Hannah Chaffie, who was 102 years a month ago, died Monday morning at the home of her grandson. She was born at Pomfret Center, Conn., September 24, 1792. She well remembered George Washington and his wife. She came to Michigan in 1833 with her parents and settled in Hillsdale county. She came to Lenawee county in 1849 and has lived in this city thirty years. Mrs. Chaffie is survived by her brother, John Goodell, of Green Island, N. Y., who has passed his 100th birthday. She leaves two sons, twelve grandchildren and sixteen great-grandchildren.

SIXTY KILLED.

Awful Result of a Dynamite Explosion in a Brazilian City.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 23.—Capt. Hudgins, of the coffee bark Dom Pedro II., now in port, gives a graphic description of a dynamite explosion that occurred in Rio Janeiro a few days prior to September 6, when his vessel sailed for Baltimore, whereby sixty persons were killed. A Brazilian soldier discovered, near the English cemetery, a subterranean magazine, in which the insurgents of the recent rebellion had concealed a large quantity of gunpowder, cartridges and dynamite shells, which they evidently intended using against the government. The soldier reported his find to the general commanding, and a rough cart, drawn by two mules, was sent to the scene to remove the contents of the hidden magazine to a place of safety.

A detachment of soldiers accompanied the cart and a curious crowd of citizens followed it to the little hill which had been dug out to hold the explosives. A quantity of the shells had been placed in the cart and a pile of others had been passed out close behind it, when one of the soldiers while in the act of handling a shell dropped it among the others. The same second an explosion shook the earth. A sheet of flame shot upward, and a cloud of whitish smoke hid everything from view. The vessels in the harbor rocked at their moorings, and the entire city was thrown into wild excitement. More than a ton of dynamite had exploded from the dropping of the shell. The soldiers and mules were blown into fragments, and only the iron tires of the cart wheels were found.

WHERE OUTLAWS HOLD SWAY.

Reign of Terror in Indian Territory—Organized Bands of Desperadoes.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The Indian office has received advices by telegraph from the Indian territory giving briefly an account of the lawless condition of affairs in that section and asking that some action be taken by the United States authorities which will restore order and protect citizens in their rights. It is stated that armed bandits are in practical control of the territory. The Indian police are powerless to protect the people and prevent robbery. Lawless gangs infest all sections. Men are held up by highwaymen in broad daylight and robbed. Life and property are not secure either by day or night. The express companies have refused to transport money and no other means of carrying funds have been devised. There are three well-known organized bands of desperadoes composed of thieves, thugs and tough characters from all sections of the country who make a business of pillaging the people. As a result a reign of terror exists, and the people of the territory are at the mercy of these gangs.

It has been suggested that in the present emergency the territory could be placed under martial law and troops directed to clear the territory of the gangs which now infest it. This would be an extreme measure and would not likely be resorted to unless all other methods fail.

TO DO DOUBLE DUTY.

Plan to Save Money by Appointing Army Officers as Indian Agents.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Hereafter, when an army officer who is serving as Indian agent, is relieved from that duty, another officer of the army will be detailed in his stead. It is said at the Indian bureau that President Cleveland prefers to have army officers act as Indian agents, because they usually command more respect and obedience from the Indians than the civilian agents. It is also understood to be the purpose in the future to have these officers detailed to act as agents when civilians are relieved. There are now fifty-seven Indian agents, and of this number twenty-one are army officers. The average pay of Indian agents is nearly $1,500, with expenses. An army officer, acting in such a capacity, does not receive a salary as agent, but gets only his regular pay as a commissioned officer, with necessary expenses. Thus, at the present time, the government is saving annually about $30,000 in having them serve as agents. If, in time, the civilian agents should be abolished altogether and the army officers appointed in their places, the saving to the government would be over $80,000 annually.

FALLING WALLS.

Collapse of a Building in St. Paul—Seven Men Injured.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 23.—Pabst Brewing company are engaged in tearing down an old building at the corner of Wabasha and Third streets preparatory to putting up a new one. At 3:40 Monday afternoon the walls collapsed and buried seven workmen beneath the ruins. A large force was immediately set to work to rescue the men, and all were taken out alive though some will probably die. The injured are:

Frank Mullen, probably fatally; William Whalen, arm amputated; Andrew Wilzab, severe injuries on the head; Jacob Schmidt, scalp wounds; Steven Shier, rib broken and severe internal injuries; Andrew Nelson, badly cut and bruised, but not serious; Eugene Brodhagen, dangerously injured about the head.

