

SOME DOCTORS AND SOME FEES

Costly Services of Physicians Recorded Here and Abroad

ONE DOCTOR GETS $100,000.00

Greek Government Pays $60,000 to Save King from Effects of Monkey Bite

New York, Oct. 30.—Sixty thousand dollars for a doctor's fee! This is the amount Professor Vidal, the eminent Paris Medical scientist, is reported to have been paid by the Greek Government to go to Athens to treat King Alexander. A payment for a single service, taking only a few days, larger in amount than that earned by the great majority of men in long lives of toil.

But Professor Vidal's fee, large as it appears, is not without precedent. In fact, the records show that it has been exceeded in the medical profession both in America and abroad.

Probably the record for large fees of this class is held by Dr. Walter C. Browning of Philadelphia, who sent to the executors of the estate of Senator C. L. Magee of Pennsylvania a bill for $100,000. Explaining his charges, Dr. Browning said that his ordinary charge for consultation in his office was $20 an hour, and outside the office $40 an hour. These rates, he said, Senator Magee had voluntarily agreed to double.

After the death of Marshall Field, the Chicago merchant prince, his physician, Dr. Frank Billings, filed in the probate court a claim for $25,000 a bill for seven days' service.

For 100 days' attendance upon the late William L. Rainy, a millionaire cork manufacturer of Philadelphia, Dr. Samuel T. Barnes made out a bill amounting to $33,000. This charge of $330 a day cannot be noted among the modest claims of practitioners.

Baltimore, the seat of John Hopkins University, noted for its output of eminent physicians, has contributed largely to the list of big fees for doctors. Professor Howard A. Kelly of John Hopkins Hospital received $21,000 for 21 days' treatment of the wife of a mine owner.

Professor A. McLane Tiffany of the same city was paid $10,000 for performing an operation on a New York patient, and Professor J. W. Chambers received $5,000 for operating on a deputy warden who had been stabbed by a prisoner. A Chicago physician, Dr. C. T. Parks, charged $10,000 for a single operation.

The famous Mayo brothers of Rochester, Minn., long ago reached an income basis of $100,000 a month. The work of course, is not accomplished alone by two surgeons, however great their skill. They have numerous assistants of ability, but they merit no patients to set a price upon the services of their institution. E. H. Harriman had not money enough to induce them to leave their hospital and attend him in New York; and James J. Hill was not permitted to say as to how much he was to be charged.

When America learned that Dr. Adolph Lorenz of Vienna received a fee of $30,000 and traveling expenses for journeying to Chicago to treat Lolita Armour for congenital hip dislocation, there was considerable amazement, and yet this was far from being a record fee for leaders of the medical profession in Europe, especially those having cases in the royal families.

When King Edward VII, then Prince of Wales, was seriously ill years ago Dr. William Jenner pulled him through and for his four weeks' attendance was paid $50,000. The physician who attended the late Emperor Frederick of Germany in his last illness, Dr. S. Morrell Mackenzie, presented a bill for $100,000, which was paid without a murmur.

Professor Zacherine of Moscow got $75,000 for two days' attendance on the late Czar Alexander III of Russia. Dr. Thomas Dimsdale for vaccinating the Empress Catherine of Russia got $60,000 and a pension of $2,500 for life.

THIS IS A REAL COW

Earns $57.83 for its Owner in Month of October

The October Report of the DeKalb County Cow Testing Association shows that 256 cows averaged 727 pounds of milk, 24.60 pounds fat, testing 3.40 per cent.

There were 34 cows produced over 40 pounds fat and 24 others that produced over 1000 pounds of milk. The honor of having the high herd goes to Clarence Mosher, DeKalb, with an average production of 1254 pounds of milk and 45.60 pounds of fat. His feed cost was $1.60, which made a return of $2.14 per 100 pounds of milk above feed.

The honor of having high cow goes to Roberts Holstein Co. with the remarkable record of 1944 pounds of milk 3.50 percent, 68.04 pounds of fat, eight months after calving. This cow was milked 4 times per day getting alfalfa hay, silage and 15 pounds per day of a grain mixture of oats, barley, bran, oil meal and gluten.

Value of her product was $71.78. Feed cost was $13.95, leaving a return above feed of $57.83.

The Association had its meeting October 19 at the Soil Improvement Association office. Mr. John Arison was elected President, Clarence Mosher Sec. and Treas., and Cyrus Woods, Walter Hulmes and W. A. Congdon members of the Board of Directors.

I think that every one that was there was well paid for his time for going and it would be a great thing to have a meeting every month, this winter, at least, as the members of an association ought to get together and know each other. The trouble with too many associations is that no one knows all the members but the Tester and you form your opinion of a man by what the Tester says.

I guess a few at the meeting that I was getting mad. Well what of it, I won't hurt you, and an argument is the best method of learning for you and for me. If you get me mad I may tramp on your toes for a few minutes, but what are you in the Association for? What am I getting my pay for agreeing with you when I think that you are wrong, or is it my place to tell you so? I believe in pure bred cattle and will do my best to help with grades or pure breeds. I think every man of the Extension Department should take an interest in all breeds of cattle and show no favors in his work.

Long Association With Organized Dairymen Ended

The following copy of a letter, and notation attached was received for publication by the Elgin Daily News today:

Elgin, Ill., November 18, 1920
Mr. J. H. Love, President of The Milk Producers' Co-operative Marketing Company, Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Sir—
I herewith hand you my resignation as a director of the Milk Producers' Co-operative Marketing Company to take effect at once. I do not desire to longer occupy a position where I might in any way appear to endorse the present plan of management of the Marketing Company, a continuation of which, in my judgment can lead only to disorganization.

I also herewith give notice that my contract made with the Milk Producers' Co-operative Marketing Company is cancelled to take effect January 1, 1921, as provided in said contract. This notice also applies to my tenant, R. J. Raven of McHenry, Ill. (Signed) C. H. Potter

Large Crowd Attends Concert Thursday Evening

A large number of people attended the dinner, bazaar and entertainment at the opera house last Thursday, given under auspices of St. Catherine's church.

The dinner served was simply discouraging to the man who wanted to eat more and couldn't, because there was plenty there. The bazaar tho not elaborate, netted a tidy sum. The hall was filled during the evening entertainment when a few musical number were rendered and Rev. O'Brien told of his trip to Ireland last summer.

The net proceeds of the day amounted to a little over $300.00

It was a boy, later named Tom and still later a Hun chaser. It will cost a matter of $400,000,000 or thereabouts to run this government of ours next years. A NEW CON GAME

Woman Poses as Member of Order Eastern Star

Belvidere Republican: The woman, who ordered a large quantity of meat at the Bingenheimer meat market here a couple of weeks ago for an "Eastern Star supper" and incidentally tendered a worthless check for which she received something more than $10 in change, is believed to have been the same one who operated the trick on two Beloit business men last week.

At the Line City she was accompanied by a man. The couple were attired in fashionable clothing and took great pains to display their Masonic and Eastern Star emblems. They were assigned to the best suite of rooms at the Hilton hotel and after spending a week there the woman told the landlord she desired to give a birthday party to twenty-five of her O. E. S. friends and arrangements were made for an elaborate spread.

She then visited a Beloit bakery and ordered a large birthday cake, which, she told the proprietor, was to be served at a party to be given the same evening at the Masonic temple. She gave a check for $25 out of which she received back $16 in change. The couple left the hotel in the afternoon.

Neither the hotel landlord or the baker have seen them since and have charged the damages sustained up to experience.

FACTORY CUTS FORCE

Hunt, Helm, Ferris & Co., Harvard's big manufacturing industry, the home of the widely known "Star Line" goods, have, because of a falling off in orders during the past few weeks, been obliged to reduce their plant to a point less than one-half of the normal number. Not much change in industrial conditions is looked for in the immediate future, though officials of the Harvard institution are optimistic enough to believe there will be a change for the better early in the new year.

WE WISH THEM WELL

Belvidere Will at Least Not Deal With Joslyn

Belvidere Republican: An ordinance requiring that all poles and overhead wires used by companies for electric lighting and power, telegraph and railroad service on State St. from Huribut avenue to First street and on Logan avenue from State to Whitney street, excepting interurban, shall be removed by December 1, 1923, and if the service is continued the wires to be put underground in conduits, in such manner as shall be approved by the city of Belvidere, was read for the first time at the city council meeting on Monday evening and lays over under the rules until the next meeting of the council.

That portion of the streets mentioned is established as an underground district. It is also required that the wooden poles used by the interurban shall be replaced by December 1, 1923, with iron or other indestructible poles. It is specified that nothing in the ordinance shall be construed as extending or infringing upon any rights of the interurban companies. All plans for underground installation shall be submitted to the city council and it is required that the conduits shall be laid under the sidewalks.

A penalty for not complying with the requirements of the ordinance is provided. This is in the shape of a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $100 for every day the poles and wires are maintained after the date specified.

BELVIDERE STILL OUT

No Room for Dairymen in the Marketing Company

When it was voted at a recent meeting of the Belvidere Milk Producers' association to join the Marketing company the number of dairies required to become a member, 150, were not signed up, although practically all those in attendance agreed to the proposition. The names of dairymen then secured numbered one hundred and the fifty additional necessary were shortly afterward obtained.

