The village board last Friday night granted plumbers license to Ohlmacher & Root and to O. Ton, Smith & Moore, of Elgin. Each presented acceptable bonds to the amount of $500.

"Battle Ax" expects to soon lose his job. Not from any fault on his part, but on account of the arrival of a young man at Charley Geithman who will remain and possibly may help his "dad."

Frank Tischer is putting up an outfit for Fred W. Duval that will perhaps make the calves in this vicinity laugh. It is a neat station cal' rack with paint and varnish. Well they may like to ride in a varnished wagon, but if they do it will be the last of them.

The number and size of the new corn cribs that are being built this fall is quite suggestive of a big yield of corn. It might also be construed by Republicans as a sign of prosperity while our Democratic friends might deem it a mighty desire on the part of the farmer to hoard up his products in anticipation of ruinous times ahead.

D. S. Brown is again able to be out on the street. Pretty thin though he says this is on account of a fast of several weeks which he has been undergoing. He tells a story of living on mutton broth and when he discovered that the weakness of it was on account of its being skimmed by his wife his wrath was more than he could stand.

Miss Cebe Burrzell was very agreeably surprised by a goodly number of friends last Friday evening in honor of her birthday. Refreshments were served and a pleasant time is reported by all. On account of the darkness and a slight mishap the outdoor sports were declared off, although no great damage was done further than the destruction of some ferns.

MY HALF SISTER

By ELTON HARRIS

CHAPTER I.

"It is not like going home at all," said Mollie L'Estrange disconsolately, looking round at the open trunks, the wearing apparel spread upon every available chair or bed in the school dormitory. "And I had no idea that I possessed so many things."

"You have been these four years here," said the German governess kindly, "and you spend much money, had child! But they will be pleased to see you home—oh, yes!"

"I don't know who will be pleased, I am sure," returned Mollie, with a sigh, "for there is only my half-sister Kate."

"Ach, himmell! Well, she is no doubt looking forward to your return. She is older than you—wiser?"

"She is ten years old," interrupted the girl, sitting down on the edge of the bed, and regarding the well-meaning Fraulein gloomily. "When I last saw her she was about six, and my stepfather spoilt her shamefully."

"What! With whom will you live then, mine Mollie? With the stepfather?"

"Oh, no; he died twelve months ago. I shall live at Chalfont House, the property of my half-sister, Kate, with her, and her aunt, Madame Dubois."

"Ach, a French lady!"

"No, but she married a Frenchman. She is now a widow with one son, and after my mother's death she went to keep house for her brother, Mr. Barlowe."

"Thy stepfather?"

"I never called him that." And a strange look of scorn and bitterness swept over the girl's pretty, glowing face. "It is wrong to hate any one—but I hated him living, and I find it hard not to hate him dead."

"So, so, the Bible tells us to hate no man," reproved the governess, with a placid shake of her head, as she began to fold up some of her favorite pupil's clothes.

"And I try not to do so; I pray every night to forgive him," burst forth Mollie in a shaking voice, "but he separated me from my mother; he did not make her happy—"

She paused abruptly, conscious how impossible it was to make the solid Fraulein understand that the wrongs that were rankling in her mind had grown with her growth, and become part of her life; and, as a rosy-cheeked German maid entered at the same moment and announced that she had been sent to assist Fraulein L'Estrange to pack, nothing more was said.

For four years Mollie L'Estrange had been left at Frau Seckendorf's school in Hanover, without once returning to England, without any one coming to see her. But she had been very happy, for she had naturally a merry, buoyant disposition, and was the pet and favorite of the school establishment, from the grave, kindly Frau herself downwards.

Then she was liberally supplied with pocket money by her father's trustees, generously paid for in every way, while Frau Seckendorf had carte blanche to do everything for her amusement in the holidays, and the time had gone so fast that Mollie could hardly believe she was nearly nineteen, and that a few days would see her once more in her native land. Ah, that dear native land! How often in her dreams had she seen it as it would be looking now, with the first faint breath of spring rustling through the bare, brown branches, the leaves sprouting in the beagrows, the violets peeping forth from some sheltered nook! Yes, though there was no one now in the house where she was born to welcome her home with affection, it would be something to be in England in the sweet spring time, to gather violets and primroses in the well-remembered woods and fields around Reversion.

The packing was accomplished at last, more by the Fraulein's and Liza's exertions than her own, for the girl was restless and excited, torn by conflicting feelings, sorry to bid farewell to quaint old Hanover, and all those who had been so kind to her since she came there—a pale, motherless child of fourteen—yet anxious to rush into the future, to see what it held in store for her.

So when the trunks were shut and Liza had departed with her arms full of the gifts she had bestowed upon her, Mollie made her way with unusual sedateness to Frau Seckendorf's private apartments. Since the girl's own age had left one by one, and she had outgrown the class rooms, she had been promoted to the use of these salons, and taken out to concerts, theaters, and coffee parties by the good Frau, who was secretly immensely proud of the pretty, well-dressed English heiress confided to her care, and watched over her with a vigilant eye; and Mollie looked round them with a friendly glance, and a sigh at the thought that after tomorrow she should see them no more.

The dusk was falling fast; it was difficult to see the houses across the wide street, and as she stood by the porcelain stove, warming her cold little fingers, her thoughts went back to her childhood days as they had not done for a long time, and scene after scene seemed to rise before her.

Mollie could not remember her father at all, for he had died when she was but a few months old, but her pretty young mother had been her playfellow, and until her sixth year, her constant companion. Then came the days when a tall, dark man was always with her mother, and that dearly loved parent was somehow not the same to her, while the dark man used to bring her sweets, and smile grimly when she put her hands behind her back, and refused to accept them.

Yes, from the very first Mollie had disliked and distrusted Leonard Barlowe, and he had cordially returned the feeling. With her mother's second marriage all her troubles began, and the child would often sob herself to sleep at night, feeling neglected and forlorn, missing the tender voice, the lullaby ever close she could remember.

Afterwards Mollie grew to know that her mother had not forgotten her, but that her stepfather, jealous and morose, resented the affection she bestowed to her own child, and tried and flung by nature. She had not the strength of character to oppose him in any way. Mollie was sent to school soon after the birth of her half-sister, Kate, and though she spent the holidays at home (Chalfont House was never the same place again).

Looking at the past through the softening vista of time, Mollie knew that her woes had not been imaginary.

She would have been fond enough of the little usurper, who seemed to have pushed her out of her place, had she been allowed, for she was neither jealous nor revengeful; but Mr. Barlowe, while spoiling Kate until she was unbearable, resented the least attention shown to Mollie, and the holidays had been misery, school a refuge. She gradually grew to know that her mother was miserable, that she only dare caress her in private, and that she feared her handsome dark husband more than she loved him.

How well she remembered the last time she had any talk with her mother! It was the night before her return to school, and her mother came into her room as she was preparing for bed, and, closing the door, took her into her arms as if she were a baby again, kissed and cried over her in a passionate, heart-broken way, saying that whatever happened to the future, she must never doubt her poor mother's love, that save her dead father, no one was so precious to her, no one; and that her last thought and prayer would be for her own Mollie.

It was not until her death a few months later that Mollie understood what she meant, Chalfont and a good income had been Mrs. Barlowe's private property, and she left them to her husband for his lifetime, and then to her daughter Kate, no mention being made of her elder child, save that, falling then, she would be her heiress.

