All Must Register.
The new election law now in force in Illinois requires that all voters must register every two years.

Heretofore it was necessary to register only in presidential years.

Now, everybody who expects to cast his ballot at the November election, must register.

There is only two days on which the voter can register.

Every voter should bear this in mind.

It will not do for voters to think that the registration of 1892 will be sufficient this year.

The law requires that voters register now and hereafter before every congressional election.

This rule applies to all. There are no exceptions.

Every legal voter must register in October.

The thousands who have witnessed his performances declare him to be the most daring as he has certainly been the most successful aeronaut alive, in a word you never saw the greatest of them until you have seen him. No failure. The balloon will actually start skyward promptly at 2:30 p. m. Saturday, Oct. 6th. There will also be bicycle and horse races.

HILL IS CHOSEN.

New York Democrats in Convention Name Him for Governor.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Sept. 28.—At 1:50 o'clock Chairman D. B. Hill rapped the convention to order. After the transaction of some routine business Galen R. Hitt proposed John Boyd Thatcher as nominee for the governorship. Senator Hill ordered the roll called. When Allegheny county was reached Delegate Reynolds arose and amidst intense silence said: "The united delegation from Allegheny county desire to place in nomination for governor their first and only choice, David Bennett Hill."

Lieut. Gov. Sheehan then arose and in a brief speech nominated Daniel L. Lockwood, of Buffalo, for the office of lieutenant governor. The nomination was made by acclamation, amid great applause. James D. Bell, of Brooklyn, named Judge Gaynor for judge of the court of appeals and the convention nominated him by acclamation.

The motion to adjourn was carried, Senator Hill saying: "The convention that is running itself wants to adjourn—I declare it adjourned."

A scene of disorder followed, during which Senator Hill tried to calm the convention. The roll call proceeded.

New York was reached and Senator Guy jumped to his feet and said: "In the name of the democracy, against the wish of our presiding officer, and, if needs be, in defiance of it, I place in nomination here in the name of the democracy of the state of New York the one man who typifies all that democracy typifies. I present the name of the greatest living exponent of democratic principles, Senator David B. Hill."

Clerk de Freest began the calling of the roll amid cries of "Call slowly." As each county was called its leader arose and declared for David B. Hill. When the call was about half completed ex-Assemblyman Hitt, from Albany, withdrew John Boyd Thatcher's name. The roll call was completed and Hill received 333 of the 384 votes. The nomination was made unanimous.

The following is a synopsis of the platform as adopted by the convention:

National issues—Congratulates the democratic administration on the manner in which the business of the country is attended to; upon the repeal of the Sherman law; upon the repeal of the federal election law; that with democratic ascendancy the country returns to simple methods and sound principles.

Tariff—Asserts that the new tariff law will be a wise and excellent substitute for the partisan McKinley law; declares against future amendments of the tariff by revision as a whole, but favors special laws relating to the removal of the duty from raw materials.

Business interests—Congratulates the country upon the revival of business interests, and believes that this revival will continue; asserts the financial and business depression was a necessary accompaniment to tariff revision; inevitable because the McKinley law had proved utterly inadequate and would have caused a bankrupted treasury.

Labor—Declares the interests of labor should be fostered by proper and necessary legislation, and that honest workmen should be protected from competition with convict labor; advocates the amending of the present conspiracy laws so as to more equally protect workmen and the employers.

Equal rights—Declares against class legislation which shall in violation of the constitution prohibit or interfere with the free exercise of any form of religious worship and deprecates any organization which would tend to any such result.

Constitutional convention—Declares the work of the constitutional convention on the whole was partisan. It is intended to aid in perpetuating the republican party in control of the state; declares the apportionment measure a reryminder, discriminating against the cities.

An Open Switch.

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 2.—The Wabash mail and express, due here at 7:30 a. m. Sunday, while running at the rate of 50 miles an hour plunged into an open switch, killing the engineer, F. N. Several of the mail clerks were badly shaken up and somewhat injured, but none of them seriously.

Two Veterans Murdered.

DAYTON, O., Oct. 2.—The dead bodies of Adolphus Burgan and John Barrett, inmates of the soldiers' home, were found at an early hour Sunday morning on the pike that skirts the home grounds and a short distance from the south gate. Both men had been murdered for the small amount of change each possessed. The back part of the skull of each was crushed in, showing that the crime was committed by the same bludgeon and the same person, with robbery as the motive.

One More.
"Hast thou a lover?" asked he,
"O maiden of the Rhine?"
She blushed in sweet confusion,
And softly faltered: "Nein."
He felt rebuffed and knew not
What best to say, and then
A sudden thought came to him:
He pleaded: "Make it ton."

Distress in the Stomach

"I had trouble with my stomach for a long time and could not get anything that would do me any good. Last February I had

Inflammation of the stomach, and was so bad for a week, that even light food would cause

OUR SAINTS.

'Tis not alone from legend and old story,
'Tis not alone from canvas dark with time,
That holy saints, crowned with celestial glory,
Smile down upon us from their height sublime.

Not only from church windows, colored brightly,
Do their blessed shadows fall across our way;
Ah, not alone in niches gleaming whitely,
With folded hands do they stand night and day.

Who is there in this world who has not, hidden
Deep in his heart, a picture clear or faint,
Veiled, sacred, to the outer world forbidden,
O'er which he bends and murmurs low: "My saint?"

A face, perhaps, all written o'er with sorrow,
Whose faded eyes are dim with unshed tears;
And yet they hopefully look toward the morrow
And far beyond it, into brighter spheres.

A face whence all the sunshine of the morning
And brightness of the noon have passed away;
And yet, where clearly, surely, there is dawning
The wondrous radiance of that perfect day.

That perfect day, when crowned with Heaven's brightness,
Without a pain or care or mortal need,
With conqueror's palm, in robes of snowy
whiteness,
Our blessed shall stand, as very saints indeed.

Yes, God be thankful, though the pure saints of story,
And holy martyrs that the artist paints,
Are veiled in radiance and crowned with glory,
There still are halos for these unknown saints.

THE OLD MILL MYSTERY

By Arthur W. Marchmont, B. A.

Author of "Miser Hooley's Secret," "Madeline Power," "By Whose Hand," "Isa," etc., &c.

[Copyright, 1902, by the Author.]

CHAPTER XXII.—CONTINUED.

She resolved to see Savannah without a moment's delay, and for this purpose went to the latter's cottage. She was at the mill, and Mary went and waited where she knew Savannah would pass.

The latter was in an irritable and angry mood.

"You look mighty doleful there, Mary," began Savannah. "One would think you'd been out begging and had had a precious bad day."

"Well, they would be right as to the latter thought," answered the girl. "It has been a bad day for me. I am in grievous trouble, Savannah."

"All about a man, too, who just plays fast and loose with you, eh? Give him up, lass, give him up."

Mary's cheek crimsoned with anger at the sneer, but she kept her temper under control and made no answer.

"Oh, but we can flare up scarlet, to be sure, when anybody gives us a bit of good advice which we don't want to take," said Savannah again, with a forced, boisterous laugh. "Ah, he's a bad 'un, Mary; a regular bad 'un," and she laughed again.

Mary walked on by the other's side without retorting, though her heart burned within her till she almost felt as if she could have struck Savannah.

"It's poor work jesting when one is in sore straits," she said, quietly.

Savannah's reply to this was another laugh.

"Where's the good of fretting and worrying, I should like to know? All the tears in the world can't stop the making of a good hemp rope. Bah, I've no patience with your sickly sentimental weep, weep, weep. Take the world as it goes, say I, and leave it when the time comes; but don't go about fretting and fooling and crying."