The building inspector had warned the contractor of the danger.

Improvements on the Nickel Plate Road.

A New Through Car line has been established over the Nickel Plate Road and D. L. & W. R. R. between Chicago and New York City. With the former through car line to New York via the West Shore R. R. and a Boston Car run over the West Shore-Fitchburg Route unchanged, this line will be used a double-track, important factor in the east and west bound passenger business.

A Matchless Dining Car Service has been rearranged so as to best accommodate its patrons, and with their old motto "A Perfect Passenger Service at the Lowest Available Rates" they will no doubt secure the patronage of the traveling public. When contemplating a trip East, write Mr. J. Y. Calahan, at 100 Clark St., Chicago, Ill., or any Agent of the Nickel Plate Road, for rates, maps and full particulars.

"I TELL YOU I'm in big luck." "I'm glad to hear it." "Yes. The insurance company has paid me $1,000 for my loss, and now the doctor tells me I've got an incurable disease."—Kate Field's Washington.

Tackle them at once with this pain soothing, nerve quieting, blood purifying specific, and you will experience speedy relief. Biliousness, malarial, dyspeptic, liver and neuralgic complaints yield to it.

TO PUT ON

needed flesh, no matter how you've lost it, take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It works wonders. By restoring the normal action of the deranged organs and functions, it builds the flesh up to a safe and healthy standard—promptly, pleasantly and naturally. The weak, emaciated, thin, pale and puny are made strong, plump, round and rosy. Nothing so effective as a strength restorer and flesh maker is known to medical science; this puts on healthy flesh not the fat of cod liver oil and its filthy compounds. It restores every organ of the body to activity, purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood so that the body feels refreshed and strengthened. If you are too thin, too weak, too nervous, it may be that the food assimilation is at fault. A certain amount of bile is necessary for the reception of the fat foods in the blood. Too often the liver holds back this element which would help digestion. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery stimulates, tones up and invigorates the liver, nourishes the blood, and the muscles, stomach and nerves get the rich blood they require.

Spent Hundreds of Dollars with no Benefit.

M. J. COLMAN of Sargent St., Roxbury, Mass., writes: "After suffering from dyspepsia and constipation with untold agony for at least 18 months, I am more than pleased to say that after using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets' for one month, I was entirely cured, and from that day to this I do not know, thank God, what even a slight headache is. I paid a doctor on Tremont St., Boston, in one day (for his advice only) the sum of $10.00 with $3.50 for medicine, and derived no benefit. I got more relief in one hour from your medicines, as far as my stomach was concerned, than from all the other medicine I used."

If any person who reads this is suffering from dyspepsia or constipation and will use your medicine as I have done, he will never regret it."

That really happened to a certain grocer's clerk, because he couldn't induce customers to take an inferior brand of washing powder in place of Pearline. The grocer said, "If you can't sell what I want you to sell, I don't want you."

The Jesse James fad is being revived among the railroads.

The New York Sun refers to them as "our Populist friends of Democratic memory."

See that your name is on the registry list. 30th. day of October is the day remember.

The Populists are good claimers if nothing. They claim Minnesota. They are liable to get Minne-ha-ha.

A STARTER: The Elgin Herald and the Dundee German paper, both Democratic papers heretofore, have joined the ranks of the G. O. P.

The Democratic New York Herald when asked to support the candidacy of Mr. Straus, said: "We would not support George Washington if his name were on the ticket framed by Tammany."

DEMOCRATS are reserving for themselves the credit of passing the school suffrage bill. It is a fact nevertheless that it was first introduced in the state senate by a Republican; it was passed by a Republican senate; it was passed by a Democratic house and signed by a Republican governor, thus becoming a law.

ONE of the growing and coming men of the state is Hon. A. J. Hopkins. He is today one of the foremost figures of Congress. His ability is high while his character is strong and clean. At his address before the Marquette club, on Tuesday evening he was cheered as the next governor of the state. The Chicago Journal commenting upon his address, spoke of him as a possibility as United States Senator. In Mr McKinley's trip through Illinois, at Morris, which is now in Mr. Hopkins' district, he paid Mr. Hopkins a high compliment in which he said there was no abler or more patriotic man in the House than he. Our people know that all these kind words are deserved, and hope to see him advanced in political situation.—Waukegan Gazette.