This had not been her mother's wish—Mollie knew as well as if she had been told—and the fierce anger burned in her heart, not for the loss of the property, but for what Mr. Barlowe had made her mother suffer. Oh, how she hated him as she saw his fine eyes roving with an air of proprietorship round her mother's room! In her childish heart she felt that he had got what he had schemed for, and it mattered little to him that he had ruined her mother's and her life to obtain it.

They lived at open warfare during the months before she was sent to Hanover; and it was an additional blow to find that he had constituted himself her guardian in her mother's place. His motive was not far to seek. Mollie was her father's heiress, and though he could not touch the principal, a handsome allowance was made for the care of Colonel L'Estrange's daughter.

And now he, too, was dead, and she was going back to live at Chalfont House with her little half-sister and Madame Dubois! Were brighter times coming, she wondered, as, in company with the English governess, she once more set foot on her native land, or was Madame Dubois but a repetition of Leonard Barlowe?

It was a bleak March day when the governess put her charge into a first class carriage at one of the great London stations, and reluctantly bade her farewell, after carefully ascertaining that two elderly ladies in the further corner were going the same journey, and Reversion would be reached in little over an hour, where Madame Dubois was sure to be at the station. So she kissed the pet and pride of Frau Seckendorf's school with tearful eyes, and hurried away to catch her own train, while Mollie sank back in the corner of her carriage, sorry to part with her last friend, yet excited at the prospect before her.

For a little while she occupied herself in watching one familiar object after another appear, as the express left the chimneys behind and rushed through the green country. It even amused her to see the great open fires in the waiting rooms once more as they flashed through the stations. Then she suddenly became aware that the two ladies were talking very hard, and she heard her own name.

"You will find Reversion looking much the same, Louise," the elder was saying. "The people alter, but not the place. Why, you have not been here since the year poor Mrs. L'Estrange married Mr. Barlowe, have you?"

"No; how pretty she was! I know no one liked him; you thought him an adventurer. What has he done since her death?"

"Oh, he feathered his nest well—got the whole of her property for himself and his wretched little girl, to the exclusion of the elder child! Every one knew that his poor wife was horribly afraid of him, and he had it all his own way. Well, I must not say more, for he was hurried to his account with all his sins upon his head, and no time to repent him of his wickedness."

"What do you mean?"

"Did you not see it in the papers? It was the talk of Reversion! He was found murdered in his study nearly twelve months ago. Yes, I remember, it was on Easter Sunday."

"Murdered?" echoed the other blankly. "That handsome man? Who did it?"

"It has never been found out."

CHAPTER II.

Murdered! Could this awful word, so full of terrible meaning, apply to her stepfather, who she had last seen standing at the door of Chalfont House, full of life and health, holding the fretful Kate by the hand? Mollie sat up and turned hastily to the two ladies, the color fading from her face.

"My name is L'Estrange," she stammered nervously, looking from one to the other. "I am Mrs. Barlowe's elder daughter. I thought I ought to tell you. I did not know that she had been killed; no one told me. Are you sure?"

Mollie could see the ladies were gazing at her, but she was too eager to learn the truth to mind that, or anything else. Why had she been allowed to come home in ignorance of the tragedy that hung undiscovered over Chalfont House? In the pause before any one spoke she was not conscious of feeling any sorrow for her dead stepfather, nor had these ladies expressed any; but she did feel a thrill of horror at the thought of the crime that had been committed in the house where she was born—her mother's house—and could not repress a shudder. Then, the first lady got up, and, coming over, sat down heavily in the seat opposite to her.

"I am heartily sorry you have heard me, my dear," she said kindly. "It is a lesson to me not to talk of my neighbors in the train. But are you really Amy Barlowe's child? Yes, looking at you, I can see your dear father. Your parents were my dearest friends. You do not remember me, but surely you have not forgotten Reggie and Joyce?"

Mollie started, and leaning forward, turned her beautiful, miserable grey eyes on the speaker with dawning recognition.

"Yes—yes, I do now," she cried. "You are Mrs. Anstruther; you live in that pretty white house near the church. Oh, Mrs. Anstruther, about this dreadful thing about Mr. Barlowe. Madame Dubois wrote that he died suddenly, and she was now my guardian; but how did it happen? Why was I not told?" And she glanced imploringly at the pleasant motherly face now regarding her with a troubled frown.

CRUELTY IN TONE.

Cross Words Kill a Bird in Its Cage.

A bird which receives a scolding is made as miserable and unhappy thereby as a child would be. To illustrate our Dumb Animals tells the following story: A Massachusetts woman had, a few years ago, a beautiful canary bird which she dearly loved, and to which she had never spoken an unkind word in her life. One Sunday the church organist was away, and she stopped after church to play the organ for the Sunday school. In consequence of this the dinner had to be put off an hour, and when she got home her good husband was very hungry, and he spoke to her unkindly. The things were put on and they sat down in silence at the table, and presently the bird began to chirp at her as it always had to attract her attention. To shame her husband for having spoken so, she turned to the bird, and for the first time in her life spoke to it in a most violent and angry tone. In less than five minutes there was a fluttering in the cage. She sprang to the cage—the bird was dead. Mrs. Hendricks, the wife of the late vice-president of the United States, says that she once killed a mocking bird in the same way. It annoyed her by loud singing. To stop it she spoke in a violent tone, and pretended to throw something at it, and within five minutes it was dead.

A Boy's Revenge.

The present German emperor, then a small boy, attended the wedding of the prince and princess of Wales. He was under the charge of his two uncles, the duke of Edinburgh and the duke of Connaught. As may be expected, young William fidgeted sadly, and consequently received an occasional warning tap the shoulder. But how he did revenge himself! His uncles were in Highland dress, and the future emperor slyly knelt down and bit into their bare legs with great earnestness. Boston Journal.

FALMAGE'S SERMON.

THE TEMPTATIONS OF COLLEGE LIFE THE SUBJECT.

Suggestions for Those Who Are Required to Leave Their Homes—Helpfulness of Early Christian Teaching and Influence.

(Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klipsch.)

Dr. Talmage staid in London to occupy the famous Wesley pulpit in the City Road chapel, where he has preached several times before, always receiving a hearty welcome. Thence he went to Ireland, preaching in Belfast and Dublin. The discourse he has sent this week describes the behavior of a young man away from home and suggests practical lessons for people of every age and class. The text is Daniel 1, 5: "And the king appointed them a daily provision of the king's meat and of the wine which he drank; so nourishing them three years, that at the end thereof they might stand before the king."

My text opens the door of a college in Babylon and introduces you to a young student seventeen years of age, Daniel by name. Be not surprised if in the college you find many hilarities. Put a hundred young men together and they are sure to have a good time. There is no harm in that. God does not write out the trees and the grass and the blossoms in dull prose. The old robin does not sit moping in the nest because of the chirpings and the lively adventures of the fledglings that have just begun to fly. Do not come into an orchard looking for winter apples on a May morning.

But Daniel of the text is far from being gay. What oppressive thoughts must have come into his mind as he remembered that he was a captive in a strange land! The angels that came to him in the window were not the angels of heaven, but the angels of the heathen god. Moreover, he had no hope of ever getting back home again and meeting those who had missed him bitterly, wondering if he were still alive, and finding many a luxury tasteless because they did not know but Daniel might be lacking bread.

School and College Days.