Application was then made to the Marketing company for membership, but the officers were informed that while the Belvidere association might become a member it would be impossible to buy the milk until the market conditions improved, owing to the already large surplus of the product on hand to be marketed. Objections have been made, it is understood, by other dairymen to taking on any more dairies at this time, which would probably result in still further lowering the price of milk.

The situation, therefore, with regard to the Belvidere association remains the same as that since the closing down of the Borden plant, when the milk has been taken care of in various ways. Many of the patrons are taking the milk to Wait's creamery, Herbert and Cherry Valley and some are using separators at the dairies. The program is therefore a waiting one, until the Marketing company feels justified in taking on more milk for distribution and manufacture.

Proposition Noses Out in Sycamore by One Vote

The True Republican says that a very small vote showed that there was not much interest taken in the election of Tuesday held for the purpose of submitting to the voters of Sycamore township the question of issuing $25,000 in bonds to be used for the purpose of purchasing and improving a park. The question was carried by a majority of only one vote. The total vote was only 590, whereas, the total normal vote of the township, men and women, is approximately 2,400. The vote stood: For, 295.—Against, 294.

well ventilated room has been adopted. In a few of the larger cities open air classes have been organized in the schools. The food requirements for undernourished children is receiving more attention than ever before, and now comes the matter of sleep.

The London County Council has issued a leaflet on children's sleep which is presented herewith for information of those who are making a study of this problem.

Medical authorities and others agree that school children need the following amount of sleep:

Age	Hours required.
4 years	12
5 to 7 years	11-12
8 to 11 years	10-11
12 to 14 years	9-10

"2 Children grow mainly while sleeping or resting. Do you want your children to grow up stunted?"

"3 Tired children learn badly, make little progress in school, and often drift to the bottom of the class. Do you want your children to grow up stupid?"

"4 When children go to bed late their sleep is often disturbed by dreams and they do not get complete rest. Do you want your children to sleep badly and become nervous?"

"5 Sufficient sleep draws a child onward and upward in school and in home life. Insufficient sleep drags it backward and downward. Which way do you want your child to go?"

"6 Tiresome children are often only tired children. Will you put the truth of this to the test?"

"7 Time spent out of bed means more wear and tear to children's clothes and boots. Why not save such wear and tear."

"8 A tired mother might get a quiet hour or two if the children were in bed by 6:30 p. m. Why not take advantage of this?"

"9 The fact that a neighbors' child is sent to bed too late is not a good reason for sending your child to bed too late. Two wrongs don't make a right, do they?"

"10 Going to bed late has by now become a bad habit which may become difficult to cure. Will you persevere till you succeed in curing it?"

General Passenger Agent of C. M. & St. P. Hears Complaint

Mayor Jas. Hutchison and C. D. Schoonmaker called at the office of the general passenger agent of the C. M. & St. P. The Genoa men were modest and decidedly reasonable in their request, asking nothing more than an early morning east bound train. It is a fact, well known to everyone, that the so-called midnight train was not a paying proposition and one that Genoa can worry along without, provided people get to Chicago at a reasonable early hour in the morning. The east bound noon train was also a

CAN AMERICAN WOMEN COOK?

Just Read this Story and Learn What the Frenchy Has To Say

Under the heading, "Further Experiences of the French Bride of an American soldier," the following article appeared in the last issue of The American Legion Weekly, written by a French girl:

Knowing that I am not very much of a cook, my friends in France are very anxious to know how I get along, and what sort of meals I am putting on my table.

How am I going to explain to them that American people go crazy over sweet corn, pumpkin pies, wheat potatoes, squash, cranberry sauce and apple sauce with meat!

All these have been such a novelty for me that I had to see people eating them to really believe that it was not poisonous!

"Why, don't you eat corn in your country?" I am asked many a time if I say I did not know that before I came, and if I add the rest they look at me just meaning to say, "What do you eat, then?" Maybe they think French people do not know how to eat!

In fact they never had the idea in France of eating corn. Our is almost all yellow and just good for animals feeding. Pumpkins are used only in soup and purees, and the girls there will certainly find it funny to hear (Continued on last page)

BOY IS DROWNED

A Lesson for Little Boys and Girls Who Disobey

Elgin News: Charles Svava, seven year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Svava of 2 Wing street, was drowned Sunday afternoon not far from his home, when he went sliding on the ice on the Fox river.

The drowning, the first of this year in the Fox river around Elgin, occurred about 4:30 o'clock.

Charles had been playing near the river and his mother told him not to go out on the ice.

"The ice is too thin," said the lad's mother, "So don't play on it."

That was about 4:15 o'clock she noticed that Charles had disappeared. Going to the river bank at the foot of Wing street, near where their home is situated, she saw tracks on the bank leading to the ice.

BURNED TO DEATH

Mrs. Israel A. Stone was burned to death at her home on Carlton street in DeKalb Tuesday morning. Neighbors saw smoke from the house, but not enough to warrant the belief that the house was burning. However, they entered the house and there upon the floor they discovered the body of Mrs. Stone, burned to death. Her hair had been burned to the skull and all her clothing had been burned off.

The cause may perhaps never be known, because no person was in the house at the time of the accident. Her husband is a well driller in the country and up to nine o'clock this morning he had not been found.

THE CUTTER.

Synopsis.—Writing long after the events described, Jack Calder, Scot farmer of West Inch, tells how, in his childhood, the fear of invasion by Napoleon, at that time complete master of Europe, had gripped the British nation. Following a false alarm that the French had landed, Jim Horscroft, the doctor's son, a youth of fifteen, quarrels with his father over joining the army, and from that incident a lifelong friendship begins between the boys. They go to school together at Berwick, where Jim is cock boy from the first. After two years Jim goes to Edinburgh to study medicine. Jack stays five years more at school, becoming cock boy in his turn. When Jack is eighteen Cousin Edie of Eyemouth comes to live at West Inch. Jack falls in love at first sight with his handsome, romantic, selfish and autocratic cousin of seventeen. They watch from the cliffs the victory of an English merchantman over two French privateers. Reproached by Edie for staying at home, Jack starts to enlist. Edie tells him to stay. Jack says he will stay and marry her. She acquiesces. Jim comes home. Jack sees Jim kissing Edie. Jack and Jim compare notes and force Edie to choose between them. She chooses Jim. Jack gives up Edie to Jim. A half-dead shipwrecked foreigner drifts ashore at West Inch. He says he is Bonaventure de Lapp, a soldier of fortune. He goes to live with the Calderes. A man of mystery and evidently of high position, he wins all hearts. Jim goes back to his studies in Edinburgh.

"And if he has passed," said I, "why then, of course, he will put up his plate, and have his own house, and we shall be losing our Edie." I tried to make a jest of it, and to speak lightly, but the words still stuck in my throat.

"Poor old Jim!" said she again, and there were tears in her eyes as she said it. "And poor old Jack!" she added, slipping her hand into mine as we walked. "You cared for me a little bit once also, didn't you, Jack? Oh! is not that a sweet little ship out yonder?"

It was a dainty cutter of about 30 tons, very swift, by the rake of her masts and the lines of her bow. She may have been rather less than a quarter of a mile from the shore—so near that I could see a tall man with a peaked cap, who stood at the quarter with a telescope to his eye, sweeping it backwards and forwards along the coast.

"What can they want here?" asked Edie.

"They are rich English from London," said I, for that was how we explained everything that was above our comprehension in the Border counties. We stood for the best part of an hour watching the bonny craft, and then, as the gun was lying low on a cloud bank and there was a nip in the evening air, we turned back to West Inch.

As you come to the farm house from the front you pass up a garden, with little enclaves in it, which leads out by a wicket gate to the road. On the right of this gate, on the garden side, was a bit of a rockery, which was said to have been made by my father's mother many years before. Well, as we came in through the gate, my eyes fell upon this stone heap, and there was a letter stuck in a left stick upon the top of it. I took a step forward to see what it was, but Edie sprang in front of me, and plucking off, she thrust it into her pocket.

"That's for me," said she, laughing. But I stood looking at her, with a face which drove the laugh from her lips.

"Who is it from, Edie?" I asked. She pouted, but made no answer.

"Who is it from, woman?" I cried. "Is it possible that you have been as false to Jim as you were to me?"

"How rude you are, Jack!" she cried. "I do wish that you would mind your own business."

"There is only one person that it could be from," I cried. "It is from this man De Lapp."

"And suppose that you are right, Jack?"

The coolness of the woman amazed and enraged me. "You confess it!" I cried. "Have you, then, no shame left?"

"Why should I not receive letters from this gentleman?"

"Because it is infamous!"

"And why?"

"Because he is a stranger."

"On the contrary," said she, "he is my husband."

CHAPTER IX.

The Doings at West Inch.

I can remember that moment so well. I have heard from others that a great sudden blow had dulled their senses. It was not so with me. On the contrary, I saw and heard and thought more clearly than I had ever done before. And the look upon my face must have been strange, for Cousin Edie screamed, and leaving me she ran off to the house. I followed her, and tapped at the window of her room, for I could see that she was there.

"Go away, Jack, go away!" she cried. "You are going to scold me. I won't be scolded! I won't open the window! Go away!"