A WORTHLESS wretch cowers in the county jail at Sycamore, Ira Stebbins, by name. The hellish act which caused his incarceration there is too horrible and vile for even thought. Our present laws seem entirely inadequate to suppress this vile crime. Day after day one reads of like cases. Some receive summary punishment, while others receive light sentences, but the crime increases instead of decreases. A special law should be adopted for this class of criminals. One that would decrease instead of increase. Were it not for the fact that cooler heads were in the crowd Tuesday night, the wretch would have paid the penalty of his revolting crime with his life and Genoa's fair name would have been besmirched through his hellish act. A feeling of gratification permeates our town that the law was allowed to take its proper course and it is believed that the wretch, ere Saturday night, will be confined in the state prison at Joliet, with the heaviest sentence in the gift of Judge Kellum.

Schiller Theatre.

It was practically assured that the talented Felix Morris and his superb company, now playing at the Schiller theatre, would make a brilliant season at that house. In the bright galaxy of dramatic stars annually visiting Chicago Felix Morris is a foremost favorite. His genius as a character comedian of the very first rank is now universally admitted and he is rapidly gaining that preeminent place in his art to which his rare talent and unremitting study alike entitle him.

That his present engagement at the Schiller theatre upon the occasion of this his second annual visit to Chicago was looked forward to the keenest interest and pleasure by Chicago theatre goers, is simply proved by the spontaneous and hearty welcome he received upon the opening night of the engagement.

In the remarkably great London success "The Best Man." Mr. Felix Morris, as Price Puttlow, an eccentric and provokingly funny character, scores another great hit and adds an additional and very strong comedy character to his splendid repertory of character impersonations. So admirable, moreover, is all his work, that the public which has now grown to know and appreciate him as a dramatic star of the first rank, is eager to witness him in anything he undertakes.

Another new and highly successful comedy, "Behind the Scenes" is in preparation, and in that Felix Morris has worked out a character which will certainly add to his ever increasing fame.

A strongly popular feature of the stage productions created by Felix Morris is recognized in the beauty of the stage settings and the richness and elegance of the costumes, with which he invariably surrounds them. His stage presentations are remarkable, not only for general artistic excellence, but for a charming completeness in detail, which, most exceptional, is all the more gratifying when thoroughly carried out, as is always the case in the charming stage pictures of which Felix Morris is the attractive central figure.

The company of talented and experienced players supporting Mr. Morris during the present engagement at the Schiller, includes several of the best known stage favorites in the country, notably Mrs. Harriet Otis Dellenbaugh, Miss Gertrude Rivers, and others of ability and reputation.

Mrs. James Brown Potter and Kyrle Bellow with a superb dramatic company follow Felix Morris at the Schiller theatre. They present an attraction in the shape of a recent great dramatic success which will arouse more than a passing interest in Chicago, and which will introduce these leading stars, in characterizations specially adapted to their great histrionic talent.

A DIVINE BLESSING TO SUFFERING WOMEN.
NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 4, 1894.
G. C. Tallerdoy, M. D.—
DEAR SIR: I should prove myself a traitor to the interests of suffering humanity, should I fail to make a public acknowledgment of the marvelous cures which I have been able to effect by the use of your FEMALE TONIC.
In our hospital work here—where we have fifteen hundred patients in the institution—my staff of surgeons and myself consider the FEMALE TONIC a divine blessing, beyond estimate to suffering women. Armed with such a noble remedy, I feel that I can defy disease and rescue those who have almost entered the chill waters of Death's dark river.
God will surely reward you for presenting to the profession such a boon.

REPUBLICAN RALLY.

An Eloquent Appeal to the Voters of Genoa.

Senator George E. Bacon, of Aurora, delivered one of the most eloquent and forcible political addresses ever delivered here, last Saturday night. The City Hotel had been appropriately decked with bunting and the stars and stripes. A crowd numbering nearly five hundred had assembled and were amply repaid for their attendance.

Senator Bacon is an interesting talker and is one of the best posted men on the tariff question in the state. He is an enthusiastic Republican and carries conviction with his remarks, for he believes what he says.

Genoa was unusually fortunate in securing him, for his presence is desired in the larger cities of the state. But his talk here was greatly appreciated even by opposing parties.