When you and I were in school or college, and the vacation approached, we were full of bright anticipation, and we could not study the last day, and we could not study the last night. The lexicon and the philosophical apparatus were transparent, so we could see right through them into the meadows. Not so with poor Daniel. He did not know that he should ever escape from captivity, or escaping, he did not know but when he got home the loved ones would be dead, and he would go wandering and weeping among the sepulchers of his fathers. Besides that the king tried to make him forget his home and forget his country; for that purpose actually changed his name. The king wanted him to be a prodigy in personal appearance, so he ordered meat and wine sent from his own table to Daniel, but Daniel refuses all this and puts himself upon the humblest diet the poorest of all herbs, called pulse, and plain water. His attendants cry out against this and tell him he will perish under such a diet. "No," he says, "you try us for ten days, and if at the end of that time we are not full cheeked and robust as any, it will be surprising." Ten days pass along and the students come up for examination, and all declare that none are so ruddy and robust as Daniel and his fellow captives. The days of industrious pupilage and the years pass by, and the day of graduation has come, and Daniel gets his diploma, signed by the king and reading as follows: "In all matters of wisdom and understanding that the king inquired of them he found them ten times better than all the magicians and astrologers that were in all his realm." And so Daniel took the first honor, and here the story ends, for Daniel the student hereafter will be Daniel the prime minister.

Perils of Young Men.

The young are more in peril because they are unsuspecting. The lions are asleep in their soul, and their power is not suspected. The time when a ship's company makes mutiny is when the watchman is off his guard. When a spider meets a fly, it does not say, "Go down with me to the place where I murder insects." No; it says, "Come and take a bright morning walk with me on this suspension bridge of glittering gossamer." Oh, there is a difference between the sparkle of a serpent's eye and the crush of its slimy folds. There is a difference between the bear's paw toying with a kid and the crackling of the bones in the terrific hug. Pike's peak looks beautiful in the distance, but ask the starved travelers by the roadside what they think of Pike's peak. Are there those around whom suspicious companions are gathered? Do their jests and their entertainments make the hours go blithely by when you are with them? Have you taken a sip from their cup of sin or gone with them in one path of unrighteousness? Turn back, from Babylon they came and to Babylon they would carry you. If so many plague stricken men would like to enter your companionship, before any one is allowed to pass into the intimacy of your heart put on them severest quarantine.

Encouragement for Parents.

Let me say to those Christian parents who are doing their best in the education of their children: Take good heart; your sons this morning may be as far away from you and in a distant land, but God to whom you dedicated them, will look after them. The God of Daniel will take care of them far away in Babylon. "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." He may wander away for awhile and fall into sin and break your heart, but before he is done with this life, you have commended him to God, he will come back again, for I put the emphasis in the right place and on the word "old" when I repeat that passage and say, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." May you all have the glorious satisfaction of seeing your children walk in paths of righteousness and peace! One with them on earth, may you be one with them in heaven!

But I learn also from this subject the beauty of Christian sobriety. The meat and the wine that were to come to Daniel's table were to come from the king's table. Well, Daniel had no right to take that food. The king was a heathen and like all the heathen was accustomed to ask a blessing before he ate food, and in that blessing they always dedicated the food to the gods. So that if Daniel had taken this food he would have broken the law which forbade the taking of food dedicated to idols. He chose wisely. It was a miracle that he did not waste away. There is nothing in wine, such a poor herb, to make a man ruddy and healthful. Some people talk as though that were a kind of art which would make a man sturdy and competent to do the duties of his life. That is not the lesson at all. But for a positive miracle Daniel would have dwindled away, and when God for his self denial puts upon him this benediction he puts a benediction upon all Christian sobriety.

Temptation to Dissipation.

But, oh, how many temptations to dissipation! With so many things to tempt the appetite, how many temptations to gluttony! With so many sparkling beverages, how much temptation to drunkenness! Could I bring before you this morning the mothers and the wives and the sisters who have wept at the graves of the inebriate, your soul would be overpowered with the spectacle. Could I show you the many forms robbed of their beauty, the eyelashings quenched in the wine cup, the ruddy cheek from which rum has wormed the rose, your souls would recoil with horror, and you would rise up and cry, "Begone, thou dream of hell!"

Charles Lamb, who made all the world laugh at his humor, and then afterward made all the world weep at his fate, who outwitted everybody and was at last outwitted of his own appetites, wrote thus: "The waters have gone over me; but out of the depths, could I be heard, I would cry out to all those who have set a foot in the perilous flood. Could the youth to whom the flavor of the first wine is delicious as the opening scenes of his life, or the entering upon some newly discovered paradise—could he look into my desolation and be made to understand what a dreary thing it is when a man shall feel himself going down a precipice with open eyes and a passive will; to see his destruction and have no power to stop it, yet feel it all the way emanating from himself, to see all godliness empty out of him, and yet not able to forget the time when it was otherwise; to hear about the piteous spectacle of his own ruin—could he see his feverish eye, feverish with last night's drinking and feverish looking for tonight's repetition of that folly—could he but feel the body of the death out of which I cry hourly with feeble outcry to be delivered, it were enough to make him dash the sparkling beverage to the earth in all the pride of its mantling temptation."

A Touching Reproof.

I was told at Des Moines of a train of eggs going through a very stormy night over one of the western prairies. The young man who was present told us the story. In the night there was a little child in the sleeping car, fretful and worrying and crying hour after hour. A man on the opposite side of the car lost his patience and said, "Either make that child shut up or take it to its mother!" Then another man on the opposite side of the sleeping car—a man with a broken heart—pushed back the curtain and looked out and said, "Young man, that child's mother is dead in the baggage car, and the little thing is waiting for her." Then the man who had committed the affront rose and offered his services for the night and took care of the child until the morning, and all the passengers in the car were broken down with emotion. Oh, if the cry of one child could arouse so many sympathies, what ought to be the effect of the ten thousand voiced shriek of orphanage and widowhood from the inebriate's grave? God save this country from the perils of strong drink.

Leaving Home.

I think the most thrilling passage of a young man's life is when he leaves home to make his fortune. He is set down amid excitements and amid associates who are not overcareful about their words and thoughts and actions. Morning comes. No family altar. Sabbath comes. No rural quiet. The sanctuary comes, but all the faces are strange, and no one cares whether he comes to church or does not come. On his way home from the store he sees a placard announcing a rare and vicious amusement. He has no greeting at the door of the boarding house. He has no appetite for the food. No one cares whether he eats or does not eat—rather he would not eat—it is cheaper! After the tea he goes into the parlor, takes up a book, finds it dull, no sister to look over it with him. Goes up stairs to his room in the third story, finds it cold and uninviting, and in despair he rushes out, caring for nothing but to get something to make him stop thinking. He is caught in the first whirl of sin. He has started out on the dark sea where the gleam of the joy is the flashing of the pit and the laughter is the creaking of the gate of the lost. Oh, how many graves there are in the country churchyard which, if they could speak, would tell of young men who went off with high hopes and came back blasted and crushed to disgrace the sepulcher of their fathers!

Keep Them Faithful.

And yet this exodus must go on. As from distant hills the rivers are poured down through tunnels to slake the thirst of our great cities, so from distant country places the streams of incorrupt population must pour down to purify our great cities. Tomorrow morning on all the thoroughfares, in every steamboat and in every rail car will be young men going forth to seek their fortunes in our great towns. O Lord God of Daniel, help them to be as faithful in Babylon as they were in Jerusalem! Forget not, O my young friend, in the great seaports the moral and religious principles inculcated by parental solicitude, and if today seated in the house of God you feel the advantage of early Christian culture forget not those to whom you are most indebted and pray God that as old age comes upon them and the shadow of death the hope of heaven may beam through the darkness. God forbid that any of us through our misconduct should bring disgrace upon a father's name or prove recreant to the love of a mother. The dramatist made no exaggeration when he exclaimed, "How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child!" Oh, that God would help you as parents and as young people to take to heart the lessons of this important subject, and if we shall learn that there is danger of being carried into captivity, and that early impressions are almost ineffaceable, and that there is something beautiful in Christian sobriety, and that there is great attractiveness in piety away from home—then it will be to you and to me a matter of everlasting congratulation that we considered how Daniel behaved when he became a college student at Babylon.

