LONG CHRISTIAN LIFE

Mrs. Joseph W. Foster Called to Great Beyond last Friday

To heal the wounds of sorrow caused by Death, time alone is needed and even then the scars bear evidence of the pain endured. Heavy upon the heart of the husband and three sons, together with the relatives and a host of friends lays the great burden of sorrow which came when Mrs. Joseph W. Foster unwillingly gave up the struggle of life last Friday, April 1, at 11 a. m.

Mrs. Foster's death was due to heart trouble and pleura-pneumonia. She had recovered somewhat from the attack of pneumonia when she suffered a relapse, her feeble condition not being able to ward off the attack of that dreaded disease.

The M. E. church was packed to the utmost Sunday afternoon when Rev. C. S. Clay, in his discourse, gave comforting thoughts to relatives and friends of the deceased. His words were fitting in that he paid a splendid tribute to the life so beautifully lived.

Among those left to mourn with the bereaved husband and three sons are three sisters, Mrs. Fidelia Skillen of Waverly, Iowa, Mrs. Mary E. Streeter and Mrs. Susan Dunbar of Belvidere, and one brother, Ed. Barringer of Kirkland.

Alida Barringer was born at Sand Lake, Green county, New York, August 30, 1831, and at the time of her death was 72 years, 7 months and one day of age.

In 1884, she came to DeKalb county with her parents in which county she has since resided. She was led to the hymeneal altar and became the wife of Joseph W. Foster June 19, 1849, which marriage took place in Sycamore. There were four children born to this union, three surviving sons, J. Wesley, Charles M. and Thomas P., who with the aged father and husband mourn the loss of one who had become endeared to them through the many years of life's joys and sorrows through which they passed. She was converted over fifty years ago and became a member of the M. E. church, remaining a faithful and consistent member until the final summons came.

Mrs. Foster was a good woman, a goodness that admits of no qualification. She was a kind mother, and God granted her desire in being spared to raise the family of three boys that were given to her. A most faithful companion to the husband, she battled the storms of life through fifty-five years.

The success of many a man is due largely to the indirect means of a noble woman. She with many others of her kind endured the trials of the war, shouldering the responsibilities of the home while her husband went to the front. She was an ideal homemaker. Her life was devoted to the things that were pure and of good report. She turned instinctively toward the good as the flower turns toward the light. She was a sincere, noble Christian woman of large heart, tender sympathies and a sublime love for the truth. None could enter the home but at once you would feel a cordial welcome. She was generous to a fault often denying herself of comforts to add to another's comfort. In her Christian life her testimony was always clear, and her loyalty to the church was not to be outdone by those of much younger years. Confidence begets confidence. She had it, she trusted others and they believed her.

Mrs. Foster's life was one of devotion, her death a triumphant one. Underneath her were the everlasting promises of God that supported her in her dying hour, and, while the many friends here mourn her departure, all heaven sends out the shout, "Welcome." Shortly before her death she told her husband that she would leave him shortly, but deaf to all premonitions her friends hoped to share her happy life for many years to come.

A famous evangelist has painted a graphic picture of an angel that was sent from Heaven to gather three of the most precious treasures he could find. In his quest he plucked a lily and saw a baby's smile and added it to his treasure, lastly gathering the look of love in the face of a mother and with these started back to Heaven. But the lily withered, the baby's smile vanished but the mother's love remained the same. So the roses of her youth have long since passed, and the smile of her face has gone into the far past but her mother love remains ever the same and lingers in the bleeding hearts she leaves behind. Her unflinching faith, unselfish love, patient fortitude and unfading hope of immortality are the stars that shine through the gloom on the stricken hearts and points them heavenward.

Among those present at the services from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Walker and son of Dundee, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Foster of Leaf River, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Dunbar of Belvidere.

John Schoomaker Dies at Fairdale

John Schoomaker, an old and respected citizen of Fairdale, died at his home early on Monday of last week. He had been in ill health for some time, gradually failing until the death summons came. The funeral was held Thursday, Rev. Stickelman having charge of the service.

LINCOLN'S ADVICE.