It is possible another meeting will be held prior to the election.

BUSINESS CHANGE.

On Monday A. B. Clefford sold his interest in the Cold River Creamery to Tra J. Mix, of Chicago, the transfer to take place on November 1st. The property is about the best in the world receiving as it does the greatest amount of milk of any one factory in the country. From a factory with but little patronage Mr. Clefford has during the past four years built it up to its present high standard, second to none.

His successor Mr. Mix, began life not many years ago as driver of a milk wagon, in Chicago. Today he owns and controls there the second largest milk business in the United States. He is a thorough business man and will keep the Genoa creamery up to its present high standard. The present force will be retained in the factory by Mr. Mix, under the able management of George Burton.

Mr. Clefford will remain in Genoa, where he has other business that will occupy his attention.

DIED.

On Saturday, October 20th, 1894, Willie Ainley, aged 14 years. He had been sick but a week, his death coming so sudden and unexpected to all that it shocked the entire community, as they realized fully that death had entered their midst and claimed one of their dear ones. The funeral service was held in the M. E. church on Monday at 11 o'clock, Rev. W. C. Howard officiating. A large concourse of friends assembled to pay their last sad tribute to the dead.

Willie was one of the most exemplary young men in the community; his character was above reproach and his life work was replete with good deeds. He was modest and unassuming, kind and generous and loving to all his friends, and his words, direct as light, reflected the true sentiments of his heart. His honesty was proverbial; money could not buy, nor promises influence this kind and loving youth. He died as he had lived. No words of complaint fell from his lips during the last week of suffering. Although conscious of that dread messenger's approach he met death with the same fortitude that had characterized him through life. He left no enemies, no questionable acts to be explained. He traveled in the sunlight, in the open day, and his deeds and thoughts were pure as the deep blue behind the clouds. In the night of death, although having journeyed less than half the distance along life's highway, he seemed to catch glimpses of distant habitations; of a city not made by hands; the rustling of wings, and the sight of angelic hosts, filled him with joy, as he prepared to depart from this earthly tenement. Let us believe that after all our loss is his gain. That while we are struggling through clouds and mists, he is enjoying eternal sunshine; and that while only a student he heard the voice of that great Teacher calling him and saying, Well done good and faithful servant, you have been faithful to the duties of your preparatory course, you are now ready for promotion. Come up higher. J. A. BURCH.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some of the family has need of it. A tooth ache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment, before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept on hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest, relieved without paying a doctor's bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by F. T. Robinson Druggist.

Shadow.
Gray clouds hang o'er the fallen sun,
And the meadow lark's flutes are faintly blown.
From far meads, o'er the cornfields dun
Lying low and lone.

Fine and thin are the mist shrouds spun
By the night's cold hands, now the day has flown.
Shrouds all white for the cornfields dun
Lying low and lone.

Stillness; save where the little streams run
Whispering, and the wind makes moan;
And darkness bows o'er the cornfields dun
Lying low and lone.

—Ingram Crockett, in Youth's Companion.

When Nature

Needs assistance it may be best to render it promptly, but one should remember to use even the most perfect remedies only when needed. The best and most simple and gentle remedy is the Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

PROVIDENCE?

The waves were blue and the sun was bright,
As the waves and the sun quite often are,
And little birds sang with all their might
As I sailed merrily over the bar.

My little canoe fairly danced with glee
As the light breeze gently crossed the sheet
And bore her along toward the open sea,
Where the sky and the water seemed to meet.

My craft was a sentimental one,
For 'twould never trim except with two,
So I put in the bottom a heavy stone,
And signed to myself that it needs must do.

But there came before me a phantom face
As I gazed at the stone with a dreamy stare,
For it couldn't in any way take the place
Of certain live ballast I wished were there.

Then I sighed and thought what a happy lot
Would be mine if that soulless stone were out
And she in its place—but she was not—
So I sighed again and came about.

But alas! for the vision of my adored,
I was rudely waked from my semi-sleep
By spars changing place with centerboard,
While I found myself in the briny deep.

Oh, the sun was bright and the waves were blue,
But I'll thank the gods until I'm gray
That I took for ballast in my canoe
A stone, instead of a girl, that day.

CHAPTER XXVII.

"YOU SHALL NOT LIVE TO BELONG TO ANOTHER MAN."