MUMMY IN CEILING.

Body of an Inquisitive Cat Found After Many Years.

Egyptian mummies are not so much of a rarity nowadays as they once were, in fact they may even at present be looked upon as an article of commerce, but the body of a mummified cat found at Germantown has claims to be regarded as a curiosity. The mummy is now to be seen in the window of 14 Chelton avenue, Germantown. The preservation of the body is perfect, the ears and even the tail being in good condition. The house indicated is occupied by the family of J. S. Pryor. Mrs. Pryor says that when the ceiling of the Methodist Episcopal church, on Haines street, was being torn down for repair Oct. 24, 1877, the workmen came across a hard substance embedded in the ceiling. On being dug out the substance was cast aside. Mr. Pryor, who was watching the repairs, brushed the accumulated dust and dirt from the cast-off object, and the mummified body of a cat appeared. How the quadruped got into the interior structure of the ceiling, there to die, is a mystery. The church was built in 1858. The only plausible theory so far presented is that the cat, by some means, got into the ceiling while the original plastering was in progress and tarried until sealed in. The plaster on hardening became air-tight and the cat by exhausting the air in its adopted prison cell unconsciously preserved its body intact. The Pryors intend to give the curiosity some day to the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences.—Philadelphia Times.

For the Young Housewife.

A point a mistress should know is the difference between simmering and boiling. This is readily tested with a cook's thermometer, when boiling point will be found at 212 degrees, simmering only demanding 180 degrees. Roughly speaking, it is easy to see the difference between the two. When a liquid boils at full pitch its surface will be closely covered with bubbles, and the whole surface will, so to speak, rock and swell with the heat, in which condition it very quickly boils over. When it simmers, however, the surface of the liquid will simply ripple like a pond into which a stone has been thrown, the water keeping all the time at a gentle shiver. This rippling is called by French cooks the sourire or smile of the water.

Eparchies of Russian Church.

The present orthodox church of Russia is divided into 67 eparchies, including one in Alaska, and 43 vicarial seats of bishops. Russia has now 117 archbishops, in cluding three metropolitan, 67 eparchial vicarial archbishops and 39 bishops. Most Russian hierarchs have attended the seminaries and academies. Archbishop Juvenal of Lituva was formerly an officer and attended the artillery academy at St. Petersburg. Archbishop Markel member of the holy synod, attended also the universities at Vienna and Lemberg.—Arnold Lewis Gillin, in Chicago Record.

KILL TO CLOSE THE MINES.
Strikers and Officers Have a Bloody Conflict.
SPECIAL POLICEMAN SLAIN.
A Dozen Others Wounded—The Trouble Took Place at the Onida Colliery of Cox Brothers & Co. in Pennsylvania—Strained Conditions.

One special policeman instantly killed, another shot in the head, a striker probably fatally hurt and ten non-union men more or less seriously wounded is the story in brief of a clash between the officers and 500 strikers which occurred Wednesday morning at the Onida (Pa.) colliery of Cox Brothers.

The killed: Ralph Mills, aged 50 years, of Beaver Meadow, special policeman; shot through the back. The wounded: George Kellnor, aged 38, of Beaver Meadow, special officer; shot in the head; will recover. Joseph Lesko, aged 38, of Beaver Meadow, special officer; shot in the head; will recover. Joseph Lesko, aged 38, of Shepton, a striker; was shot in the groin; will probably die. John Van Blargin of Shepton, non-union miner; scalp wounds; seriously hurt. James Tush of Shepton, non-union miner; four ribs broken. Eight non-union men; wounded slightly by stones.

The Onida colliery has been in operation since the strike began. The union men at Onida and Shepton, where many of the employees of the Onida and Derringer collieries of Cox Brothers & Co. have, decided early in the morning to close down the mine. They gathered in groups on the streets and as the non-union men went to work they were asked by the strikers to remain at home. Some turned back, but others did not. Those who went to the colliery were stoned. Van Blargin, one of the non-union employees, attempted to draw a revolver, but the weapon was taken from him and in the beating he received he had several ribs broken. This occurred just before starting time at the mine. The strikers remained at the colliery all the morning. As the small mine locomotive used in hauling coal from the No. 2 and 3 collieries to the Onida breaker pulled up on the road near the latter colliery a crowd of women blocked the track. The women were told by General Superintendent Kudlick to go home. He assured them that their husbands would get an increase in wages and that their other grievances would be properly adjusted. The women refused to listen and stoned the superintendent, who was wounded in the head. Then the striking men and women rushed toward the No. 2 colliery. A force of about fifty special policemen who had been brought down from Beaver Meadow early in the morning to prevent trouble attempted to intercept the strikers, but they were powerless to do anything and retired to the engine-house.

Just as the officers got close to shelter a shot was fired. This was followed by another, and in a few seconds the air resounded with shots. Policeman Mills was the first to fall. Then Joseph Lesko, a striker, staggered to the ground. No one knows who shot first, but it is believed that both the strikers and the officers used their weapons. A gunshot killed Mills and small shot struck Policeman Kellnor. Lesko, the striker, was struck by a ball from a revolver, with which all the officers were armed.

Miners in Contention.
The biggest meeting of delegates from an individual labor organization that was ever held in this country was called to order in Music hall in Scranton Friday morning by President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers of America. The committee on credentials reported 257 delegates and no contests. Immediately following the report of the committee the delegates got down to business and the question of the 10 per cent advance was at once taken up. Attempts to figure what the advance meant failed because of the sliding scale and tonnage system on which the miners work in the various fields, and the discussion developed a determination on the part of the men to have nothing to do with the proposition of the operators unless the advance was based on gross tonnage.

Eleventh Wife Was His Rai.
Edward Tolden was placed in jail at Tiffin, O., Wednesday on a bigamy charge, it being claimed that he has been married twelve times and that nine of his wives are living. His eleventh wife was Mrs. Susan Herrod of Wood county. When she became Mrs. Holden she had a small farm and about $2,000 in money. When this disappeared he deserted her, went to Postoria and married Miss Mamie Herroster. The former Mrs. Herrod, hearing of his latest marriage, caused his case to be investigated by the grand jury. Holden is a clairvoyant and hypnotist.

A CONGRESSMAN
Cared of Catarrh of Long Standing.

Ex-Congressman A. T. Goodwyn, from Alabama, writes the following letter: The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.: Gentlemen—I have now used two bottles of Peruna, and am a well man today. I could feel the good effects of your medicine before I had used it a week, after suffering with catarrh for over a year. Respectfully, A. T. Goodwyn.

Catarrh in its various forms is rapidly becoming a national curse. An undoubted remedy has been discovered by Dr. Hartman. This remedy has been thoroughly tested during the past forty years. Prominent men have come to know of its virtues and are making public utterances on the subject. To save the country we must save the people. To save the people we must protect them from disease. The disease that is at once the most prevalent and stubborn of cure is catarrh. Public men of all parties recognize in Peruna a national catarrh remedy of unequalled merit. Send to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, for a free book on catarrh.