But I continued to tap. "I must have a word with you," I cried.

"What is it, then?" she asked, raising the sash about three inches. "The moment you begin to scold I shall close it."

"Are you really married, Edie?"

"Yes, I am married."

"Who married you?"

"Father Brennan, at the Roman Catholic chapel at Berwick."

"And you a Presbyterian!"

"He wished it to be in a Catholic church."

"When was it?"

"On Wednesday week."

I remembered, then, that on that day she had driven over to Berwick, while De Lapp had been away on a long walk, as he said, among the hills.

"What about Jim?" I asked.

"Oh! Jim will forgive me."

"You will break his heart and ruin his life."

"No, no; he will forgive me."

"He will murder De Lapp. Oh, Edie! how could you bring such disgrace and misery upon us?"

"Ah, now you are scolding!" she cried, and down came the window.

I waited some little time and tapped, for I had much still to ask her; but she would return no answer, and I thought that I could hear her sobbing. At last I gave it up, and was about to go into the house, for it was nearly dark now, when I heard the click of the garden gate. It was De Lapp himself.

But as he came up the path he seemed to be either mad or drunk. He danced as he walked, crunched his fingers in the air, and his eyes blazed like the will-o'-the-wisps. "Voultigeurs!" he shouted—"voultigeurs de la garde!"—just as he had done when he was off his head, and then suddenly "En avant! en avant!" and up he came, waving his walking-cane over his head. He stopped short when he saw me looking at him, and I dare say he felt a bit ashamed of himself.

"Halloo, Jack!" he cried. "I didn't thought anybody was there. I am in what you call the high spirits tonight."

"So it seems!" said I, in my blunt fashion. "You may not feel so merry when my friend, Jim Horscroft, comes back tomorrow."

"Ta, ta, ta!" cried De Lapp. "I see that you know of our marriage. Edie has told you. Jim may do what he likes."

"You have given us a nice return for having taken you in."

"My good fellow," said he, "I have, as you say, given you a very nice return. I have taken Edie from a life which is unworthy of her, and I have connected you by marriage with a noble family. However, I have some letters which I must write tonight, and the rest we can talk over tomorrow when your friend Jim is here to help us." He stepped toward the door.

"And this was whom you were awaiting at the peel-tower!" I cried, seeing light suddenly.

"Why, Jack, you are becoming quite sharp," said he, in a mocking tone, and an instant later I heard the door of his room close and the key turn in the lock. I thought that I should see him no more that night, but a few minutes later he came into the kitchen where I was sitting with the old folk.

"Madame," said he, bowing down with his hand to his heart in his own queer fashion. "I have met with much kindness in your hands, and it shall always be in my heart. You will accept this small souvenir, and you, also, sir, you will take this little gift which I have the honor to make to you." He put two paper packets down upon the table at their elbows, and then, with three more bows to my mother, he walked from the room.

His present was a brooch with a green stone set in the middle and a dozen little shining white ones all round it. We had never seen such things before and did not know how to set a name to them but they told us afterward at Berwick that the big one was an emerald and that the others were diamonds and that they were worth more than all the lambs we had that spring. My dear old mother has been gone now this many a year but that bonny brooch sparkles at the neck of my eldest daughter when she goes out into company, and I never look at it that I do not see the keen eyes, and the long, thin nose, and the cat's whiskers of our lodger at West Inch. As to my father, he had a fine gold watch with a double case, and a proud man was he as he sat with it in the palm of his hand, his ear stooping to hearken to the tick. I do not know which was best pleased, and they would talk of nothing but what De Lapp had given them.

"He's given you something more," said I, at last.

"What then, Jack?"

"A husband for Cousin Edie," said I.

They thought I was daffing when I said that, but when they came to understand that it was the real truth, they were as pleased as if I had told them that she had married the laird. De Lapp was for all we knew, steady and quiet and well-to-do; and as to the secrecy of it, secret marriages were very common in Scotland at that time, when only a few words were needed to make a man and wife, so nobody thought much of that. The old folk were as pleased, then, as if their rent had been lowered but I was still sore at heart, for it seemed to me that my friend had been cruelly dealt with, and I knew well that he was not a man who would easily put up with it.

CHAPTER X.

The Return of the Shadow.

I woke with heavy heart the next morning, for I knew that Jim would be home before long, and that it would be a day of trouble. But how much trouble that day was to bring, or how far it would alter the lives of all of us, was more than I had ever thought in my darkest moments.

I had to get up early that morning, for it was just the first flush of the lambing, and my father and I were out on the moors as soon as it was fairly light. As I came out into the passage a wind struck upon my face, and there was the house-door wide open and the gray light drawing another door upon the inner wall. And when I looked again, there was Edie's room open also, and De Lapp's too, and I saw in a flash what that giving of presents meant upon the evening before. It was a leave-taking, and they were gone.

My heart was bitter against Cousin Edie as I stood looking into her room. To think that for the sake of a new-comer she could leave us all without one kindly word or as much as a handshake. And he, too! I was angry and hurt and sore, and I went out into the open without a word to my father, and climbed up on to the moors to cool my flushed face.

When I got up to Corrieur I caught my last glimpse of Cousin Edie. The little glitter still lay where she had anchored, but a row-boat was pulling out to her from the shore. In the stern I saw a flutter of red, and I knew that it came from her shawl. I watched the boat reach the yacht, and the folk climb on to her deck. Then the anchor came up, the white wings spread once more, and away she dipped right out to sea. I still saw that little red spot on the deck, and De Lapp standing beside her. They could see me also, for I was outlined against the sky, and they both waved their hands for a long time, but gave it up at last when they found that I would give them no answer.

I stood with my arms folded, feeling as glum as ever I did in my life, until their cutter was only a square, flickering patch of white among the mists of the morning. It was breakfast-time, and the porridge upon the table, before I got back, but I had no heart for the food.

"There's a letter here from him," said my father, pointing to a note folded up on the table. "It was in his room. Maybe you would read it to us."

It was addressed, in big letters, to "The Good People of West Inch," and this was the note which lies before me, all stained and faded, as I write:

My Friends: I didn't thought to have left you so suddenly, but the matter was in other hands than mine. Duty and honor have called me back to my old comrades. This you will doubtless understand before many days are passed. I take you Edie with me as my wife, and it may be that in some more peaceful time you will see us again at West Inch. Meanwhile accept the assurance of my affection, and believe me that I shall never forget the quiet months which I spent with you at the time when my life would have been worth a week at the utmost had I been taken by the Alles. But the reason of this you may also learn some day.

BONAVENTURE DE LISSAC, Colonel des Voltigeurs de la Garde, et aide-de-camp de S. M. l'Empereur Napoleon.

I whistled when I came to these words, written under his name; for though I had long made up my mind that our lodger could be none other than one of those wonderful soldiers of whom we had heard so much, who had forced their way into every capital of Europe, save only our own, still I had little thought that our roof covered Napoleon's own aide-de-camp and a colonel of his Guard.

The Great Shadow returns.

Excelsior.

Don't anchor—put on more sail. The temptation to stop when some point of victory has been gained, to become so satisfied with one achievement that there is little inclination to go farther, is very human, and it is one of the dangers of a success too easily won. The idea that there are no more worlds to conquer is always horn of ignorance and not of greatness.

Battleship Fleet as a Christmas Present

By A. NEELY HALL

(Copyright by A. Neely Hall.)

Make a fleet of toy battleships like the model in Fig. 1. It will not take long, because I have designed a model made of parts that can be cut out and assembled quickly. Having built the fleet, you will have lots of fun. Because the model is mounted on wheels, you can run it upon land as well as sail it upon water.

In Fig. 2 is a drawing of every part of the toy battleship, and in Figs. 3 to 8 you will find the same parts drawn to scale with dimensions marked upon them. If you build several ships, I would suggest that you make all of the parts for one boat, first, and then, using these for patterns, mark out and cut the hulls (A) for all the other boats, then the decks (B), then the masts (C), and so on. The work of cutting and assembling will be simplified if you follow this method. A piece of soft pine, cypress, or other soft wood will be easiest to shape. In marking out the hull, draw a center-line as shown in Fig. 3, and lay off the measurements in either side of it, to get the sides alike. The upper deck (B, Fig. 4) extends three-quarters of the length of the hull, and it is of the same shape as that portion of the hull; therefore it can be marked out with the hull as a pattern. The holes shown along the edge of the deck (Fig. 4) are made to receive the guns of the secondary battery, the holes along the upper face are made to receive the masts, funnels, etc. The position of each part is indicated in Fig. 2.

The masts (C, Fig. 5) can be whittled or dowel-sticks of the given diameter can be used. The fighting-tops (D and E, Fig. 5) are wooden button molds. The larger one (D) must have its hole enlarged so it will slip over the mast, the smaller one (E) rests on top of the mast and is held in place with the nail F (Fig. 2) driven into the mast-top.

Fig. 6 shows a funnel (F). Use a dowel-stick if you can get one, otherwise whittle a stick to the given diameter. Bore out the top of each funnel if you wish.

There are two gun turrets (K, Fig. 2) and the size is shown in Fig. 8. Whittle the guns (L) of the shape and size shown in Fig. 8, and glue their ends in holes made in the sides of the turrets. Drill a small hole through the center of each turret through which to drive nail pivot M (Fig. 2).