For a moment he made no attempt to go near her.

"Why do you madden me in this way, Mary?" he asked. "Am I so hateful to you that, when I seek thus to be alone with you, your only feeling is loathing? Is it so unpardonable a crime that my love should urge me to bring you here? All my wrong is that I love you."

"Love! What can you know of love, when you seek to force it with an iron padlock? Love trusts and does not threaten. You know nothing of love."

"Trusts," he returned, impatiently. "And have I not trusted? I have trusted too long, and nothing has come of it. Now I will act."

"Why have you changed like this to me?" asked Mary, with more gentleness. "You said that it would make you happy to see me happy, and you promised to help to prove Tom's innocence. What have I done to change you or to anger you?"

"You have done nothing. Nothing you could do would anger me. But the time has come when I must act. You could not understand if I told you. Mary, I swear to you I love you with all my soul. There is not a wish nor a thought, however light, however wild, I will not try to satisfy, if you will only be my wife. Will you not listen to me? I do not ask you to love me at first. I know that may be hard—perhaps impossible. But while love is love, such a passion as mine must make an echo in time. Will you trust me?"

He spoke with eager, earnest pleading, and made as though to take her in his arms.

"Keep away from me! You forget I am the plighted wife of another man."

He stopped, let fall the hands which he had held toward her, and stared at her with love, disappointment and rage battling together for mastery in his gaze. Slowly the color ebbed away from his cheeks, and he grew deadly, dangerously white and stern.

"Is that your final answer?" he asked, his lips moving at first with no sound issuing from them; while his voice at length sounded hoarse and deep, hollow and nerveful.

"If it were my last moment on earth I would say the same," answered the girl, with compressed passion. "I loathe the very sight of you."

He made no reply to this, but continued to gaze at the girl. An expression of sadness dimmed the fiercer light of his eyes, but he went whiter even than before. Then a great sigh, almost a sob, burst from him, shaking his broad frame and making him quiver like a struck woman.

"Then may God have mercy on me, for you shall not live to belong to another man."

The awful stillness in the room, the man's moving agitation, his solemn earnestness and the despairing determination in his voice showed Mary that the danger which threatened her was real enough, and that if she was to escape her wits must be quick in finding a plan.

After he had spoken the man leant back against the wall, folded his arms across his chest and gloomily looked at the girl. Mary moved away, and by slight and almost imperceptible degrees placed as great a distance as possible between them, watching him all the time like one watches a dangerous animal.

It was a time of fearsome suspense, but the girl forced herself to keep up her courage and tried to think how she could possibly escape. She ran her eye quickly but stealthily over the two doors to the room. There was one behind her, but this she felt sure he had locked before he had trapped her in the office. The other he had locked when first he had thrown the mask off his conduct, but the key remained in the door.

Could she reach it? If she could do that and then get out of the room her chances of ultimate escape in the large rooms of the mill would be much greater.

But Gorringe stood right in the path, blocking the way completely, and she could think of no plan to lure him away. He himself removed part of the difficulty. With another deep-drawn sigh he moved from where he stood with his back to the wall, and the sound of the slight movement sent a thrill of cold to the girl's heart.

Then suddenly a plan, fully formed, rushed into her mind. Close behind her were several packets of cotton, and near to it a large bundle of waste. Towards this she moved, as if scared by him; and when he opened a drawer of the table and bent over it in search, as Mary supposed, of a weapon, the girl seized some large handfuls of the waste and the cotton and heaped them on the standard gas lamp which lighted the room, thus guttering the globe and extinguishing the light.

She rushed to the opposite side of the room, and, throwing a couple of the packets of cotton where she had been standing, so as to make Reuben Gorringe think she was hiding on that side, she ran quickly and softly to the door from the side where he would not expect her. To her intense relief she found the key without difficulty and had turned it and opened the door before Gorringe had reached her.

Just as she was rushing out of the room she felt his hand on her arm. But she tore it away from him, and, pulling the door after her with all her strength, crushed his arm and caused the hand to relax its hold. Then she fled rapidly through the next room, which was the outer and larger office, and sped out into the darkness of the mill.

She had formed a plan in thought; namely, to try and make her way to a window overlooking the lane which ran along one end of the mill—one of those by which Tom had been accused of breaking into the place. To reach this, however, she would have to pass through a long room filled with spinning machines, down a flight of stone steps, through the blowing-room and across one of the smaller weaving sheds which was close to that.

