

NOTES FROM THE COURT HOUSE

Harley Rowan of Kirkland in County Jail For Bootlegging

SYCAMORE MAN HELD FOR THEFT

Young Man Charged With Stealing Fellow Border's Pocket Book and Money

Perry Rowan of Kirkland is in again. Perry was arrested last Wednesday by Marshall Buxton of Kirkland on charges of selling moonshine liquor. He was given preliminary hearing by State's Attorney Poust before Z. B. Mitchell, police magistrate on the same day and bound over to the February grand jury under $1,000 bond, in default of which he was taken to the county jail.

This is the third time that Rowan has been in jail at Sycamore due to his moonshine activities. The last time he was fined $1,500 and sentenced to the county jail for a period of sixty days. Even this did not cure him of the habit and hence his prospects of being at liberty are very dull.

John Marker of Sycamore was bound over to the grand jury which is to meet the fourth Monday of February, after a preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace Sell of Sycamore on charges of larceny preferred against him by Peter J. Swanson of Sycamore.

Both of the men have been rooming with Mrs. Lizzie Johnson at 257 Park Ave. and both had rooms on the second floor. On January 20 Swanson claims he received his pay in the form of a check for $43.00 from the Illinois Thresher Co. where he is employed and this he cashed at the Pierce Trust & Savings Bank receiving currency for same. On Sunday evening January 21, he placed the money in a pocket book and this he put in his trowser pocket, leaving his trowser thrown over the chair near his bed. On Monday morning he hung his trowser with the money on a hook in his room and left for work. Marker was heard walking in the rooms above and left about an hour afterward. When Swanson returned home in the evening the money was gone and so was the pocket book with 2 rings in it. No other person was in the house that day and due to other suspicious circumstances Marker on complaint of Swanson was arrested and will now await the action of the grand jury.

W. H. Wright of Somonauk obtained a judgment by confession in the circuit court on Wednesday against John R. Gage in the sum of $217.53. The judgment is based on a note which the defendant executed to the order of L. R. Sawyer in the sum of $198.48 under date of April 25, 1922 payable 90 days after date, in the payment of which he made default. The note being assigned to the plaintiff in the suit.

M. E. CHURCH NOTES

Services 11:00 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.
Sunday school 10:00 a. m.
Epworth League 6:30 p. m.

February is the shortest month of the year but it has won the gratitude of our Republic in the gift of two of her noblest sons, George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

Washington taught the world to know us. Lincoln taught us to know ourselves. The first won for us our independence. The last wrought out our manhood and self respect. Let us give to each the glory due him. In honoring them we lift ourselves toward their level.

Sunday evening we will present a Lincoln Day Program and appropriately celebrate this, the anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln.

The pastor will deliver an address on "Lincoln the American Great Heart."

The music furnished by the Men's chorus the first Sunday of the month was very much enjoyed. Quite a number expressed a wish that the men would sing every Sunday.

We are glad to announce that a large chorus of men will furnish the music for Sunday evening. We have a treat in store for you. Don't miss it.

SEAL SALE GREAT SUCCESS

Returns from Stamp Sales Assure County of School Nurses

The final returns from another very successful sale of Christmas Seals by the DeKalb County Tuberculosis Association will soon be in. Some of the rural schools have not yet reported and definite figures cannot be given till later, but the fund will be sufficient to continue the nursing service in the county, especially in the rural schools.

The splendid pioneer work done by the township chairmen and those supporting the work throughout the county is attracting attention everywhere.

Many letters of inquiry have been received asking how the work is conducted and DeKalb can feel highly honored because twelve other counties have asked to be represented at the spring meeting here. Some of these counties will have their first steady county nursing service this year, among them the Lake and DuPage counties.

Public health nursing service is so new and, in fact, had never received much recognition until the world war, that much hard work has to be done in blazing the new trail.

Mrs. W. A. Kilmer, organization chairman for DeKalb county was called out this year to supervise twenty-five other counties and to look after the work for two in detail. This left the work in DeKalb county entirely in the hands of the experienced chairmen who drove on to a great victory. Too much credit cannot be given the men's committee who put out a mail-sale list in DeKalb township and to the Boy Scouts who looked after the schools and other public places. We regret that the men on this committee are so modest they wish their names withheld at this time.

The Boys and Girl Scouts did splendid work in Lake and other counties also, and wish to help in future campaigns. Leaders in the public health work recognize that theirs is not only a work for health and happiness, but a work promoting the highest form of patriotism in giving to a country a vigorous citizenship that will keep us a strong nation.

The president and advisor of this great work in DeKalb county is Dr. J. Stanley Brown, president of the state teachers' college. He will award the banner to the township having the largest per capita sales as soon as all reports are in.

A Message of Thanks

Mrs. A. J. Kolp, township chairman of the drive, in behalf of the county organization and herself wishes to express appreciation and thanks for the splendid cooperation received in Genoa and Kingston townships during the 1922-23 drive and for the great success that can be attributed only to all the people who worked in unison for this worthy cause.

LOCAL SHIPPERS TO ORGANIZE

Will Hold a Meeting This Saturday Afternoon at Grand Theater

A good many of the farmers in this section of the county are striving to perfect a cooperative live stock shipping association. Several meetings have been held in an informal manner but Saturday afternoon at the local Grand Theater there is expected a big turnout by all the farmers interested.

The meeting is called for two p. m. and a moving picture dealing with the shipping associations will be shown. Thomas Roberts, county advisor, will be on hand to deliver a talk on the subject and it is up to every farmer who is interested or wants to become interested to be there.

GAFFKE STIRS FARMERS' IRE

McHenry Co. Advisor's Statements are Censored.—Farmers Protest

County Farm Advisor, A. J. Gaffke's statement, made at a county farm bureau meeting at Harvard about two weeks ago, to the effect that fifty per cent of the cows in McHenry county are infected with tuberculosis, which statement was quoted by various papers throughout the district in reporting the meeting has aroused farmers' indignation, bankers and other business interests of the county. In a rousing protest meeting held at Woodstock last Thursday afternoon the statement of Mr. Gaffke was branded as false in a resolution drawn up by the parties interested.—Marengo Republican.

INCOME TAX INFORMATION

Single Person Who Earns $1,000 Or Over Must File

MARRIED MEN ALLOWED $2,000

Blanks May Be Procured By Writing to Collector of Internal Revenue For This District

Revenue officers are visiting every county in the United States to aid taxpayers in the preparation of their income tax returns for the year 1922. Information concerning the date of their arrival and the location of their offices may be obtained by writing to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the taxpayer lives.

Forms for filing returns of individual net income for the year 1922 are being sent to taxpayers who filed returns for the year 1921. Failure to receive a form, however, does not relieve the taxpayer of his obligation to file a return and pay the tax on time, on or before March 15, 1923. The forms, 1040A for filing returns of net income $5,000 or less and 1040 for filing returns of net income in excess of $5,000, may be obtained from collectors of internal revenue and deputy collectors.

Returns are required of every single person whose net income for 1922 was $1,000 or more or whose gross income was $5,000 or more and of every married person whose net income was $2,000 or more or whose gross income was $5,000 or more. Careful study of the instructions on the forms will greatly aid in making a correct return.

In the making of his income tax for the year 1922, a taxpayer, if eligible, is allowed an exemption of $1,000. A married person, or head of a family, whose net income for the year 1922 was $5,000 or less is allowed an exemption of $2,500. The exemption allowed a married person or head of a family whose net income was in excess of $5,000 is $2,000. A head of a family is a person who actually supports one or more persons living in his or her household who are closely related to him or her by blood, marriage or adoption.

An additional credit of $400 is allowed for each person (other than husband or wife) dependent upon the taxpayer for chief support, if such person is under 18 years of age or incapable of self support because mentally or physically defective. A single man whose net income for 1922 was $2,000 and who supports in his home an aged mother would have no tax to pay, but nevertheless is required to file a return. The fact that a person's income may be nontaxable by reason of the exemptions does not nullify the requirement to file a return if his income was within the prescribed figures—$1,000 if single and $2,000 if married.

The normal tax is 4 per cent on the first $4,000 of net income in excess of the exemptions, and 8 per cent on the remaining net income. The tax may be paid in full at the time of filing the return, or in four installments due on or before March 15, June 15, September 15, and December 15.

The revenue act of 1921 provides that an income tax return shall be filed by every person, married or single, whose gross income for the year was $5,000 or more. Broadly speaking gross income includes all income received by the taxpayer during the year from salary or wages, or from "business, trade, profession or vocation," dealing in property, or the transaction of any business carried on for profit. Net income, upon which the tax is assessed, is gross income less certain specified deductions for business expenses, losses, bad debt, contributions, etc.

Among the most important items in the returns of many taxpayers are the deductions for business expenses. In the case of a storekeeper, they include a reasonable allowance for salaries paid employees, amounts spent for advertising, premiums for insurance against fire or other business losses, the cost of water, light, heat and fuel used in his place of business, drayage and freight bills.