The secondary battery guns (N, Fig. 2) are the ends of burnt matches. Fig. 8 shows the length.

Cut the forecastle blocks H and I (Fig. 2) square, of the dimensions given in Fig. 7, nail them together, and fasten to the deck with the peg J (Fig. 2).

The spool wheels (P, Fig. 2) have stick axles (Q) cut to fit snugly in their holes, and the axle ends are supported by screw-eyes R, which are screwed into the hull. Start holes for the screw-eyes with an awl, screw the screw-eyes into the holes, and then drive the axles through the screw-eyes and spools.

The wireless telegraph aerial is suspended between the mast tops (Fig. 2). Use toothpicks for spreaders S, thread for wire strands T and end loops U.

When the toy battleships have been assembled, give them a coat of paint.

DISLIKE SONS TO GROW UP OF SUCH THINGS ARE DREAMS

Few Mothers Welcome the Time When Their Boys Go Out into the Hard World.

Almost every mother keeps her boy in "knee pants" just as long as she can; she hates to see him becoming a man, for she feels that he is getting away from her.

A mother sees only with reluctance the boy pass from the love and care and peace with which she has surrounded him, out into the world of pitiless endeavor in which he must play his part.

The mother's selfish fondness discloses itself in the ludicrous child's garment and the worn-out, home-bred horse with which she sends forth the would-be knight. These are to the modern analytical mind painfully symbolic of the unconscious interference on the part of parents with the proper adult equipment of their children for an independent life.

Their apparent fondness conceals the unconscious wish that the child will find himself un-equipped for the greater world and compelled to turn back to the shelter.

The Imp Shakes a Sassy Tongue

A BOUTONNIERE

By E. M. BANGS.

(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
Madeline threw down her pencil and pushed away her block of paper.
"Truly, girls," she exclaimed, "my brain is a complete fizzle. Seems to me I can't think of another rhyme to save my life!"

Frances and Margaret laughed.
"I imagine ours are in about the same condition," said Frances. "We must have enough. Let's not write any more."

These three friends—who had been called the Blue Triangle, as all had noticeably blue eyes—were to have charge of the flower booth at a bazaar to take place the following week, for the benefit of a local charity. Somebody had conceived the pleasing idea of making a quantity of little boutonnieres, each one to contain a fortune-telling rhyme, either original or a quotation. So it was for the preparing of these that the three girls were racking their brains on this September evening.

Truth to tell, however, Madeline had not been thinking of rhymes for a good five minutes. Instead she had been asking herself over and over again, why it was that Donald Hunter had not called, or even telephoned, for three weeks, when up to that time few days had passed that she had neither seen nor heard from him. Whenever she had met him on the street either he or she had been with someone else, and he had passed on with a most formal lifting of his hat.

"Wait a moment," Margaret broke in on her thoughts a little later. "I've just evolved another rhyme, partly original. Listen:

"Happiness waits that you little expect,

Gold from vessels you thought were wrecked."

"That's fine," Frances commented.

"It might mean most anything."

"Oh, Madeline," Margaret began, after a pause, "what do you think I heard the other day?"

"Madeline shook her head. "No idea."

"Well, I heard that you and Leon Brown were engaged."

"How absurd!"

"Well, you know you have been seen with him rather often lately."

Had she? Yes, and usually when she had come across Donald she had been with Leon.

"Guess that's what makes Don Hunter look so sober of late," suggested Frances.

"Does he?" Madeline assumed an indifference she was far from feeling.

"I haven't seen him lately."

"I like that last rhyme of yours, Margaret," Frances approved. "We can put it with some boutonniere not as pretty as the others, if there is one, by the way of compensation."

On the evening of the opening of the bazaar Madeline put on a pale blue gown of which Donald has once expressed his unqualified approval. Her golden brown hair curled about her face, a faint color was in her cheeks and a sparkle in her eyes, and with Margaret's black hair and "eyes of Irish blue," and Frances' blond beauty, the Blue Triangle found a fitting background in the green of the flower booth. The boutonnieres with the fortune-telling rhymes were arranged in two lots, one for ladies and one for gentlemen.

Among the first to buy a boutonniere was Leon Brown. He stood a moment after making his purchase, and reading his fortune, then finding Madeline too busy to give him much attention, he wandered away, only to return a little later and repeat the process, and when for the third time he was seen approaching their booth, Margaret said in an aside to Frances: "Mr. Brown seems to visit us early and often."

"If Madeline doesn't want him," was the laughing response, "she might hand him over to one of us. He's not half bad."

Meantime Madeline had seen Donald across the room, but it was toward the end of the evening when he paused by the flower booth.

"What is this I hear about some magic button-hole bouquets?" he asked.

"They are wonderful," Madeline assured him. "You want one, of course."

She turned the bouquets a little till a certain pansy was conspicuous.

"Won't you select it for me?" the young man asked.

Madeline seemed to hesitate, as she looked over the flowers.

"I'm afraid most of our prettiest ones have been sold," she said, regretfully. "You should have been here earlier in the evening."

"But as I understand it, it is not their beauty, but the fortune they tell that makes them attractive in this case," he returned.

"Well—pansies for thoughts, you remember." The girl handed him two purple pansies as she spoke.

The young man took them, and a moment later drew out a tiny roll of paper.

"Happiness waits that you little expect,

Gold from vessels you thought were wrecked."

He read the lines and glanced quickly up at Madeline.

The tell-tale color flooded her face, and seeing it, Donald bent eagerly nearer, a new light in his eyes.

"Did you know?" he began. "Did you mean for me to get this?"

The girl's reply was scarcely audible above the hum of voices all about them, but it really didn't matter, for in her eyes he had read his answer.

"Co-operation Between Parents And The School."

Co-operation between home and school is lacking in most communities.

The parents are perhaps interested in the school, but not to the extent that they visit the school and become acquainted with the teachers, and the relation between the pupil and the teacher.

The teachers appreciate having the parents come and talk to them personally about school conditions.

In no community can the very best results be attained in the school without co-operation.

Therefore, parents, we as students of the G. T. H. S. invite you to visit our school and become acquainted with our work.

CLASS NOTES

Orville Bartie

Stiles Henderson of Camp Grant made a visit at the school Monday morning. He seems to think the school still has the "pop," especially in the Commerce and Industry class.

If Harold Nelson had all the questions on paper that he has asked Miss Hillbish in the bookkeeping class, it would take him the rest of the school year to count them.

Miss Hillbish is again teaching the Modern and Medieval History class. We imagine this class together with her music gives her a pretty good day's work.

To see the High School pupils carrying books home under each arm at evenings gives us a sure proof that the end of the second term is here.

Ruth has begun to wonder if Ford sedans and Buick six cars are transported to France, as Commerce and Industry tells about.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE CLASS

Eunice Berkley

The High School now offers for the first time a full course in Domestic Science. Mondays, Thursdays and the last period of Wednesdays are devoted to sewing. Tuesdays and Wednesdays are given up to cooking and the first period on Friday is recitation period. Under Miss Skinner's skillful guidance the classes are all making good headway.

The arrival of three of the latest model Singer sewing machines practically completes the sewing equipment with the exception of an iron and ironing board. The class has been busy making plans for the ironing board and these will later be given to the manual training class to be worked upon. The three new sewing machines having arrived, make a total number of four, not counting our old "Thrashing machine." The old machine will be greatly missed by Rhea because she has her voice pitched with it and will probably have difficulty in toning down her voice to harmonize with the new machines.

For cooking there are six electric hot plates, kettles, frying pans, sauce pans and almost every article that is needed in the kitchen. The hot plates prove very satisfactory, the fuses having been burned out but once since they have been in use.

In the Junior class there are twelve girls. One couple works together having one hot plate and other utensils accordingly.

The first day of cooking the Junior class coddled apples. Mr. Mackenzie was not far away when the apples were done. Mr. Moore did not know whether to risk his life in such an act or not, but Mrs. Snyder knew where to find them after school. All of the teachers have been treated with something cooked in the Domestic Science class. All that the pupils have to do is to give an invitation to a teacher and he or she is soon in the kitchen.

Evidently the pickles were made to appear good to the outsiders as well as the teachers, for Zelma's and Klea's canned pickles mysteriously disappeared. But one doesn't always judge the best things by the appearance. The other jars of fruit including pickled pears, canned peas and canned tomatoes, are placed under lock and key.

Soon every girl in the Domestic Science class will have the opportunity of baking bread. They are working up to this point. By the last of the school year, it is most certain that the girls will have learned to be good cooks. It is time for the members of the school board to begin to prepare banquet speeches.

At the close of the period an inspector is appointed to inspect each desk, hot plate and the table. Rhea sometimes forgets to wash off the table when Myrtle is inspector.

JOKE COLUMN

Edwin A. Lockner

Orville Bartie was asked what breed of chickens he is raising for his school project. He said: "I don't know." He surely must know something about chickens.

Mr. Moore in General Science: "Olive name three things that contain starch." Oliver: "Two cuffs and a collar."

Myrtle in Domestic Science: "What makes it so cold in here?" Miss Skinner: "I don't know, unless it's the frosted light bulbs."