Another plan she had was to rush away to the top of the building and hide where she could till morning came. Her anxiety to get away from the place, however, made her prefer the former.

But the chance of carrying out any definite plan seemed very remote, for the girl heard Reuben Gorringe hurrying after her. She determined to hide, therefore.

She ran on as fast as possible, stopping an instant to tear off her boots with nervous haste, and then with noiseless tread crossed the first of the work-rooms. Remembering that in the second there was a heap of baskets, she rushed to the spot and crouched down beside them.

She could hear Gorringe moving, and once or twice his voice, calling her by name, reached her ear. She could tell by the sound that he was at the far end of the first room; and she held her breath to listen for what he was doing and in what direction he was moving.

It was a brilliant night, and the rays of the full moon flooded through the many windows of the place, bathing the whole in a white light. But this light made her escape much more perilous, and she was afraid to move lest she should be found.

The latter fear prevailed; and finding, after some minutes of absolutely intolerable suspense, that the sounds of Gorringe's movements came no nearer, she rose and moved as silently as a ghost across the forest of machinery in the direction where she judged Gorringe must be.

Just when she was reaching the division between the two rooms, some weighty thing fell with a huge clattering noise, close to the spot where she stood. It raised such a clang in the weird stillness of the night that she started violently and could scarce refrain from screaming out. She checked herself with a great effort, and in her panic tried to dart back to her hiding place by the baskets.

She had scarcely moved three paces, however, before she heard the rush of footsteps through the room adjoining, and Reuben Gorringe stood by her side with the light of a brilliant lantern turned full upon her white, terror-stricken face.

"You cannot escape me," he said. "It is useless to try." He laid a hand on her arm and held the girl in a firm grasp, and led her back to the office.

"What do you wish me to do?" she said, in a faltering tone.

"It's too late to think of that now," his voice was sad and low; "you gave me your answer. If we cannot live together, at least we can die together. In death you cannot hate me, as in life you cannot love me."

"Do you mean to murder me?" cried the girl.

"I could not bear to see you another's wife," he answered, in the same calm, despairing monotone. Then after a moment's pause he flashed out into sudden passion. "By Heaven, the mere thought of it is a hell to me. To know that another would have the right to take you in his arms, to press your heart to his, to shower his kisses upon your cheeks, your hair, your lips, and to feel your caresses answering to his own? By Heaven, I would kill you a hundred times first! But come, it is no time for talk. Come."

He checked the outburst of feeling and led the way in the direction of the office.

"Have you no mercy?" asked the girl when they reached the room, pleading with him. "Will nothing move you?"

"Yes, it is mercy that makes me act thus," he answered, with a grim, short laugh. "Mercy for myself—aye, and mercy for you. You cannot be afraid to die. You have wronged no one in the world; your life has been full of goodness and kindness. You will but be in Heaven a finger's length before your time."

"You forget. If I die you will condemn an innocent man to a shameful death, for I alone can prove Tom's innocence."

"That is a curious plea to put to me," answered Gorringe, frowning. "But even that is nothing. I will tell you now, he is innocent, and his innocence can be proved without you. You may be easy on that score," he said, with a sneer.

"Thank God! thank God for that!" cried the girl, joyously, while the tears of gladness rushed into her eyes.

But the sight of her joy and the glad look on her face inflamed all the man's wild jealousy.

"By Heaven, lass, do you want to drive me mad even now?" he cried. Springing forward, he threw his arms round her and, despite her fierce struggles, he held her to his heart and printed hot, burning kisses of desperate and despairing passion on her face and lips.

"My God, how I love you," he cried passionately. "It is good to die like this."

Mary struggled with him, and would have screamed out in disgust and loathing and fear of him, but he smothered her screams with his kisses.

"Kiss me once, Mary, just once," he pleaded; but she struggled the more desperately to break away from him.

He held her firmly until, releasing her from his arms, he gripped her wrist and dragged her toward the drawer in which lay the revolver.

This he took out and then closed the drawer.

"One last kiss, my darling," he cried. "I will be the last my lips will ever give or yours receive."

Then he wound his arms around her, and for an instant renewed his madly passionate kisses.

