There will be six double locks, three pairs in flight at Gatun, with a combined lift of eighty-five feet; one pair at Pedro Miguel, with a lift of thirty and one-third feet, and two pairs at Miraflores, with a combined lift of fifty-four and two-thirds feet. All the locks will be 1,000 feet long. 110 feet wide and walled in at sides and ends, except for gates and culverts for the admission and discharge of water, the gates, culverts and valves being handled and operated by electrical machinery. The average time of filling and emptying a lock will be about fifteen minutes, and the time required to pass a vessel through all the locks will be about three hours. The time of passage of a vessel through the entire canal is estimated as ranging from ten to twelve hours, according to the size of the ship and the rate of speed at which it can travel. Once in the lock a ship will be lifted and lowered by the inflow and discharge of water.

CARRIES 105 OF SURVIVORS

Fifty Sailors and Steerage Passengers Were Killed by the Explosion-Many Are Rescued From the Raging Sea-Captain May Be Blind.

On Board the North German Lloyd Steamship Grosser Kerfuerst, at Sea (by wireless telegraph to Cape Race), Oct. 14.—The Grosser Kerfuerst is approaching New York with 105 survivors on board from the steamship Volturno, burned to the water's edge in a gale in mid-Atlantic and abandoned last Friday. The passengers and crew of the Grosser Kurfuerst witnessed thrilling scenes when their vessel, called by distress signals from the Volturno, arrived in her vicinity.

The Volturno was found burning fiercely and her crew and passengers helpless in the heavy seas. It was learned by wireless messages from the flaming vessel that the fire had been started by an explosion in the forward hold at seven o'clock Thursday morning, ship's time.

Flames Rise High in Air.
On the arrival of the Kurfuerst the flames from the hold of the Volturno were leaping 80 feet into the air through the hatchways. It was learned | Master of III-Fated Ship Injured While that fifty or more of the crew and steerage passengers had been killed by the explosion and the fire.

Six boats were lowered immediately afterward from the Volturno's davits. Three of them, still empty, were smashed to pieces against the vessel's side. One boat with 40 passengers on board was capsized while being til his eyesight was almost lost. When launched and all on it were lost. Twelve liners were brought by the wireless distress signals within hail of the Volturno. The Cunard liner Carmania was the first of these. She reached the scene about noon. Then came the Seydlitz. the Grosser Kurfuerst, the Kroonland, the New York, the Devonian, La Touraine, the Narragansett, the Minneapolis, the Asian. the Rappahannock and the Czar.

Fire Reaches the Bunkers. The sea was running too high to allow the taking of the Volturno's passengers when the rescuing vessels came on the scene. During the day the flames from the hold of the Volturno were kept more or less under control, but about nine o'clock Thursday night the fire reached the coal bunkers and it was found necessary o close the bulkheads. The pumps thereupon were unable to work at full pressure and the flames broke through the entire forward part of the vessel. At 9:40 Thursday night another excaused a panic among her despairing passengers and crew.

The Grosser Kurfuerst launched three boats and rescued 32 persons WHITE SOX WIN CITY SERIES who had been washed into the sea. One of the rescuing lifeboats was out for six hours and was nearly lost.

Stock Exchange, Montevideo

The present estimate of the national live stock industry shows that the country has about 8,000, head of cattle, 25,000,000 sheep, and about 600,000

hogs, the numbers of other animals being comparatively insignificant. These figures bear a numerical relation of about one-fourth, in cattle and sheep, to the figures of the Argentine Republic, where horse breeding is likewise conducted very extensively. While Uruguay is not a serious competitor of Argentina in supplying the foreign meat markets, it is the largest producer form but a small rivulet in comparison with the oceans of blood that have been shed in Europe to indulge the ambitions of despots, or to satisfy the righteous claims of freedom. That truthful observation may be applied with peculiar force to the epublic of Uruguay, which, during ts brief existence as an independent state, has passed through many periods of stress and storm; but it is just such occasions that evolve the principles of liberty, order and justice, indispensable to the survival and welfare of a nation. The fratricidal wars, in most cases waged in the cause of human liberty, which mark the history of the Latin-American countries, are apt to be magnified as indications of the unformed character of Ibero-Americans, on account of their recent occurrence, just as the proportions and sanguinary nature of European wars and revolutions are unconsciously diminished through the remoteness of the period in which they took place. Whether or not it be true that the evolution of the Uruguayan republic has been hastened, or, even impelled, by the many internecine wars which have torn and distressed the people, it is beyond question today that the republic has entered upon an era of permanent peace based on the highest principles of justice and of the respect of all legitimate rights.