Rhea in Latin: "Did Caesar write the Latin book before or after he died?"

The Caesar class is wishing that the Latin language was not only dead but buried.

Donald Young just loves to take the True or False tests that Mr. Mackenzie gives. He usually makes a good grade. If anyone wants to know why, call on Don.

Griff thinks a fight with a youngster is square because he fought in a ring.

Klea in Commerce and Industry: "Shall we write all we know?" Mr. Moore: "Yes, do!"

The compass of the geometry class is used for manicuring finger nails, cleaning teeth, combing hair, and sometimes for geometrical constructions.

Zelma Storm is in mourning. Her Big Buick Six died the other day. Floyd thinks he is a fish. He tried to weigh himself on his scales.

The Freshies think that tea is used in book form just because it has a lot of leaves.

Gus thinks that peanut vendors are asylum keepers because they handle nuts.

PERSONALS

Ralph Furbrush was absent from school several days last week, and was greatly missed by some in the Freshman class.

Some pupils in the seventh and eighth grade will soon have to go barefoot; they stroll around the room so much. Go easy, shoe leather and flooring both are high.

Where does it come from? I'd like to know. What? Oh! That mysterious squeak.

Perhaps Frank Trautman can't hear. There's evidence of it during the second period in the afternoon.

Earle Russell does not go to Kingston as much as he used to. We wonder why?

Beatrice Whitney must be a Christian scientist. In the summer she wears a coat; in the winter she does not.

Mr. Mackenzie resumed his class this week after attending the conference at the University of Illinois. The sessions Wednesday and Thursday were devoted to the work of the high school.

Some two hundred superintendents were in attendance at the grade conference; most of them staying through for the high school meeting afterward. It was estimated that several thousand high school teachers were enrolled in the various sections.

The main topic of discussion in the superintendent's conference, was the measurement of school success by standardized tests; such as are already familiar to Genoa pupils. Dr. Buckingham, head of the research department of the University, directed the conference which was addressed by measurement experts of leading Western Universities. The University is sponsoring a movement to have tests given this year in every school in Illinois, rural as well as city. Standardized tests give more exact measurement of school progress than any other way possible until now.

The general theme of the high school conference was Curriculum Reconstruction. Speakers advocated the introduction of Algebra into the eighth grade; the teaching of General science in both seventh and eighth grades and revision of the history courses. Dr. Caldwell of Columbia University presented the report advocating that Biology be made a Junior high school work and had the approval of the conference.

A large part of the program was devoted to discussion of the change in curriculum; due to the operation of the compulsory attendance law and the continuation classes for pupils who left school before the law went into effect.

Seventeen different sections, such as English, Science, Agriculture and Domestic art were in session at one time and the University accommodations were heavily taxed. The high school conference closed at noon Saturday but Mr. Mackenzie was fortunate enough to secure a ticket to the Ohio game, through the courtesy of Director Huff and stayed for the match. Illinois with her three stars, Depler, Carney and R. Fletcher, put out by injuries, held Ohio until the last second of play; when Ohio, after the whistle had blown, completed a forward pass for the only winning touchdown. Illinois twice crossed Ohio's goal line but lost the touchdown on technicalities. After the match a thousand Ohio rooters paraded behind their one hundred piece band, directed by cheer leaders perched on Illinois goal posts.

Before the game the Reserve Training Corps put on a parade with four thousand boys in uniform.

Shakespeare and Anne Hathaway.

Is there a question on God's round earth more interesting than the following: "What attracted William Shakespeare to Anne Hathaway?" She was a woman ten years his senior. He married her when he was 18. She lived in a thatched cottage in the hamlet of Shottery (you may see the cottage today). While his imagination was away among the kings and queens and women of rare blossoming, whose beauty ruled cautious men, whose nimble wit overthrew the Shylocks of the middle ages, Shakespeare chose Anne Hathaway. She bore him two sons and a daughter, and in his will he left her his best bed.—Chicago Journal.

Election of officers will take place at a stated meeting of Della Rebeckah Lodge Friday evening, Dec. 3. Mrs. Rob't Cruikshank, delegate to the Rebeckah assembly held in Springfield last week, will report. Refreshments will be served. This is an important meeting and all members are urged to attend.

The bazaar and supper at the Charter Grove church Friday night was a success. Over 200 were served. The program consisted of a short play, written by four members: Mrs. Richard Valentine, Mrs. Dan Emerson, Mrs. Bert Thompson and Mrs. Will Whipple, Jr., and entitled "The Widow and Her Twelve Children." Fifteen young people took part.

IS OLDEST MILITARY BODY

Organization of Knights of Windsor, Still in Existence, Was Founded by King Edward III.

The Military Knights of Windsor is the oldest military body in the world, having been founded by Edward III from the veterans of Crecy and Poitiers, originally having had the prefix "Sir." They are now selected by the king from the old regular officers of the British army.

The Windsor knights are picturesque old gentlemen, their uniforms consisting of a scarlet coat with gold epaulets. Their somewhat expansive waiats are lashed round with a crimson sash and they have a very dandy-looking cross-belt of white leather, on which is a breastplate embossed with the garter arms, the garter sword hanging from the belt. There is a bright crimson stripe on the outside of their trousers. Their hats are the most luxuriant creation of feathers, plumes and cockades.

The duties of these old warriors are not now very exacting. At one time they were bound to attend the chapel of St. George at Windsor twice a day. Their devotional duties were later reduced to their presence at divine service only once a week and on the birthdays of certain members of the royal family. The strength of the corps at the present time is only 18, which consists of 13 knights of the upper foundation and five in the lower.

GOT RID OF MALCONTENTS

Pilgrim Fathers Had a Highly Effective Way of Dealing With the Colony's Undesirables.

Deportation of "undesirables" is not an innovation in this country. The Pilgrim Fathers, confronted with the problem of dealing with malcontents among them, shipped the disgruntled ones overseas. Governor Bradford's story of the Plymouth colony shows how things were done in those days.

According to Bradford's story the "reds" in the Plymouth colony were represented by John Liford and John Oldham, who conspired together, both against the church and the government of the colony, endeavoring to entice others with them. Oldham refused duty when called upon by Captain Standish, whereupon it was determined to place Oldham and Liford on trial, all the members of the colony being present. They were convicted, the court ordering them expelled from the colony, both being deported ultimately.

Oldham came once again to the colony and created a serious breach of the peace, whereupon "they committed him till he was tamer, and then appointed a guard of musketeers which he was to pass through, and everyone was ordered to give him a thump on ye bircb, with ye butt end of his musket and then was conveyed to ye waterside, where a boat was ready to carry him away. Then they bid him goe and mende his maners."

M. E. CHURCH NOTES

Sunday evening subject: "The Meanest Man in Genoa."

A cordial invitation is extended to the people of our town and community to worship with us.

Service at Ney at the home of Mr. George White, 2:30 p. m. The pastor wonder if the people of the splendid, prosperous community of Ney desire a preaching service. The pastor wonders if the folks of the splendid efforts but really feels that there ought to be a better response and more appreciation shown. It is so easy to neglect the means of grace and when we do we really reach for an excuse. We can find plenty except good ones. Most excuses analyzed simply mean "I don't wish to."

DREAMLAND CLOSÉS

The leap year dance given at Dreamland in Burlington last week was the last until further notice. H. C. Rullhusen who conducts the dances stated that as he will be unable to heat the hall sufficiently during the cold weather he will discontinue the dances until warm weather.

To Destroy Red Ants.

Soak a sponge in sweetened water, wring and place where the ants have easy access to it. They will swarm over it and through it. Drop the sponge in boiling water and repeat the operation until the colony becomes alarmed at the loss of its workers and abandons the premises.

ARABS SKILLED IN AVIATION

Their Mechanicians Said to Have Been Pioneers in the Art in the Second Century.

The Asie Arabe has some interesting sidelights on the early history of aviation, so far as it concerns the Arab race. According to this paper, it was at the end of the second century, and the beginning of the third, that the Arab race began to be influenced by the Greeks and Indians. It was in Bagdad that the mathematical and mechanical arts first began to make their appearance. With the coming of these different studies the horizon of the Arabs became enlarged. It was about this period that the grand Caliph Haroun al-Raschid sent his famous flock to Charlemagne, emperor of the Franks.

Amongst the various crafts from which the Arabs drew their culture was, strange as it may seem today, that of aviation. At the head of this nation was the celebrated Arab mechanic Abbas Ben Farnas, the first pioneer of the art which Bleriot, Farman and Guyener have since made famous, unless one should include in such the young Icarus of Greek legend.

Banish Worry and Anxiety.

Many of those who have failed in life could have accomplished great things if they could only have kept themselves in harmony, if they could only have cut out of their lives the friction. The worry and the anxiety frittered away their energy and wasted their life forces.—Orison Sweet Marden, in Chicago Daily News.

Have you been "inspected" lately?

The "Dreamland" dance hall at Burlington closed for the season, owing to lack of heating facilities. Judging from reports—what do they need a heating apparatus for?

Bolshevism is all right in its place and that place seems to be Russia. If the Russians want it, let them have it, but keep their sneaking, damnable agents out of America.