"Good-by, my darling," he exclaimed, after a minute, and moving back from where they had stood, he freed his right hand, in which he held the revolver.

Mary closed her eyes, knowing what was coming.

At that instant a slight sound broke the deadly silence of the place, and the man paused. The girl opened her eyes, and, seeing his hesitation, broke away from him by a sudden and violent endeavor.

His hesitation passed as quickly, and he rushed after her with the revolver pointed at her, and when Mary saw him approaching she covered in a corner and screamed and covered her eyes, and waited for the death that seemed so close.

Then came the sound of feet moving rapidly across the room, a slight struggle and a heavy fall.

own cottage. When she reached it there was a surprise in store for her. Gibeon Prawl stood by the door.

At the sight of him the girl's intense excitement broke her down. She burst into tears and stood clinging to his arm, sobbing hysterically, unable to speak a word and gasping, as if for air.

"What's the matter, Mary?" he asked, wondering and alarmed. "Has anything happened? What is it?"

Then she managed to tell him something of what had occurred and to urge him to go for assistance.

"Reuben Gorringe stabbed by Savannah!" he cried, in intense excitement. "How came you all there?"

"Don't stay to ask now," she said, hurriedly. "Go for help. Go at once. I cannot move another step."

"She's mad," he cried, breathlessly. "I've traced her. I came back to tell you," and with this he ran off at top speed for a doctor and the police.

The girl looked for a moment after him as he disappeared in the darkness, then tottered into the cottage and, feeling utterly prostrated and weak, had only strength to drag herself to her bed and sink down upon it exhausted, calling in a feeble voice to her mother to come and help her. When the latter came the girl had fainted.

Early the next morning Gibeon was at the cottage asking for her, and, although she was still faint and weak and ill, she dressed herself and went to him.

"You are ill," he said, when he saw the pale wan look on her face. "Can you bear to hear news?"

"I have come to hear it," she answered. "I can bear anything better than suspense. What happened last night?"

"I only know a little about that. I have other news—good news it should be for you. Can you bear to hear that? I was waiting last night to tell you when you found me here."

"What is it? About Tom?" As she asked this a light pink flush tinged her cheeks, and her eyes brightened.

"Yes," he answered. "I have determined to tell the truth and risk all consequences."

"The truth?" cried Mary; and her old suspicions concerning him flashed upon her, and showed in the look she bent upon him.

"Yes, the truth. But it is not what you suspected when I was last here," he answered, observing her look. "You were on the wrong track then, Mary, and I was a fool to be angry instead of just telling you the whole truth. But I was afraid; and the very readiness with which I saw you suspected me, increased my fear of speaking. I wanted to clear Tom in some other way, and without my telling everything. That's why I've been hunting down that girl, Savannah; so as you might have a handle over her to make her speak the truth and bear out Tom's story. But when I got away I began turning things over and I couldn't help remembering that you didn't stop at a risk to save me that night in the barn; and then I grew wild with myself and soft like at thinking of what you must be suffering with suspense. So I just finished the inquiries I wanted to make about Savannah, and then came back to clear Tom."

"You can clear him?" broke in Mary, eagerly.

"Yes, I can do that. This ain't been a murder at all. Old Coode didn't die a violent death; he just died suddenly—heart disease, or apoplexy, or something of that sort. Anyways, it wasn't murder."

"Not murder!" exclaimed Mary, her face alight with wonderment. "Why, how do you know? How can you know?"

"I was in the mill that night."

"What?" cried the girl, all her suspicions reawakened with redoubled force at these words.

THE REGULAR ARMY.

Annual Reports of Maj. Gens. Miles and Howard.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Maj. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, commanding the department of the Missouri, has submitted his annual report. It says there have been no changes of troops during the year, and continues:

"As in previous years, the troops in the Indian and Oklahoma territories have been occupied during much of this time in removing trespassers from the public lands, in preserving order in the newly-settled region and in keeping the peace between the hostile factions of the semi-civilized Indian tribes. In addition to removing and expelling intruders in the Choctaw nation and from the Osage and Kawind reservations the troops stationed at Forts Reno, Sill and Supply were called on for the purpose of protecting United States mails, guarding railroad bridges and supporting the United States marshal in making arrests."