When they reached the door of Savannah's cottage she turned and faced her companion.

"Don't come in if you can't look a bit more cheerful. I've no mind tonight to be worried with a lot of crying."

"I want to speak to you," said Mary, seriously; and followed the girl into the cottage. "If you had one whom you loved lying dangerously ill, you would not feel bright and jocular," said Mary.

"Why not?" said the other. "What is it to me if others die? What care I? What would they care if I were dying? Not the rush of a shuttle. Why should I care for them? Do you think the thought of dying frightens me? Pshaw! none but fools are frightened to die—or to see others die either. I'm not. I like to see death." She turned her eyes on the girl as she spoke, and they shone with a hard cruel light. Then she gave a sneering laugh as she added: "But there, what's the use talking like that? You haven't come here to speak about death, I suppose?"

Savannah's manner startled Mary and discomfited her.

"No, no," she answered, somewhat hastily. "I came to speak about Tom and about the cruel things they say of him."

"Well, and what of him?" asked Savannah, smiling grimly as she added: "It's over quick yet to put him and death in the same sentence."

"Don't, Savannah," cried Mary, shrinking from the words as if the other had struck her.

"Ah, I thought that wouldn't suit you," she said, the smile on her handsome face growing less hard. "But what is it?" and she fixed a keen, inquiring look on Mary's face.

"I want you to tell me exactly when and where you left Tom on Friday night," said Mary, thinking it best to go straight to the point.

"Who says I was with him at all? And how come you, of all others, to ask me for information?"

"Tom has told me all that passed," said Mary.

"Oh, Tom has told you all that passed," replied the other, mockingly. "And if Tom has told you, what do you want to come to me for, eh? Don't you think your bonny lover has told you the truth? Is that it? I don't suppose he has, for that matter. All men lie," she added, laughing insultingly.

"Will you tell me what I ask?" said Mary, after a pause in which she had fought down her temper.

"Yes, if you want to spy on him. But you won't draw me into any lies. I wasn't with him at all," said Savannah, steadily, as she looked Mary straight in the eyes.

"What?" exclaimed Mary, excitedly. "Do you dare to deny it?"

"Deny it—deny what?" returned Savannah, hotly and angrily. "I have told you the truth. I am no liar like—like—a man. I say I never saw Tom Roylance on Friday night; and I will swear to that on my oath."

She spoke so solemnly and earnestly that Mary turned cold with despair as she thought of all that the words meant to her lover.

CHAPTER XXIII

GIBSON PRATTLE SURPRISES MARY.

A very little reflection warned Mary that she had made a mistake, perhaps a serious one, in showing so much concern at Savannah's statement, and she made a great effort at self-recovery.

"That surprised you, eh?" said Savannah. "Has he been making up some yarn or other about me?"

"If I am surprised," answered Mary, quietly, "it is because those who say they saw you two together should all make such a mistake."

"Who are they?" asked Savannah, hotly. "Who are the liars that are not afraid to slander a girl and try to take her character away? Some of those cowardly strikers, I suppose?"

"No matter who they are, at present," replied Mary; "you will have an opportunity of facing them yet, and denying what they say."

"You are right. It is no matter. They are a pack of liars. I tell you I didn't see Tom Roylance the whole of Friday evening."

"Then you will have to explain a very awkward circumstance," replied Mary; "and just say how a handkerchief which Tom gave you was found in the mill on Friday night."

"Oh! was a handkerchief found in the mill? A handkerchief which Tom gave me? It wouldn't be a very wonderful thing, surely, if I were to drop a handkerchief in the place where I spend all the work hours of my life. I see no awkward circumstance there. But why awkward, because I did not see Tom on that night? I don't understand you."

"Because if you deny you were with him, you will have to account for your time on that night."

"Bah! Mary," said Savannah, with a contemptuous wave of her hand. "You are silly—and blind as well as silly. Tom has given me no handkerchief for me to lose in the mill. He has been fooling you; and having heard what I suppose is part of the case against him, he tries to shield himself behind me. His gift of handkerchief is just as real as his story about being with me—and that is no more than nonsense. Give up, and have done with him, lass—have done with him."

"Silence, Savannah!" cried Mary, excitedly and indignantly. "I wonder you are not ashamed to try and malign a man who can't defend himself. You are not content to say what you know to be untrue, but you must dare to add to your falseness by cowardly insinuation. For shame!"

Savannah laughed loudly at this, and affected to be vastly amused; but she grew angry with sudden change.

"What do you mean? You dare to come here to me, presuming on your pale face and sickly weakness, and beard me and tell me I am false. Look nearer home, my girl. Go and ask that fine jailbird lover of yours for an account of all his silly wanderings and doddering foolery with me. Get him to tell you the truth, instead of the lies he has been spinning out to cover his worse deeds, and then it'll be time to come and talk to me about falseness."

She spoke with fierce and rising vehemence, her own words fanning the flame of her passion.

"It's no lie," answered Mary, quite as hotly, her cheeks flaming and her eyes glowing with the last insinuations of the other. "You know that Tom has told nothing but the truth. You were with him on Friday evening till nearly eleven o'clock. You know it; and now, for some wicked purpose of your own, you are trying to deny it. But those who saw you together will tell the truth."

"No one did see us," answered Savannah, passionately, falling in her reckless temper into the unintentional trap which lay in Mary's words.

"There was not a soul about—"

"There!" cried Mary, "what did I say? There! you admit it. You were together. That shows it."

"I don't admit it; I don't admit anything," said Savannah, blushing furiously in her confusion at having been caught in a contradiction. "I say it's a lie. I say—"

Then her manner changed instantaneously, and in place of the furious passion which had excited and moved her, she grew calm and quiet, save her eyes, which shone ominously as she looked at Mary.

"Go away!" she cried, raising her hand and pointing to the door. "Go away while you are safe. I won't answer for myself if you stop here another minute. Go!"

"I will go. I am content. I have your admission, and that is what I wanted," said Mary, as a parting shot.

"Go," was the reply, spoken in a harsh, repelling, hard voice. "And remember I have made no admission. I was not with that—murderer on Friday night, and that I swear. Now, go."

Mary went out from the interview gloomy enough and full of anger. What she had heard confirmed her opinion of Tom's innocence, but at the same time showed her how great would be the difficulty of proving it. True or false, such evidence as Savannah would give would make it almost impossible for Tom to account for his time on the Friday night, and she quite understood the immense importance of this.

Out of the interview with Savannah came only one thought. She must in some way endeavor to find some evidence to corroborate the truth of Tom's account of his time and to prove the falseness of Savannah's denial. There was but one way to do that. She must find some one who had seen the two together on the Friday evening.

Some days passed, during which Mary made many fruitless inquiries with this object. On the Sunday evening, when she was walking slowly through the village street, thinking over the problem, she met Gibson Prattle.

He came again and spoke to her. "You're looking ill, Mary," he said, and his voice had a ring of sympathy.

"It's not more than I feel," she said. She heard so few sympathetic voices now that his greeting was almost welcome.

"You're worrying," he continued. "I'm sorry. Are things looking any blacker?"

"Why should they look black at all?" said Mary, guardedly.

"Why, indeed?" he echoed. "I know no reason. I know nothing but what people say—about that, at any rate."

"What do they say?" asked the girl.

"Chief thing as I've heard is that Tom was seen getting into the mill that night; but I don't believe it. Stands to reason that if anybody had been near enough to see him getting in in such a way they'd have raised some kind of row at the time. Beside, what would Tom want to get creeping in that way when he'd every right to go in by the mill gates? Gibson had evidently not heard of Tom's dismissal, thought Mary. "That's never been Tom's way, neither. I don't like him, and that's straight; but I'll never deny that he means a thing he owns up to it straight and square, and devil take the consequences."

