There were thirteen ladies voted at the election Tuesday, who divided their ballots between McKinley and Woolley, the former getting three and Woolley nine. One vote was thrown out.

The difference of opinion in regard to the number of Democrats in the town of Genoa has been definitely settled, Bryan receiving 102, although there were some ballots irregularly marked by putting a cross in all circles at the top of the ticket except the Democratic, thereby showing their intention to vote the straight Bryan ticket, but they were necessarily thrown out.

Geneva's election board did not finish their work until about 12 o'clock, owing to the great amount of work which had to be done.

The vote polled was 453 full ballots and 13 women's ballots.

Just one month ago "Uncle" I. Q. Burroughs handed to THE JOURNAL editor a list showing how the electoral vote would stand by states. His figures footed up 294, but he missed it by Washington and Wyoming increasing his prediction to 302. Pretty good.

Underwear Points.

Few people buying Underwear give it the attention it deserves. The fit, making and sewing are just as important as the quality; if it is poorly made and sewed it will not give the satisfaction that first-class goods will.

Our underwear is knitted and made up in the best mills in this country, and we have that much confidence in the superior quality and finish of our Underwear that we will give to any lady or gentleman in the county, absolutely free of charge, a suit of our best Underwear, who, after examining our Underwear and comparing it with what others are showing, does not unhesitatingly say our Underwear is the best made, best sewed and best finished for the price in this vicinity. And remember, our prices are lower than others ask for poorly-made goods.

Novel Attempt to Reach North Pole

Explorer Will Erect Trolley to Carry His Supplies

To the north pole with the aid of windmill and trolley line is the latest in Arctic exploration, and the plan is only just disclosed by the return of the steamer Gjoa to Hammerfest, Norway, after an unsuccessful search for the Abruzzi expedition, which it missed. The originator of this novel expedition is Lieut. Bauendahl, the German explorer, and on account of the secrecy maintained he reached the arctic before his plan for reaching the farthest north became known to the world. With the story of the methods to be employed the mystery of the absence of dogs in the expedition is cleared.

Lieut. Bauendahl, who is of some note in Germany as an explorer, left size of the vessel as it passed out to sea, referring to it sarcastically as "Bauendahl's ice crusher."

But with the return of the Gjoa light was cast on the plan to be pursued, and the story shows Bauendahl is nearly as daring and startling as the intrepid aeronaut for whom he is to search. The Gjoa fell in with the Matador at Cape South, and on a visit to Bauendahl by Captain Hagerup the former related how he expects to reach the pole.

His plan is to steam his vessel to the edge of the ice field, at about the eighty-first parallel of latitude, where he will disembark his forty water-tight supply chests, each weighing 300 pounds. Thereupon Bauendahl and an

and the performance will be repeated until the pole is reached. The number of chests to be dragged at one haul will depend upon the strength of the wind.

The chests were carefully constructed in Germany for the purpose. They are shaped like the pulkha, a sledge used in Lapland, and fitted out with low runners to facilitate their movement over the ice.

Where a space of water too large to pass around is encountered the chests will be lashed together to form a raft, on which the whole party will cross.

When the ice is too broken or uneven to drag the chests by the windmill method, the trolley feature of the plan will be put into use.

The cable will be strung on bamboo tripods brought along for the purpose. The chests will be hung to the trolley cable by means of hooks, and pulled along by the members of the expedition, who will remove each impeding tripod as they reach it after having fixed another just behind the traveling chests. Bauendahl calculates his company, split up

Hamburg with seven men on a little fishing steamer, the Matador, in August last. The objects of the expedition—attempt to reach the north pole and an incidental search for Andree—were known together with the fact that it carried provisions for two years. But just how he was to reach the pole, or make any progress at all through the arctic ice in his puny one-engine vessel, Lieut. Bauendahl kept to himself while still in Europe. There were many who doubted the sincerity of the expedition, and laughed at the assistant will push ahead, dragging a windmill on a sledge. To the windmill will be attached a trolley cable, which will pay out as the sledge advances. When the length of the cable has been run out the windmill will be fixed on the highest ground available and set in motion. The action will turn a windlass, winding in the cable, to which the supply chests have been attached by the party remaining behind. When all the chests have been brought up in this manner Bauendahl will again push ahead with the windmill, into parties of two along the line of the trolley, can erect and take it down as the chests are moved forward without great delay and without bringing the cases to the ground.

The explorer hopes with ten hours of work a day to make two or three miles each twenty-four hours, and in this way cover the 600 miles from his starting point to the pole in a year, allowing 100 days for delays due to storms, intense cold, etc. He figures he has just enough provisions for the journey to and from the pole.

Gave $10,000 to Eloping Couple.

W. C. McDonald, a wealthy ranchman, whose cattle feed on a thousand hills, and whose great stone house is located twenty-five miles from Cheyenne, Wyo., followed hard and fast on special trains last week to intercept his daughter Anna, who had eloped with Walter Hartwell, a drug clerk at Van Tassel's, the little town near McDonald's ranch. The old man had two big revolvers strapped to his waist, and he told every conductor and brakeman and engineer and fireman of each and every train on which he rode of the many things he was going to do to Walter when he caught him.

But when the old man reached Omaha his anger had cooled, and he fell on the hotel clerk's neck and said: "Say, pard, I was mad. Yes, I was. And I was a-going to fill that tenderfoot full of plaintive holes. Yes, I were. But, say, pard, it's all over now. I jest want my little Anna. I'm a poor old lone fool dad, and I want my little girl, and I want to take her back home with me, and if she wants to bring that pill-mixin' dude back with her, why, all right. I guess I can stand it if she can. And, say, I've changed my mind about a-shootin' of him. Yes, I have, pard. Instead of that I'm a-going to give 'em $10,000 for a weddin' present. And there's more where that came from, pard. Just se's I get my little Annie, pard. I won't have to look at him, anyhow, and if the Injuns don't steal him he can roost around the ranch and get his three square meals a day all of his sweet life. All I want is my little girl, pard, that's all."

And at last accounts the telegraph wires in every direction from Omaha were bending almost to the ground under the weight of messages which said: "Anna, come home and be forgiven. Ten thousand dollars for yer wedding present. I won't klick no more on the dude. Anna, come back to yer Poor Ole Dad."

FLORA OF CHAUCER.