A professional man, doctor or lawyer, may claim as deductions the cost of supplies used in the practice of his profession, expenses paid in the operation and repair of an automobile used in making professional calls.

A BAD FIRE SATURDAY

Terrific Blaze Ruins Store Home on East Main Street

A blaze that threatened to burn the house to the ground was discovered in the Mrs. Wm. Storey residence on East Main street at about 12:15 last Saturday afternoon and was only extinguished after some valiant work executed by Genoa's volunteer fire department, of whom we are justly proud and say that there isn't a better bunch of fire fighters in the country.

The origin of the fire is not known. chimney sparks and electric wires being given as probable causes. However it originated in the northern part of the house and the terrific north wind swept the flames through the roof in a hurry.

The volunteers responded admirably and in a few minutes all the furniture had been taken from the house in order that the water, which later completely ruined the plaster and paper, would not do any damage to them.

Unfortunately the old connecting rod off he city pump had broken during the night and the pressure was rather low at the beginning, pumping having been resumed but a few minutes before the fire broke out. It was but a few minutes however and the pressure was up to normal, the new valve recently installed at the station allowing a direct pumping into the main.

The roof of the building was entirely destroyed as well as the plaster and paper. It is estimated that the loss is around $2000.

SMASH-UP AT CORTLAND CORNER

Wisconsin Tobacco Auto Struck Car—First Car Speeding in Fog

As a result of a heavy fog, little Annette O'Brien, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. O'Brien and her father are in St. Mary's hospital, DeKalb. The O'Brien machine was struck at Cortland corners by another machine driven by A. T. Earl of the Earl Tobacco company, Edgerton, Wis. Little Annette was thrown from the car and became unconscious. Mr. O'Brien suffered an injured hip and other minor injuries. Both machines were badly damaged.

According to the story told the police Mr. Earl, the driver of the machine, the fog was probably the cause of the accident. He said he was going between 30 and 40 miles an hour. Mr. O'Brien claimed he had the right of way, but the fog cut off the lights of both cars.

The little girl was picked up by Mr. Earl and he waited with the child in his arms until the arrival of an ambulance. Mr. Earl will purchase a new car for the O'Briens and foot all the expense, being relieved of a terrible burden in knowing that the occupants of the smashed car are getting along splendidly.—Sycamore Republican.

"RAFFLES" IN THE HOG LOT

Using ether as an anesthetic, unknown parties some time Friday evening succeeded in removing 24 brood sows weighing between 250 and 300 pounds apiece, from the farm of C. Hatch, Jr., who resides southwest of Sublette. Sheriff Risely returned Saturday afternoon where he conducted a thorough investigation into the theft.

A large bundle of cotton which had been used in the operation was found near the hog house which is located some distance from the dwelling. A can which had contained ether was also found near the hog house, its contents having been soaked up in the cotton. The hogs had been rendered unconscious and then placed in a motor truck and hauled away.

The owner has offered $200 reward for the arrest of the thieves.—Paw Paw Times.

NON-FREEZING SOLUTION

Is Formed by Mixing Honey and Water—Says Bee Journal

This extremely original and practical use for honey plays a novel part in preventing water from freezing when mixed with it. When in solution with water, honey is both reliable and efficient.

The mixture is very simple. It is but a solution of equal parts of honey and water by volume. All one needs to know when preparing the first amount is how much water his radiator holds. There is no evaporation of the honey, so all that is necessary after the first filling is to add such amounts of water as may be required.

One could use less honey in some cases, but there is no need of making the mixture vary from the proportion given. The original cost is not great; well worth having. The mixture of equal part of honey and water is almost immune from freezing. It is a sure and positive preventive against freezing, users claim.

As for economy, it need not be said to be about 40 per cent of what a mixture of alcohol and water would be to render a like service. The average car used during the winter months requires approximately six gallons of alcohol. There is always a dread of freezing even then, for evaporation is high with the alcohol and water solutions. One never knows just how much alcohol is left; there is no guessing with honey, a it does not go up in fumes. To serve and keep serving is what honey proves its purpose to be.

There is no reaction of any kind whatever on the metallic parts when this solution is used. Cooling is in no wayway impaired, as the mixture flows as readily as water, that is when it is warm. Sticking to the radiator cores and clogging of the water circulation system occur with some solutions, but not with this one. Another salient feature is the fact that there is but a little raising of the boiling point. This means that one will not be likely to have the solution boil.

There are no disagreeable fumes.—American Bee Journal

GEORGE BROWN PASSES AWAY

Was Oldest Practising Attorney in DeKalb County—At Bar 50 Years

EX-PRESIDENT PRODUCERS' ASS'N

End Comes After Long Illness—Leaves Sister, Nephew, Nieces and Other Relatives to Mourn

George Brown, for fifty years a resident of Sycamore and practicing attorney of that place, passed away at the home of his sister, Miss Henrietta Brown in Genoa Tuesday morning at the age of 77 years after protracted and severe illness. About three years ago he was in the Sycamore hospital for treatments and until recently had been in fairly good health. About six weeks ago he was taken ill and confined to his bed at the home of his sister in this city and only a week ago was up and around. In this, it is thought, that he hurried his recovery too much and was again taken sick, from which illness he never recovered.

George Brown, son of Putnam and Charlotte Griggs Brown was born in Genoa township February 1, 1844 and died at the home of his sister in Genoa February 6, 1923.

He attended the Genoa and Marengo schools and taught for a while in this town before entering Northwestern University where he graduated and subsequently located in Sycamore where he practised law up until his death.

He had been president of the DeKalb County Bar Association and had been affiliated with the milk producers' association since its conception, first as secretary and treasurer and later president; being at all times a human dynamo for energy and push behind this great movement.

He was married to Agnes Brown and to this union were born three children, all of whom died in infancy. His wife passed away in 1877. He leaves to mourn his death his sister, Miss Henrietta Brown, of Genoa, with whom he has made his home; one nephew, John Brown of Chicago; two nieces, Miss Sadie Brown of Chicago and Mrs. Carl Brydes of Elgin. Two sisters and three brothers preceded him in death.

Funeral services will be held at the M. E. church Friday afternoon at two o'clock with Rev. O'May of Sycamore officiating. Interment in Genoa cemetery.

RELOCATE ROAD ROUTE 23

Will Run Northwest from Point 4 Miles North of Marengo

Marengo Republican: On Tuesday afternoon of this week George N. Lamb, District Engineer, notified E. D. Patrick that a change in sections No. 22 and 23 of Bond Issue Route No. 23 has been made as follows:

At four corners, 4 miles north of Marengo, the route breaks northwesterly across the southeast quarter of section No. 2 of Marengo township, diagonally crossing the Matison and Olbrich forties, intersecting the existing highway at the center of Sec. 2, thence north on main highway to a point about 1 1/2 miles south of Harvard where it swings east about 1/2 mile, thence north into Harvard. It is said that Matison, Genz and Olbrich, owners of the property crossed in Section 2, have signed an agreement to settle damages to their properties by arbitration and that the board of arbitration has been agreed upon.

This will require a new survey for that section of the route and a little delay is expected for all the surveyors are busy for the time being.

WASHINGTONIANA, 1923

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN
GEORGE WASHINGTON was the Father of His Country. And don't you forget it! If you do, you will feel lonesome. For the American people haven't forgotten it and are not forgetting it. On the contrary the American people are getting to think more and more of George Washington with every succeeding year. They are trying to get a clearer mental vision of George. For a time George was too great and good and perfect to be true. Now the people are trying to visualize George as a regular fellow.
For example, William Roscoe Thayer has just brought out "George Washington," intended to be the definite one-volume biography of Washington. Mr. Thayer's purpose as expressed in his preface has been to give a sketch of George Washington's life and acts, which should disclose "the human residue" which he felt sure must persist in Washington's character. "No other great man in history," he says, "has had to live down such a mass of absurdities and deliberate false inventions," including the picture of an imaginary Father of His Country amusing himself with a fictitious cherry tree and hatchet. In short, the author has written his book to help those who complain that they cannot find a flesh and blood man in the George Washington of historians. He expresses the confident hope that those who read this biography will no longer consider George Washington the most illusive of historic personages.
Here's the way "Camplon" in the Chicago Tribune's "Line o' Type or Two" puts it:

"O Clod! Muse of buried time,
What trick is this you play,
Who sing to us in prose or rhyme
The hero born today?
"Your blazing torch athwart the gloom
Lights up our noble dead,
Your record snatches from the tomb
The lives our heroes led.
"You show us Jackson, crude and bold,
Impetuous, quick to fight,
Sworn foe of caste and graft and gold—

A man, or wrong or right,
"You show us Grant in gain and loss,
His early waning star,
The gold that gleamed amid the dross,
Purged by the fires of war.
"You show us Lincoln, calm in strife,
With homely mien and jest,
The shambling gait, the kindly life,
The freedom of the West.
"But when we seek on history's scroll
The Father of the free,
The name that leads our muster-roll,
We ask, "Can this be he?"
"We see a demigod of old,
Grim, faultless and serene,
Olympian grandeur stern and cold,
A god from the machine.
"Oh lead him down from heights above
And set his feet on earth,
To show his sons the man they love
In weakness and in worth."