"What else do they say, Gibson?"

"Oh! some say he was seen to leave the mill; that he was noticed rushing through the village to his cottage; that he was doing all sorts of ridiculous things on the way—you know how people's tongues run at such a time, but there's naught but wind in it all; for I've questioned everybody about the place whose name has been mentioned as having seen anything, and can't find a soul that saw him anywhere or any time the whole blessed evening, except the man who believes he caught him at the mill. According to that it looks as if he'd jumped out of the clouds at that minute and jumped back again as soon as he'd finished."

Mary felt somewhat relieved at this news, despite her previous distrust of him.

"Did anyone see Savannah about that night?" she asked.

"What?" cried the man in a tone that startled the girl. "What makes you ask that?"

"Only curiosity—curiosity as to what she was doing that night."

"No, I don't think anyone saw her. Oh, I think I see your meaning," he exclaimed, as if an idea had occurred suddenly to him. "You think Savannah and Tom were together. Is that it?"

"Yes, I thought so, perhaps," said Mary, rather feebly.

"I suppose it's no use asking you to trust me, is it, Mary?" he asked quickly reading her feeling in the manner of her answer. "You don't think, I suppose, do you, that I should go straight to do a good turn to a man to whom only a week or two back I wanted to do a thundering bad one?"

"Why do you take such an interest in this matter?" asked the girl, looking sharply and perhaps suspiciously into his face.

"Because you saved my life in that plucky way. It's the truth, I swear it is, though I see you don't believe it." He said this a little doggedly. "You don't feel inclined to trust me, I suppose, do you?"

He asked the question in a half-wistful, half-shamefaced manner.

"What is there to trust?" said the girl, indifferently.

"I don't know, of course," he answered. "But there seems to be something about Savannah, for one thing, judging by what you said just now. Would you like me to make an inquiry or two about her? She was away over that week end, I know. Do you want to find out where she went? I dare say I could manage that. I wish you'd let me lend you a hand. I am quite as certain as you can be that Tom has had no hand in it."

This declaration did more than anything else could have done to win the girl over. It was the only confident expression of faith in her lover's innocence that she had heard from anyone.

"Can I trust you, Gibson?" she asked.

"You can, Mary. I'll do my best to help you. I promise you that fair and square."

Mary thought for a moment, and then half-impulsively gave her hand.

"I believe you mean straight by me," she said. "I will trust you. Here's proof of it. Tom says that he was with Savannah that night; and she denies it. That must be proved, or otherwise we may never be able to prove what we believe—that he is innocent. You do believe it, Gibson, don't you?"

"Tisn't so much that I believe it, my lass," he said, slowly and with great emphasis. "I know it. I know he's innocent; and, what's more, I mean to prove it. You know what happened in the barn that night. I was all against the infernal plot that was laid against him. Well, I believe there's another now, quite as devilish and much more cunning. And if you'll trust me, we'll just turn the penny t'other side up, and make it heads to our side. Now tell me the rest about Savannah."

She told him what Tom had said, and he asked a question or two. With that he left her, and Mary was full of perplexity at what he had said.

CHAPTER XXIV

GIBSON PRATTLE SUSPECTED.

The more closely Mary thought over Gibson Prattle's meaning in saying that he knew Tom was innocent, the more puzzled was she.

If he spoke the truth it was clear that there were but two ways in which he could know. Either he was with Tom, or had seen him sufficiently often during that night to know that he could not have gone to the mill, or he knew who had committed the crime.

This began to take hold of her thoughts, and she asked herself whether his knowledge could possibly mean that he himself had had some connection with it. She was very loth to entertain that suspicion of him, as his manner to her, and especially his ready and strong assertion of Tom's innocence, had softened her dislike and lessened her distrust of him. But the problem remained: Why should he take such an interest in the matter? There had never been love lost between him and Tom Roylance. Was it that he wished to turn away from himself all thought of suspicion by showing a great zeal in getting Tom acquitted?

Two days passed without a sign of him. So far as she could tell he was not even in the village; and thus the trust and the hopes which, despite her first judgment, she had placed upon him and his help, waned as the day came round for the adjourned hearing of the charge against Tom.

On the eve of the day Reuben Gorrige came to her at the cottage, and Mary's heart sank within her, knowing that he had come for an answer to his question.

"To-morrow is the hearing, Mary," he said, after he had been in the cottage a few minutes, "and I have been asked to give my evidence."

"Well?" she said, interrogatively.

"What am I to say?" he asked again.

"What do you wish to say?"

"Nay, lass, that rests with you, not with me."

"I do not see how it rests with me," said Mary.

"It cannot be necessary for me to go all over the same ground as last time I was here. I told you then how it was. I have not bothered you since; for I knew how you might be puzzled and worried, and I didn't want to hurry you. But the time has come how when we must decide."

"But I cannot decide yet," said Mary. "I cannot make up my mind. I cannot see that one who is innocent can run any risk of being punished for what he did not do. The law is just."

"Aye, my lass, that's it. The law is just," said Gorrige in a deep, strong voice.

"Then it will not find him guilty of what he did not do," she added. "Oh! dear, I do not know what to say. If he can prove his innocence, you do not want this promise. Why not wait and see?" she pleaded.

"How can we wait and see? Either he did or did not do this. The evidence which I have all points to the fact that he did. If that evidence is kept back, what proof have I of his innocence, supposing the law finds him innocent? None; none. That is the point. Could I trust you to a man whom I feared might be a—might have done what he is said to have done? Could I love you if I did such a thing?"

"But something might yet happen to let him prove his innocence, despite what you think such strong evidence against him."

"Might," echoed the man. "Might! You have had a week to look for this. Have you found a single shred or scrap of evidence that will make that proof?"

"I have his denial. That is enough for me," she answered, confidently.

RIOTING IN RIO.

Internal Disorders of Brazil—Other South American News.

MONTEVIDEO, Oct. 1.—Admiral Da Gama asserts that there has been rioting in Rio de Janeiro lasting five days, accompanied by outrages on Portuguese merchants, instigated directly by President Peixoto, who incited soldiers, dressed as citizens, to make an attack on the pretense that they wanted to break up a meeting of royalist conspirators.

Rio, it is reported, looks like a great military camp, soldiers patrolling the streets, cavalry encamped in public gardens, launches patrolling the harbor front. The number killed is stated to be 323, and 213 wounded have entered the hospitals. Many of the wounded were taken to their homes.

Most of the fighting occurred near the water's edge, and many bodies were cast into the harbor. The damage to the property of Portuguese, British and other foreign residents will amount to $1,500,000.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 1.—Correspondents in Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, telegraph that the revolutionists, actuated by a desire to avenge recent cruelties, are assembling in the mountain regions near the frontier of Uruguay. It is reported that this force numbers 5,000 men, and that a demonstration against the government will soon be made.

It is now known that after Saraiva's death the commander of the government forces cut the ears from his head, and, after packing them in salt, sent them to Gov. Castilho.

PANAMA, Oct. 1.—News has been received from Costa Rica of an attempt to assassinate President Iglesias. During the military review in San Jose an anarchist, Michior Araya, fired five shots at the president. Iglesias escaped on horseback.

Araya was arrested and would have been killed by the police if the crowd had not interfered. His accomplices, Juan B. Jimenez, Francisco Aguirrea, Jose Zeledon, Andre Cerpedes and twenty others were also arrested.