Good drivers get to Chicago in an automobile in about two hours. It takes two hours and thirty-five minutes on the morning trains. Such service is an insult to the community and the officials know it. We are awaiting a change back to the 20th century.

It is about time to stop emigration. American labor will have its troubles without being compelled to compete with the spaghetti eaters of Europe. We know America is supposed to be a haven of refuge for the down-trodden and afflicted, but a wrecked haven is a poor refuge for anyone. Aliens should not be taken in faster than the old melting pot can accommodate them.

The English and French papers did not seem to feel bad when America repudiated the League of nations. On the contrary dispatches were more in the nature of a compliment on our good judgment. And just now the other nations are doubting the "working qualities" of the covenant. The old European jangle, started hundreds of years ago with family quarrels among the kings, queens princes of several nations, with strains of the same blood running in their veins, is still jangling. The fires of hate and jealousy are frequently rekindled over religious matters. The United States wants none of this. When all those nations of Europe become republics, have kicked out the nobility and entirely separated the church of all denominations from the state, then will a League of nations be possible.

THE CAT AND THE MOUSE

The Illinois Public Utilities Commission will continue to exist, even after Len Small enters office. The greatest objection to the commission is in Chicago and that city will not send enough anti-commission legislators to Springfield to repeal the law. There may be a change in the form of public utilities control, but there must be some control. The Thompson argument to the effect that the people by an overwhelming majority registered against the commission is all bunk and Thompson knows it. Not one voter in one hundred down state gave the commission business a thought when they voted the Republican ticket. It was a general victory for Republicanism and Small won despite his affiliation with the city hall gang; despite the fact that he had swallowed the Thompson non-commission plank.

Practically every city and village in northern Illinois is now being served by big corporations. With the commission, there is some chance for redress in case of poor service or hold-up prices. Take away the commission and we will be as helpless as a mouse in the claws of a cat.

WEAR RATTLES ON ANKLES

Girls of Mozambique Don Their Aid in Keeping Time in Their Peculiar Dances.

Consider a country as big as the Atlantic states from Florida to New York, with the capital near the southern boundary, having a population of more than 300,000 inhabitants, of whom only about 1 per cent are white, and you have Mozambique, a Portuguese colony in Africa to the south of what was German East Africa, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society.

Mozambique is one of the oldest of all European possessions, and one of the richest in agricultural possibilities, but is one of the least known countries in the world. There are five towns and a small, up-to-date capital city, with a number of military posts and outposts. There are no deserts, salt sinks, swamps or mountainous wastes. The colony is altogether inhabited by about twenty tribes.

Among the curious customs of the land is the wearing of rattles by the girls on their ankles at dances. Hollow spheres are made of palm leaf or grass and are partially filled with large seeds or pebbles. The noise of these ankle rattles is supposed to assist in keeping time in the dance. Smaller ornaments are frequently worn by the boys.

The popular music used at a batuque or ball is that of the marimba, or huge xylophone, which gives out a blood-freezing death chant during the "expression" dances of both men and women.

PEPPER TREE OF GREAT SIZE

Also Is of Quick Growth and Its Drooping Branches Are Particularly Ornamental.

As the elm or maple tree is to the New England village, so is the pepper tree (Schinus molle) to southern California cities and towns. For beauty of shape and color, for grace and for shade, it is a tree almost unique. Being of quick growth, the pepper tree soon attains a large, luxuriant size and the great drooping branches form cool archways which protect passers-by from the too vigorous rays of the summer sun.

The delicate feather leaves droop and sway like those of the weeping willow. Silvery green, they glisten in the yellow sunlight, and when the panicles or clusters of tiny pale flowers festoon each slender branch, the whole tree is a shimmering, fairy bouquet. Soon the path under the archways is sprinkled with the tiny greenish flowers, and grape-like bunches of green berries hang from the trees.

Later, as if touched by a mysterious fire, a vivid red flames from each branch of berries. The sunshine glances through the green feathered leaves upon the swinging bunches of red fruit, and the trees glow in color. The breezes lift and turn, shake and twist the myriad brilliant berries until soon a gorgeous scarlet mantle is spread for all to tread upon.—Christian Science Monitor.

Laughing in Your Sleeve.

Judging by the fact that we have this expression in French, German and Latin, there must be a lot of surreptitious laughter in the world. But a laugh's a laugh for all that, and it's good for the digestion. It's hard to see how anyone could have a laugh in any of the tight little sleeves that are de rigueur this season. There's hardly room to have an arm in them. But not so in the "hell" sleeve of last summer, which was a diminutive replica of the sleeves worn by the ancients, who, not concerned with changing fashions with the seasons, wore one style long enough to make it famous. With them, when anyone seemed to be screening his face behind the long flowing folds of his sleeve, there was always the suspicion that he was "laughing in his sleeve." And to this day laughing behind anyone's back, whether it be a fan or a hat that screens it, we call laughing in your sleeve.

Inglorious Obstructionists.

Some folks are at their best in spragging the progress of others. They mistake the right to obstruct for evidence of the power to construct. Yet what child does not know the difference? Any fool can stand in the way of progress. And the more obstinate he is the better success will he have. But the fact that he dares oppose himself to the combined judgment of others does not prove him a man of strength. In fact, the chances are against his being in the right. There may be some pleasure in bucking the crowd, but it takes a hero or a fool to do it. All honor to the man who, knowing he is right, dares to face any odds in the exercise of his conviction. The world will hear from such in the buildings they leave as marks to fidelity and faith.—Grit.

Puritans Used No Wedding Ring.

The Puritans of the seventeenth century used no ring at the wedding ceremony, as they considered it "a pagan symbol and superstitious contrivance." All they required was that the man and woman should join hands when stating their purpose to live together in wedlock.

It is partially hardened and camphor gum mixed with it, when it is rolled into sheets and thoroughly dried. To manipulate it it is softened by steam and then hardened by drying.

The Intricate Story of Bags

BAGS, endless in variety and uses, are made of many materials, but vivid and splendid ribbons appear to stimulate the genius of designers in the direction of shopping bags. Millinery fairly revels too in these gorgeous ribbons, that do so much to tone up the brilliant hats of midwinter, but it has come to pass that bags dispose of many more yards of rich, brocaded ribbons than hats find a use for. Some fortunate darlings of the gods can indulge themselves in hats with bags to match, many others content themselves with bags or with a hat made of these gorgeous stuffs. In any case they carry a flavor of genial opulence along with them.

A hat and bag to match make of rich metallic brocaded ribbon holds the center of the stage in the elegant little company shown above. Nearly always brocaded ribbons and plain velvets bear each other company in hats of this kind, but in this instance a plain, heavy satin ribbon is used for the turned-back band across the front. It is fastened at each side with a flat cabochon of narrower satin ribbon (braided into a cord) and five short ends are posed under the cabochons. The companion bag employs an embossed silver mounting, set with mock jewels and is finished with a cabochon like those on the hat. Black and silver brocade, in a bold Japanese pattern, makes a good choice for this set and for the other bag of the same shape, shown in the picture. But there is a world of patterns to choose from.

The third bag is a very odd and handsome combination of both brocaded and plain ribbon. It makes a good beginning with an unusual mounting of silver and follows it with a vivid brocaded ribbon body having plain satin ribbon shirred across its lower corners. The two ribbons go well together, the plain colors emphasizing the vividness and richness of the brocaded pattern.

Changeable taffetas make lovely bags; the new celluloid mountings harmonize with this silk, but there are plenty of bags made without mountings of any kind. They have handles of narrow ribbon usually. Velvet bags ornamented with beads or finished with bead fringes are sometimes suspended on fine steel chains to correspond with the steel and glass beads used in their adornment.

KNOW NOTHING OF DYSPEPSIA
Eskimos Apparently Able to Digest Anything in the Form of Food, Without Cooking It.

There is at least one native race of America that is little troubled with dyspepsia. The Eskimo seems to defy all laws in this relation and to thrive. He eats until he is satisfied, and it takes much to satisfy him, if, indeed, he ever is satisfied. He eats as long as there is a shred of the feast before him. His capacity is limited only by the supply.

The Eskimo, it further appears, can make no mistake in the manner of cooking his food for the very simple reason that he does not cook it. Nor, so far as the blubber or fat of the Arctic is concerned, is he worried about his manner of eating it. Indeed, he may be said not to eat it at all. He cuts it into long strips an inch wide and an inch thick and then lowers the strip down his throat as one might lower a rope into a well. Notwithstanding all this, the Eskimo does not suffer from indigestion. He can make a good meal off the flesh and skin of the walrus, provision so hard and gritty that in cutting up the animal the knife must be continually sharpened.

The teeth of a little Eskimo child will, it is said by those who know, meet in a bit of walrus skin as the teeth of one of our own children would meet in the flesh of an apple, although the hide of the walrus is from half an inch to an inch in thickness and bears considerable resemblance to the hide of an elephant. The child of the Arctic will bite it and digest it and never know what dyspepsia means.

WELL ENDOWED BY NATURE
Mountain Goat Thoroughly Equipped for Life in High Altitudes Amid Snow and Rocks.