Gives Expression to Subjective Pleasure in Outer World.

Just 500 years ago in a little house within the garden of St. Mary's chapel, Westminster, and the sire of English poetry, Oct. 25, 1400, was a day on which a great light passed beyond the ken of men. Darkened for a time, its radiance has brightened and diffused itself down the centuries until now it is the guiding star of all who seek to know our mother tongue. Chaucer's verse marks an epoch in the English language and literature, but strongly as it appeals to the bookman, to the antiquary, and to the thoughtful observer of those earlier conditions of social life, its study is from a less salient point of view of almost equal worth. Among the many critical analyses which this anniversary calls forth, a word may well be given to Chaucer's poetry in its relation to the flora of England. Not only is living therein the charm of English fields, the song of lark, the fluttering leaves and breath of meadow sweet, but Chaucer, first, in some degree, gives expression to that subjective pleasure in the outer world so distinctively an element in modern life, but hitherto unrecognized in literature and almost unknown to individual emotion. The intellectual enjoyment of nature is largely the outcome, the fine efflorescence, of scientific study. Slight trace of its existence is seen in the older classics. In its more subtle phases, even in Chaucer, the force is but nascent. The opening words of the "Canterbury Tales" tell how under the quickening influences of spring, "longen folk to go on pilgrimages," an impulse which was chiefly a physical exhilaration. Chaucer was himself a typical Englishman, with the love of outdoor life permeating his whole being, but the poet's fancy touched to finer issues that recipient temperament. His pages bubble over in gladness as "The smale foules maken melodie," and even, when approaching old age, he sat down to write his marvelous tales, like his own Perkin Revelour, "Galliard he was as goldfinch in the shaw."

Inconstant as Esau. We are, for the most part, inconstant as Esau—full of good resolves today, and tomorrow throwing them to the winds; today proud of the ardour of our calling, and girding ourselves to self-control and self-denial, tomorrow sinking back to softness and self-indulgence. Not once, as Esau, but again and again, we barter peace of conscience, and fellowship with God, and the hope of holiness, for what is, in simple fact, no more than a bowl of pottage.—Marcus Dods.

Short-Service Conscription Army.

The compulsory service act is expected to become a law in Chile in a few days. By this act the distinction between the regular army and the national guard is abolished and a short service conscript army established, with permanent instructors. About 30,000 men will be under arms at all times. All young Chileans will be liable for service from nine months to one year at the age of 20, thereafter passing into the reserve.—Robert H. Reid in Chicago Record.

WOMEN MUST SLEEP.

Avoid Nervous Prostration.

If you are dangerously sick what is the first duty of your physician? He quiets the nervous system, he deadens the pain, and you sleep well.

Friends ask, "what is the cause?" and the answer comes in pitying tones, nervous prostration. It came upon you so quietly in the beginning, that you were not alarmed, and when sleep deserted you night after night until your eyes fairly burned in the darkness, then you tossed in nervous agony praying for sleep.

MARCUS D. AURNER KILLED.

Evidently he Fell or Jumped from the Eight O'clock Limited and Loses his Life Thereby.

A Strange Feature is, Why did he Come From Home with only 92 Cents.

Last Saturday night Henry Lankton, living northeast of here, while passing the depot at Kingston, discovered the prostrate form of a man lying on the platform. His head was banging off the edge toward the rail. It was about ten or fifteen minutes after the eight o'clock limited had passed at a terrific speed and the supposition is that was the train that caused his death.

His body was badly crushed. The neck was broken, the left arm was partly torn from the body, the left leg between the knee and ankle and the breast was crushed. A bad gash on the chin and the bones of the face and jaw were crushed. Death was certainly instantaneous.

It was but a short time before the news spread and people viewed the man. Wm. Aurner saw it and not recognizing him returned over to town where he heard that the fellow might be his brother. He immediately went back and quickly identified the body as that of his brother Marcus De Lafayette Aurner.

A mystery certainly lurks around this sad and sudden taking off of one of the well known boys of Kingston. What the coroner's inquest, which will be held Wednesday at one o'clock will develop, will be watched with much interest. It is hinted by parties who have been in close communication with the family for years past that something startling will be developed and have a termination unexpected.

The idea that a sane man should undertake to alight from a train moving at a rate of 50 or 60 miles an hour and also that he should come to Kingston with the small amount of 92 cents about his person well knowing that the 'are to return was double that, is not tenable.

Coroner Morris impaneled a jury with I. A. McCollom as foreman, and after viewing the remains they were adjourned until Wednesday, at one o'clock, when the investigation and the hearing of witnesses will proceed.

Marcus D. Aurner was the youngest son of the late Leonard P. Aurner, whose death occurred a few weeks ago at the age of 90 years. He was married in first to Volara Ann Goff, from whom he was later divorced, and again married to Ella Bishop Heldt, who survives him. No children were born to either marriage. For the last ten years he has been an employee of the Post Office department in Chicago and for three years previous to that time he had had a position as street car conductor there.

He carried life insurance in two different companies to a considerable extent, one of which was an order among the United States postal clerks.

THE CORONER'S INQUEST.

The coroner's jury on Wednesday afternoon returned a verdict that Marcus D. Aurner came to his death by jumping from G., M. & St. P. fast train No. 1.

A commutation ticket was found on his person, which explains why he did not have money to pay his fare back to Chicago.

FUNERAL AND OBITUARY.

The funeral of Marcus D. Aurner was held in the M. E. church, Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Dingle officiating.

Mr. Aurner was born in Kingston, August 12, 1858, died November 3, 1900, aged 42 years 2 months and 21 days. He was the youngest child in a family of nine children, born to Leonard and Margaret W. Aurner. He was left early in life by the death of his mother without the love and care which a mother only can give her boy.

He grew to manhood in the old home when he went to Chicago and entered the employ of the government as carrier in the Post Office department where he continued for eleven consecutive years, his superintendent deploring his demise in an earnest testimonial to him as faithful to his duty at all times.

He leaves many sorrowing friends, a dearly beloved wife, two sisters and four brothers to mourn the loss of a genial friend, a devoted husband and a loving brother.

The Masons, of which order the deceased was a member had charge of the funeral and performed their ritual at the grave.

Interment took place in the East Kingston cemetery.