Dynamite was found in the house where Jimenez lived. There were also seized many documents which give evidence of a widespread conspiracy. Aguirrea was formerly a trusted aide-camp on the staff of President Rodriguez.

CARACAS, Oct. 1.—A government force under Mendizabal has been defeated by rebels, with fourteen killed. The movement to organize a rebellion is uniting the malcontents in both Venezuela and Colombia.

THEIR LABORS ENDED.

Summary of Work Done by the New York Constitutional Convention.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 2.—The constitutional convention after adopting the new constitution issued a long manifesto to the people, going over in detail the whole of the constitutional convention. The address summarizes the work as follows:

1. We renew the commendation of the convention in 1897, providing for progress in agriculture by requiring general laws giving the right of drainage across adjoining lands.
2. We seek to separate in the larger cities municipal elections from state and national elections.
3. We have provided further safeguards against abuses in legislative procedure.
4. We have removed the prohibition against the sale of Onondago salt springs, which are a source of annual loss to the state.
5. We have removed from the constitution all mention of the office of coroner so that the legislature may deal freely with that branch of the public service now in such an unsatisfactory condition.
6. We have extended the prohibition against lotteries so as to include all pool selling, book-making and other forms of gambling.
7. We have abolished the statutory provision limiting the right of recovery for injuries causing death to $5,000.
8. We have sought to throw greater safeguards around the elective franchise by prescribing ninety instead of ten days of citizenship before the right can be exercised.
9. We have provided for a new apportionment of senate and assembly districts.
10. We have declared in the constitution for principles of civil service reform.
11. In addition to the provision for the improvement of the state prisons' administration we have prohibited the contract system of convict labor.
12. We have authorized the legislature to provide for the improvement of the canals.
13. We have required the legislature to provide for free public schools, in which all the children of the state may be educated, and we have prohibited absolutely the use of public money in aid of sectarian schools.
14. The revision of the judiciary article is designed to remedy the existing evils arising from the overcrowding of the trial calendars.

THE SEASON ENDS.

Close of the Baseball Year of 1904—Baltimore Wins.

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—The National League games on Sunday brought the baseball year to a close. Contests for the Temple cup remain to be played, it is true, but only the first and second clubs in the race, Baltimore and New York, are concerned in these, and besides they cut no actual figure in the championship; they are merely a series for a trophy. The wind-up of the championship season brought only one important change. That was the unexpected jump of St. Louis into ninth place, displacing Cincinnati at the very last moment.

Schiller Theatre.

An intensely strong modern society play, "The Idler," which made a great success in England that it ran for two entire seasons at the St. James' Theatre, London, is the attraction at the Schiller theatre for the next two weeks. It is a brilliant attraction, of the very highest class presented as it is by the original London Company, headed by Arthur Lewis and Zeffie Tilbury Lewis, under the managerial direction of Mr. Joseph Reynolds, also manager for the ensuing American tour of Mrs. Langtry.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis are deservedly great favorites in Chicago. They are remembered with pleasure for their splendid work in the leading characters of that other famous comedy of high life and fashion, "The Crust of Society" at the Schiller theatre last season.

They bring "The Idler" to the Schiller, commencing next Sunday evening October 7th, sustained by ladies and gentlemen of the original cast which made the piece a great London success, supplemented by several players, who have won well deserved distinction in the leading companies of the U. S.

That charming and accomplished Zeffie Tilbury Lewis finds in the leading role of "The Idler" a most congenial and effective character, one which enables her to display in several powerful situations, her ability as an emotional actress of the first rank.

"Lady Harking" the devoted wife, is a sweet and womanly character, one which arouses and holds throughout a dramatic story of tender human interest, the intelligence and sympathy of her audience.

"The Idler" is by Hadden Chambers and is even superior to that talented author's celebrated dramatic work "Captain Swift."

The costumes of the ladies of the cast in "The Idler" are something superb, and for elegance, rival any of the rich costumes lately made so strong a feature in the fashionable society drama.

Lydia Thompson, so long and so generally a public favorite in London New York and Chicago, plays an eccentric comedy part in "The Idler" and Mr. Walter Howe, a leading Australian actor, sustains a strong character in the cast, which includes the favorite Virginia Buchanan, Amy Gordon, Annie Young, and is a most admirable selected compact and effective comedy company of the highest class.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some of the family has need of it. A tooth ache or headache may be cured by it. touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept on hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor's bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at one and you will never regret it. For sale by F. T. Robinson Druggist.

Cheap Excursion.

On September 11 and 25 and October 9, 1894, the North-Western Line will sell home-seekers' excursion tickets to points in northwestern Iowa, western Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho and Montana at exceedingly low rates for the round trip. These tickets will be good for return passage within twenty days from date of sale and will allow stop-over privileges on going trip in territory to which tickets are sold. Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symptom of true croup is hoarseness. This is followed by a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the cough has developed it will prevent the attack. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by F. T. DR. TALLERDAY'S

FEMALE TONIC

ENCOURAGING WORDS.

I had been in a miserable state of health for a long time and was discouraged, feeling that little or nothing could be done to make myself any better, much less restore my health, but a few bottles of Dr. Tallerdays' Female Tonic did it to the surprise of myself and acquaintances. My little boy was badly debilitated after a fit of sickness, and seemed he would never gain strength—giving him the Tonic his appetite was restored, he became strong and healthy in short time. A gentleman of my acquaintance has been entirely cured of a bad case of dyspepsia by using Dr. Tallerdays' Female Tonic.

At It Again.

DeKalb Review:—We have been called down by several parties for admitting that Sycamore was ahead of DeKalb in the matter of population. The truth is that Sycamore was years ago ahead. The census of 1880 gave DeKalb 1,598; Sycamore, 3,028. The census of 1890 shows an increase DeKalb to 2,579 and a decrease in Sycamore to 2,987. Since 1890 we have added and filled over 400 new houses which at the least calculation would add nearly 2,000 people. The school census verifies the figures. Bradstreet's latest report gives DeKalb 4,000 population and Sycamore 3,500.

The Prohibition Convention.

The DeKalb County Prohibitionists at their convention held at Sycamore last week placed the following ticket in nomination:

For Sheriff, A. C. Senska, Genoa; County Clerk, Francis Kiddle, DeKalb; Treasurer, Charles Hubbard, Hinckly; Superintendent of Schools, Miss Mary J. Macklin, Waterman; County Judge, Roswell Dow, Sycamore; Coroner, John M. Schoemaker, Franklin. The delegates from Genoa were Rev. Geo. French and A. C. Senska, the former being elected secretary of the convention and the latter receiving the nomination for sheriff.

Services will be held next Sunday at the usual hours.

Prayer meeting Thursday night at 7:30.

Choir meeting Saturday night at 7:30 in the church. Let every one be in place promptly.

The Trustees of the new church desire to pay all claims if possible without borrowing any money. Several bills must be met at once, and therefore it will be a great accommodation if all who can, will pay their subscriptions to the pastor this week. Several have already done so. Of course where time is actually needed it will be gladly granted, but it is hoped that most can pay at once.

Rev. Howard reports a grand time at Conference. Galea fairly outdid herself in entertaining, and the weather was so perfect that every meeting was crowded. Congratulations to Genoa for her enterprise and success in church building in the "hard time's year" were heard upon every hand.

Omissions.

The following subscribers to the church fund were omitted from the list published last week:

Milk contains all the essential nutrients of food, says Prof. Atwater in Good Housekeeping, and they are in the proportions needed to supply the needs of the body.

There are upwards of 150 varieties of wheat in cultivation, according to Prof. Woods in Good Housekeeping, but many of them differ from each other only slightly.