"The mountain goat is equally at home on rock, ice, snow or meadow, and it lives in bands of two to twenty," says Dr. William T. Hornaday, writing of "The Rocky Mountain Goat at Home," in Boys' Life. "Its big black hoofs have chisel edges for ice and a center of rubber cushion for slippery rock. In steep climbing the front of the hoof digs in like a garden trowel, and in going down steep places the rear dewclaws make wonderfully effective brakes. The heavy coat of fine and dense white wool is impervious to dry cold, but the wet and cold rains of New York winters quickly put mountain goats down and out. In the East they must be sheltered from all cold rains, or they contract pneumonia and die. Of dry cold they can endure any amount.

"In the matter of food, we must say that the goat is herbivorous, and explain that it feeds on a great variety of mountain plants, according to season. On the summits they find very little real grass, but they find pulsatilla and other queer pasture plants that are literally 'just as good.' In the spring they feed on the wild onions that grow abundantly in their home pastures, which imparts to their flesh a strong onion flavor."

Memory System.
A middle-aged suburbanite overtaken on his Saturday afternoon stroll by a young married friend whom he knew was taking a memory-training course, inquired as to the progress made. "Doing fine!" was the reply. "Fill your pipe from my pouch and I'll tell you while we perambulate." But the last word was hardly uttered when he made a right-about-face and returned at the double on his tracks. In the evening the middle-aged man called to return the pouch. "Thanks," smiled the owner. "You'd wonder why I left you so abruptly. Law of association—worked beautifully. The word 'tobacco,' followed by 'perambulate' reminded me of something." "Important?" "Well—yes. Don't breathe a word to the wife. I'd left the perambulator outside the tobacconist's and the baby was in it!"—Manchester Guardian.

JUST DISAPPEAR, THAT'S ALL
English Newspaper Points Out How Easy It is to Become "Talk of the Town."

Any inhabitant of any English village can make himself the "talk of the town" if he will only go away from it suddenly without leaving any address. There is no person of any consequence too dull, too harmless, or too respectable to become the hero of any imaginary crime or good deed if only he will disappear. In a moment he is a center of romance.

If he came back incognito at the end of the proverbial "nine days," which means of course a much longer time than a week and a half, he would not recognize the highly colored portrait which would be shown him of himself. What did he ever do, he might wonder, to be thought so bad or so good, so strange or so silly? There is no reputation which could stand up unaccountable departure.

Such a vague heading as "Disappearance of a Lady" obviously attracts many readers or we should not see it so often in the public press. Of course, if it can be made a little more definite, and the disappeared person's birthplace, daily work, or social condition can be particularized, the romantic instinct of the multitude is even more certain to be awakened. The notion that someone has not been buried, though every evidence is there to prove that he or she has died, is a recurrent source of squalid romance.—London Times.

TO REVIVE SHOCK SUFFERERS
Application of Artificial Respiration Must Be Kept Up Despite Seemingly Discouragement.

Dr. S. Jellinek, analyzing the effects of severe electric shocks received by contact with the electrified wire fences during the World war, wrote in Elektrotechnik und Maschinenbau that an important factor was the state of preparedness of the victim.

Experience, says the Scientific American, has shown that a shock which was likely to prove fatal if received unexpectedly, was harmless when anticipated. Experiments on animals have confirmed this impression and have been instrumental in showing that physiological effects of shocks administered with direct and indirect current are distinctly different.

It is also remarked that a close resemblance to death after shock should not be accepted too readily as proof. Persons apparently dead have not infrequently recovered when artificial respiration was applied. It is best to give the victim the benefit of the doubt.

Millions for a New Stomach

One of the greatest American millionaires said to his physician, "A million dollars, Doctor, spot cash and no grumbling, for a new stomach," and then the sick man groaned and turned away. All his wealth could not make him happy or contented, for happiness largely depends upon digestion. Without health where does happiness come in? After all the stomach plays a great part in everyday life. Without a healthy stomach and good digestion our blood is thin, watery and poor, our heart action is weak, our liver does not do its duty, and man is miserable and unhappy. Prevent disease by putting the house in order and strengthening the system against the germs of disease.

Dr. Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., years ago understood diseases and their prevention, and he discovered certain roots and herbs which were nature's remedies, and succeeded in putting them up in a form that could be easily procured at the drug store (liquid or tablets). This he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This Discovery gives no false stimulation because it contains no alcohol or any narcotic. It helps digestion and the assimilation of such elements in the food as are required for the blood. It gives to the blood the food elements the tissues require. For over fifty years it has enjoyed the confidence of the American public. Try it now!

ASK LEAGUE FOR ARMENIA ARMY

French and British Envoys' Resolutions Adopted by the Assembly.

COUNT ON U. S. TO HELP

Senator Harding's Resolution Adopted by the Senate Is Cited—Means Appeal to 41 Nations of the League.

Geneva, Nov. 24.—A resolution presented by M. Viviani, inviting the council of the League of Nations to confer with the various powers with a view to constituting a force sufficient to put an end to hostilities in Armenia, which was joined to Lord Robert Cecil's resolution along the same lines, was adopted by the assembly of the league.

Supporting Lord Robert Cecil's demand that the assembly appoint a committee to examine into means for ending the hostilities between the Turkish nationalists and the Armenians, M. Spulekovich of the Serbian delegates recalled the United States at one time had approved the use of the American fleet to succor the Armenians.

It was recalled here in this connection that Senator Harding was the senator who reported the resolution.

(A resolution requesting the president to send marines to Batumi was adopted by the senate May 13 last. It was offered by Senator Harding on behalf of the foreign relations committee.)

A. J. Balfour of Great Britain, speaking on the resolution, said that if the United States had been willing to take the mandate for Armenia, she had the men, money and spirit to make her an ideal mandatory.

The league has been unable to accomplish anything with regard to the Armenian situation, Mr. Balfour admitted, because the condition in Armenia was organized to deal with.

Mr. Balfour said an appeal must be sent to the 41 states of the league for a united effort to save Armenia.

René Viviani of France, following Mr. Balfour, said all were agreed that compassion would no longer suffice for Armenia.

"It is not the fault of France if the league today is disarmed before the situation in Armenia is righted," said M. Viviani.

Virtually the entire assembly applauded this statement. It was noted, however, that the British delegation did not applaud.

"If the conference had listened to France," continued M. Viviani, "we would have had an international staff and an international force to deal with this situation."

M. Viviani presented a resolution inviting the council of the league to consult with the powers with a view to the constitution of a force sufficient to put an end to the hostilities in Armenia.

Dr. Fridtjof Nansen of Norway estimated that 60,000 men would be a force sufficient to deal with the situation. He thought that if the assembly appealed to the whole world, the United States, although it had refused the mandate, would do its share.

Delegate Jonecus of Roumania supported M. Viviani's proposition, and also thought the United States might be counted on for help.

The debate gave the impression of everyone thinking of a resort to intervention and yet not wishing to call it by that name. C. J. Doherty of Canada put it as "an exceptional remedy for an exceptional situation."

At the close of the debate, however, Lord Cecil said he would favor armed intervention or any other practical plan of dealing with the situation.

M. Viviani proposed that a committee select one power that would accept the responsibility of taking up negotiations.

He carried almost the entire assembly with him in his eloquent peroration in which he demanded immediate action.

Mr. Balfour wanted further light on the proposed negotiations. He asked what the French delegation proposed to offer Mustafa Kemal Pasha, the nationalist leader, as it was quite necessary, the British delegate said, to offer the nationalist leader either money or territory. He thought it would be difficult to organize an expedition of 60,000 or 80,000 men.

"Failure to take practical action here on this question," responded M. Viviani, "will be to demonstrate the default of the League of Nations."

BEAUTY MARSHALED FOR CZAR

Russian Monarch Selected Bride From the Prettiest Maidens of Land Over Which He Ruled.

In Russia, in the Sixteenth century, the choice of a bride for the czar was made from all the pretty girls of the country. Ivan, who ruled 1530-1584, being ready for a wife, ordered all the beautiful girls in the country to come to Moscow. Preliminary contests were held in each province, and candidates selected. In the majority of cases the contestants were delighted with the chance to go to Moscow, and still more delighted with hope of becoming ruler of Russia. An immense hall was built and, on the day of the choosing, 1,500 of the most beautiful girls in Russia were ready to contest for Ivan's favor.

Accompanied by an aged courtier, the czar strolled through the hall, all the girls smiling shyly or openly at his highness as he passed them. After a process of elimination was gone through with, Anastasia, daughter of an ancient but poor family, was chosen, and was made empress of 50,000,000 people forthwith.

JOKE ON AMATEUR FARMER

A federal official at Washington has discovered that he has still something to learn touching agriculture.

Now, he purchased a farm as a summer home for his family, and finds special delight in walking about the place, commenting on the condition of the crops and in many ways showing his interest in his possessions.

One evening during the summer he was strolling over the farm. The hired man had cut the grass during the day—a very thin crop—and left it on the ground to dry. The official saw it and, calling his man, said:

"It appears to me that you are very careless. Why haven't you been more particular in raking up this hay? Don't you see that you have left dribblings all around?"

For a moment the hired man stared, wondering whether his boss was quizzing him. Then he replied: "Dribblings? Why, sir, that's the crop!"