A Prescription That Might Be Used With Advantage Today.

There is a story still current in Illinois which says that an old farmer friend of President Lincoln, who used to correspond with him, complained on one occasion of his poor health. He received the following reply, which is quoted in Illinois as "Lincoln's prescription": "Do not worry. Eat three square meals a day. Say your prayers. Think of your wife. Be courteous to your creditors. Keep your digestion good. Steer clear of biliousness. Exercise. Go slow and go easy. Maybe there are other things that your special case requires to make you happy; but, my dear friend, these, I reckon, will give you a good life."

This advice is doubtless applicable in its entirety to many Americans in every state in the Union today. There are parts of it which apply to us generally—as a nation. "Do not worry. Keep your digestion good. Go slow and easy." It would be difficult to find an American who has not something to amend on these points. Worry and dyspepsia have assumed the proportions of national evils, and they are both more or less the result of undue haste. There is no surer way to promote dyspepsia than to be in a constant state of hurry, and nothing will so surely give one the "blues" or incline one to worrying and fretting as dyspepsia. Our native institution—the "quick lunch" restaurant—is responsible for a large proportion of the physical ills of business people in large cities. Eating hastily—"bolting" one's food, as it is popularly expressed—is enough to ruin the digestive organs of an ostrich. A man would better eat half as much as usual at the midday meal, which is usually the most hurried, and take time to masticate properly what he does put into his stomach. Better still would it be if he would give himself ample time to relax and eat a light lunch without allowing any thought of business to intrude on this necessary period of relaxation.—Success.

Ulysses and Philip.

Time cannot change nor custom stale the infinite uniformity of the human heart. When the late Admiral Philip reproved his enthusiastic men at the battle of Santiago with the tender words of compassion for the defeated foe, "Don't cheer, boys; the poor devils are dying," the heart of the world responded approvingly. But the American admiral was not the first man to have that feeling for the humane proprieties in the face of death. It is related of Ulysses, also a sailor, that he chided the old nurse when she began to rejoice over the slaughter of Penelope's wooers, telling her that her satisfaction at the doing of justice must not be expressed aloud, "for it is an unholly thing to boast over slain men." Ulysses and Philip each knew that he was an instrument in the execution of a righteous purpose, but when the work was done each was saddened by the thought that death had come through his acts, and each was transformed from an avenging agent into a compassionate man.—Youth's Companion.

A Suggestive Silence.

Perhaps the greatest practical drawback of much swearing is that oaths, however good and round they be, lose their effectiveness through frequent use. On the famous occasion when Washington swore he was not a spy, he was not a spy. The Boston Transcript shows an honest course better than "growing profanity." In this connection it tells of a noted prelate who was once playing golf with Mr. Choate and after fooling a tee shot egregiously stood looking at the ball for several moments. After waiting for the bishop to say something Mr. Choate remarked, "Bishop, that was the profane silence I ever heard."

DREARY TIBET.

Dr. Sven Hedin in "Central Asia and Tibet" brings small comfort to those who would aspire to wrest the country from the untutored natives who have so long possessed it in gloomy isolation. He declares that he would rather cross the dread desert of Gobi a dozen times than cross Tibet once. There is about it a sense of utter desolation. At one time he exclaims: "I can hardly conceive a more dreary country to be alone in than northern Tibet. The desert could not be worse. One might get through the days—but the nights! When the cold freezes you to the marrow and the dark mountain ranges shut you in and menace you with all sorts of unimaginable evils! I was surrounded by everything I needed—servants, a bodyguard of Cossacks, night watchmen and watchdogs—and yet when the snowstorms raged around my yurt and the wolves howled in the mountains I often felt a sense of utter loneliness steal over me."

CONDENSED STORIES.

Costly Error of an Applicant For a Pension and a Policy.

Besides being a statesman, Senator Dryden of New Jersey is also the president of a prominent life insurance company. The other day he received a letter like this:

Dear Sir—I am desirous of taking out a life insurance policy, and as I am from your state I thought I would write you directly, thinking I might get better terms, especially as I am in the best of health and would be an excellent risk. I have never suffered a day's serious illness in my life. I would be glad if you would have one of your agents directed to give my matter personal attention. Very truly yours,
JOHN SMITH.