Animal food, according to Prof. Atwater in Good Housekeeping, such as meats, fish, eggs and milk, are rather more digestible than most of the vegetable foods.

Many of the Paris markets sell horseflesh as a regular article of food, writes Miss Parloa in Good Housekeeping, but the head of the horse must be exhibited above the booth where it is sold.

The department of agriculture at Washington, according to George K. Holmes in Good Housekeeping, sends out annually flower and vegetable seeds enough to plant almost 90,000 acres of land.

Salmon and tenderloin of beef at seventy-five cents a pound are no more nutritious than halibut or shoulder stake at ten to fifteen cents a pound, according to Prof. Atwater in Good Housekeeping.

The inspection of cattle by the department of agriculture at Washington, according to George K. Holmes in Good Housekeeping, has been estimated as worth $40,000,000 annually to cattle growers of the country.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

The Iniquity of the Fair Princess Salome and Its Lesson.

The World Too Prone to Repeat the Riotous Dissipation that Marked the Banquet of Herod—Innumerable Victims of Frivolity.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage made selection of the following sermon for publication this week. The subject is: "The Quick Feet," being based on the text:

When Herod's birthday was kept, the daughter of Herodias danced before them, and pleased Herod.—Matthew xiv., 6.

It is the anniversary of Herod's birthday. The palace is lighted. The highways leading thereto are all ablaze with the pomp of invited guests. Lords, captains, merchant princes, the mighty men of the land, are coming to mingle in the festivities. The table is spread with all the luxuries that royal purveyors can gather. The guests, white-robed and anointed and perfumed, come in and sit at the table. Music! The jests evoke roars of laughter. Riddles are propounded. Repartee is indulged. Toasts are drunk. The brain is befogged. The wit rolls on into uproar and blasphemy. They are not satisfied yet. Turn on more light. Pour out more wine. Music! Sound all the trumpets. Clear the floor for a dance. Bring in Salome, the beautiful and accomplished princess. The door opens, and in bounds the dancer. The lords are enchanted. Stand back and make room for the gyrations. These men never saw such "poetry of motion." Their souls whirl in the reel and bounds with the bounding feet. Herod forgets crown and throne and everything but the fascinations of Salome. All the magnificence of his realm is as nothing now compared with the splendor that whirls on tiptoe before him. His body sways from side to side, corresponding with the motions of the enchantment. His soul is thrilled with the pulsations of the feet and bewitched with taking postures and attitudes more and more amazing. After awhile he sits in enchanted silence looking at the flashing, leaping, bounding beauty, and as the dance closes and the tinkling cymbals cease to clap and the thunders of applause that shook the palace to abate, the enchanted monarch swears to the princely performer: "Whatsoever thou shalt ask of me I will give it thee, to the half of my kingdom." Now, there was in prison at that time a minister of the Gospel by the name of John the Baptist, and he had been making a great deal of trouble by preaching some very plain and honest sermons. He had denounced the sins of the king and brought down upon him the wrath of the females of the royal household. At the instigation of her mother, Salome takes advantage of the extravagant promise of the king, and says: "Bring me the head of John the Baptist on a dinner plate."

Hark to the sound of feet outside the door and the clatter of swords. The executioners are returning from their awful errand. Open the door. They enter and they present the platter to Salome. What is on this platter? A new glass of wine to continue the uproarious merriment? No. Something red and costlier—the ghastly, bleeding head of John the Baptist, the death glare still in the eye, the locks dabbled with the gore, the features still distressed with the last agony. This woman, who had whirled so gracefully in the dance, bends over the awful burden without a shudder. She gloats over the blood, and with as much indifference as a waiting maid might take a tray of empty glassware out of the room after an entertainment, Salome carries the severed head of John the Baptist, while all the banqueters shout with laughter, and think it a good joke that in so easy and quick a way they have got rid of an earnest and outspoken minister of the Gospel.

Well, there is no harm in a birthday festival. All the kings from Pharaoh's time had celebrated such occasions, and why not Herod? No harm in kindling the lights. No harm in spreading the banquet. No harm in arousing music. But from the riot and wassail that closed the scene of that day every pure nature revolts. I am not at this time to discuss the old question: Is dancing right or wrong? but I am to discuss the question: Does dancing take too much place and occupy too much time in modern society? and in my remarks I hope to carry with me the earnest conviction of all thoughtful persons, and I believe I will.

You will all admit, whatever you think of that style of amusement and exercise, that from many circles it has crowded out all intelligent conversation. You will also admit that it has made the condition of those who do not dance, either because they do not know how, or because they have not the health to endure it, or because, through conscientious scruples, they must decline the exercise, very uncomfortable. You will also admit, all of you, that it has passed in many cases from an amusement to dissipation, and you are easily able to understand the bewilderment of the educated Chinaman who, standing in the brilliant circle where there was dancing going on for four or five hours, and the guests seemed exhausted, turned to the proprietor of the house and said:

"Why don't you allow your servants to do this for you?"

You are also willing to admit whatever be your idea in regard to the amusement I am speaking of, and whatever be your idea of the old-fashioned square dance and of many of the professional romps in which I can see no evil, the round dance is administrative of evil, and ought to be driven out of all respectable circles. I am by natural temperament and religious theory opposed to the position taken by all those who are horrified at playfulness on the part of the young, and who think that all questions are decided—questions of decency and morals—by the position of the feet, while on the other hand I can see nothing but ruin, temporal and eternal, for those who go into the dissipations of social life, dissipations which have despoiled thousands of young men and young women of all that is noble in character and useful in life.

Dancing is the graceful motion of the body, adjusted by art to the sound and measures of musical instrument or of the human voice. All nations have danced. The ancients thought that Castor and Pollux taught the art to the Lacedaemonians. But whoever started it, all climes have adopted it. In ancient times they had the festal dance, the military dance, the mediatorial dance, the bacchanalian dance, and queens and lords swayed to and fro in the gardens, and the rough backwoodsman with this exercise awakened the echo of this forest. There is something in the sound of lively music to evoke the movement of the hand and foot, whether cultured or uncultured. Passing down the street we unconsciously keep step to the sound of the brass band, while the Christian in church with his foot beats time while his soul rises upon some great harmony. While this is so in civilized lands, the red men of the forest have their scalp dances, their green-corn dances, their war dances. In ancient times the exercise was so utterly and completely depraved that the church anathematized it.

The old Christian fathers expressed themselves most vehemently against it. St. Chrysostom says: "The feet were not given for dancing, but to walk modestly, not to leap imprudently like camels." One of the dogmas of the ancient church reads: "A dance is the devil's possession, and he that entereth into a dance entereth into his possession. As many paces as a man makes in dancing, so many paces does he make to hell." Elsewhere the old dogmas declared this: "The woman that singeth in the dance is the princess of the devil, and those that answer are her clerks, and the beholders are his friends, and the music is his bellows, and the fiddlers are the ministers of the devil. For as when hogs are strayed, if the hogherd call one all assemble together, so when the devil calleth one woman to sing in the dance, or to play on some musical instruments, presently all the dancers gather together." This indiscriminate and universal denunciation of the exercise came from the fact that it was utterly and completely depraved.