A new three cent piece has been authorized by act of congress to take the place of the old coin that so closely resembled a dime that it became necessary to stop its coinage. The new piece is to be of nickel, the size of the old bronze cent, only thicker, and in the center is to be a hole one-fourth of an inch in diameter. The new coin is so designed that it can be distinguished by sight or touch.

An Irishman, in order to celebrate the advent of a new era, went out on a lark. He didn't get home till 3 o'clock in the morning, and was barely in the house before a nurse rushed up, and uncovering a bunch of soft goods, showed him triplets. The Irishman looked up at the clock, which said 3, then at the three of a kind in the nurse's arms, and said: "O'm not superstitious, but thank hivins that I didn't come in at 12."

We judge that the young folks who have, previous to this year, been so active in decorating the streets with all kinds of rubbish and outhouses are evidently learning the real meaning of "All Saints' Day." The old-time custom was to build huge bonfires and display bright lights on the evening of November 1st for the purpose of scaring the evil spirits away; but recently it has degenerated into the custom of getting together all the hideous and unsightly objects, and the greater the stench that arose the more certain the devil and his imps would depart from such a land of filth.

Dr. P. L. Alden is authority for the statement that Dr. Clair Parkhill, of Hornellsville, N. Y., has demonstrated after a most careful and exhaustive investigation that grape eating is not conducive to appendicitis. It is generally admitted in medical circles that not a single case of the disease is on record that can be traced to grape seeds. In grape regions, where grapes form an important item of the diet for several months in the year, the disease is less frequent than in localities where the industry is not known. The most emphatic disapproval of the common fallacy that this increasing malady is due to grapes is the fact that in the grape season in grape countries the disease is conspicuous by its comparative infrequency. Surgical science has clearly demonstrated that appendicitis has always existed, but until late years it was known as inflammation of the bowels, peritonitis, and kindred diseases, and that the common cause is constipation. It is therefore not only safe to eat grapes with impunity so far as any fear of appendicitis is concerned, but is to be recommended, as the effect of the grape diet is directly opposed to the common cause of appendicitis.

DELUSIVE DODGERS.

Speaking of methods of advertising, an exchange says, with truth, that "the dodger company, nine times out of ten, stops at the front door, while the news paper finds its way to the dining room or parlor and enters right into the boom of the family." It may be said that the dodgers or handbills rarely reach the front door, so negligent of duty are most bill distributors. The surest way to advertise, as to good results, is in the local paper with the largest circulation.

Who says that it doesn't pay to advertise? A Kane-county man put a want ad. in the local paper for a girl, and the very next day his wife had one.

It is a good thing to offer to refund money, provided the advertiser does so in a cheerful manner. If, however, in refunding, he leaves the impression that he is unwilling to do so, he would better not refund at all, since he will probably lose the trade of the customer anyhow.

A Slaughter Sale.

August Tyler the well known furniture dealer of this place, last week inaugurated a special cut sale on his goods to make room for more which will soon be upon him. He this week finds that he has on hand a much larger stock than anticipated and will give the people an opportunity to make selections from such of his goods as has not been closed out. The Human Machine.

You are a complex and ingenious machine, "fearfully and wonderfully" made. If your age is fifteen years or more, you can be figured up to a dot.

You have 208 bones, and 500 muscles; your blood weighs twenty-five pounds; your heart is nearly five inches long, and three inches in diameter; it beats 70 times a minute, 4,200 times hour, 100,800 times a day, and 30,722,200 times a year. At each beat a little over two ounces of blood is thrown out of it; each day it receives and discharges about seven tons of that wonderful fluid. It is the most remarkable pump in the world.

Your lungs will contain a gallon of air, and you inhale 24,000 gallons a day. The aggregate surface of the air-cells of your lungs, supposing them to be spread out, is 20,000 square inches.

The weight of your brain is three pounds, or more. Your nerves exceed 10,000,000. Your skin is composed of three layers, and varies from 1/8 to 1/4 of an inch in thickness. The area of your skin is about 1,700 square inches, and you are subjected to an atmospheric pressure of 15 pounds to the square inch, a total of 127 tons.

Each square inch of your skin contains 3,500 sweating tubes, or perspiration pores, each of which may be likened to a little drain pipe 1/8 of an inch long, making an aggregate length in the entire surface of your body of 201, 166 feet, or a little ditch for draining the body almost 40 miles long.

In the future have more respect for your body, and see that it is well taken care of.

McGregor Worth $50,000,000.

A. M. McGregor, president of the Standard Oil company of Ohio, who died in New York Wednesday, was one of the few men who got into the Standard Oil company on the ground floor with John D. Rockefeller and stayed there.

McGregor went to work as a clerk for the Standard Oil company when it was formed in 1863, he being but 26 years old.

During the dark days of the company he hung on like other shareholders sold out, many of them to John D. Rockefeller himself, because he was the only buyer for the shares.

No one knows what Standard Oil properties or shares are worth, but the fortune left by the good and faithful servant of the head of the Standard Oil interests amounts to probably $50,000,000.

Eggs Go Up in Price. Fresh eggs have climbed up in the class of porterhouse steaks among food products by an advance of 2 cents on the dozen on the price at Chicago.

Strictly fresh eggs are now selling at 21 cents and dealers find it difficult to get enough even on the basis of that price.

The scarcity in eggs is not due to a hen trust, but to the activity of men who store eggs to hold them for the fancy prices they expect to get later in the season, when the hens take their annual rest to attend to other matters.

A further increase in the price is threatened by the dealers.

Thieves Loot and Fire Town. The business portion of the town of Shelby, Polk county, Nebraska, was almost entirely wiped out by fire.

Wednesday night a gang of burglars, believed to be five in number, swooped down on the town. The till of nearly every store and shop in the place was tapped and three safes blown open.

After gathering all of the loot possible they set fire to the Opera House block, the largest building in the center of the business district. Every business establishment save two was burned.

The robbers made their escape with money and goods estimated at $1,500.

She Smelled the Danger. A keen sense of smell of danger possessed by Mary Bridges saved her life in Laurens, S. C.

When the fuse attached to a pile of dynamite under her house was burning, the woman rushed into the street.

A moment later the town was shaken by the explosion and the house shattered. Two months ago the house the woman was living in was blown up.

She had gone visiting and so escaped. There is no clue to her enemy.

Disabled at Sea. With the arrival at New York of the American liner St. Paul, which limped into port Sunday, came the first news of several disasters at sea which fortunately cost no lives.