The Proud Feature.
Why do all writers and talkers on beauty conspire to neglect the most prominent feature? We hear a great deal about eyes, complexion, lips, hair, expression, even ears, but very rarely anything at all about noses. The heroine may have the most glorious orbs in the world, but who would look at her if she hadn't a nose? Whereas, if she had a good nose, what an amount of sympathy she would command if she had the misfortune to be blind as well. The fact is that a person without a nose is simply disgusting. When Gaspar de Tavannes said to Queen Catherine de Medici that at a word from her he would cut off Diane de Poitiers' nose, he knew what he was about. The favorite's peign would not outlive this reduction of her charms. Therefore, let there be no more injustice to noses. Their prominence should be recognized.

DISCOVERIES OF THE CENTURY.
It is fortunate, since there are left no leads to be discovered on this terrestrial globe, that inventive man has turned his mind to more useful things. So we have steam, electricity and many other advantages not enjoyed by our forefathers. Medicine, too, has made great strides; for even man's old enemy, Rheumatism, has at last found its master in Swanson's "5 Drops." The success of this truly marvelous specific for Rheumatism has been astonishing and never equalled in the annals of medicine. It gives instant relief, kills germs, prevents disease and positively cures all forms of chronic and acute Rheumatism, Sciatica and Neuralgia. It is also used with unfeeling effect in all Nervous Affections, of every description, Catarrh, Croup, Bronchitis, Stomach, Liver and Kidney Troubles, Eas Grippe, Malaria, Creeping Numbness and kindred diseases.

Swanson's "5 Drops" is sold by agents and by the Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co., 104 Lake street, Chicago, Ill. In some places the druggists are agents. If the medicine is not obtainable in your town, order direct of the manufacturers. Large size bottles (300 doses) $1.00, prepaid by express or mail. Trial bottle will be sent on receipt of 25 cents. Agents wanted in new territory. Write now.

Restive Rules on Freshmen.
The sophomores at Columbia College have put forth rules for the guidance of the freshman class. There are to be "No girls, no canes, no pipes, no golf breeches, no handls in pockets, no sporty socks, no turned-up trousers, no soft hats, no sitting on benches on campus." The freshmen are required to further pay general respect to the "sophs." Loud-mouthed freshmen are to be dealt with summarily.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is not a permanent condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE TURN OF LIFE.
The Most Important Period in a Woman's Existence.—Mrs. Johnson Tells How She Was Helped Over the Trying Time.

Owing to modern methods of living, not one woman in a thousand approaches this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying, and sometimes painful symptoms.

Those dreadful hot flashes, sending the blood surging to the heart until it seems ready to burst, and the faint feeling that follows, sometimes with chills, as if the heart were going to stop for good, are only a few of the symptoms of a dangerous nervous trouble. The nerves are crying out for assistance. The cry should be heeded in time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life.

The three following letters are guaranteed to be genuine and true, and still further prove what a great medicine Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is for women.

Mar. 12, 1897.
"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been sick for a long time. I was taken sick with flooding. All my trouble seemed to be in the womb. I ache all the time at the lower part of the womb. The doctor says the womb is covered with ulcers. I suffer with a pain on the left side of my back over the kidney. I am fifty years old and passing through the change of life. Please advise me what to do to get relief. Would like to hear from you as soon as possible."—Mrs. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

Jan. 23, 1898.
"I have been taking your remedies, and think they have helped me a great deal. I had been in bed for ten weeks when I began taking your Vegetable Compound, but after using it for a short time I was able to be up around the house. The aching in the lower part of womb has left me. The most that troubles me now is the flooding. That is not so bad, but still there is a little every day. I am not discouraged yet, and shall continue with your medicine, for I believe it will cure me."—Mrs. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

April 13, 1900.
"I send you this letter to publish for the benefit of others. I was sick for about nine years so that I could not do my work. For three months I could not sit up long enough to have my bed made. I had five different doctors, and all said there was no help for me. My trouble was change of life. I suffered with ulceration of the womb, pain in sides, kidney and stomach trouble, backache, headache, and dizziness. I am well and strong, and feel like a new person. My recovery is a perfect surprise to everybody that knew me. I owe all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would not do without your medicine for anything. There is no need of women suffering so much if they would take your remedies, for they are a sure cure."—Mrs. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

When one stops to think about the good Mrs. Johnson derived from Mrs. Pinkham's advice and medicine, it seems almost beyond belief; yet it is all true as stated in her three letters published above at her own request.

As a matter of positive fact Mrs. Pinkham has on file thousands of letters from women who have been safely carried through that danger period "Change of Life." Mrs. Johnson's cure is not an unusual one for Mrs. Pinkham's medicine to accomplish.

$5000 REWARD.—We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special permission. LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

Waste Paper.

What a lot of it there is every day which will accumulate in a store or office, and how few there are who pay attention to the manner in which it is blown about the street in violation of the village ordinances. Is it necessary for the village to put up waste paper boxes on the corners like Chicago or will you just touch a match to it thus helping to keep Genoa's streets presentable.

Cobble Stones.

What a lot of small cobble stones, which are lying about our streets, could be picked up and put to some good use. To be sure they were bought for gravel and hauled onto the streets for that purpose, but if they are to be used as such we would suggest that they be broken in pieces fine enough to be pressed into the soil or be picked up and carted off. Other towns make use of them in making a cobble stone gutter and they are excellent for that purpose. As they now lie about the streets they are a nuisance and we call attention to Monroe street, east of Lemke's store.

Dust.

That is what has been blown into our faces and eyes a greater part of the week. Since the sprinkling stopped the streets have become very dry and the wind seems to delight in picking it up and hurling and twirling it about, here and there, and a large portion of it is finally deposited in the houses and stores on the chairs, the beds, the shelves, the counters and everywhere else.

MRS. EMILY MARIA KELLOGG PASSED TO HER ETERNAL REST.

We re-print the following by request from the Virginia City Times of Oct. 3, and for the benefit of the friends of Mrs. Kellogg who knew her when she was a resident of this town. Lucius Kellogg is a brother of Leander P. Kellogg of Noy.

Mrs. Emily Maria Kellogg, wife of Lucius Kellogg, died yesterday evening (Oct. 2) at 7:30 o'clock after a long illness of nearly two years duration.

Mrs. Kellogg was first taken ill about eight years ago, and has never been a well woman since that time, though she was not considered seriously ill until about twenty months ago, when her ailment devolved into dropsy of the liver, and she has been under the constant care of a physician ever since. All that medical skill and loving care of a devoted husband and children could do was done, but to no avail, as the disease had a firm hold, and she passed peacefully away at 7:30 last evening after having been unconscious most of the time since Sep. 23.

Emily Maria Manning was the eldest daughter of Ira and Elizabeth Manning and was born in Niagara County, New York, October 26, 1836. Her father lived until the 26th. of this month she would have been 64 years of age. In 1845 she moved with her parents to De Kalb County, Illinois. She was married to Lucius Kellogg at Beloit, Wis., July 3, 1853. In 1859 her husband migrated to Ray County, Missouri, where she followed him a year later. In 1860 they removed to Lyons County, Kansas, where they remained until 1871, when they removed to Leavenworth, Kansas, living there until April 16, 1864 when they started by ox train for Montana, arriving in Alder Gulch August 22, 1864. In 1872 they bought a ranch on Remshorn, where they lived until 1876 when they returned to Alder Gulch and took up a homestead adjoining the city limits of Virginia City on the north, and here they have made their home ever since.

She was the mother of five children, Clark W., Almer X., Lucius G., Mrs. Ida Adams and Mrs. Virginia Kohls, all of whom, with her aged husband survive her. They are all residents of this city except Mrs. Adams, who resides at Decatur, Mich., and who came here three weeks ago to minister to her mother in her last illness, and Almer X. who is now in the Philippine Islands in service of the government.