A DUCK'S FLIGHT

No Wonder the Wings are Tough on Old Ones

A pintail duck shot at Camrose Alberta, 150 miles northeast of Calgary, bore a band on a leg with the inscription: "Released by the American Museum at New York. Will the finder of No. 35793 please notify us?"

The finder was Carl Jensen of Comrose, who shot the duck on the outskirts of his town. He noticed the band and set the bird aside to be mounted. He is also communicating with the American Museum.

It is estimated that the distance from New York to Camrose in an air line is approximately 2,500 miles. The theory has been that ducks flew almost due north on their spring migration, but the finder of this pintail so far west may lead to a change in this assumption. The pintail is one of the best Alberta ducks, and its summer habitat is from the international boundary north to the arctic circle. It is also found in southern Alberta from the nesting season on. In point of excellence on the table, it ranks next to the mallard and the canvasback.—Canada New Letter.

FUZZY STUFF

Spirits Never Did Function Right in Printing Office

Somebody sent the editor of the Puketown Gazette a few bottles of home brew. The same day he received for publication a wedding announcement and a notice of an auction sale. Here are the results:

"Wm. Smith and Miss Lucy Anderson will be disposed of at public auction at my farm one mile east of a beautiful cluster of roses on her breast and two white calves, before a background of farm implements too numerous to mention in the presence of about seventy guests, including two milk cows, six mules and one hobsled. Rev. Jackson tied the nuptial knot with 200 feet of hay rope and the bridal couple left on a good John Deere gang plow for an extended trip with terms to suit the purchasers. They will be at home to their friends with one good baby buggy after a period of three, six or nine months to responsible parties and about fifty chickens.

HUNTING FATALITY

The first fatality of the hunting season to occur in the vicinity of Crystal Lake cost the life of Howard Wayman, 23-year-old young man of Arlington Heights. Wayman was accidentally shot by his brother-in-law, William Witt, while hunting ducks at Slocum's Lake Sunday. The two men were in a blind, and some ducks rose nearby. Witt picked up his gun and fired just as Wayman got up from his seat in the blind. Wayman received the full charge of buckshot in his head. His death occurred three hours later. The young man was an employe of the Benjamin Electric company.

CHICAGO FARMERS

Several Chicagoans, who own farms near Barrington, have just organized what is to be known as the Barrington Hills Country club, the grounds of which are to be located near that village. A cement road, now completed to within six miles of that village, has attracted a number of Chicagoans to that locality, who are now out to do something for recreation. The drive from Chicago to Barrington can now be made easily in an hour and twenty minutes.

SOME MORE CARP

In one haul, while seining near Frisch's on Fox river, near Cary, 837 carp were pulled in with a big net. In another haul 278 carp were taken, and a third haul brought in 58, making a total of 1,221 or something over 12 tons of carp from the river in one day. No dogfish or red horse were counted in the big catch.

FRENCH GIRL IN AMERICA

that pumpkin here is treated with honor and put in pastries. Watermelon is only known in the south of France near Italy and not very much appreciated. What a difference here! I do not know anybody who don't care for it.

American cooking is in my opinion plain, wholesome, abundant, but to be frank about it I prefer the French one, though I have adopted the American in many ways, being much easier and quicker.

However, it seems that American housewives don't cook vegetables with enough care. For instance, peas and beans come on the market when they are already too old and, of course, not tender enough. We in France buy these two vegetables real young and very fine. I have seen American friends who have a reputation to be good cooks boil peas in a little water for less than an hour, then add milk and flour, butter, a little sugar, salt and pepper, boil again two minutes and that's all!

That's quick! But what a difference with our "petits pois a la Francaise" that all Frenchwomen know how to fix! The same peas, but smaller, will be slowly cooked with sugar, heart of lettuce, flavoring of herbs, young green onions, slice of ham, in very little or no water, for three or four hours. String beans (strictly stringless) deserve, not the same preparation, but the same care.

On the contrary for meat, Americans cook it twice longer than us, and the housewife here will put a little water in her roasting pan, which in my opinion may render the meat tender, but gives it a taste of being boiled and steamed but not roasted. For roasting meat I keep the French way, allowing only fifteen minutes per pound in a greasy pan with a bright fire, basting it often with its natural juice, and serve it a little rare with watercress or lettuce if the season is too dry for the former.

We never have any gravy only what is left in the roasting pan, and nearly never have boiled potatoes in France. Potatoes do not occupy such an important rank over there, and we have many meals without during the week. When we have them it is almost always fried, and we do it in the very best way.

I certainly want to congratulate American women for getting so much trouble in baking pies and cakes. In this case, in France, we are much happier. We have as many pastry stores as bakers, and for little money (before the war of course) we could buy a very fine cake. It is so easy that French women very seldom bake their own pastries. But here French pastries are so very expensive that I had to learn to bake pies and cakes, for my husband's sake, but it took me a little time to like my own baking. We are used to have so fine, dainty and light pastries, and cakes and pies, though good, are nothing of these kinds.

My French friends would not believe me if I told them that I can make a cake with only two eggs or a pie without! They use so many eggs and so much butter in French pastries! And they absolutely ignore shortening and baking powder.

I have been invited in different homes, and the menu was invariably about the same—roast, boiled potatoes (of course), two more vegetables and dessert. Americans believe in solid and plenty; in France we believe in small quantities and gib varieties. For instance, for the same class of people we would serve three or four relishes to start, maybe we would not have three vegetables but instead two kinds of meat, one roasted and the other accommodated with mushrooms or vegetables, or one meat and one fish, then dinner would never end without salad and cheese, and also different qualities of wine.

Cheese in France is very important in a dinner—so is wine. The best wine comes along with the cheese. I often heard it makes wine taste better, but here in America cheese has no reason to appear in a dinner, and would taste flat with water, coffee or tea. Wine in France is the most important part of the dinner; it always chosen with great care, and changes year by year and color many times during a meal according to what you are eating. It sure makes a big difference between French and American dinners!

When I started housekeeping I had a cooking book sent me from Paris, and I thought I was going to cook real French meals, but I soon found out that something was always missing to do just right. They use so often a little wine and mushrooms in their French sauces, and now that I am in a dry country it is impossible to get any of these two!

Everything in France is served in course, even in very plain homes. Even if they have only one meat and one vegetable, they won't be put together on the table, and I have often had a little fun with the American soldiers in France trying to explain to the waitresses in restaurants that they wanted their steaks with potatoes—"comme ca"—putting their hands together above their plate. I want to say, however, that I have forgotten the habit of dinner in course for our everyday meals. I also put everything on the table and sit down with my husband instead of walking to the kitchen all during the meal, but it makes dinners much shorter, too. I have noticed in many homes that housewives often use substitutes instead of pure lard and butter; they are not so very much cheaper and are inferior, surely.

Why don't American cooks broil more often their meat instead of frying it in substitute? Don't a broiled steak taste ten times better than a fried one? The blood does not mix with the grease, but stays in the meat—gives it a better taste and is more healthy—of course, they would have to give up the everlasting boiled potatoes; that would be a good idea to make them come down. We very often eat broiled meat and broiled fish in my country.

Meat is a puzzle yet to me, only the chops look alike. They cut it absolutely different than in France, and I have noticed here only four ways of cooking meat: roasted, fried, boiled and stewed. We French cook it in more varieties; for instance, veal will be roasted, fried, boiled and stewed also, but we accommodate it with peas, potatoes, mushrooms, onions, carrots, white sauce (a la chasseur) what means stewed with ham and onions. Lamb comes also with potatoes, or creamed, with artichokes and peas. Pork has many varieties also.

In France the meat of the lamb is almost white; so is the meat of veal. They call them here milk-fed lamb or veal, and their flesh is almost as read as beef or mutton and their size is almost as big, too. When we buy lamb in my country we have to buy the quarter or the half of the animal for a meal, because it is real milk-fed and therefore small. What they call leg of lamb here is the leg of mutton over there.

I have never seen at the meat market I usually go to any squabs or birds, and I guess Americans are not very strong for game, which is so praisd in France.

Then as a conclusion to my numerous comparisons, why do not American people enjoy more the time of meals? I have many times watched men eating in restaurants, filling up their trays or ordering their dinner absolutely absent-minded, not caring for what they are asking as long as they got something, and then eating in three minutes, their noses buried in their newspapers. That is the only moment they get in touch with the outside world, then get up and go, absolutely unable to tell you what they have been eating five minutes before. No wonder they have so many cases of appendicitis here!

In France time of meals is a moment of rest for everybody. We take our time and talk over our family loves, interests, hopes, misfortunes, etc. It is the intimate meeting of at least an hour where spirit relaxes, giving up business and worry for plain and merry thoughts, enjoying every bit of our meals.

If any American woman read this they will surely think I came to their country just to critic their own way. I do not want them to think so, and I confess at once that I have already adopted the quick American ways in many things, and in time I will like them I am sure. Then also I do not want to forget to tell them they are better than French women in putting up preserves for winter when summer is there. Their fruits, jams, jellies, pickles, tomatoes, chilli sauce are just delicious, and I wish the women of France would get a liking in putting preserves as they do here.

There is also another success on the American side—their ice cream! I wonder how Americans have not already started ice cream businesses in France. I am sure all the French girls would go broke on buying these funny cones.