This was followed by accounts of the grounding of the Furst Bismarck and the Pretoria on the treacherous shoals at the mouth of the Elbe and the sinking of a fishing schooner, Mary Mosquito, by the Saronia off the American coast last Wednesday.

The starboard propeller and tail shaft were gone and the starboard engine-room a mass of junk. The St. Paul came into port one day late. For a few seconds on last Wednesday evening the ship was shaken as if by an earthquake, but the nery men who stand on watch with steady vision and clear brains quickly checked the flow of steam in the wrecked engine-room, and not a soul was hurt, though the two tandem engines and the two single engines on the starboard side had been reduced to useless wrecks in just eight seconds.

PLANS FOR CUBA'S FUTURE.

Constitutional Convention Opens at Havana.

GEN. WOOD MAKES ADDRESS.

Says the Constitution Must Be Made Adequate to Secure Stable, Orderly and Free Government—Justice of the Supreme Court Presides.

The Cuban constitutional convention met in the Marti theater at Havana, Monday at 2 o'clock. Long before that hour the theater was crowded. Many thousands were unable to gain admittance, and the streets in the neighborhood were blocked with people.

Gen. Wood and his staff, accompanied by Gen. Fitzhugh Lee and his staff, received an ovation on entering, the band playing "America." Senator Cisneros and Gen. Rivera escorted Gen. Wood to the platform, and he almost immediately opened the convention.

"As military governor of the island of Cuba and representing the president of the United States," he said, "I call this convention to order. It will be your duty first of all to frame and adopt a constitution for Cuba, and when that has been done, to formulate what in your opinion ought to be the relations between Cuba and the United States.

The constitution must be adequate to secure stable, orderly and free government. When you have formulated the relations which in your opinion ought to exist between Cuba and the United States the government of the United States will doubtless take such action on its part as shall lead to a final and authoritative agreement between the people of the two countries to the promotion of their common interests.

"All friends of Cuba will follow your deliberations with the deepest interest, earnestly desiring that you shall reach just conclusions, and that by the dignity, individual self-restraint and wise conservatism which shall characterize your proceedings the capacity of the Cuban people for representative government may be signally illustrated.

"The fundamental distinction between true representative government and a dictatorship is that in the former every representative of the people, in whatever office, confines himself strictly within the limits of his defined powers. Without such restraint there cannot be free constitutional government.

"Under the order pursuant to which you have been elected and convened you have no duty and no authority to take part in the present government of the island. Your powers are strictly limited by the terms of that order.

The convention organized with Senator Lorente, justice of the supreme court, as president, and Senator Villuendo as secretary.

Hundreds of people believed that heavy ordnance was being fired in or near the city. At 11:25 o'clock another shock equally as severe was felt. Others continued at fifteen-minute intervals until 12:30 o'clock.

At 4:04 o'clock the seventh shock of the day was felt, severer than any of the preceding ones, followed four minutes later by a report and shock, the severest of the day. The last disturbance made the windowpanes rattle in several sections of the city.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

AN ESPECIALLY TIMELY DISCOURSE.

The Man Faithful to God Is the Most Faithful to His Country and to His Fellowmen—An Example from the Life of Daniel.

(Copyright, 1900, Louis Klopsch, N. Y.) This discourse of Dr. Talmage is appropriate for all seasons, but especially in times of great political agitation. The text is, Daniel vi, 16, "Then the king commanded, and they brought Daniel and cast him into the den of lions."

Darius was king of Babylon, and the young man Daniel was so much a favorite with him that he made him prime minister, or secretary of state. But no man could gain such a high position without exciting the envy and jealousy of the people. There were demagogues in Babylon who were so appreciative of their own abilities that they were affronted at the elevation of this young man. Old Babylon was a land of young Babylon. The taller the cedar the more apt it is to be struck by the lightning. These demagogues asked the king to make a decree that anybody that made a petition to anyone except the king during a period of thirty days should be put to death. King Darius, not suspecting any foul play, makes that decree. The demagogues have accomplished all they want, because they know that no one can keep Daniel from sending petitions before God for thirty days.

So far from being afraid, Daniel goes on with his supplications three times a day and is found on his housetop making prayer. He is caught in the act. He is condemned to be devoured by the lions. Rough executioners of the law seize him and hasten him to the cavern. I hear the growl of the wild beasts, and I see them pawing the dust, and as they put their mouths to the ground the solid earth quakes with their bellowing. I see their eyes roll, and I almost hear the fiery eyeballs snap in the darkness. These monsters approach Daniel. They have an appetite keen with hunger. With one stroke of their paw or one snatch of their teeth they may leave him dead at the bottom of the cavern. But what a strange welcome Daniel receives from these hungry monsters! They fawn around him; they lick his hand; they bury his feet in their long manes. That night he has calm sleep with his head pillowed on the warm necks of the tamed lions.

But not so well does Darius, the king, sleep. He has an attack of terrific insomnia. He loves Daniel and hates this stratagem by which he has been condemned. All night long the king walks the floor. He cannot sleep. At the least sound he starts, and his flesh creeps with horror. He is impatient for the dawning of the morning. At the first streak of the daylight Darius hastens forth to see the fate of Daniel. The heavy palace doors open and clang shut long before the people of the city waken. Darius goes to the den of the lions. He looks in. All is silent. His heart stops. He feels that the very worst has happened; but, gathering all his strength, he shouts through the rifts of the rock, "O Daniel is thy God, whom thou servest continually able to deliver thee?" There comes rolling up from the deep darkness a voice which says: "O king, live forever. My God has sent his angels to shut the lions' mouths that they have not hurt me." Then Daniel is brought out from the den. The demagogues are hurled into it, and no sooner have they struck the bottom of the den than their flesh was rent and their bones cracked, and their blood spurted through the rifts in the rock, and as the lions made the rocks tremble with their roar they announce to all ages that while God will defend his people the way of the ungodly shall perish.