But we are not to discuss the customs of the olden times, but customs now. We are not to take the evidence of the ancient fathers, but your own conscience, enlightened by the Word of God, is to be the standard. Oh, I bring no harsh criticism upon the young. I would not drive out from their soul the hilarities of life. I do not believe that the inhabitants of ancient Wales, when they stepped to the sound of the rustic harp, went down to ruin. I believe God intended the young people to laugh and romp and play. I do not believe God would have put exuberance in the soul and exuberance in the body if He had not intended they should in some wise exercise it and demonstrate it. If a mother join hands with her children and cross the floor to the sound of music, I see no harm. If a group of friends cross and recross the room to the sound of piano well played, I see no harm. If a company, all of whom are known to host and hostess as reputable, cross and recross the room to the sound of musical instrument, I see no harm. I tried for a long time to see harm in it. I could see no harm in it. I never shall see any harm in that. Our men need to be kept young, young for many years longer than they are kept young. Never since my boyhood days have I had more sympathy with the innocent hilarities of life than I have now. What though we have felt heavy burdens! What though we have had to endure hard knocks! Is that any reason why we should stand in the way of those who, unstung of life's misfortunes, are full of exhilaration and glee? God bless the young! They will have to wait many a long year before they hear me say anything that would depress their ardor or clip their wings or make them believe that life is hard and cold and repulsive. It is not. I tell them, judging from my own experience, that they will be treated a great deal better than they deserve. We have no right to grudge the innocent hilarities of the young.

As we go on in years let us remember that we had our gleeful times; let us be able to say: "We had our good times; let others have their good times." Let us willingly resign our place to those who are coming after us. I will cheerfully give them everything—my house, my books, my position in society, my heritage. After twenty, forty, fifty years we have been drinking out of the cup of life, do not let us begrudge the passing of it that others may take a drink. But while all this is so, we can have no sympathy with sinful indulgences, and I am going to speak of some of them, though I should tread on a long train of some popular vanities.

What are the dissipations of social life to-day, and what are the dissipations of the ball room? In some cities and in some places reaching all the year round, in other places only in the summer time and at the watering places. There are dissipations of social life that are cutting a very wide swath with the sickle of death, and hundreds and thousands are going down under these influences, and my subject in application is as wide as Christendom. The whirlpool of social dissipation is drawing down some of the brightest craft that ever sailed the sea—thousands and tens of thousands of the bodies and souls annually consumed in the conflagration of ribbons.

Social dissipation is the abetter of pride, it is the instigator of jealousy, it is the sacrificial altar of health, it is the defiler of the soul, it is the avenue of lust, and it is the curse of every town on both sides of the sea. Social dissipation. It may be hard to draw the line and say that this is right on one side, and wrong on the other side. It is not necessary that we do that, for God has put a throne in every man's soul, and I appeal to that throne today. When a man does wrong he knows he does wrong, and when he does right he knows he does right, and to that throne which Almighty God lifted in the heart of every man and woman I appeal.

As to the physical ruin wrought by the dissipations of social life there can be no doubt. What may we expect of people who work all day and dance all night? After awhile they will be thrown on society nervous, exhausted imbeciles. These people who indulge in the suppers and the midnight revels and then go home in the cold, unwrapped of limbs, will after awhile be found to have been written down in God's eternal records as suicides, as much suicides as if they had taken their life with a pistol, or a knife, or strychnine.

You know as well as I do that the dissipations of social life are destroying thousands and tens of thousands of people, and it is time that the pulpits lift their voice against them. For I now prophesy the eternal misfortune of all those who enter the rivalry. When did the white, glistening boards of a dissipated ball room ever become the road to Heaven? When was a torch for eternity ever lighted at the chandelier of a dissipated scene? From a table spread after such an excited and desecrated scene, who ever went home to pray?

Do you not realize, have you not noticed, young men and old—have you not noticed that the dissipations of social life are blasting and destroying a vast multitude? With many life is a masquerade ball, and as at such entertainments gentlemen and ladies put on the garb of kings and queens or mountebanks or clowns, and at the close put off the disguise, so a great many pass their whole life in a mask, talking off the mask at death. While the masquerade ball of life goes on, they trip merrily over the floor, gemmed hand and gleaming brow bends to gleaming brow. On with the dance! Flush and rustle and laughter of immeasurable merry-making. But after awhile the languor of death comes on the limbs and blurs the eyesight. Lights lower. Floor hollow with sepulchral echo. Music saddened into a wail. Lights lower. Now the maskers are only seen in the dim light. Now the fragrance of the flowers is like the sickening odor that comes from graveyards that have lain long in the vaults of cemeteries. Lights lower. Mists gather in the room. Glasses shake as though quaked by sullen thunder. Sigh caught in the curtain. Scurf drops from the shoulder of beauty a shroud. Lights lower. Over the slippery boards in dance of death glide jealousies, envies, revenges, lust, despair and death. Stench the lamp-wicks almost extinguished. Torn garlands will not half cover the ulcerated feet. Choking damps. Chilliness. Feet still. Hands close. Voices hushed. Eyes shut. Lights out.

Oh, how many of you have floated far away from God through social dissipations, and it is time you turned. For I remember that there were two vessels on the sea, and in a storm. It was very, very dark, and the two vessels were going straight for each other, and the captains knew it not. But after awhile the man on the lookout saw the approaching ship, and he shouted: "Hard a-larboard!" and from the other vessel the cry went up: "Hard a-larboard!" and they turned just enough to glance by, and passed in safety to their harbors. Some of you are in the storm of temptation and you are driving on and coming toward fearful collisions unless you change your course. Hard a-larboard! Turn ye, turn ye, for "why will ye die, oh, ye house of Israel?"

—Be a help, not a hindrance.—It was said of Lord Eldon that he prevented more good than he ever did. Lazy Christians prevent good. The best way not to hinder good is to do good. Take hold and help.

FLORIDA'S LOSS.

Damage of Over $1,000,000 from Wind and Rain.

Sea Wall No Protection Against Raging Waters—Wharves and Piers Washed Away and Many Houses Flooded.

GREAT DAMAGE DONE.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 29.—Communications with southern Florida is being restored and dispatches are pouring in relating to the damage done by the West Indian cyclone which raged in the state Tuesday and Wednesday. They all tell the same story of houses wrecked and crops destroyed, but no loss of life is reported.

Buildings Wrecked.

At Tampa several large cigar factories were wrecked. The three-story brick factory of Heidenberg & Co. and the factory of C. A. Joyce were demolished, as were also the factories of Yabor & Manarara, Theodore Perez & Co., and O'Halloran. The First Presbyterian church and the palatial hotel, Tampa Bay, were badly damaged. Several smaller structures were also demolished. The loss on buildings at Tampa is estimated at $50,000.

Steamers Suffer.

During the storm at Fernandina the British steamships Boston City and Elinville collided and were badly damaged. The steamer Princess was sunk between Palatka and Picalota. She was valued at $12,000. The steamer Edith was driven ashore. The steamer Debarey was wrecked against the drawbridge and wrecked. The steam yacht Maude was sunk near Crescent City.

St. Augustine Flooded.

Advices were received from St. Augustine which had been cut off since Tuesday. No lives were lost, but several houses were wrecked and the losses will run far into the thousands. Nearly all the windows in the city were blown in and the houses flooded with water. The Ponce de Leon hotel was damaged in this way. The loss on the hotel's furniture is heavy. The waves dashed over the sea wall and made rivers of the streets. Many wharves were blown away.

Orange Growers Lose.

Between Green Cove spring and Palatka, on the St. Johns, twelve wharves have disappeared. Between Jacksonville and St. Augustine not a telegraph pole was left standing. The damage to the orange growers is incalculable. In the large groves the ground is completely covered with green oranges. The loss is fully 20 per cent.

On the East Coast.

The east coast is still cut off from communication below St. Augustine and Palatka. Every effort is being made to hear from Jupiter and Key West, which are supposed to have been in the storm center. The storm was as severe in the interior of the state as on the coast.

THREE BOATS GO DOWN.