Mrs. Kellogg was a devout member of the Protestant Episcopal Church at which she was a regular attendant. She was a woman of many sterling qualities, a loving and dutiful wife and mother and a kind and accommodating neighbor whom to know was to love. The funeral took place Thursday October 4 at 2 o'clock from the Masonic Temple. The services were conducted by Mrs. Robert Vickers, worthy matron and Lew L. Callaway, worthy pastor of Virginia City Chapter No. 9, Order of the Eastern Star, of which she had been a member.

Leaves.

What a delightful scenery is presented by the trees whose leaves have been nipped by old frost. The most beautiful hues are exhibited by the trees of the hard wood variety, such as the oak, hard maple, etc. Every color, shade, tint and blending that can be imagined is here put into effect by nature in the most pleasing harmonies that painters are striving to reproduce.

Mrs. H. H. Gandy aged 94 years, died at the home of her son Joseph Gandy near Ohio Grove Wednesday evening at about 8:30 o'clock. Lucinda Meacham was born Sept. 5, 1806 and was married Sept. 12, 1833 to Henry H. Gandy. They were old time settlers in the vicinity in which her death occurred. The funeral was held at the Ohio Grove church at 11 o'clock Saturday morning.

An interesting question has arisen in Iowa, according to an insurance paper. Several days before his death a member of a society dismissed his physician and substituted Christian Science treatment. This did not prevent death and one of the provisions of the order is that a physician's certificate accompany proofs of death. Under the circumstances the physician refuses to give this.—Ex.

A Cincinnati man got mad and paid his tailor bill with 5000 copper cents. The question was raised as to whether the tailor was obliged to take payment in that denomination. This brought out information that will be new to many. 1 cent, 2 cent, 3 cent and nickels are legal tender to the amount of 25 cents. Silver dollars are legal tender to an unlimited amount. Silver half dollars and quarters are legal tender to the amount of $10. Silver half dimes and silver three cent pieces are legal tender to the amount of $4.—Ex.

The attorney for Mrs. D. F. Dumsler, whose husband was accidentally killed at a south side elevated in Chicago April 4, 1890, has obtained some good testimony in favor of his client, which he will present in court against the south side elevated railway company. Several things which have developed lately makes the case a good one. The company made Mrs. Dumsler a proposition soon after her husband's death, but it was not considered fair and was rejected. The suit is for $5000.—Elgin News.

What have hitherto been regarded as the waste products of nature distributed along the Illinois river are beginning to have a value. Two years ago it was discovered that dog fish were much esteemed by the Chinese residents of New York and other eastern cities and the once despised fish became much sought. Now the mud hens, which have been regarded with the same disfavor as the dog fish, are being shipped to Chicago in large quantities and are considered a delicacy. They are protected by the law the same as ducks and prairie chickens, and in the course of time bid fair to take rank with the other game birds of Illinois.—Ex.

Tramps are abroad in the land and the section northeast of town in no exception. On Tuesday one of those swaggering imitations of God's noblest creation, man, visited the home of Chas. Norman and Mrs. Norman being alone demanded something to eat which was refused as has been the practice to these honorable gentlemen. He used language unfit for the ears of man to say nothing about women, and swaggered toward the barn where was standing a carriage belonging to the teacher of the public school and took from it a valuable mackintosh and other articles and started away with them. In the meantime Mrs. Norman had stepped to the bedroom and secured a 38 revolver, kept for occasions of this kind, and commanded him to stop which was replied to with an oath. In a second the muzzle was brought to a level with him and the command to drop the bundle which his majesty saw fit to do without ceremony. He was allowed to go on his way, though he should have had a bullet mark or two as a souvenir of his insults and lawlessness. If the bravery exhibited by Mrs. Norman was more general there would be less of these begging scapgoats in the country.—Enterprise, Kirkland.

Royal Neighbors.

They are the Most Sociable Society That we Know of in Many Miles About.

Wednesday night the Royal Neighbors held their regular meeting under quite sumptuous circumstances. The members were in attendance in large numbers and the ceremony of initiation occupied a position on the programme of the evening: Mrs. Julius Stevens being made a member.

After this and the business of the evening, the committee on entertainment treated the members to a genuine surprise which they had prepared in the shape of music and refreshments. Eddie Stott and his big fiddle, Mollie Miller with a guitar, Art Shattuck and Jim Hines with their little fiddles and Lee Hinds with his clarinet were all there and played several pieces of nice music, the last of which was one known to the band as a "Dakota Dream" composed by Jim Hines.

Charley and Eddie Adams were there too and entertained them with a pretty duet on the organ.

Ship Sick Hogs to Chicago. J. B. Nicholson, western representative of a line of refrigerator cars, who was at Minneapolis Monday, reports a sensational condition of things in the hog market of Southern Minnesota. He said: "The conditions are very bad, but the most dangerous feature is the wholesale shipment of the diseased animals to Chicago. I saw hundreds of hogs at one point being loaded into the cars which were too sick to stand up. They were actually dragged into the cars. I was told by a prominent shipper that the hogs were passing government inspection at Chicago. I don't understand how that can be, for if ever hogs were suffering from cholera the poor animals I saw dumped into the cars were."

Row in Club Federation. There is a fierce controversy in progress in the State Federation of Indiana, which will probably result in a complete reorganization of that body. It has just been discovered that instead of the treasury containing between $400 and $500 there is now on hand but $45. It is charged that the officers and committee of the federation have gone on a number of junketing tours to Indianapolis; that at each meeting these persons have charged up every penny of their personal expenses until there is little left in the treasury for the current disbursements. The Wabash federation will take an active part in effecting reforms.

Washes Away 1,000 Houses. A typhoon caused great damage last month on the coasts of Formosa and southern China. Numerous towns were destroyed. Nineteen hundred houses were washed away or inundated at Taipei, Formosa, and many lives lost. The Japanese steamers Fuchiau Maru and Selko Maru went ashore at Taipei and sustained serious damage. The French cruiser Ker-saint was blown ashore in Harkow harbor, southern China, and its steering gear destroyed. Fire broke out and almost caused a panic. The warship was pulled into deep water and after temporary repairs proceeded to Saigon.

Aeronaut Falls to Death. A. P. Deer, an aeronaut of Chicago, fell to his death at Gay's Falls, Wis., from a balloon which had ascended to a height of 200 feet. The ascension was made at a fair and was witnessed by 5,000 persons. The balloon exploded and fell 100 feet before the parachute opened and the sudden jerk caused Deer to lose his hold. His body fell, turning in the air, and he struck the ground on his head and shoulders. His jaw, nose and one arm were crushed and he died in less than two minutes. This was his third hundred and twenty-first ascension during the past twelve years.

One of the Light Brigade Dies. W. C. Harris, who has just died in Nevada, a small place near Eldora, Iowa, was a hero of Balaklava, taking part in the historic charge of the Light Brigade there, for which he was given a gold medal for bravery. He had been denied a pension by the British government for the reason that he came to America and took the oath of allegiance to the United States.

Shot by a Deer Hunter. Former City Engineer Arthur T. Thomas was shot, probably accidentally, near the Chippewa (Wis.) mine Tuesday afternoon. He was hunting and is thought to have been taken for a deer by some hunters. Death was hurried by a broken neck, received when he fell, his body striking a log. The decedent had lived there thirty years and was popular.

Shoot Quail Out of Season. Quail are more numerous this fall in Wabash and surrounding counties, Indiana, than in any year of the last twenty. NAMES FOR HALL OF FAME.

Washington Gets Place of Honor, with Lincoln Next.