Photographs reproduced herewith show Arthur Dawson, official portrait painter at the United States Military academy at West Point, and the original Gilbert Stuart bust portrait of George Washington, which he discovered by accident in an unnoticed corner of the Washington and Lee university, Lee Memorial chapel at Lexington, Va., last summer. The portrait is painted on the peculiar "twisted" wood panel used by Stuart and was discovered by Mr. Dawson while looking over the paintings in the chapel. It is estimated by art experts to be worth from $75,000 to $100,000 and is pronounced the finest Stuart in America at the present time. It has been in the Washington and Lee university for many years, but until Mr. Dawson's discovery, its true value was unknown. Records fall to show where the picture came from. The panel measures 25 by 30 inches.
Congress has passed a joint resolution as follows:
"Whereas, by a joint resolution of the senate and house of representatives, approved March 4, 1844, the sword of George Washington and the staff of Benjamin Franklin were accepted in the name of the nation as gifts from Samuel T. Washington and deposited for safe-keeping in the Department of State; and
"Whereas, by a joint resolution of the senate and house of representatives, approved February 28, 1855, the sword of Andrew Jackson was accepted in the name of the nation as a gift from the family of Gen. Robert Armstrong and deposited for safe-keeping in the Department of State; and
"Whereas it is represented by the secretary of state that he has no appropriate place for the exhibition of these relics: Therefore be it

"Resolved, etc., That the secretary of state be, and he is hereby, authorized to transfer the said relics to the custody of the secretary of the Smithsonian Institution for safe-keeping and exhibition in the National museum."
The resolution accepting the Washington sword and Franklin staff was passed by both houses on the same day. The proceedings in the house were especially impressive, many senators and diplomats being present. The speech of presentation was delivered by Representative George W. Summers of Virginia. The part of his address referring to the Washington sword contains the following interesting information concerning the weapon carried so long by the Father of His Country:
"Mr. Summers—Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purpose of discharging an office not connected with the ordinary business of a legislative assembly. Yet, in asking permission to interrupt, for a moment, the regular order of parliamentary proceedings, I cannot doubt that the proposition which I have to submit will prove as gratifying as it may be unusual.
"Mr. Samuel T. Washington, a citizen of Kanawha county, in the commonwealth of Virginia, and one of my constituents, has honored me with the commission of presenting, in his name and on his behalf, to the congress of the United States, and through that body to the people of the United States, two most interesting and valuable relics connected with the past history of our country and with men whose achievements, both in the field and in the cabinet, best illustrate and adorn our annals.
"One is the sword worn by George Washington, first as a colonel in the colonial service of Virginia in Forbes' campaign against the French and Indians, and afterwards during the whole period of the War of Independence as commander in chief of the American army.
"It is a plain cut-throat, or hanger, with a green hilt and silver guard. On the upper ward of the scabbard is engraved "J. Bailey; F. Ishkili." It is accompanied by a buckskin belt, which is secured by a silver buckle and clasp, whereon are engraved the letters "G. W." and the figures "1737." These are all of the plainest workmanship, but substantial and in keeping with the man and with the times to which they belonged.
"The history of this sword is perfectly authentic, and leaves no shadow of doubt as to its identity.
"The last will and testament of George Washington, bearing date on the ninth day of February, 1799, contains, among a great variety of bequests, the following clause: "To each of my nephews, William Augustine Washington, George Lewis, George Steplow Washington, Bushrod Washington, and Samuel Washington, I give one of the swords or cut-throats of which I may be possessed; and they are to choose in the order they are named. These swords are accompanied with an injunction not to unsheathe them for the purpose of shedding blood, except it be for self-defense or in defense of their country and its rights; and, in the latter case, to keep them unsheathed and prefer falling with them in their hands to the relinquishment thereof."

In the distribution of the swords, hereby devised, among the five nephews therein enumerated, the one now presented fell to the lot of Samuel Washington, the devisee last named in the clause of the will which I have just read.
This gentleman, who died a few years since, in the county of Kanawha, and who was the father of Samuel T. Washington, the donor, I knew well. I have often seen this sword in his possession, and received from him the following account of the manner in which it became his property, in the division made among the devisees:
"He said that he knew it to have been the side arm of General Washington during the Revolutionary war—not that used on occasions of parade and review, but the constant service sword of the great chief—that he had himself seen General Washington wear this identical sword—he presumed for the last time—when, in 1794, he reviewed the Virginia and Maryland forces, then concentrated at Cumberland, under the command of Gen. Lee, and destined to co-operate with the Pennsylvania and New Jersey troops, then assembled at Bedford, in suppressing what has been called "the whisky insurrection."
"General Washington was at that time president of the United States, and, as such, was commander in chief of the army. It is known that it was his intention to lead the army in person on that occasion, had he found it necessary; and he went to Bedford and Cumberland prepared for that event. The condition of things did not require it, and he returned to his civil duties at Philadelphia.
"Mr. Samuel Washington held the commission of a captain at that time himself, and served in that campaign.
"He was anxious to obtain this particular sword, and preferred it to all others, among which was the ornamented and costly present from the great Frederick.
"At the time of the division among the nephews, without intimating what his preference was, he jocosely remarked, "that, inasmuch as he was the only one of them who had participated in military service, they ought to permit him to take choice." This suggestion was met in the same spirit in which it was made; and the choice being awarded him, he chose this, the plainest and intrinsically the least valuable of any, simply because it was "the battle sword."
"I am also in possession of the most satisfactory evidence, furnished by Col. George Washington of Georgetown, the nearest male relative of General Washington now living, as to the identity of this sword. His information was derived from his father, William Augustine Washington, the devisee first named in the clause of the will which I have read, from his uncle the late Judge Bushrod Washington, of the Supreme court, and Maj. Lawrence Lewis, the acting executor of General Washington's will; all of whom concurred in the statement that the true service sword was that selected by Capt. Samuel Washington.

Why Farmers are Turning to for Economical Transportation

In 1922 Chevrolet jumped from seventh to second place in sales of all cars, and to first place in sales of fully equipped modern cars.
Purchases by farmers were the chief factor in this remarkable development.
Farmers want automobiles not only of low first price, but also of low later cost for operation and maintenance.
They want room, comfort, and the ability to stand up under hard conditions.
They find that Chevrolet, fully equipped as sold, is the best value per dollar in the low-priced field, and neighbors tell them it costs less per mile to operate.

Chief's Position Not Envious.
The position of chief of an Indian tribe in the days when the red man roamed the western prairies was a precarious one at the best, according to the account of Francis Parkman, Jr., in his "The California and Oregon Trail."
The chief dared not assume any of the outward aspects of rank, for fear of incurring the displeasure of his braves. Many a man in the village lived better, owned more squaws and horses, and went better clad than did the chief. He must needs ingratiate himself with his young men by making them many presents, often to his own impoverishment.
The happiest chief was he who was at the head of a large family. With a group of relatives to avenge him in event of his murder, his position took on some semblance of security. One of the most powerful Dakotah chiefs was secure in his position by his family of 80 stalwart sons.

How She Helped Mamma.
A teacher at a certain private school strives to instill filial devotion in her pupils. Recently she asked her class in what way they had been helping their parents. Various answers were given of a more or less to-be-expected nature, till she reached a little girl who had been casting rather contemptuous glances at the humdrum reports. When her turn came the eyes of the others were fixed on her as she lives in an opulent home that boasts a staff of servants. "Well, Gracie," the teacher asked, "what have you been doing to help mamma?" "Oh, lots," was the scornful response of Gracie, "but mostly I go to the Country club and get cigarettes for her."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Peculiarities of the Whale.
The whale is able to hold his breath for a long time, sometimes for 45 minutes, and he is able to open his mouth under water when eating, because his nostrils connect directly with his windpipe and not with the back of his mouth, as in most other animals. When he comes to the surface he blows the air out of his lungs. It has by this time become so heated that it forms a column of vapor when expelled into the cool air of the surface and this is what happens when he is said to "spout." Incidentally the most famous whale of history—the one which swallowed Jonah—was not a whale at all, but is called in the Bible "a great fish."
Evil in Cunning Mind.
All my own experience of life teaches me the contempt of cunning, not the fear. The phrase "profound cunning" has always seemed to me a contradiction in terms. I never knew a cunning mind which was not either shallow, or, on some points, diseased.—Mrs. Jameson.

Peculiar Form of Sea Food
Ghianchetti, Offspring of the Sardine, Greatly Relished Along Parts of the Italian Coast.