The Drowning of Eleven Persons Out of Two of the Crews Results.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Sept. 28.—The schooner Ironton collided with the steamer Ohio on Lake Huron, near Presque Isle, at 1:50 Wednesday morning. Both boats sank to the bottom in a half-hour. The crew of the Ohio were all picked up by the schooner Moonlight, which with the Ironton formed the tow of the steamer C. J. Kershaw, but five of the crew of seven of the Ironton were drowned when their boat sank. The two men who were rescued were picked up by the steamer Charles Hebard, bound up the lakes, and landed here.

HELD UP.

Bandits Rob a Southern Pacific Express Car in Arizona.

PHOENIX, A. T., Oct. 2.—At 12:15 a. m. Monday the east-bound Southern Pacific train was held up 1 1/2 miles east of Maricopa by three men. One of the robbers rode on the blind baggage out of Maricopa, while the other two flagged the train. As it slacked up the fellow aboard passed quickly into the engine cab, and with two revolvers forced Engineer Holiday and Fireman Martin to descend, uncouple the engine and proceed ahead of the train for about three-quarters of a mile. In the meantime one masked robber had entered the express car, while the other stood guard outside. No shots were fired, nor were the passengers alarmed while the robbery was in progress. The engineer and fireman were walked back ahead of robber No. 1 to the express car, where they arrived about the time the other two were ready to depart. All three then mounted horses, which were tied near by, and struck out in a southerly direction toward the Mexican line, which is 50 miles from the track.

The Wells-Fargo messenger reports that they got $150, but there is a current report that the robbers got away with $20,000. Their trail was struck by Sheriff's Dris, of Pinal, and Murphy, of Maricopa, accompanied by Deputies Widemer and Brothero.

Soon they came upon a camp which the robbers had hastily abandoned. There they found three rifles and three horses. Not long after this they overhauled one of the bandits, whom they called upon to throw up his hands. Instead he turned upon the officers and fired, but a charge of buckshot from the sheriff's gun brought him to the ground. The prisoner, whose name is Frank Armour, was brought here, and it is believed he will recover.

BLEW UP THE SAFE.

Great Havoc Created in Iowa Bank by Nitro-Glycerine.

BURLINGTON, Ia., Oct. 2.—A guaranteed burglar-proof safe in the fire-proof vaults of the State bank of Mediapolis, this county, was blown almost to atoms Monday morning by a tremendous charge of nitro-glycerine. The crackmen forced the vault locks without difficulty. The safe contained $5,000 in gold coin, $500 in paper currency, $400 in silver coin and $2,000 in school district bonds payable to bearer. The paper money was torn into little bits and the coin was battered and bent and scattered to the four winds. Nineteen of the bonds have been recovered intact, the rest being destroyed or stolen. Fifteen hundred dollars in the battered coin was recovered. It is presumed the burglars got the rest. The interior of the vault looks as though it had passed through a bombardment. A ton of scrap metal lies upon the floor and is imbedded in the wall and ceiling. Private boxes were riddled by flying pieces of metal and $131,000 worth of mortgage deeds are almost destroyed. The bank estimates its loss at $4,000. At a meeting of the directors it was voted to make this good out of the surplus. Three hours after the discovery of the robbery the bank was transacting regular business. The robbers made their escape on a stolen hand-car, which was abandoned in the ditch 2 miles north of Burlington. The robbed bank is chartered by the state and has a capital of $25,000. It is the impression that local desperadoes under the leadership of some more experienced person had the job in hand. Part of a band of amateur crooks are in jail for store-breaking, and it is believed those at liberty assisted in the safe-cracking.

TWO HUNDRED DROWNED.

Houses Washed Away by Overflowed Rivers—Sugar Crop Damaged.

HAVANA, Oct. 2.—Owing to the excessive rains the rivers Sagua, Yabu, Yabusito and Mayanea have flooded the surrounding country and inundated the towns of Sagua, Cruces, La Jns, Sitiesito and San Domingo. At Sagua the water is from 18 to 45 feet deep, and 3,000 families are homeless and the inhabitants have sought safety on the roofs of two-story buildings which alone are not under water. The loss of life is estimated at 200, while the damage to property will reach $4,000,000. Seventy houses have been destroyed and 200 more are badly damaged. Much furniture and merchandise have been swept away, and many head of cattle have been drowned. Many sugar houses and cane-fields are under water. The sugar crop is seriously damaged. Forty-seven houses have been destroyed at Santa Cruz del Sur, and a pier there was also wrecked. Communications have been interrupted for four days. Subscriptions for the relief of the sufferers by the floods are being organized.

JAPANESE LAND 35,000 MEN.

Army Occupies a Position Between the Yellow River and Tien-Tsin.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The Times publishes a dispatch from Shanghai announcing that it is reported that 35,000 Japanese troops have been landed on the Shan Tung coast between the Yellow river and Tien-Tsin. The Times will also publish a dispatch from Tien-Tsin confirming the Associated Press Shanghai dispatch saying that Li Hung Chang is vigorously supported by the dowager empress.

REVERSED.

Judge Jenkins' Famous Northern Pacific Injunction Overruled.

Justice Harlan Decides That the Courts Cannot Compel a Man to Work—A Part of the Injunction Sustained.

A LEGAL BIGHT TO QUIT.

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—Judge Jenkins' famous strike injunction has been overruled by the United States circuit court of appeals and the cause was remanded with directions to strike out from the restraining order of the court the clause which aroused the country when the order was issued and which resulted in the Boatner investigating committee of congress.

The intervenors, representing the leading labor organizations of the country, asked that two sections of the injunction be eliminated. The court of appeals decided that no court could compel a man or a body of men from quitting individually or in a body the service of an employer. The court said that Judge Jenkins had exceeded his powers when he enjoined the employees of the receivers of the Northern Pacific Railroad company "from quitting the service of said receivers, with or without notice, so as to cripple the property or prevent or hinder the operation of said railroad."

It, however, held that the section should stand in which the men were prohibited "from combining and conspiring to quit, with or without notice, the service of said receivers, with the object and intent of crippling the property in their custody, or embarrassing the operation of said railroad."

The decision was considered by the lawyers who packed the courtroom as one of the most important opinions delivered in the United States in a decade. It defines the status before the law of labor organizations in their conduct of strikes, and affirms the powers of courts of equity to interfere by injunction when there is reason to believe that the law will be violated. It holds that the men may withdraw in a body from the service of an employer, using, however, neither force, threats, persecution nor intimidation toward employees who do not join them, nor must they use any "device" to molest, hinder, alarm, or interfere with others who desire to take their places.

Justice Harlan, of the supreme court, delivered the opinion. Sitting with him were Judges Woods, Bunn, Grosscup and Jenkins. The last named sat with his eyes fixed upon Justice Harlan as the latter read the opinion reviewing the circuit judge's action.

The audience which listened to the reading of the opinion was a most distinguished one. Ex-President Harrison was among those who heard with interest the decision.

The receivers of the road in December last gave notice of a reduction of wages all along the line and when the men threatened to strike Judge Jenkins issued the injunction, on December 19, preventing a strike. Two days later he amended the injunction, making it more stringent. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers joined with the other labor unions to which the men belonged and applied to Judge Jenkins for a modification of the order. Judge Jenkins refused to strike out the clauses enjoining a strike and the labor unions appealed to the higher court.

GERMANY PROTESTS.