Daniel's Greatest Offense. Learn from this subject that the greatest crime you can commit in the eyes of many is the crime of success. What had Daniel done that he should be flung to the lions? He had become prime minister. They could not forgive him for that, and behold in that a touch of unsanctified human nature as seen in all ages of the world. So long as you are pinched in poverty, so long as you are running the gantlet between the landlord and taxgatherer, so long as you find it hard work to educate your children, there are people who will say: "Poor man, I am sorry for him." But after awhile the tide turns in his favor. That was a profitable investment you made. You bought just at the right time. Fortune becomes good humored and smiles upon you. Now you are in some department successful, and your success chills some one. Those men who used to sympathize with you stand along the street and they scowl at you from under the rim of their hats. You have more money or more influence than they have, and you ought to be scowled at from under the rim of their hats. You catch a word or two as you pass by them. "Stuck up," says one. "Got it dishonestly," says another. "Will burst soon," says a third. Every stone in your new house is laid on their hearts. Your horses' hoofs went over their nerves. Every item of your success has been to them an item of discomfort and despair. Just as soon as in any respect you rise above your fellows, if you are more virtuous, if you are more wise, if you are more influential, you cast a shadow on the prospects of others. The road to honor and success is within reach of the enemy's guns. Jealousy says, "Stay down, or I'll knock you down." "I do not like you," says the snowflake to the snowbird. "Why don't you like me?" said the snowbird. "Oh," said the snowflake, "you are going up and I am coming down." Young merchants, young lawyers, young doctors, young mechanics, young artists, young farmers, at certain times there are those to sympathize with you but now that you are becoming master of your particular occupation or profession, how is it now, young lawyers, young doctors, young artists, young farmers,—how is it now? The greatest crime that you can commit is the crime of success.

Decision of Character. Again, my subject impresses me with the value of decision of character in any department. Daniel knew that if he continued his adherence to the religion of the Lord he would be hurled to the lions; but, having set his compass well, he sailed right on. For the lack of that element of decision of character so eminent in Daniel many men are ruined for this world and ruined for the world to come. A great many at 40 years of age are not settled in any respect, because they have not been able to make up their minds. Perhaps they will go west, perhaps they will go east; perhaps they will not; perhaps they will go north; perhaps they may go south; perhaps they will go east; perhaps they may make that investment in real estate or in railroads; perhaps they will not. They are not like a steamer that should go out of New York harbor, starting for Glasgow, and the next day should change for Havre de Grace, and the next for Charleston, and the next for Boston, and the next for Liverpool. These men on the sea of life everlastingly tacking ship and making no headway! Or they are like a man who starts to build a house in the Corinthian style and changes it to Doric, and then completes it in the Ionic, the curse of all styles of architecture. Young men, start right, and keep on. Have decision of character. Character is like the goldfinch of Tonniquin. It is magnificent while standing firm, but loses all its beauty in flight. How much decision of character in order that these young men may be Christians! Their old associates make sarcastic flings at them. They go on excursions, and they do not invite them. They prophesy that he will give out. They wonder if he is not getting wings. As he passes they grimace and wink and chuckle and say, "There goes a saint." O young man, have decision of character! You can afford in this matter of religion to be laughed at. What do you care for the scoffs of these men, who are affronted because you will not go to ruin with them? When the grave cracks open under their feet, and grim messengers push them into it, and eternity comes down hard upon their spirit, and conscience stings, and hopeless ruin lifts them up to hurl them down, will they laugh then?

Christianity for Busy Men. Again I learn from this subject that a man may take religion into his politics. Daniel had all the affairs of state on hand, yet a servant of God. He could not have kept his elevated position unless he had been a thorough politician, and yet all the thrusts of officials and all the danger of disgrace did not make him yield one iota in his high toned religious principle. He stood before that age, he stands before all ages, a specimen of a godly politician. So there have been in our day and in the days of our fathers men as eminent in the service of God as they have been eminent in the service of the state. Such was Benjamin F. Butler, attorney general of New York in the time of your fathers. Such was John McLean of the supreme court of the United States. Such was George Briggs of Massachusetts. Such was Theodore Frelinghuysen of New Jersey—men faithful to the state, at the same time faithful to God. It is absurd to expect that men who have been immersed in political wickedness for thirty or forty years shall come to reformation, and our hope is in the young men who are coming up, that they have patriotic principle and Christian principle side by side when they come to the ballot box and cast their first vote and that they swear allegiance to the government of heaven as well as to the government of the United States. We would have Bunker Hill mean less to them than Cavalry, and Lexington mean less to them than Bethlehem, but because there are bad men around the ballot box is no reason why Christian men should retreat from the arena. The last time you ought to give up your child or forsake your child is when it is surrounded by a company of Choc-taws, and the last time to surrender the ballot box is when it is surrounded by impurity and dishonesty and all sorts of wickedness.

Religion in Politics. Daniel stood on a most unpopular platform. He stood firmly, though the demagogues of the day hissed at him and tried to overthrow him. We must carry our religion into our politics. But there are a great many men who are in favor of taking religion into national politics, who do not see the importance of taking it into city politics, as though a man were intelligent about the welfare of his neighborhood and had no concern about his own home.

My subject also impresses me with the fact that lions cannot hurt a good man. No man ever got into worse company than Daniel got into when he was thrown into the den. What a rare morsel that fair young man would have been for the hungry monsters! If they had plunged at him he could not have climbed into a niche beyond the reach of their paw and the snatch of their tooth. They came, pleased, all around about him, as hunters' hounds at the well known whistle come bounding to his feet. You need not go to Numidia to get many lions. You all have them after you—the lion of financial distress, the lion of sickness, the lion of persecution. You saw that lion of financial panic putting his mouth down to the earth, and he roared until all the banks and all the insurance companies quaked. With his nostril he scattered the ashes on the domestic hearth. You have had trial after trial, misfortune after misfortune, lion after lion, and yet they have never hurt you. The Persians used to think that spring rain falling into sea shells would turn into pearls, and I have to tell you that the tears of sorrow turn into precious gems when they drop into God's bottle. You need be afraid of nothing, putting your trust in God. Even death, that monster lion, whose den is the world's sepulcher, and who puts his paw down amid thousands of millions of the dead, cannot frighten you. When in olden times a man was to get the honors of knighthood, he was compelled to go fully armed the night before among the tombs of the dead, carrying a sort of spear, and then when the day broke he would come forth, and amid the sound of cornet and great parade, he would get the honors of knighthood. And so it will be with the Christian in the night before heaven, as, fully armed with spear and helmet of salvation, he will wait and watch through the darkness until the morning dawns and then he will take the honors of heaven amid that great throng with snowy robes, streaming over seas of sapphire.