THIRTY NAMES ARE CHOSEN.

Famous Americans Whose Names Will Be Placed on the Tablets—Webster, Franklin and Grant Stand Well Toward Top of List. Contest Is Ended.

The election in the Hall of Fame contest was concluded Friday when the senate of the New York university assembled and passed upon the list of eligibles submitted to that body by the committee which for the last three days has been counting the votes.

The total number of names submitted to the 100 judges was 252. Though the standard of eligibility had been placed as low as fifty-one votes, only thirty of the nominees had reached that standard. It was the names of such nominees that were submitted to the senate, and that body, in which is vested the power of absolute and peremptory veto, on this occasion confined itself to simple confirmation of the committee's findings. According to this decision the following famous men were accorded a place on the tablets of the Hall of Fame:

George Washington, 97 (the full vote); Abraham Lincoln, 96; Daniel Webster, 95; Benjamin Franklin, 94; U. S. Grant, 92; John Marshall, 91; Thomas Jefferson, 90; Ralph Waldo Emerson, 86; Henry W. Longfellow, 84; Washington Irving, 82; Jonathan Edwards, 82; David G. Farragut, 79; Samuel P. B. Morse, 79; Henry Clay, 74; George Peabody, 72; Nathaniel Hawthorne, 72; Robert E. NEW RAILROAD BICYCLE IS A MARVEL.

A railroad bicycle is the latest thing in transportation devices. A Chicago firm has introduced an attachment for a bicycle to substitute for the hand car when the latter is not available. The attachment consists of three steel rods running from the different parts of the frame of an ordinary bicycle to one small wheel on the other rail of the track. The little third wheel is flanged on both sides and adapted to run on the opposite rail as a guide to the bicycle. The attachment can be made in three minutes, it is said, and weighs but eight pounds. The guiding wheel runs on ball bearings and the three points are so distributed as to insure the bicycle remaining in an upright position and its wheels keeping the

His Head in the Balance.

Prince Tuan's head seems to be petrated on the bodies of the foreign about the most unstable thing there is in international politics in these troublous times. All "students" of the eastern situation agree that the prince stands in imminent peril. That adroit dignitary is the son of the fifth Prince Tien of the house of Tuankwang. He is about 40 years old. His son Po Chuz has been nominated for the succession to the dragon throne by the present emperor. Tuan is a brother of the late emperor and uncle of the weak occupant of the throne today. He was the head of the Boxers' society, and upon his is laid all the blame of the outrages percrs before the fall of Peking. It looks just now as though his life would pay the forfeit for his crimes.

Peace by Insurance.

The plan of Homer L. Boyle of Grand Rapids, Mich., to bring an end to all wars by means of the application of the insurance principle to disputes between nations, has taken definite form in the incorporation under the laws of Michigan of the International Peace Assurance Association. Mr. Boyle has been advocating his plan for universal peace since the outbreak of the Spanish-American war and has interested in his enterprise some of the most prominent business and insurance men in the state. The mayor of the city, two state senators Monatgu White, the American representative of the Transvaal, and several local attorneys of high reputation are among the officers of the association. The plan includes the formation of an international board of adjusters made up of two representatives from each of the nations signatory to the agreement, to whom shall be referred all matters of difference between countries which approach the stage where war seems imminent. The board shall then adjudicate the controversy, award damages where the majority finds a just claim, fix boundary lines while they are in dispute and require apology in cases of insult, the association to adjust and pay the financial loss to the injured party. The work of securing members is to be started at once, the plan being to work up a large membership in the United States and to secure some kind of recognition of the association's work from congress before attempting to organize foreign countries.

The expected has happened in the kingdom of Queen Victoria. Parliamentary elections are not complete, but the returns indicate that there will be so insignificant a minority in opposition that ministers may safely undertake any program deemed feasible for several years to come. Joseph Chamberlain is the man of the victory. He is equitably entitled to the premiership as soon as Lord Salisbury lays it down. The rumor is credible that Mr. Balfour will vanish into the house of lords, leaving to the Birmingham screw manufacturer his well-won leadership of the house of commons. Except Labouchere, no liberal conspicuous in the legislature or the press as an opponent of the seizure of the South African gold mines has been sent back to Westminster.

Mansfield as King Henry V.

Mr. Richard Mansfield as King Henry V. was without a doubt the dramatic climax and most brilliant success of the season. All the varying moods of Henry—the most lovable and manly character Shakespeare ever drew—were represented by the actor in a manner far more fluent and effective than he could have commanded a few years ago. The manner of soldier, statesman and orator had been added to his remarkable technique and temperament, and the impressive speeches of Henry—sad, tender, manly and triumphant—were uttered each in its own proper note with magnificent poise and effect. This is the true evidence of ripening reached, it will be easier for Richard Mansfield to scale the greater heights. —Lyman B. Glover in the Chicago Times-Herald, Oct. 5.

MEASURING OUR GLOBE

United States Geodetic Surveying Corps Finishes Its Work.

The civil engineers employed by the United States government have just completed the measurement of this globe of ours. The task has been a hard one. For over thirty years it has been in progress and it has cost the taxpayers the neat little sum of $500,000, more or less. The coast and geodetic survey corps have had the matter in charge and they have arrived at absolute accuracy.

One result attained has been the determination of the fact that this earth is not as great a ball as has been commonly supposed. Our old mother's diameter through her great waistband, or equator, is discovered to be 7,926 miles; her height, from pole to pole, 7,899 miles. In other words, she is broader than she is tall.

Laymen will wonder how Uncle Sam's engineers could have accomplished such a seemingly impossible task as the actual measurement of the earth's dimensions. In order to determine the great sphere's girth or circumference, for instance, it would at first blush appear necessary to circumnavigate it over the equator and across the poles, making careful measurements step by step. The equator was not touched, however, during the measurements, and needless is it to state that the poles were not crossed. The measurement of a mountain's height does not require that its summit be climbed. If so we would as yet be in ignorance of the insurmountable altitudes of our loftiest peaks. Trigonometry, employed in mountain measurements, was utilized also in this difficult computation of the earth's dimensions.

The greatest task of the coast and geodetic survey, beside which all others paled into insignificance, was the measurement of the great arc's precise length in miles from ocean to ocean. Not until after twenty-seven years of constant field work was it proved that a chalk line stretched from Cape May to Point Arena and snapped against the earth's crust would leave a white mark 2,625.6 miles long. And, by the way, it is along this very line that our center of population seems to have wended its course westward. The distance was measured, not along a straight tape, but along a narrow network of triangles, such as the surveyor traces in his measurements of great distances. It may be difficult of belief that the number of localities whose latitudes and longitudes were precisely established within this network exceeded the number of stars visible to the naked eye in the heavens above. Were all of the lines forming these triangles placed end to end they would extend 10,000 miles or more. The triangulating work was begun at the two ends and near the center of the great arc, the surveyors gradually moving toward each other. Infants in swaddling clothes had become parents and youths had grown to be gray-haired men before two parties met, some two years ago, to close the last gap of the survey which remained in Colorado.

High above the clouds were some of these important measurements made. Four stations containing the surveyors' instruments were 14,000 and twenty were 10,000 feet above the sea level. Here the expert measurers worked amid perpetual ice and snow, breathing only half the usual supply of air meted out to human beings. The water in their camp kettles boiled at 189 degrees. Yet they performed the feat of measuring over single spans with instruments from 100 to 180 miles apart. This high mountain work was done in Colorado and thence westward across the Rockies and Sierras to California.