The Italians along the Italian Riviera are passionately attached to a form of sea food known as ghianchetti. Ghianchetti, Kenneth L. Roberts explains in the Saturday Evening Post, are the offspring of the sardine. They are about one inch in length, and their bodies are about as robust and shapely as an ordinary piece of string. They are transparent and their eyes are black and dissipated looking; and when the Italians pile them in baskets and trays they have the appearance of lemon jelly full of flyspecks—the flyspecks being the eyes. The approved method of preparing ghianchetti is to roll them into a ball or a fritter, fry them in olive oil and eat until either the ghianchetti or the eater is exhausted.
Every good Italian, however, finds it hard to resist them in their raw state. A fisherman walking along with a tray of ghianchetti on her head usually keeps reaching up in an absent-minded manner, removing half a handful of the little fish from the tray, and tossing them abstractedly into her mouth, a dozen or two at a time. When the ghianchetti season is at its height, in February, no two ghianchetti fishermen can get into an argument with each other without spraying each other with ghianchetti fragments whenever they begin to shriek with emotion.

Eleusinian Mysteries.
The Eleusinian Mysteries were annual secret religious ceremonies which were instituted in Athens more than 1,000 years before Christ. It is unknown who was responsible for their institution, but it is generally believed that they were in honor of Demeter, the goddess of the harvest, and that their effect was an exceedingly good one. Great secrecy was observed, death being the penalty imposed on anyone who revealed the nature of the rites.
They were afterward brought to Rome where they endured for about 15 centuries, and were abolished by Theodosius in 389 A. D. Cicero has declared in his writings that the Mysteries tended to promote civilization. Their laws were to honor parents, to honor the gods with the fruits of the earth, and not to treat dumb animals with cruelty.

Fighting Giraffe.
The giraffe has neither claws nor sharp teeth with which to defend itself or to attack its enemies, so when it is out of temper with one of its own kind it does not attempt to disembowel its adversary, as a rhinoceros might, or tear it, as a tiger would. But nature has given it a long and pliable neck, which terminates in a very solid head, and it uses the upper part of itself like a fall, swinging its neck round and round and bringing its head down at each swing with a thump on its antagonist.
The other combatant uses precisely the same tactics, and the two animals, planting themselves as firmly as possible by stretching out all four legs to the utmost, stand opposite to each other and hammer away with their heads until one or the other has had enough.

Truly, Puck Was Right.
A club this writer belongs to has been ready for a year or more to put up a new building—but it hasn't. Three friends have been for over a year in a position to build three new residences—but they haven't. What's the trouble? The reader can easily guess. It's a bit discouraging. God has given us a beautiful world and we don't know how to run it, any more than Adam did to run Eden—and we have several thousand years of experience over Adam, at that. We ought to be ashamed, lunkheads that we are!—Boston Transcript.

THREE WAYS OF EMBALMING
Methods Followed in Ancient Egypt Differed According to the Rank of the Deceased.

There were three different ways of embalming in old Egypt. The most magnificent was bestowed only upon persons of distinguished rank. When a person of distinction died the body was put into a coffin, the upper exterior of which represented the deceased, with suitable embellishment. The coffin itself was usually made of sycamore wood, which is said to be almost incorruptible. Sometimes deal was used, in which case it was brought from abroad. The embalming of the body occupied 40 to 70 days. It consisted mainly of the introduction of astringent drugs and spices into the body, anointing it with oils of cedar, myrrh and cinnamon, and saturating it with niter. It was then washed and wrapped in linen bands dipped in myrrh and gum—these bands in some instances being 1,000 yards long—commencing at the head and terminating at the feet, avoiding the face. The body was then restored by the embalmers to the relatives, who placed it in the coffin.
A less expensive method of embalming was simply to inject into the bowels a liquid extract of cedar, and wrapping up the body in salt and niter; others were soaked, or as some think, boiled in a kind of bitumen made of mixed resinous substances. They were then placed, without any other covering than the bandages saturated with these substances, in sepulchres, and there deposited in rows by thousands.

Graves Things of Beauty
Cook's Esthetic Sense Must Be Grati-fied—Inartistic Surroundings Produce Depression.
Housewives have wondered why Bridget, the cook, packed up and left without giving reason for her action. Now the secret is out. It was, in all probability, Dudley Crafts Watson, interior decorator, says, because her esthetic sense was not gratified in her inartistic surroundings.
Perhaps the coloring and design on the wallpaper did not strike a harmonious cord in her spiritual makeup. "Many a cook has left because of the pictures in her room," Watson said in a recent lecture in Milwaukee, the Milwaukee Journal reports. "No old, inartistic picture should be hung in her room. The wallpaper should be warm, rosy, full of jolly color and of graceful design. She needs beauty."
In order to keep the cook from becoming dissatisfied and leaving he offers the following advice:
"If your cook enjoys your finest painting or rarest print hang it in her room."
Or, in case one is fortunate enough to support a gallery, the problem, no doubt, could be simplified by moving in a bed and turning the gallery over to the cook.

HAS TWO CLAIMS TO FAME
Daniel Defoe Was Great Editor as Well as Writer of Fiction That is Immortal.

Daniel Defoe is thought of by most present-day people only for having written "Robinson Crusoe," but his reputation among his own contemporaries rested on a great variety of accomplishments, of which produce that now famous book probably came very near the last. He was chiefly noted, in his own day, as a very great editor, the Detroit News observes. Defoe survived three great political upheavals, for he wrote and schemed in the reigns of James II, William III and Queen Anne. His fortunes were varied during these troublous times and, as he said of himself, within six months he saw "the difference between the closet of a king and the dungeon of Newgate."
One of his greatest friends from boyhood was Samuel Wesley. Wesley and Defoe married the two daughters of a certain Doctor Annesley, Defoe's pastor. Samuel Wesley's two sons were John and Charles, who afterward became two of the most celebrated divines of modern history. Thus Defoe was their uncle by marriage.

Fast Boats in 1840.
Although the Cunard line operated the first regular passenger schedule on the Atlantic ocean, inaugurated by the Britannia in 1840, the Savannah, an American ship, was the first steam vessel to make the crossing, depending, according to the records, more upon her sails than her engines, which ran for less than 100 hours. She was built in New York city and sailed from Savannah for Liverpool on May 25, 1819, arriving 35 days later.

The Royal William, built at Three Rivers, near Quebec, made the entire voyage under steam in 1833. Her first trip from Quebec to London consumed 40 days. The Britannia's maiden trip from Liverpool to Boston in 1840 was made in 14 days and 8 hours. Her sister ship, the Acadia, crossed from Liverpool to Halifax in the same year in 11 days and 4 hours. The next year she made this voyage in 9 days and 20 hours, a record which stood for many years.

English Place Names.
The charm of English place names is not only in their bewildering variety, but in the fact that almost all of them seem indigenous. At any rate, they are all rooted deep, from whatever original soil they came. Latin and Danish names have been weathered and mellowed in so many centuries of English history that one remembers only with an effort that they are not English in origin. Only the Norman names have the slightest tincture of foreign suggestion about them. French is still a rather tender exotic which needs to be trained against the sunny southern wall of the language. Beauhieu does not seem to belong naturally in Hampshire. But even to domesticate the names from the three or four other languages is no small triumph in verbal horticulture.—Christian Science Monitor.

Called White House "Barn-like."
The letters written by Mrs. John Adams, the first First Lady of the Land to be hostess at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue, in which she described the "Palace" as being "barn-like" and "half furnished" have been a source of historical interest in comparison to the newspaper accounts of the comforts and luxuries of the White House as it stands today. However, Mrs. Adams had made the executive mansion more home-like by the time Thomas Jefferson and his many daughters came to occupy it with his magnificent homestead at Monticello, Va.

White House Once "Palace."
When the capital of the United States was moved to Washington in 1800, during the administration of John Adams, the official residence of the President was called the "Palace." This first Washington home of the chief executive was begun in 1792 and was completed at a cost of about a third of a million, just before it became occupied by the second President.

Here for the Oil that Fights Carbon Mischief

DRIVE in here for your next oil supply—the oil of that wonderful double duty that you have been hearing about.
It is here in exactly the right charted weight for your motor—ready with its two-fold value of better lubricating service in your crankcase, plus prevention of carbon evils at their source.

Wadhams Tempered Motor Oil

burns to a minimum of carbon—non-hardening—so light and flaky that it tends to blow out with the exhaust, without residue of clinkery grit.

This wonderful feature of self-carbon-cleaning is alone enough to determine you to use Tempered even if it were no better lubricant than other good oils.
But it is better. The Tempered process is the exclusive Wadhams method that gives this oil extra staying power—toughens it against wearing away under heat, friction and dilution by motor fuel. It lasts longer and oils better than untempered oils—costs no more to buy and far less to use.