Dissatisfaction with the Sugar Schedule of the New Tariff Law.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—An international question involving the United States and Germany has been raised by the sugar schedule of the new tariff. The German government, through its ambassador, Baron von Saurma-Jeltsch, has made a strong protest to the secretary of state against that clause of the act which imposes an additional duty of one-tenth of a cent on sugars imported from those governments which pay an export bounty on the article. It is held by the German government that the feature of the new tariff act is more oppressive in its action against the sugar producers of Germany than any other and violates the spirit of the treaty arrangements between the two governments, particularly in view of the concession by which the embargo against American pork was raised. The ambassador is hopeful that legislation would be adopted at the short session of congress to obviate the discrimination against his country.

BOTH SHOT TO KILL.

One Man Dead and Another Dying as a Result of a Quarrel.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Oct. 2.—A terrible tragedy was enacted late Monday evening near the iron bridge 2 miles south of this city, as a result of which one man, a stranger in this part of the country, is dead, and another, a citizen of Dods township, James Scott by name, is thought to be dying. The stranger, with his wife and children, were movers passing through, and had stopped to camp for the night. Scott aimed they had been in his cornfield gathering corn. Hot words followed, the stranger shooting at Scott, whereupon Scott fired with deadly aim. The coroner will hold an inquest.

CYCLONE IN KANSAS.

Much Damage Is Done to Property in the City of Wichita.

WICHITA, Kan., Oct. 2.—The northern part of the city was swept Monday night by a tornado. Buildings of all kinds were demolished, unroofed, twisted out of shape and removed from their foundations, and it is reported two unknown men were killed. In all, some twenty-five or thirty substantial buildings, besides innumerable barns and outhouses, were demolished or injured in a greater or less degree.

The twister came from the southwest, as they always do, and it first struck the city at Tenth and Tenth streets, where it unroofed and tore out the side of a street car barn. The Missouri Pacific depot at Twelfth and Maine streets, containing Superintendent Webb's office and a large force of clerks and employes, was the next point of attack, and this was entirely unroofed and the interior walls twisted out of place, yet not a man was injured. A few yards off the watchman at a crossing was in his box, which was lifted up and pitched down two rods away without doing the inmate any damage. From here the wind jumped to Lawrence avenue and Twelfth street, picking up a tree here and there and knocking over a few light buildings.

It cut down a long row of magnificent trees without touching the residences, a few yards away, in front of which they stood, and passed within 10 feet of Gov. Lowell's home. Another street car barn was overturned at Fifteenth street and Fifth avenue, and this caught fire, and, together with some cars, was entirely consumed.

Around each of these points at which the tornado dipped residences were overturned and outbuildings were carried away. Buildings were twisted into all kinds of shape and were tossed about in a rough manner and it is a marvel how the occupants escaped. The wires are down in all directions, so no news can be obtained from the country, but it is probable considerable damage was done both southwest and northeast of here. During the storm a boy named Fitzgibbons was killed by lightning.

VICTIMS OF FIRE.

Four Persons Perish in a Burning Wisconsin Home.

RACINE, Wis., Oct. 2.—The farmhouse of B. B. Pierce in the town of Wilmot, Kenosha county, burned Sunday night and four persons perished in the flames. The names of the victims were as follows: William Pierce, aged 25; Thomas Pierce, aged 30; John Pierce, aged 35, and a young woman, aged 18.

One of the sons was the first awakened by the smoke. He roused his parents and they escaped, badly burned about the heads. Upstairs slept two other sons, both adults, and a young woman 18 years old, the daughter of a neighbor. The young man who had aroused his parents ran back to save his brothers and the girl, and all four perished in the flames. The fire probably started from the stove. The wind was high and the ashes of the house were blown away so completely that nothing was left but the charred bodies. The farm of Mr. Pierce is half a mile south and 3 miles west of Wilmot.

The bodies of the four victims were burned beyond recognition. The young woman was a daughter of John Frank. She was a member of the Pierce household, assisting in the housework. Mr. Pierce is one of the oldest and best-known residents of the vicinity. The residence was a comfortable two-story house, but it was of wood and old and dry. It burned very rapidly.

MONTREAL, Can., Oct. 2.—Two little sons of Ephraim Mongrain of Champlain county, aged 3 and 5 years, started a fire in their father's barn Sunday and were burned to death.

TAKE STEPS

In time, if you are a sufferer from that scourge of humanity known as consumption, and you can be cured. There is the evidence of hundreds of living witnesses to the fact that, in all its early stages, consumption is a curable disease. Not every case, but a large percentage of cases, and we believe, fully 93 per cent, are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, even after the disease has progressed so far as to induce repeated bleedings from the lungs, severe lingering cough with copious expectoration (including tubercular matter), great loss of flesh and extreme emaciation and weakness.

Do you doubt that hundreds of such cases reported to us as cured by "Golden Medical Discovery" were genuine cases of that dread and fatal disease? You need not take our word for it. They have, in nearly every instance, been so pronounced by the best and most experienced home physicians, who have no interest whatever in misrepresenting them, and who were often strongly prejudiced and advised against a trial of "Golden Medical Discovery," but who have been forced to confess that it surpasses, in curative power over this fatal malady, all other medicines with which they are acquainted. Nasty cod-liver oil and its filthy "emulsions" and mixtures, had been tried in nearly all these cases and had either utterly failed to benefit, or had only seemed to benefit a little for a short time. Extract of malt, whiskey, and various preparations of the hypophosphites had also been faithfully tried in vain.

The photographs of a large number of those cured of consumption, bronchitis, lingering coughs, asthma, chronic nasal catarrh and kindred maladies, have been skillfully reproduced in a book of 160 pages which will be mailed to you, on receipt of address and six cents in stamps. You can then write to those who have been cured and profit by their experience. Address for Book, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Genoa creamery receives daily twenty-five thousand pounds of milk, the largest amount of any creamery in this county. The creamery at South Riley, owned by James Hutchison, of Genoa, receives ten thousand pounds daily. The Sycamore creamery receives twelve thousand pounds; the South Sycamore factory, four thousand and five hundred pounds; Colvin's Base Line factory, in Mayfield, eight thousand pounds; Gurler's Five Corners factory, in Mayfield, six thousand five hundred pounds; Delana's Cortland factory, ten thousand pounds; Walt's in Cortland township, five thousand pounds; Harvey's factory at Clare, six thousand pounds; and the Esmond creamery receives eleven thousand pounds. This is the average amount received during the past month.

Mrs. Lavina Reid, of Hampshire, was the guest of Mrs. Sarah Russell, of this city, the first of this week.

A big Republican rally will be held at Sycamore, Thursday, Oct. 10th, 1894. In the afternoon, Hon. J. H. Schoemaker, of New Jersey, will make a speech on the tariff question in the Court House park. Hon. A. J. Hopkins will speak in the evening at the Ward Opera House. A parade of marching clubs, headed by the Sycamore band will be held in the evening.

Kohl & Middleton's famous Dime Museums in Chicago—the Clark street and the State Street Globe, the latter located near the corner of Van Buren, will begin their regular fall and winter seasons, newly decorated and elaborately furnished, each house being seated with costly upholstered opera chairs of the most modern style. At the Clark Street Museum for the week beginning October 1st, there will be an exhibition the greatest wonder of the century, Manard's bullet proof coat, which has already set all England and Continental Europe agog and which is destined to revolutionize modern warfare. This coat, or curias though simple in appearance, successfully resists the impact of 45 calibre bullets fired from the deadly Martini-Henry rifle. Either of these weapons will send a bullet through five human bodies at a distance of 1,000 yards. The bullet proof coat will be exhibited by the inventors, Captain Manard and Miss Julie Manard, the lady acting as target for the bullets from these terrible weapons. The Manards propose to give their wonderful discovery to the British Government free of charge. Their exhibition will be given hourly, and it is expected they will be the reigning sensation of the year.