JAMAICA FROGS

Only Seven of One Hundred and Fifty Survive Sea Voyage.

The biological department of the Johns Hopkins University has a number of interesting specimens of zoology, some of which will be of value in the higher research work of the department this year, says the Baltimore Sun. The summer vacation is usually a time for collecting queer creatures and plants for winter investigation, a students' trip to Jamaica last summer being especially productive of such rarities. Dr. Lawrence E. Giffin and Mr. W. C. Coker left last June for Jamaica. Among other things they collected 150 bullfrogs. They were unable to stand the voyage to the country, and the seven that survived are now at the university in an emaciated condition. This Jamaica product is not a real bullfrog, but a toad. They were brought to Jamaica from Barbadoes under the impression that they would kill rats. This was found to be a mistake, and the toad remained and is now quite common. They are of a dark brown color, with a body the size of a large bullfrog, but with short legs like a toad, and are not aquatic. Like all toads, they are not aquatic. A handsome feature of the Jamaica collection is a set of fine tortoise shell turtles all beautifully mounted. A crocodile skeleton was also procured, which will prove an object study for the minor classes in osteology. The Jamaica crocodile is more vicious than the Florida variety, living on fish or an occasional native who is unwary. It is also not so sluggish as other varieties, and is peculiar in having no sleeping time.

Improvements in Campaign Methods.

Contrasting earlier campaigns with those of more recent years, it is possible to discern a decided improvement in the relative importance of what may be called the spectacular elements. The torchlight procession, the wholesale illumination of the houses of partisans on the occasions of such a procession, the organization of bodies of men clad in some fantastic garb—these things are plainly less congenial to our people at the end of the century than they were in its middle, or even during the score of years after the civil war. They are essentially childish, and the nation is discarding them as it grows older. Instead of "fuss and feathers," the influence of serious and sober-minded appeals to the reason is evidently growing. The masses still go to "see a free show"—in fact, they go in greater numbers than ever, as the growing facilities of communication render the gathering of vast crowds easier, but they regard it only in the light of a performance. —New York Evening Post.

In the Campaign of the Future.

The orator stopped to take a drink of water. As if this had been a signal agreed upon by the toughs in the audience there broke out instantly a fusillade of cabbages, dead cats, and other political campaign properties, and the gifted spellbinder hastily retreated behind the sheet-iron curtain. Only for a moment, however, did the disorder reign supreme. A bullet-proof phonograph, with steel megaphone attachment, was pushed upon the stage. Its roar of oratory instantly drowned the noise made by the disorderly element that was seeking to throttle free speech, and the meeting proceeded to a triumphant conclusion. Science and adroit management had triumphed over the mob.—Chicago Tribune.

Aqueduct for Atlanta.

Mayor-Elect Mims and County Commissioner Brown of Atlanta are pushing a project for an aqueduct from the mountains of north Georgia to bring water to the city named. The idea in detail is to purchase a tract of land, perhaps 500 acres, in the mountains of north Georgia at some point where springs are abundant and build there an enormous reservoir. From this reservoir an aqueduct of 100,000,000 gallons capacity per day would be built to Atlanta and be carried through large mains to every corner of the city.

Fail to Prove Seer's Word. The Chicago police have so far been unable to locate Moses Pearson, the aged Nashville (Tenn.) man who has been missing since Aug. 22 and who was traced to Chicago by aid of a clairvoyant. H. M. Brennecke, father of the missing man, is still confident that he made his way to Chicago and that he met with foul play in that city. He declares he will pursue the search until he finds some more tangible trace of the missing man than is furnished by the register of the Palmer house. The clairvoyant declared that on Aug. 25 Mr. Pearson registered at the Palmer house under the name of A. W. Walker. Such a name appears on the register for that day the seer further declared that Pearson left the hotel and went to a three-story frame house bearing a door plate of "Mrs. Warner." This neither the police nor the son-in-law have been able to confirm.

Rockefeller Is Displeased.

John D. Rockefeller, the patron saint of Chicago university, is much displeased at the notoriety attracted to the university by recent utterances of some of the professors. Prof. Trigg comparing him to Shakespeare was the last straw. Mr. Rockefeller immediately sent a letter to President Harper commanding that professors refrain from the use of his name in any connection. The note is also said to have mentioned something about idiots and to have suggested an insane asylum. The letter was the cause of a star chamber meeting of the faculty in Dr. Harper's room, in which the doctor commented upon some of the "pyrotechnical, irrational and sensational statements" recently made by members of the faculty to their classes.

Raid on Blind Pigs.

A wholesale raid of "blind pigs" took place in Englewood Friday morning. Eight warrants were sworn out by C. W. Jones of the Law and Order league, Chicago. The warrants were served in time to bring the prisoners before Justice Duggan at the regular morning session of court. Information concerning the alleged "blind pigs" was secured by an officer detailed by Inspector Hunt.

Stanley Waterloo, a Chicago writer of prominence, is bankrupt. He has filed a petition for relief from debts aggregating $12,776 in the United States District court, and also scheduled assets amounting to $135, which he says, are exempt. A noted Chinese statesman recently beheaded by order of the dowager empress because of his too liberal views was well known in diplomatic circles at Washington, as he had served as minister from his country to the United States from 1886 to the latter part of 1889. He was Chang Yen Hoon. His death occurred last July, but the outside world became aware of the fact only a few days since. Chang was an able diplomat and well thought of in official circles. He was a pronounced antiquarian, and while in this country made many visits to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, where he could study its rare collection of priceless antiquities. Especially on the specimens from his native land was he an authority, and his information in connection with them was of great aid to the antiquarians of the United States. A memento of his visit to this country is to be found at the

Gen. Frost Passes Away.

General D. M. Frost, one of the most distinguished citizens of St. Louis, died suddenly at his home in that city last week. His death was very sudden, for, although the general was 77 years old, he had been remarkably healthy and had not complained of any illness.

Gen. Frost was a native of New York and a graduate of West Point in the class of 1814. He had fought with distinction in the Mexican war, and the outbreak of the civil war found him in St. Louis a prosperous lumber merchant. He took sides with the confederacy and for two years served in that cause. The principal incident in his civil war career was his defense of Camp Jackson in this city and his surrender in May, 1861, to the federal troops under General Lyon. The state militia had been called together for their annual drill and were encamped under Frost on the outskirts of the town. Before they could find an opportunity actively to express their sympathies with the south they were captured by the home guards and the Missouri volunteers. After the close of the war General Frost returned to St. Louis and settled on his farm near the city. One of his sons, R. Graham Frost, who died several months ago, represented a Missouri district in congress.