"Monitors" Employed Against Indians.
In the '60s the stage ranches in Kansas, where horses were changed and drivers cared for, were much harassed by Indians. Stables were fired and women and children captured or killed.
To protect themselves the frontiersmen devised and built prairie monitors. The roof was of heavy logs deeply covered with earth, the whole rising only a foot above the level of the ground. Loopholes large enough to sight a rifle through were cut on all sides. An underground passage from the ranch house led to the monitor. Inside the monitor planks resting on boxes gave the defenders support which brought their heads and shoulders to the level of the loopholes.
These underground forts baffled the Indians, who could not dig or starve out the garrisons. The besieged had a perfect range from which to fire on the besiegers, and return fire was as futile as if directed into a sand pile.

Flattered the Minister.
An amusing anecdote in Lord Frederic Hamilton's "Days Before Yesterday" concerns a fresh draft of Gordon Highlanders, who shortly after arriving at Calcutta were marched to service at St. Andrew's church.
The most optimistic mosquito had never imagined such a succulent banquet as that afforded by 400 bare kneed, kilted Highlanders, and the mosquitoes made the fullest use of their opportunity. Soon the church resounded with the vigorous clapping of hands on bare knees and legs as the men endeavored to kill a few of their little tormentors.
Hearing the loud clapping, the minister paused and said: "My brethren, it is verra gratifying to a meenister of the word to learn that his remarks meet w' the approbation of his hearers; but I'd have you to remember that applause is strictly out of place in the house of God."—Youth's Companion.

They Blushed.
Smith tried to board a crowded bus, but the conductor waved him back, announcing gruffly that there were no vacant seats.
"Be a sport and let me on," Smith said. "My sweetheart's on board."
"Oh, well, in that case—" said the conductor, with a smile, and Smith scrambled on.
Just inside the door an elderly man was sitting beside a very pretty girl.
He rose and waved his hand toward the vacant seat with a smile and a look that said: "Here's your place."
The girl looked up as Smith seated himself beside her, and both blushed vividly. You see they had never seen each other before.—New York Mail.

India Rubber.
Few articles seem more strangely named than India rubber. It gets the "rubber" from the first use to which it was put—that of erasing pencil marks by rubbing. Nor should it be associated with India. The tree was first mentioned by an explorer among the Mexican Indians, three centuries or more ago, and the first account of the substance occurs in connection with Columbus' visit to Haiti on his second voyage. Most of our present importation comes from Brazil.

dues to professional societies, subscriptions to professional journals, office rent, and the cost of fuel, light, heat and water used in his office and the hire of assistants.

The farmer may deduct all amounts paid in the production, harvesting and marketing of crops, including labor, cost of seed and fertilizer purchased, cost of minor repairs to farm buildings (other than the dwelling, which is personal expense) and cost of small tools used up in the course of a year or two. Rent paid for a farm also in an allowable deduction.

Deduction of personal or living expenses such as rent paid for a dwelling, hire of domestic servants, education of children, etc is expressly disallowed by the revenue act.

In making out his income tax return for the year 1922, the taxpayer is required to include all items of gross income. In the case of a storekeeper the gross income consists usually of the gross profits on sales, together with income from other sources. The returns must show the gross sales, purchases and cost of goods sold. To reflect net income correctly and to ascertain gross income, inventories are ordinarily required as of the beginning and end of each taxable year. The professional man, doctor, lawyer, dentist must include all fees and other compensation for professional services.

The farmer is required to report as gross income all profits derived from the sale or exchange of farm products, including crops and live stock, whether raised on the farm or purchased and resold. A farmer who rents his farm on the crop sharing basis must report such income for the years in which crops are sold. Profit obtained from the sale or rental of farm lands must also be reported.

Liability to file an income tax return for the year 1922 is determined by a person's status on the last day of the taxable year, December 31. If the return is made on the calendar year basis, as most are. If on that date he was single he must file a return if his net income for 1922 was $1,000 or more, and he is allowed only an exemption of $1,000. If he was married on December 31, he is granted the exemption allowed a married person for the full year, $2,500 if his net income was $5,000 or less, and $2,000 if his net income exceeded $5,000. The bride's income, however, must be considered with that of her husband, the larger exemptions being allowed married couples living together. A widow or widower whose spouse died before the end of the year is classed as a single person. Di-vorcees and persons separated by mutual consent also are classed as single persons.

To avoid penalty, income tax returns must be filed with the collector of Internal revenue for the district in which the taxpayer lives or has principal place of business on or before midnight of March 15, 1923.

Where additional time is required because of illness or absence of the taxpayer from home, the collector may grant, upon application before the return is due, March 15, an extension of not to exceed 30 days.
Further delay must be applied for from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue Washington D. C.

Failure to make return on time subjects the delinquent to a penalty of $1,000 and an additional penalty of 25 per cent of the amount of tax due. If the failure is willful, however, or an attempt is made to evade tax by filing a false return, the offender is liable to imprisonment and to a fine of not more than $10,000 and in addition to a penalty of 50 per cent of the amount of tax evaded.

Cow's Peculiar Stomach.
A peculiar digestive system enables cattle to use coarse feed called "roughage," which would not be suitable for feeding horses or other farm animals. The cow has a compound stomach of four compartments, which in large animals has a capacity of 60 gallons. The food goes into the first large stomach or pouch, where it is softened, and then overflows into the smaller second stomach. From either of these pouches the food may be returned to the mouth in small portions or "cuds" for rumination or "chewing the cud." That is why cattle are called "ruminants." The food is again swallowed and goes into the third, and then into the fourth, or true stomach.

Cattle have no teeth at the end of the upper jaw, and in grazing the vegetation is pulled, rather than cut off, by the lower incisor teeth pressing on the tough pad of membrane covering the upper jaw.

Five Sounds in Every Good Bell.
To the casual listener there is but one sound heard when the clapper of a bell comes in contact with the lip, but to the trained ear there are four other sounds and before a bell is said to be "in tune" each of these sounds must be strictly true.
These different sounds emanate from different parts of the bell and they are modified as desired by chipping the bell at the lip or by grinding away certain parts in a lathe-like apparatus made for the purpose. Four or five pounds of metal taken away from a large bell makes a great change in the sound.

RATHER A FINE DISTINCTION Point Made by Indianapolis Man Might Even Be Considered Open to Argument.

Some years ago the late Henry Coe was carrying a small line of fire insurance on the household goods of his friend William A., when the latter turned up in his office one morning with the invoice for a new Axminster rug. A lighted lamp had been upset on the rug the night before and the fire had run all over it, charring its surface to a nasty brown. Coe promptly gave a check for the full amount, but the next morning William came in and handed back the check.
"I was too hasty," he explained.
"Yesterday my wife sprinkled some corn meal on that rug and swept it off and when I got home it was as bright and red as ever."
"Can't help it," replied Henry.
"You'll have to keep the money now.
I've sent in my report to the company and I'd lose my agency if I tried to change things, for we are supposed to make dead sure of losses before we settle them." William protested that it was not his money and Henry declared that it was not his, so they finally settled the matter by indorsing the check and mailing it to the flower mission.

"I don't feel any darn pious glow of satisfaction about this contribution," remarked William. "It looks to me as if we had merely picked the pocket of the insurance company for the benefit of the flower mission."
"Why worry?" asked Henry. "The only difference between us who are out of jail and those who are in is that we are lucky and they are not."—In-

GROWN FROM STOLEN SEEDS

Rubber Trees Still Standing in Equatorial Forest Have Had Remarkable Adventures.

When the value of rubber was first being exploited, British interests made an expedition to Brazil with the view of securing specimens and acclimatizing the rubber plants to the lands of India. The Brazilians, appreciating the value of their monopoly, refused to allow the export of seeds or plants, but by some underhand methods 70,000 seeds were secured and smuggled out of the country.

Rubber seeds are perishable, and lest they should spoil on the way to Ceylon they were taken the shorter distance—to London.

On landing in London, the guardian of the seeds drove in a hansom cab to Kew gardens. It was the middle of the night when he arrived there, but the seeds were planted at once. One in ten germinated, and a year later 1,700 of the plants were sent in miniature hothouses to Ceylon.

A botanical garden was opened for their reception at a little place called Heneratgoda in the equatorial forest. There the survivors stand today. You look at these large old trees with a sort of wonder when you think of the adventures they went through in the early days, and that from their progeny the great rubber industry of the East has sprung up.

DANISH MAIDENS HAVE CHARM

Pretty Girls In Profusion to Be Seen on the Famous "Streak" in Copenhagen.

Nowhere except on Fifth avenue, New York, do you see so many pretty girls in the space of a short walk as you do on the "Streak." The maid of Copenhagen is nothing at all like one's preconceived notion of what a Scandinavian girl should be. Up in Norway you encounter the flaming red cheeks and yellow locks and robust forms which Anders Zorn has immortalized on canvas. But the maid of Copenhagen, the typical one, the kind that you will always remember when your thoughts dwell on the Danish capital, is not like any of these. She is petite and trim, neatly dressed, with hair that is copper brown as often as yellow.