The next letter the senator picked up had been forwarded to him from the insurance company's main office and was along this line:

Dear Sir—Can't you get me a pension? I served in the Spanish war, contracted a fever in Cuba and have since suffered with weakness of the back and legs, shock to nervous system, diseases of the stomach and digestive organs, vertigo and other ailments until I am a physical wreck. If anything is to be done for me it must come soon. Very respectfully,
JOHN SMITH.

Mr. Smith had made the embarrassing mistake of addressing the application for pension to the insurance office and the letter about the policy to Washington. Had he not done this his deception would probably never have been discovered.

As a result Mr. Smith will receive neither the pension nor the policy.—Boston Post.

Both From Cincinnati.

The young Duchess of Manchester, who is the daughter of Eugene Zimmerman of Cincinnati, was standing in the hall of an Irish hotel waiting for the duke when an excited American tourist rushed up and inquired if she were Miss —, a lady for whom he was waiting. The duchess drew herself up and replied stiffly enough, "I am the Duchess of Manchester." "Oh-h," replied her compatriot, "I'm from Cincinnati too!"

Story of Mrs. Booth-Tucker.

One story told of Mrs. Booth-Tucker when a little girl of thirteen shows her to have been the true child of her parents. When walking along the shore at Portsmouth beside her governess she saw a donkey cart being driven along furiously by a lad who was belaboring the poor beast savagely. Breaking away from her companion, she rushed after it and pulled the boy from his seat. Catching up his stick, she showered blows upon the lad's head and shoulders, with the words, uttered amid tears, "There, now, how do you like it?" Perhaps her pleading proved more powerful than the blows, but in a few moments the lad was kneeling beside the donkey asking God's forgiveness for his cruelty. The climax came with the girl driving back triumphantly in the cart beside the boy, who promised henceforth to be kind and to treat his donkey well.

Well, Hardly.

It is related of Frank R. Stockton that while on a visit to Boston he was invited to address the members of a well known woman's club. The member who conveyed the invitation was a most dignified and stately matron. With just a suspicion of asperity in her tone she suggested to the humorist that he might address the club on any subject which seemed to him appropriate, but that she would call his attention to the fact that this was "not a club of new women," with the deferential bow the humorist replied:

"Ah, madam, I am convinced of that. At the same time, however, you would not have me call you a club of old women, would you?"

ANCIENT PLANTS.

Results of Inquiry Into the Antiquity of Agriculture.

Few persons realize what a wealth of interest is to be found in the study of the history of cultivated plants. Agriculture must have been one of the first steps in civilization, when man began to give up the nomadic habit and claim a permanent residence as "home." Horticulture would follow at no very distant date, still as an adjunct of home, so it is no wonder that the two arts are invariably associated with that most expressive monosyllable so suggestive of peace, rest and affection. One eminent botanist, Alphonse de Candolle, spent years of incredible labor and research in this study, and one of his monuments is his work on the "Origin of Cultivated Plants."

As a single instance of the interest to be found in this study just glance for a moment at one of our cereals. The cultivation of wheat is lost in the mysterious past. Ancient Egyptian monuments, far older than the Hebrew Scriptures, show that the Egyptians had grown this plant for so long a time that the cultivation was thoroughly established. They ascribed the gift of wheat to their goddess Isis. Rice was grown in China so long ago as twenty-eight centuries before the Christian era, for in a ceremony instituted at that period the emperor had to sow rice once a year with religious rites. Barley and millet also go back to the distant past of the early men who built the lake dwellings of Europe. Oats followed later, and later still came the cultivation of rye. Maize was grown to such an extent that varieties were recognized when Aztec monuments were raised. Thus the story goes on, carrying us on to prehistoric—nay, primitive—times, whose records are only read in the refuse heaps of the early farmers of the world.—Exchange.

The Horse.