Uruguay is in South America what Switzerland, Belgium and Holland are in Europe. Of small territorial extent and population, its people may justly claim to have attained a degree of civilization and progress equal to that of their more powerful neighbors.

In commenting upon the laws and constitution of Uruguay, Anatole France expressed the opinion that the Uruguayan nation was capable of creating "a superior type of civilization." The constitution, which is the only one in the South American republics that has remained unaltered the fullest liberty and protection for all, irrespective of race or religion. Treating the same point, M. E. Stocquart, the distinguished Belgian jurist, in his work "Belgian Law, says "Uruguay, from the point of view of civil rights, is the most advanced of all the countries of South America;" and when we look at the wise provisions and high civic ideals contained in the constitution and in subsequent legislation, there would appear to be abundant justification for M. Stocquart's

The laws of Uruguay, as in many American states, are codified, and some of these codes might well be used as models for the legislators of other countries occupying a more prominent position in the world than the republic of Uruguay. Of its commercial code a great Italian master has said that it is "one of the most notable legislative works of our time, worthy of being used as a model by all who have to legislate on mercantile law."

The penal and rural codes are equally replete with sound and far-seeing provisions. The former is largely based upon the doctrines of Zamerdelli, Mancini and Savelli, and the Spanish and Chilean codes, while, in regard to the rural code, M. Lepelletier, in his criticisms of the French rural code, stated that "it is possible to envy nations which, like Uruguay, have known how to produce a work of such utility in a country where agriculture constitutes the main source of national production. Commenced in 1873, the rural code of Uruguay was promulgated in July, 1875, and revived three years later, and it has never since then ceased to be changed and improved by laws and decrees which, together with the text of the original, make it today a legislative achievement of the highest value.'

Equally wise and just are the codes relating to civil and criminal procedure as well'as the military and administrative codes, which regulate and provide equitable laws on the subjects with which they deal. Without doubt Uruguay is one of the healthiest and most beautiful countries of South America, differing from many in appearance through the absence of the snow-covered mountains which appear so frequently in the southern portion of the continent. The country is flat, with slight undulations. It is traversed by something like 500 rivers and small streams, which make it extremely fertile.

Uruguay, from the American point of view, is a small country, although it embraces a larger area than many important countries of Europe. The ownership of the land is not as much divided as it should be, but, just as Mr. Farquhar has already implanted a system of colonization in the Parana, the government and the railroad companies of Uruguay have already purchased large tracts for the purpose of introducing a form of colonization which will ultimately give to the rapidly increasing number of settlers full owner-

The principal industry of the country is stock raising, which is constantly increasing in extent and quality through the growing importation of

The capital of Uruguay is built on the left bank of the mouth of the River Plate, practically opposite Buenos Aires. Between the two cities there is a service of splendid steamboats, which perform the journey, generally at night, through the silvery waters of the River Plate in seven or eight hours. From Rio de Janeiro and other parts of Brazil the journey is much longer, and can only be made comfortably in the transatlantic liners which, on their way from Europe to Buenos Aires, touch at Brazilian and Uruguayan ports. Hence during the many years over which revolutionary outbreaks were of frequent occurrence prominent stock raisers naturally limited their operations.

The railways which unite Uruguay with some of the adjacent republics and widen the sphere of labor are being extended with great vigor in all parts of the country. Among the many railroads now under survey or construction one of the most important will be that stipulated for in a contract with the Pan-American Transcontinental Railway company, from the northern frontier of the republic to its southern border.

SYNOPSIS.

Fran arrives at Hamilton Gregory's home in Littleburg, but finds him absent conducting the choir at a camp meeting. The repairs thither in search of him, laughs during the service and is asked to leave. Abbott Ashton, superintendent of schools, escorts Fran from the tent. He tells her Gregory is a wealthy man, deeply interested in charity work, and a pillar of the church. Ashton becomes greatly interested in Fran and while taking leave of her, holds her hand and is seen by Sapphira Clinton, sister of Robert Clinton, chairman of the school board. Fran tells Gregory she wants a home with him. Grace Noir, Gregory's private secretary, takes a violent dislike to Fran and advises her to go away at once. Fran hints at a twenty-year-old secret, and Gregory in agitation asks Grace to leave the room. Fran relates the story of how Gregory married a young girl at Springfield while attending college and then deserted her. Fran is the child of that marriage.