A walk along the "Streak" on a sunny afternoon at the shopping hour reveals to perfection the charm of Copenhagen. And if you stroll up to the Langelinie, the delightful park that skirts the harbor, or venture into the grounds of the Rosenberg palace, it will be much the same; pretty girls, dozens of them, alone, or in twos and threes, or escorted by devoted swains; girls as chic and Parisienne, with complexions that the fogs and winds of the Baltic have made into worthy rivals of those of England, chattering like magpies, bursting into smiles that reveal whole nests of dimples, tripping along with life and mischief in their eyes and charm in every inch of them.

No wonder a visitor to Copenhagen can never get too much of afternoon promenading! How sincerely does he growl a curse when dusk begins to shroud the fair metropolis of Denmark and put an end to his enjoyment of the beauty parade on the "Streak."—The World Traveler.

WORDS OLD AS HUMAN RACE

Sounds Indicative of What They Describe Were Probably the First Forms of Speech.

When your baby first begins to talk, it uses instinctively the oldest words in creation, words as old as the human race itself.

They are words whose sound is an imitation of what they describe. A chair falls over in the nursery. "Bang!" says baby, just as her greatest-grandmother said when her father dropped his club in the cave that was their home.

Baby calls the cow a "moo," because that is the noise it makes. To primitive man the cow seemed to say "koo"—a name that has stuck.

What finer imitation of the crow's croak could you have than the Greek word "korax"? Crow (really corow) is derived from the same idea. Hundreds of animals—birds, in particular—retain their ancestral names. The cuckoo has always been so called; he named himself.

A whole host of other words describe noises—crash, slam, thump, whack, splash, boom, prattle, and so on. One of the most beautiful of these is murmur, which means the sound made by a gentle breeze among the trees—mur-mur-mur.—Exchange.

Earth is an Irregular Sphere.

The diameter of the earth from pole to pole through the equator is shorter than that at the equator. Though in popular language the earth is said to be round, like a ball, it is really an irregular sphere, slightly flattened at the poles. The slight departure from roundness is accounted for by the rapid motion of the earth while in a more plastic state.

SURELY WAS POTENT STUFF

Some of Us Would Prefer Hardships of Insomnia to Experience This Man Had.

Jones had been troubled with insomnia. He tried several alleged cures without success. One day he told his trouble to his friend, Brown.

"Why, I know the very thing for you," Brown said, after Jones had concluded. "Meet me tonight, I have some stuff out home which will fix you up in no time."

That night the two met and Brown handed Jones a bottle filled with a murky white liquid, instructing his friend to take a "good drink" before going to bed.

"That will make you sleep if anything can," he said.
Two days later the two met again on the street.

"How was that stuff I gave you to cure your insomnia? Was it any good?" Brown asked.

"Good?" replied Jones. "I should say it was. Listen here! I took it as you suggested, and went to sleep soon after retiring. Then a friend with his head under his arm came along and asked me if I wanted to buy his feet. I was bargaining with him when the dragon on which I was riding slipped its skin, and left me floating in mid-air."

"While I was considering how I should get down, a bull with two heads peered over the edge of a wall, and said he would haul me up if I would first climb up and fix a windlass for him. So as I was sliding down the mountain, the inspector came in, and I asked him when the train would reach my station."

"We passed your station two hundred years ago," he answered, calmly folding the train up and slipping it in his waistcoat pocket. At this moment I woke up and found that I had been asleep ten minutes."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Eat, Sleep and Feel Better Every Way

Chicago, Ill.—"I was weak and run-down and in such a nervous condition that I could hardly do my work. I was tired all the time, and dizzy, and could not sleep and had no appetite. I tried different medicines for years, but they did not help me. Then I read in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for other women and gave it a trial. I began to eat better and could sleep, and consider it a wonderful medicine. I recommend it to my friends and will never be without it."

MURDER?

SYNOPSIS.—Answering an advertisement calling for a young man willing to engage in service of danger, Matthew West, ex-service man just returned from France, where he had been captain of engineers, meets Natalie Coolidge, writer of the advertisement, and without being instructed as to his services, is engaged by her, and that same evening introduced to her friends as her fiance. That night, in the Coolidge home, West is startled by the appearance in his room of a young woman, whom he takes to be Natalie. Next morning Natalie tells West she has been troubled by some woman, apparently her double, who has been impersonating her. Percival Coolidge, Natalie's uncle and guardian, is disgruntled by West's appearance as Natalie's fiance. Natalie, Coolidge and West plan a visit of charity. Leaving West in the car, Natalie and Coolidge enter a small cottage. Before they return, West secures information which leads him to believe Coolidge is deceiving Natalie for a purpose. Natalie informs West she has been mistaken in her suspicions and that she has no further need for his services. West is astounded, but leaves.

CHAPTER VI

The Body of a Suicide.
 As the car whirled West down the dreeling driveway, the only sign of life visible about the house was the motionless figure of Sexton on the steps. If either Miss Natalie, or Percival Coolidge, took interest enough in the proceedings to witness his departure, they chose to remain carefully concealed within. There was no pretense even at speeding the parting guest. He had simply been dismissed, turned out, decently enough, perhaps, considering his status, yet with a certain measure of contempt which rankled nevertheless.

The young man could not altogether reconcile this style of treatment with his preconceived conception of Miss Natalie Coolidge. He had been too deeply impressed by her to easily relinquish his previously formed opinion of her character. This latest action did not at all coincide with her former open friendliness. He had not gone to her as a servant, nor had she in any way treated him as such. What could account for so remarkable a change?

Perhaps it was the influence of Percival Coolidge. This explanation seemed probable. The man had in some way regained her confidence, and then, through trickery, had succeeded in poisoning her mind. From the very first Coolidge had disliked him instinctively, and made no effort to conceal his feelings; he resented the intimacy between him and Natalie, naturally enough, and would use every means possible to get the younger man completely out of the house. No doubt he looked upon him as dangerous. But why? There could only be one answer to this query. His own dishonesty; his secret knowledge of some trickery relative to the funds of the estate. He had convinced the girl of his honesty, but, more than ever, West believed the fellow a rascal.

These thoughts flitted through his mind, yet not consecutively, as the car left the grounds, and turned on to the main road, leading citywards. They were still skirting the Coolidge estate, although the house behind was concealed by shrubbery. Suddenly, just as they cleared the bridge, and began to mount the opposite grade, there came a sharp report, sounding so close at hand the chauffeur clamped on his brake, and glanced anxiously over the side of the car.

"Blow-out, wasn't it, sir?"
 "No," said West shortly, staring himself out into the thicket of trees at their left. "It was a shot fired over there; a revolver I should say. Wait a second, Sanders, until I see what has happened."

It was largely curiosity which led him to leave the car. The sound of either a rifle or a shotgun in that lonely spot would have been instantly dismissed as natural enough, but a pistol was different. That was no place for such a weapon. It somehow had a grimly sinister sound.

Determined to learn exactly what had happened, West pressed his passage forward through the vines of the fence, and emerged into the field beyond. A half dozen yards and he found the clover trampled, as though a man had passed that way. The trail led to a shallow depression, past a rather large boulder, near which the trampling of the grass was even more plainly revealed, as though the stranger had remained here for some time, had even seated himself, and then, abruptly ended a few yards away. Evidently the fellow had turned back at this point and retraced his steps.

the stand, but their eyes did not meet, nor did the girl give any evidence of recognition. Somehow the impression the young woman left upon him in those few moments was not a pleasant one. He could not clearly analyze this result, yet she was either acting a part to conceal her true emotions, or else she was really indifferent.

It was not until the following day that reason began to reassert itself, and he succeeded in marshaling the facts of the case more clearly in his own mind. He even began to doubt and question his own testimony, yet, before he reached any real conclusion, one of the club servants approached his chair.

"Captain West, there is a man out here asking to see you."
 "A man! Where?"
 "I had him wait in the anteroom, sir."

"Very well, Mapes."
 It was Sexton, twirling his hat nervously in his hands, and still standing irresolutely in the middle of the floor. As sight of West he took a hasty step forward, eager to explain the cause of his presence.

"You'll pardon me, sir," he burst forth in apology, "But I must see you, sir."

"That's quite all right, Sexton. Let's step in here where we can talk quietly."

He pointed the way into a private card room, closing the door behind his visitor.
 "Take the seat over there, Sexton. You came in to see me from Fair-lawn?"
 "No, sir, I didn't. The fact is, I'm not out there any longer."
 "Not there! What do you mean?"
 "I've been discharged, sir, with the other servants, since the funeral yesterday."

"Discharged! By whom? Not Miss Natalie, surely?"
 "Yes, sir. She didn't give no reason; just said we were not wanted any longer. That's one reason why I came here to see you, sir."