The following remarkable essay on the horse is said to be from the pen of an Indian student: "The horse is a very noble quadruped, but when he is angry he will not do so. He is ridden on the spinal cord by the bridle, and sadly the driver places his foot on the stirrups and divides his lower limbs across the saddle and drives his animal to the meadow. He has four legs; two are on the front side and two are afterward. These are the weapons on which he runs. He also defends himself by extending these in the rear in a parallel direction toward his foe, but this he does only when he is in an aggravating mood. There is no animal like the horse. No sooner they see their guardian or master than they always cry for food, but it is always at the morning time. They have got tails, but not so long as the cow and such other like animals."

A Persistent Hen.

The Springfield Republican tells the story of a hen that was engaged one night in brooding over some eggs in a barrel in the livery stable where she made her home.

The stable caught fire. With the courage of the boy on the burning deck, she refused to leave her post. The top of the barrel took fire. It burned halfway down, and still the hen did not move.

The stable was almost totally destroyed, but the firemen had the flames so far under control that a stream of water turned upon the hen's apartment extinguished the blaze.

The smoke did not seem to disturb the hen, nor did the flood of water pouring down the inside of the barrel. When daylight came she was still in her half burned tenement, and in due time she brought off her brood of eight chickens.

Locating the Note.

A bright American girl amazed a scientist whom she met recently at a London dinner party. The scientist narrated in great detail to the girl a series of experiments he was conducting with the microphone. "The microphone," he explained, "magnifies sounds to the ear as the microscope magnifies objects to the eye. The footfalls of a centipede heard through the microphone resemble a tattoo on a kettledrum. The dropping of a pin is like the report of a cannon." "That is very interesting and odd," said the girl. "This afternoon," resumed the scientist, "I caught a fly and studied its note. The note resembled the neighing of a horse." "Perhaps," said the young girl, "it was a horse fly."

His Art and His Manners.

"I'll admit that the eminent tragedian we have just mentioned is exceedingly irascible and sometimes indiscreet in his manifestations," said the playgoer, "but he is a fine actor."

"Yes," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes, "he knows how to act, but he doesn't know how to behave."—Washington Star.

HERBERT SPENCER.

He Talked "Like a Book" and Was a Very "Set" Man.

Mr. George Iles in a personal article on Herbert Spencer in the Outlook tells these characteristic anecdotes:

When the philosopher visited America in 1882 he was in his sixty-third year. His fair, ruddy complexion gave little token of delicate health or of the sleeplessness which had afflicted him since 1855, when he completed the "Principles of Psychology." In frame he was rather tall and spare. To casual acquaintances his manners were cold and formal, to his friends he was cordial, and on occasions he could be downright jovial, telling and listening to humorous stories with unbounded glee. From his habit of dictating to an amanuensis he had come to talking "like a book." Most of his sentences might well have been printed just as they fell from his lips. Once in my hearing a friend who had not seen him for years congratulated him on his good health, as evidenced by his rosy cheeks. "Do not," said he, "confuse complete with incomplete relation. Because some healthy people are ruddy, all ruddy people are considered healthy, whereas a red complexion may denote a flabby vascular system." A fair specimen, this, of how he might at any moment drop into generalization. When he was in the critical mood the schoolmaster in his blood came out plainly; his long, bony hand, raised in obfuscation, seemed ready to wield a ferule, whereas I ever rejoiced that I had learned my rule of three under other auspices.

He was a very "set" man. At Montreal I told him that the view from the summit of Mount Royal commands superb stretches of the St. Lawrence and Ottawa valleys. But the view from halfway up the acclivity contented Mr. Spencer. He had found views thus restricted more pleasing than wider vistas, and not one step farther would he budge, although twice invited. Not far away a costly mansion was being finished for a multimillionaire whose fortune had been won with little scruple. When it was suggested that his carriage should pass this mansion he was indignant. "It is largely," he said, "the admiring ostentation of such men that makes them possible. Baron Grant, the fraudulent speculator, sent me an invitation for the inaugural of Leicester square, his gift to London. Before a party of friends I tore the card in pieces. Such men as Grant try to compensate for robbing Peter by giving Paul what they do not owe him."