Giant signal towers elevated the surveyors' instruments above the flat eastern country where nature had not supplied mountain peaks for aid in such feats of measurement as just described. The highest combination of towers was erected across Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. Many of these structures were more than 100 feet in height. One at Green, Ind., held an instrument 152 feet above the earth's surface. Each of these lofty edifices appeared to be one huge windmill tower erected within another. Movements of the signal or observer, standing not disturb the target or telescope mounted upon the platform of the inner. In windy weather canvas screens covered the windward sides of the outer towers, and thus prevented the vibration of the instruments' supports. As further protection against exceptionally high winds, the towers were guyed on all sides with wire cables. In the Kansas cyclone belt screens of thin drilling, such as would tear in the face of a fierce wind, were substituted for those of canvas, which latter were liable to carry the entire skeleton structure of a bicycled tower to the ground before giving away. At Still Pond, Md., was erected a curious tower 120 feet tall, which supported a target to the height of 275 feet. This target was the highest above ground of all these employed. Between such towers the surveyors signaled over distances varying between ten and forty miles.

We seldom hear of an American mirage. Yet during this signaling it often occurred that one tower, absolutely invisible from another throughout the entire course of the day, would suddenly and most weirdly rise above the distant horizon just at sunset, thus effecting a much longer line of vision than could ordinarily be utilized. By actually laying bars of metal end to end the surveyors in the course of this stupendous measurement marked off the base lines essential to their triangulation work. Thus carefully measuring these base lines and later measuring the angles from either end to a common point, they, by applying a simple formula, could estimate how far away that point might be. The temperature of each bar was carefully measured by thermometers inside and its effect upon the length of the bar was taken into strict account. A single pair of these complicated bars cost Uncle Sam $1,500. Stretched across the country they were not rested upon the ground, but upon tripods carefully leveled. One style of measuring bar utilized in this delicate work was truly a wonder. It was carried in a trough filled with melting ice and was thus kept at the zero point. Being always at the same temperature its length never varied. Can the imagination be strained to picture a degree of hair-splitting care exceeding this?

Arbitration Must Be Compelled

tion reports that arbitration as a mode of settling disputes between labor and capital is gaining in favor; that the Illinois law is better than that of any other state and that it is susceptible of improvement. The reader of the report will find that in the opinion of the board the law is effective and superior to that of other states just in proportion as it is compulsory in character, and that the proposed methods of making it more effective are methods of making it more compulsory. To speak more correctly, the law is effective in proportion as it ceases to provide for voluntary arbitration and provides for compulsory adjudication. The truth is that voluntary arbitration is a failure.

Reform in Man's Attire.

West Haven, Conn., is in a whirl of excitement over the extraordinary conduct of John Merwin Hubbard, one of its hitherto most respected residents, who has taken to appearing in costumes radically different from the prevailing mode in male attire. Mr. Hubbard's departure from established rule in the matter of personal apparel is all the more unaccountable to his neighbors when they remember that so far as they have any knowledge he is by no means a crank. Summer visitors to that section set him down as an eccentric of the extreme kind, but this idea was soon disposed of when Mr. Hubbard's fellow citizens were consulted. As a matter of fact, they had always been rather proud of him—college-bred man, poet, philosopher and war veteran as he is.

The inventor of this new sartorial cult bases his crusade on his alleged discovery that modern ideas of male attire are entirely opposed to the consistency and teaching of the scriptures.

A WEEK IN ILLINOIS.

RECORD OF HAPPENINGS FOR SEVEN DAYS.

Baggage Thief Changes Checks on Valise and Escapes with Booty—Quarry Owner Killed by a Train—Dog Killed by Tigers.

Morris Takes Full Control. Nelson Morris took control of the dead-animal industry at the stockyards, Chicago, Thursday. At the regular directory meeting of the Union Rendering company, the corporation which has the exclusive right of buying cattle and sheep which die or are killed by accident in the pens and runways, Mr. Morris ordered five directors to resign, made his son, Ira Nelson Morris, acting president and gave the job of secretary to J. C. Dennison, who last spring was let out as secretary of the Union Stockyard and Transit company. Robert Strahorn, George T. Williams, Nelson Cochran, George E. Jones and John Brenock are the directors who resigned at Mr. Morris' behest. Until the directory meeting was called to order none of the five knew that Mr. Morris had secured the proxies for 1,200 shares of Union Rendering stock, enough to make him master of the company when added to his original holdings of one-third the capital stock. The new directory, as nominated and elected by Mr. Morris yesterday, is headed by himself and L. B. Doud, with Ira Nelson Morris, James H. Ashby, Rollin A. Keys, B. M. Winston, Sam Cozzins, C. E. Davis and J. C. Dennison as associates. The company has offices in the Exchange building, while its plant is at Globe, Ill.

Leaves Joliet in Darkness. The shutting off of the flow in the drainage channel Saturday to release a steamer that had been caught in the current left the entire city of Joliet in darkness Wednesday night and Thursday morning the office of the Economy Light and Power Company was besieged with indignant queries as to the cause. The Economy people have just installed their dynamo and other machinery in the new powerhouse at the Jackson street works and the test had developed satisfactory results. The management realizes that if these shut-downs are to occur often the company will have trouble with the city authorities, and it is likely the sanitary district will be called upon to keep the channel full at all times. The Economy holds a valuable contract with the city, and when the lights are out no payment is made. Consequently the company will appeal to the courts, if necessary, to compel the trustees to observe the provisions of the sanitary district act. The lights are running again as usual.

New Illinois Corporations. The secretary of state has licensed the following corporations: National Measured Service company, Chicago; capital stock, $50,000; incorporators, George H. Miller, Gilbert Noxon, and H. H. C. Miller. Money Weight Scale company of Europe, Chicago; capital stock, $50,000; incorporators, George C. Wilder, Albert Martin, and Charles F. Morse. C. Lambert company, Tonica; capital stock, $6,000; incorporators, J. C. Lambert, J. E. Hartenbower, and W. E. Kreider. Long Grove Social club, Long Grove; incorporators, Victor Sauer, H. H. Holtje, and W. J. Zimmer. J. F. White Manufacturing company, Bloomington; capital stock increased from $5,000 to $50,000, and name changed to Brown-Dooley Manufacturing company. P. and J. Mining company, Peoria; capital stock increased from $25,000 to $50,000.

Baggage Thief Makes Haal. Detectives are searching for one of the shrewdest thieves who ever operated in Joliet. By secretly changing the brass checks on some baggage in the Chicago and Rock Island baggage room, some unknown crook succeeded in securing a valise belonging to J. J. Smith of Chicago, traveling salesman for a wholesale dentist house. In the valise was about $400 worth of gold and silver in granulated form for dentists' use, life insurance policies for $11,000 with a large paid-up value and a check for $300. There is no clue to the thief.

Quarry Owner Killed by Train. Ignatz Zengel, one of the pioneer quarrymen of the west and owner of large quarries in the Quincy section, was killed by the cars at Quincy. He was walking on the track and stepped aside to let a train go by, was met by another one going in the opposite direction and was instantly killed.

Dog Killed by Two Tigers. Women and animals joined in a panic at the Lincoln park zoo in Chicago when a dog, tossed on top of the cages by the elephant, was torn limb from limb and devoured by two tigers.

Killed Beneath a Building. Benjamin Wiltz was crushed to death at Pekin. He was laying a brick foundation underneath an old building, when a jack-screw gave way and the building fell.

Peoria Newsdealer's Injuries Fatal. Ben S. Green, aged 50 and a prominent newsdealer, died at Peoria, as the result of injuries sustained two days ago while attempting to board a moving street car.