"But I hardly know how I can be of help. I have no house of my own, and—well, the truth of the matter is, Sexton, just at present I am not on very good terms with the young lady myself."
 "I know that, sir," more confidently, "and it isn't a position I am seeking, at all. I have quite a tidy bit of money laid away, and could get plenty of work. That's not the point, sir. Why should Miss Natalie tell me to go like that? It isn't a bit like her, sir; she ain't seemed natural at all lately, and I tell you there's something wrong goin' on out there. I'm sure o' that, sir."

"Sure of what?"
 "Well, for one thing, it's my opinion that Percival Coolidge never killed himself, sir."
 West sat up stiffer, as though struck a blow. These words startled him; drove his own mind into sudden activity.

"What makes you think that, Sexton?" he questioned slowly.
 "Well, there's more than one thing," as though glad to have made the plunge, and anxious to justify himself. "But first of all that wasn't his revolver they found lying beside him. He always had one in his valise, an' it's there now, or was when I looked to see."

"You didn't tell that to the coroner."
 "No, sir; he never put me on the stand. Besides I didn't know about it then. Did you notice where he was shot, sir?"

"Behind the right ear; the wound was plainly visible."
 "Not very easy for a man to do himself, sir."
 "No, but possible, nevertheless. The coroner was satisfied on that point."
 "Yes, sir, but the coroner overlooked one thing, sir. He was sure it was a suicide case, and wanted to get done with it in a hurry. I and Simmons, sir, washed the body to get it ready for burial, an' I combed the hair down over the bullet wound. There wasn't no powder marks on the skin, an' not a hair was singed, sir. That's what makes me say he never killed himself."

West sat silent and motionless, looking straight at the man opposite, endeavoring to decide on a course of action. Some way in the depth of his earnestness, Sexton no longer appeared a servant. He was a man, voicing a man's heart. West realized the change instinctively; here was an intelligent fellow, to be met frankly, and for the time being, at least, on the ground of equality. It would be useless to try to either mislead, or deceive.
 "Sexton," he began finally, "this is a pretty serious charge you make, my man, but since I have been thinking things over, I confess some suspicious circumstances have arisen in my own mind. Of course I was not aware of these facts you have just related, but they fit in nicely with some observations of my own. The truth is," he confessed frankly, "I did not tell, all I knew to the coroner's jury. I meant to do so, but the right questions were not asked me, and certain details slipped my memory until too late. Do you recall a boulder of rock out in that clover field?"

"Yes, sir, to the right of the path; it is mostly hidden now by the growth."
 "Entirely concealed, a few yards away. Well, when I crawled through the fence after hearing that shot fired, I saw nothing, and heard nothing. I had advanced into the field several rods when I came upon the trail of some one leading directly north. It was not a path; merely evidence that a single person had passed that way. I followed, and came to this boulder. Here there was every proof visible that the previous party had remained for some time, seated and lying on the ground under protection of the stone. The occupancy was a recent one. Then evidently, whoever it was, had advanced to the right in the general direction of the gate through the fence, near where Coolidge's body was found. The marks of advance ended on a little rise, some ten yards from the boulder, where the fellow apparently turned about and retraced his steps."

"How far was that from the gate into the road, sir?" Sexton asked breathlessly.
 "Within easy shooting distance for a revolver of that calibre, I should say. Any good marksman could have rung the bell."
 "And you saw no one?"
 "No; not a sign; the fact is I failed at the time to put two and two together. The thought of a possible murder never occurred to me."
 "You think it was murder then, sir?"
 "Yes, I do," replied West gravely. "It has all the marks, but who committed the crime? What was the motive? It will never do for us to make such a charge, after the coroner's verdict, without positive proof."

"No, sir."
 "And you know of nothing which might clear this up?"
 "No, sir; I've been with the Coolidges sir, ever since Miss Natalie was a little girl, and I ain't heard of any trouble that ought to end in murder, sir."

 "Eow old was Miss Coolidge when her father died?"
 "She must have been seventeen, sir."

"And since then Percival Coolidge had full charge of the estate?"
 "Practically, yes, sir; there was another trustee, but he died; and then, as I understand, Miss Natalie had some funds of her own."
 West took a cigar from his pocket, and lit it. Although not altogether clear in his own mind, he had begun to see light.

CHAPTER VII

Against a Stone Wall.
 Was this discovery anything to him? What difference could it make whether Percival Coolidge had died by his own hand, or been treacherously shot from ambush? How would it benefit Natalie Coolidge to have the truth revealed? And, if it would benefit her, why should he devote his time and labor to such an effort? She had cast him off, thrown him aside; her affairs had no further interest for him. Let her lawyer take care of them. These were West's first thoughts.

All true, yet this state of mind brought no satisfaction. He was interested; he could not escape his first impressions of the girl, or drive from him a desire to serve her, whether she wished it, or not. She might, indeed, be in equal danger from an assassin. He could not determine this until he learned the cause of the slaying of Percival. Then, on the other hand, suppose some one else's suspicions were also aroused. Who would they naturally look to as guilty of this horrible crime? There was but one answer—Natalie Coolidge. She was seemingly the only person to directly benefit by his death. All these considerations urged him on, overcame his doubt and indecision. Then he desired to learn the truth himself. His eyes rested on Sexton's anxious face.

"I've been thinking it over," he admitted quietly, "and I guess it is up to you and me to find out what this means."
 "Yes, sir," hesitatingly, "You—you don't think it was Miss Natalie, sir?"
 "No, I do not, Sexton. I have my own reasons for saying that. Yet naturally she is the one to be first suspected. Do you know anything?"

"Only that I am sure she was in the garden, sir, when the shot was fired. I saw her there just after you drove away."
 "That is conclusive then, so far as her personal actions are concerned."

"Rather a wild guess, but it will give us something to do. Are you game, Sexton?"

CALLS FOR NEW DICTIONARY REMEMBERED HIS DEAD PET

New York Newspaper Condemns the Present Ones as Cumbersome and Disconcerting.
 Boy Who Kept Green the Memory of His Favorite Deserved to Have Christmas Tree.
 Like many books called classics, which we speak of reverently and never look at, the dictionary of our language seems to be falling into disuse; we seldom consult it. If a strange word "swims into our ken" we regard it as an impertinence or we use it as a kind of game; we argue about it, discuss it, and perhaps write to the newspapers for a definition, but we don't consult the dictionary.
 Perhaps the reason for our neglect is that the unabridged dictionary is too cumbersome and it gives too many meanings, though thin papers cut the ordinary bulk. Simple words therein are found to be both noun and verb (spelled alike), and sometimes they have more than a dozen distinct meanings. This is disconcerting. There may be room for a dictionary with the obsolete and archaic words left out, a true Twentieth-century dictionary that shall be fool proof.—New York Herald.

In the Majority.
 The pessimist looks regretfully back; the optimist looks joyfully forward; the ordinary mortal just groans and smiles through today.—Boston Transcript.
 After he had spent many minutes looking over the Christmas tree display of a Kings Highway (Brooklyn) store, a small boy approached the dealer and timidly asked how much the cheapest tree in the stock would cost, says the New York Sun.
 "Fifty cents," replied the dealer, and then noting the look of disappointment on the boy's face, asked him if that was too much.
 "Yes, sir," responded the youth. "I'm afraid it is. I've got only 25 cents, which I saved in my bank. You see, it's for my dog. He died three years ago and every Christmas I have set a tree on his grave in the back yard."
 "Well, here's one you can have for 25 cents," said the dealer. The boy, with a light of gratitude spreading over his countenance, started away on a run, shouting back that he was going home to get his savings.
 "Hay!" yelled the dealer. "Come back and get the tree. You needn't mind about your pennies."
 Criticize no friend unless he asks for it—and then don't.

WHAT TO HAVE FOR DINNER.

With a crisp, green salad, with a simple dressing and the cottage cheese served with currant jelly, the following recipes will work into a fairly eatable meal.

English Meat Dish.—Parboil a pair of sweetbreads for five minutes and cook for ten minutes in one cupful of rich stock. Drain and cool. Prepare a pair of calves' brains, using the same stock. Wash and clean the heart (and kidneys if liked) slice and cook them in the stock until well done. Sauté the heart in butter until brown, dip sweetbreads and brains in egg and crumbs and fry in deep fat. Add to the butter in the pan two tablespoonfuls of black currant jelly, when melted add two tablespoonfuls of flour, add this to the stock, let it boil up once, and pour over the meats in a hot dish. Serve with peeled potatoes, baked.

Potato Soup.—Cook and mash three good-sized potatoes. To a quart of milk (skimmed milk may be used) add a slice of onion and a stalk of celery; scald and remove the vegetables and pour over the mashed potato. In a saucepan put two tablespoonfuls of butter, if skimmed milk is used; add two tablespoonfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of salt and when well blended add to the soup and cook until the flour is well cooked. Serve with toasted crackers. Celery cut in short lengths and filled with seasoned cheese is a good relish to serve with any menu.