Another Insurance Fraud.

When the doctor came to see what he could do for the Herlihy family, by whom he had been hastily summoned, he found Mrs. Herlihy in bed, her face and head adorned with plaster and bandages, and Mr. Herlihy sitting in stolid misery at her bedside.

"Cheer up, Tim," said the doctor. "She'll pull through all right. I don't believe there are any bones broken."

"Don't be trovin' to raise me moind," said Mr. Herlihy darkly, "for it's impossible, docther. Here Oi had her insured against accidents of every kind only four days ago an' paid down me foive dollars as prompt as anny man cud, an' befoor the week is gone she falls down stairs wid a bucket o' coal, an' now luke at her, marred from ind to ind!"—Youth's Companion.

Freddy's Diplomacy.

"Father," inquired Freddy as he put down the top he was spinning, "what is diplomacy?" "Diplomacy, my boy," replied the old man proudly, "is doing exactly the right thing at the right moment." "Then I reckon I used diplomacy last night." "What did you do?" "Why, I heard mother say that she was going to give me some medicine. Now, you know, I generally sleep on the outside of the bed, but last night when I heard mother coming upstairs I pushed Johnny into my place and slid into his part of the bed." "What happened?" "Why, Johnny had the medicine; that's all."—London People.

He Didn't Have to Prove It.

One day a stranger stepped off the train at Hopkins and said to a man on the depot platform, "Can you tell me who is the best lawyer in this town?" "I am," replied the man on the platform without hesitation. The stranger seemed somewhat disconcerted by this display of egotism and gently said, "Excuse me, sir, but I should like to have you prove it." "Don't have to prove it, sir," answered the man on the platform. "I admit it. I'm the only lawyer in this town, sir." And immediately the stranger got a lawyer and the lawyer got a client.—Kansas City Journal.

Bismarck Silence.

When Disraeli was a boy his father desired him to become a clergyman, says Hon. Andrew D. White in the Century. In his later years the "Iron Chancellor" found humor in the suggestion.

"You probably think that if I had become a clergyman I should be a better man," he said jocosely to his wife one evening.

"I will not reply to that," she said quietly, "for my answer would not be polite."

Bright Boy.

A teacher at Buckport, Me., was trying to get a bit of knowledge into the class in arithmetic, and one boy in particular would do nothing that he was asked to. Finally the teacher, in desperation, turned on him and asked him what he intended to be if by any chance he was permitted to grow up. The youth replied that he thought he would be a teacher and have his scholars to do his figuring for him.

Not What She Meant.

One of the German women who accompanied George I. to England was hissed and hooted at by the crowd as she was being driven along the mall to St. James' palace. Putting her head out of the coach, she called out in broken English: "Good people, why you abuse us? We come for all your goods." "Yes," answered a man in the crowd, "and for our chattels too."

Life at Interlocking Switch
The Sunday edition of the Record-Herald contained an interesting article of Charles Marshall of Kingston, day operator at the crossing of the Illinois Central and Northwestern railroads, one mile east of Colvin Park. In connection with his regular duties, Marshall has given some time to the culture of plants which adorn either side of the tower room, the thrifty condition of the plants being due to the great amount of sun-light which enters. Mr. Marshall has been at the tower four years and has about completed a course in mechanical drawing. He has been offered several good positions and will probably accept one of them upon the completion of his work.
How to Ward Off Rheumatism
"For years when spring time came on and I went into gardening, I was sure to have an attack of rheumatism and every attack was more severe than the preceding one," says Josie McDonald of Man, Logan county, West Va. "I tried everything with no relief whatever, until I procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and the first application gave me ease, and before the first bottle was used I felt like a new person. Now I feel that I am cured, but I always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in the house, and when I feel any symptoms of a return I soon drive it away with one or two applications of this liniment." For sale by Hunt's Pharmacy.
Robbed the Grave
A startling incident is narrated by John Oliver of Philadelphia as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters; to my great joy the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents, guaranteed at Hunt's Pharmacy.