"All of these difficult duties have been performed in a manner which shows good judgment and discretion on the part of the officers and a good state of discipline and faithful service on the part of the troops, and it is believed that but for their prompt intervention much bloodshed would have resulted. The troops, having quickly and efficiently accomplished the arduous duties assigned to them, have been withdrawn from the field and returned to their respective stations."

"The conduct of the troops in restoring order and confidence when mob violence and a reign of terror existed in Chicago, was marked by great forbearance, fortitude and excellent discipline, and their presence and action there very greatly contributed to the maintenance of civil law, and, in my opinion, saved this country from serious rebellion on one had been publicly declared to exist by one most responsible for its existence."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Maj. Gen. Howard goes on the retired list November 8. He entered the military service as a cadet in 1850. This fact lends interest to his annual report, from which the following is extracted:

Gen. Howard's report shows that his forces, consisting of 413 officers and 4,935 men, were distributed among 26 garrisons and 38 not garrisoned posts. Affairs in the department have been very peaceful except for the interruption of the Chicago strike. His apprehensions of the troubles extending to the larger eastern cities at that time were not realized, but says Gen. Howard, should such difficulties arise again and simultaneously in cities far apart, the necessity for regular troops and more of them than this department now affords is apparent. Just now the national guard in several states in the department is well organized and responds promptly to every call of duty; still, if more than one state is involved in any event growing out of anarchy, the executive will always require his own troops. They will be essential to his execution of the laws and the maintenance of order. Of course, governors of states could cooperate, but they might disagree, or be reluctant in meeting sudden emergency. He strongly recommends an increase of the army to at least double the size of our present force.

SHOT FROM AMBUSH.
Employees in the Carter County Mining District Attacked by Strikers.

ASHLAND, Ky., Oct. 20.—The outbreak that has been expected for some days in the Carter county mining district, came Thursday morning in the ambushing of the miners of the Straight Creek Coal company by the strikers. The miners were fired upon from the bushes along the hills as they were enroute to the mine and a number were wounded. Jack Marcum and John Morris were fatally shot, while Bob Evans, John Adams and several whose names were not secured, were also reported as badly injured. The bullets in each case came from Winchester rifles. During the balance of the day the appearance of a miner at the pit mouth or the tippie was a signal for renewed firing. Word was sent to Grayson, the county seat, and the sheriff and a posse of deputies were quickly summoned. They spent the day scouring the hills and succeeded in capturing James Tyree, James Coburn, Bob and John Taylor, Will Sneed and two others, but these men were unarmcd. They were removed, however, to Grayson for safe keeping and will be held for further developments. The excitement is intense and extra troops are out, as further trouble is expected.

The Business Situation.
NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—The Dun Co.'s weekly review of trade for October shows a decline of 35 cents—each lower than the corresponding month of last year. The classification were lower than in any month of the year since 1891. The gold instead of production of such prices as October are the salient features of the business of the week. Distribution of goods to consumers is on a fairly, with gains in nearly all lines in comparison with last year, but not yet adequate to sustain the present volume of manufacturing production, so that prices of many commodities are still higher than in 1891. The domestic trade of October was 1.5 per cent. less than in 1891. The monthly average for the month is 1.6 per cent. less than last year, but 2.3 smaller than in 1891. Many features of encouragement are not yet apparent. Expectations are not yet so bright as in 1891. RECONSIDERED THE QUESTION.
Is Greater Pleasure Derived from Anticipation Than from Realization?

That Long Islanders are not wholly devoid of humor, which has been charged against them, is clearly demonstrated by a recent occurrence at Riverhead, the Suffolk county-seat.

It seems that the local debating society had under consideration the old topic: "Whether there is greater pleasure derived from anticipation than from realization?" This weighty subject was discussed at length, and was finally carried in favor of anticipation by a heavy majority.

Now, it happened that a favorite dish of Riverheaders is rabbit stew, and that one of the losing factions, Nate Downs, is esteemed as the best connoisseur of rabbit stew on the eastern end of Long Island.

Not long after the famous debate Nate invited the whole company to visit his house and partake of the favorite dish. Anticipation ran high, and at the appointed hour the club assembled en masse, but, alas for realization, there was no rabbit stew, only the usual paraphernalia of serving it—dishes, knives, etc.

Nate had sought by this practical method to force the society to reconsider its hasty decision, and was eminently successful. The company left very angry, but with the settled conviction that so far as rabbit stew was concerned realization would be more satisfactory than anticipation.