Cottage Cheese.—This may be easily made at home if there is plenty of sour milk. Pour two quarts of boiling water into two quarts of sour milk which is well thickened. Let stand until the curds begin to form, then pour into a cheesecloth bag and hang to drain over night. Remove the curd and season well with cream, salt, white and cayenne pepper. Mix until smooth and place on ice until ready to serve.

Squash Salad.—Cut into quarters tender squash and boil until tender. Press out the water and cool, then cut the solid part into cubes, adding onion and serve with a good salad dressing in green pepper shells or in tomato cups.

The addition of a few tablespoonfuls of cheese to any cream soup will add to the flavor and nutritive value of the dish.

When you have resolved to be great, abide by yourself, and do not weakly try to reconcile yourself with the world.—Emerson.

IMPORTANT FOOD PRINCIPLES

It is not necessary for us to remember the scientific names for the different food principles; it is sufficient if we have in mind an example of each. The most expensive and complex food which is necessary for health is protein, found in meats, eggs, milk, fish, beans and peas. Starch is found in vegetables, the potato being rich in starch. Sugar is found in fruits in the natural state, in honey, and in all dried fruits; mineral matter we obtain from the water we drink and the vegetables we eat.

As everything we eat, perhaps with no exception, has possibilities of harming this wonderful machine, if it is not properly masticated, so starch, the best of food, if indulged in in too large quantities, will also harm the body. Foods however good, in wrong combinations, will cause intestinal trouble. Protein foods at low heat will putrefy, giving off the most deadly of poisons, but with starch low heat, such as surrounds the food in the digestive tract, will cause fermentation and an acid which is the best of disinfectants. As the intestinal tract is inhabited by different kinds of bacteria up into the hundreds, each giving off its own peculiar poison, dead or alive, one may appreciate a little of what we owe to our starchy foods.

These starch granules, when submitted to moisture and high temperature, swell and burst and after being cooked become a paste easily attacked by the digestive juices.

In the mouth, by mixing with the saliva in proper mastication, begins the first stage of digestion and a very important one.

Too much starch and sugar causes excess of weight. A meal of bread, rice, and potatoes with a tapioca pudding is one with far too much starch. When more starch is eaten than is needed for the body uses, it is stored as sugar in the liver or around the heart, causing all sorts of disorders. Any organ smothered by fat is inactive and thus throws the body out of balance.

You will find dozens of combinations, surprisingly simple, that you have never tried.

Attribute Their Success to Newspaper Advertising

In an interview today, Mr. Warren Wright, President of the Calumet Baking Powder Company, strongly advocated the use of newspaper advertising, and points to Calumet's success as proof of his statement.

"Calumet sales are 2 1/2 times as much as any other brand," stated Mr. Wright, "and we attribute this to our lavish use of newspaper space. We believe that the newspaper is the most direct medium we can use in getting our message across to the housewife, and we know from our experience covering thirty years that the housewife will respond to newspaper advertising quicker than she will to any other form of advertising."

"The housewives have confidence in newspaper advertisements because they know that the newspapers set up high standards for their advertisers. It is for that reason that the housewife looks to the newspaper for information on products in which she is interested."

A few days later the average man begins to boast of the good deed he did by mistake.

"I was almost an invalid and Tanlac built me up to a strong, well woman. I consider it my best friend," is the grateful and characteristic statement of Mrs. Emma Jennings, residing at Clearwater, Cal.

"An attack of the grippe left me completely broken down. My stomach felt sick, my legs and arms so tired and weak I could hardly use them, and I scarcely had energy and strength to dress myself. I just kept getting weaker in spite of all I could do, and as I am seventy-one, I had begun to think my age was against me ever getting well."

"Almost from the day I began taking Tanlac I commenced to feel stronger. So I kept picking up with every bottle until now I can easily do all my household work, for I am feeling fine. I wouldn't be without Tanlac in the house. It is just grand."

Titanic at Bottom of Ocean.
The Titanic has never been raised and it is assumed that the giant steamer is resting quietly at the bottom of the Atlantic ocean. The fact that sounding leads and dredging nets sink to the bottom of the ocean even at depths of six miles tends to prove that any weight heavier than water will sink to the bottom in the deepest ocean.

NO RECORD OF PAINE'S GRAVE

What Became of Body of Famous Political Writer and Freethinker Is a Mystery.

One of the completely unsolved mysteries of modern history is what became of the body of Tom Paine, the famous Anglo-American political writer and free-thinking philosopher, who exerted such a powerful influence on the American public during and subsequent to the Revolution. Paine died in New York in 1809, and was buried in New Rochelle. His remains were later removed to England by a radical leader named William Corbett, who hoped by that act to further republican doctrine in the mother country. On reaching England Corbett left the body in the hands of a committee, and what eventually became of it has never been cleared up.

According to one story, the bones were left in a trunk on Corbett's farm in England, where they had been forwarded by the committee. After Corbett's death, when an auction was held of his effects, the trunk was removed from his other possessions, and, after passing through numerous hands, was returned to the keeping of a member of the republican committee who was to hold it pending a public funeral, which never took place. The remains were thought by some to have been taken to France, while others believed them to lie in an unmarked grave somewhere in England.

POSERS PUT TO JAP EDITORS

Readers in the Land of the Rising Sun Ask an Astonishing Variety of Questions.

Japanese newspapers are called upon to answer a variety of questions that might well stump a lawyer. The Yamato came up against the following recently:

"Last month I married a certain man, but he has now divorced me. His unreasonable excuse is that my eyebrows are a pale color and that I must therefore be a leper. Can I sue him for the damage he is causing to my reputation? A Subscriber." The answer was: "Yes, you can sue him for breaking off the marriage, as he cannot use a pale-colored eyebrow as a cause for divorce."

More of a poser was submitted to the wisdom of the Yomiuri in the following: "I am a woman of twenty years. I was born with a round face and my friends make fun of it. Please tell me some way that I can change the shape of my face, for persecution to which I am subjected is more than I can bear. A Subscriber."

The editor deserves credit both for the truth and sympathy of his answer: "I am very sorry, but I do not know of anybody who can change the shape of your face. However, be encouraged, full-faced lady, as you are the personification of the health of humanity."

His Wife.
"I am used to her," Manuel said forlornly, "and I do not like to hurt the poor, foolish heart of her by going against her foolish notions; and besides I am a little afraid of her because she is always able to make me uncomfortable. And above all, of course, the hero of a famous love affair such as ours has become, with those d-d poets everywhere making rhymes about my fidelity and devotion, has to preserve appearances. So I get through each day, somehow, by never listening very attentively to the interminable things she tells me about. But I often wonder, as I am sure all husbands wonder, why heaven ever made a creature so tedious and so unreasonably dull of wit and so opinionated. And when I think that for the rest of time this creature is to be my companion, I usually go out and kill somebody. Then I come back, because she knows the way I like my toast."—From "Figures of Earth" by James Branch Cabell.

Turkish Proverbs.
"To kill two birds with one stone," is Turkish "Cleaning the candlestick to butter the rice." "If the thief is strong enough he will arrest the householder" is the Turkish way of implying that a culprit may be clever enough to incriminate his victim. "Whom the gods wish to destroy they first deprive of reason" has its parallel in the Turkish proverb, "The end of an overexcited dog is the mange."

Lofty Island Mountains.
The volcano Mauna Loa on the island of Hawaii and the neighboring cone, Mauna Kea, both nearly 14,000 feet high, are among the highest island mountains in the world.

True Greatness.
To be popular at home is a great achievement. The man who is loved by the cat, by the dog, by his neighbors' children and by his own wife is a great man, even if he has never been mentioned outside of the circle of those who love him.

First American Mint.
A watchmaker, Henry Voight, assistant to John Fitch in the manufacture of machinery for the first steamboat, was the first chief coiner of the United States.

First Iron Steamboat.
Who remembers the name of Aaron Manby?

It is one hundred years since the first iron steamboat left the dockyards of Tipton, in England, and, after being tested on the Thames, was employed in a direct service between London and Paris. A return was made to the house of commons showing the time consumed by steamers as compared with sailing vessels on some 30 coasting routes; the average speed given for steamers in the best of these was from eight to nine knots, while the average time taken varied from one-half to one-sixth (or even less) of the time taken by sailing vessels.

After the first sea voyage the Aaron Manby was employed solely on the Seine, where it navigated as late as 1846.

The Course He Took.
The prison visitor sighed: "How sad! How sad that you are in here, you, who went through three colleges. What course did you take?" "Me?" said the convict. "I went in over the second-story window sills an' out th' kitchen door; but I only got $37 in th' three of 'em."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

That New Birthday Watch

Titanic at Bottom of Ocean.
The Titanic has never been raised and it is assumed that the giant steamer is resting quietly at the bottom of the Atlantic ocean. The fact that sounding leads and dredging nets sink to the bottom of the ocean even at depths of six miles tends to prove that any weight heavier than water will sink to the bottom in the deepest ocean.