Knew Lincoln as a Boy.

There was held near Galesburg, Ill., recently, a celebration in honor of the ninety-first anniversary of the birth of John T. Barnett, or Squire Barnett, as he is generally known. It took place at the log home west of Galesburg, and many descendants from Knox and Warren counties were present.

A peculiar interest attaches to the life of Mr. Barnett, for he was one of the young men friends of Abraham Lincoln, who was a few months his senior.

The squire says that Lincoln and he were often together, and that, although he thought much of Lincoln, he never voted for him but once, and that was when he ran for the legislature against Peter Cartwright. He recalls many pleasant incidents. When he first became acquainted with Lincoln the lat-

Opera Singer Arrested.

Another American woman has been subjected to the ignominy of arrest and detention by the infamous Brigade des Moeurs, as that particular division of the Parisian police are designated, which is entrusted with the duty of putting into execution the laws dealing with the women of the half world. The most recent victim of the Brigade des Moeurs is May Garlick of Baltimore, wife of the Marquis de Feo. She is now seriously ill from the effects of the brutal and vile treatment to which she was subjected by the police, who, insisting that she was a notorious character, arrested her and kept her for several hours in prison until she was identified. Then she was released with the usual apologies. May Garlick, prior to her unfortunate marriage, was one of the leading singers of the Castle Square Opera company at the American theater in New York. Her husband, who is an Italian, deserted her after shamefully mistreating her, leaving her without means, whereupon she returned to the operatic stage, making her European debut at Monte Carlo.

May Garlick. Dr. Edward A. Ross, who has been at the head of the department of economics and sociology in Stanford university since 1893, has just been elected an associate member of the Institute International de Sociologie at Paris. There are only five other members of this society in the United States.

Miss Babby Jones. Two years ago Mme. Alva, a singer famous in Australia, volunteered to sing one evening at Bendigo before some nuns who were about to go into retreat. She is now informed that a wealthy Australian, in recognition of her kindness, "as well as of her magnificent endowment as a vocalist," has left her $175,000, which is at the rate of $25,000 for each of the seven songs she rendered. Mme. Alva is a Protestant.

Powers Agree on China.

The agreement between Great Britain and Germany on a common Chinese policy is accepted by the United States and Russia as a pledge rather than as a guide to their own action. In responding our government simply assents to principles which it was the first to formulate, namely, the principle of the open door and the principle of the preservation of Chinese territorial and administrative entity. Under the circumstances an assumption of leadership on the part of the two contracting powers would be absurd, and we have only to reaffirm our own views without giving promises.

Illinois and Texas.

The state of Illinois has 995,199 more inhabitants than it had in 1890. Its numerical gain is exceeded by New York and Pennsylvania alone, and is barely exceeded by the latter state. The percentage of gain, being 26 per cent, is equaled by that of no other large state, with the exception of Texas. The increase in population in Illinois between 1880 and 1890 was 743,480, being a little less than 25 per cent.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

On the Recent Shooting Affray in Genoa.

From the Rockford Republic.
F. S. Blakesly, the well known traveling salesman for Weyburn & Briggs' supply house, thought his time had come Tuesday afternoon at Genoa, Ill. He was calling upon his customers as usual, and was talking to one of his patrons, when a racket or disturbance suddenly arose outside of the blacksmith shop. Mr. Blakesly and the manager of the shop went out to see what was up, and they were somewhat amazed to see two brutes pounding the life and political fervor out of a man on the street. The moment Mr. Blakesly saw the situation his sense of fairness prompted him to suggest that they let go before they killed the fellow. One of them took the hint, and Meade, the man who was getting the drubbing, tore loose from the remaining party and got down in his jeans for a gun—his side. Then a three-ring circus began. The fellow blazed away at his man, and only hit him once, shooting him in the forearm, splintering a bone. The other fellow hid behind Blakesly, and the man Meade began reloading as quick as a flash, and followed Blakesly and the other fellow around the corner of a building. There was a big crowd of spectators on the scene, and fortunately the fellow was arrested and disarmed before he killed anyone. Blakesly says the man was terribly excited, and it was lucky no lives were lost. The brawl originated in a saloon in the town. The man Meade, who did the shooting, lives two or three miles east of Kingston, and was badly pounded. One of his aggressors was a fellow named Snow, of Genoa. Mr. Blakesly feels the happiest man in town that he wasn't shot. Meade acted in self-defense.

From the Sycamore True Republican.
At Genoa on Tuesday Ed Meade, who lives north of Kingston, shot several times at Will Snow, a bartender in the saloon formerly owned by Ed Richardson, and finally succeeded in putting a bullet into Snow's arm, injuring the bone and making a bad wound.

Ed Meade was for many years a resident of Sycamore, and in his youth was well known here, where the family resided.

He is said to be of quick temper, but according to the evidence at the hearing of the case at Genoa on Thursday, he had provocation for his desperate conduct and was acting in self-defense. Meade lost at gambling in the place connected with the saloon, and when he asked for the return of the money he was ridiculed and abused. Tuesday the two men met and quarreled in the alley back of the saloon, when, according to the witnesses, Snow assaulted Meade and knocked him down, but when Meade drew a revolver Snow and Chris Stearns, who was also present, fled, followed by several shots, only one of which took effect.

Meade was arrested and held until the examination on Wednesday, when he was discharged.

From the Sycamore City Weekly.
Genoa was stirred up Tuesday afternoon by a tragedy that came near ending in manslaughter.

Will Snow, bartender in the saloon formerly owned by Ed Richardson, was shot in the arm by Ed Meade, who lives north of Kingston.

Meade evidently shot to kill, but fortunately death was averted. From the evidence brought out at the hearing yesterday it appears he was acting in self-defense. Some few days ago Meade lost money in the saloon gambling, and afterward demanded it back. For doing so, it is said, Snow taunted him, and later when they met in the alley Tuesday quarreled with and finally assaulted him. Snow knocked him down several times. When Meade drew his revolver Snow and his companion, Chris Stearns, fled down the alley. Several shots were fired, only one taking effect. Meade was then arrested and lodged in the calaboose. At the hearing of the case yesterday the defendant was discharged.

From the Elgin Courier.
Will Snow, who was shot in the arm at Genoa on Tuesday by E. B. Meade, submitted to an examination by Drs. Pelton, Bridge and Campbell, at Sherman hospital. It was found that the bullet had lodged in the forearm, shattering the bone. The X-rays were used. It was not considered advisable to probe for the bullet. Several splinters of bone were removed from the wound. Snow will probably make a speedy recovery.

It is said that he is a barkeeper, and was until recently employed by Mr. Richardson, an uncle. It is not the first time that the people of that village have had their attention called in a forcible way to the existence of gambling there, and the result may be a large number of indictments by the grand jury.

E. B. Meade, the shooter, is a well-known farmer. He, as well as Snow, has relatives here.

From the Elgin Advocate.
Will Snow, who was shot at Genoa Tuesday afternoon by E. B. Meade in a quarrel following a card game, was brought to Sherman hospital Tuesday evening. An Elgin physician used the X-ray in an effort to locate the bullet, which entered his arm. Snow will probably recover.

Meade attempted to shoot others, but was disarmed by John G. Gay, formerly cook at the asylum.

New Smyrna, Florida.

Is one of the prettiest and most picturesque towns in Florida. It is situated on the Florida East Coast Railway 125 miles south of Jacksonville, and on the banks of Indian River North, four miles south of New Smyrna Inlet. New Smyrna was settled in 1763 by Andrew Turnbull, for the cultivation of sugar cane and indigo, and signs of the old sugar works and indigo vats are still visible; the walls of some of the buildings are still standing, and there are several wells, dug by him and curbed with coquina rock, in and around New Smyrna, which still furnish excellent water. Inquiries for cottages still come in every day. If all the people come to New Smyrna who have expressed their intention of doing so we will find it difficult to entertain them. However we will endeavor to find a place for all who may come. New Smyrna has become famous as a winter resort for all classes. It is the hunter's and fisherman's paradise. Its pretty scenery and ancient ruins attract many visitors here every winter.—New Smyrna Breeze.

Driving a Balky Horse.

An old farmer tells of his experience with a balky horse as follows: "One day I was driving him along the road, and just as we got to the railroad track he balked. 'Here's a go,' says I to myself; 'what if a train should come along?' At first I was afraid a train would come; then, after awhile, I didn't care whether one came or not; and in about an hour I was afraid one wouldn't come. I just ached to have a train come along. I prayed for one. Sure enough, pretty soon I saw one coming. It made me smile. When the engineer whistled for me to get off the track I laughed. When she got a little closer I climbed out of the hind end of the buggy, leaned against the fence and prepared to enjoy the picnic. Oh, but it was great sport. That balky horse had sworn he wouldn't go, but he went that time. He was distributed all a'org the track there for twenty rods."

For the Horse.

Fresh, clean bedding is as welcome to the tired horse as to the tired, or hired, man.

Water horses often as possible; a little at a time is better than a deluge at long intervals.

Sunlight and fresh air in the stable constitute a fine insurance policy against sickness and death.

It is asking a deal of a farmer to do much currying of horses at this season, yet the more of it done the better for the horse.

Work the horses easily for the first hour or so after eating. They can do their hardest work earliest after the last meal is partly digested.

Carefully read what Dr. Curryer says about fitting collars to horses. A chafing boot on the foot is not so torturing as a galling collar on a horse.

Give a little water before feeding, even if horse is warm; then give hay, and last good, clean oats; and give a good long nooning. Both man and beast will do more and better work for it.

For sweet charity's sake, do not inflict pain upon your horse. Cruel yanking on the reins, stroke of lash or kick from a heavy boot the patient, noble, faithful horse should be a stranger to. If he does not do your bidding on the instant, it is because he does not understand what you want. Be patient. The abused horse—one that is constantly expecting a blow can not be as valuable nor as willing a servant as the one that is kindly treated.

Corn Crop Light in Nebraska.

Hoarce Haskins was on hand Tuesday, for election looking hearty and hale for a man of 80 years. He and his son-in-law, John Haines, lately returned from the town over "east of Burlington and this side of Lake Michigan" where they had been on a visit and sight-seeing expedition for a week. They drove in and with their team took in the place from north to south and east to west and the "and was not yet." A letter recently received from H. C. Haskins, of Madison, Neb., states that the corn crop of that state is very light only averaging 20 to 30 bushels per acre. His father claims that even that is more than they ought to expect from the way it is put in and attended to, but then every state has its peculiarities, you know.

HORRIBLY BURNED.

It Might Have Been Worse, but Fortunately It Was Not.

Last Thursday evening George De Wolf was preparing to build a fire in the furnace; he had previously had a fire in it and it had gone out, but the coal that remained unburned was quite hot. Kerosene was poured on the coal, and George went to the adjoining room and lit a paper with which to start a fire in the furnace. He had approached within about four feet of the furnace door when the gas exploded with great force and great noise like a muffled cannon. It was heard at Ell Hall's and by others of the neighbors. Mrs. De Wolf, who was near by, was hurled against the coal bin and her dress caught on fire. George was blown back into the doorway, but did not think at the time that he was much injured. He went to the assistance of his wife, and, after extinguishing the fire in her clothing, he ran for assistance. On the way he put his hand to his face to smooth his beard; but, alas! it was nothing but a wad of brittle stuff curled up under his nose, and broke off at the first touch. Dr. Hill was soon on hand and went to work to relieve as much as possible their suffering. George had his glasses on at the time, and had they not been there, he would probably now be blind. He has been suffering much torture the past week, but is now much better. Mrs. De Wolf was somewhat burned on the cheek and her eyebrows are gone. We suggested that it might be a good thing for a masquerade, as the most intimate of George's friends would hardly know him so long as he kept his voice to himself.

A Huge Sweet Potato.

The largest sweet potato ever shown in Genoa, so far as we are informed, was handed in to us by "a woman from Missouri." It was grown by Henry Hollembek at Rondo, Mo., where we are informed there are many like it. Also, an ear of white dent corn grown by the same gentleman. The corn crop was one of large yield and matured in time so that it was all cut up, husked and in the crib last August. The ear is a fine, solid specimen.

Both potato and ear of corn can be seen at this office.
