FAXON THE WINNER

Judges of Appellate Court Unanimous in Opinion Regarding Ballots

WILL OF THE PEOPLE RECOGNIZED

Judge Edwards Would not Assume Responsibility of Throwing out Ballots and Asked Advice

Judge Edwards, who sat on the bench in the hearing of the primary election contest between Faxon and Coleman, did not assume the responsibility of deciding the case. From a standpoint of the letter of the law he could not do otherwise than throw out the ballots, but following the custom long established by himself in dealing out real justice, Judge Edwards gave the matter further consideration. In turning the matter over to the appellate court for an advisory decision, he established himself more firmly in the estimation of the people of his district.

By a unanimous advisory opinion the three judges of the appellate court of the second district decided late on Tuesday that the Kendall county ballots were legal and should be counted and also that the LeRoy township ballots were legal and should be counted. The letter from the appellate court judges, received by Judge Edwards Wednesday and read in open court from the bench was as follows:

THE COURT'S OPINION

Ottawa, Ill., Oct. 24, 1916,
Hon. Claire C. Edwards,
Judge Circuit Court,
Belvidere, Ill.

Dear Sir:

We duly received your recent letter in which you state that there is pending before you a contest asking for a recount of the ballots cast for member of the state board of equalization for the Twelfth congressional district at the recent primary and asking our advice on two questions stated by you.

We understand this case cannot come before the Appellate court, Second district, and therefore conclude to give you our view of the proper answer to your questions.

We have received briefs from the respective parties.

Upon due consideration of the facts stated by you and of the suggestions made by counsel we advise you that in our opinion the questions asked by you are properly answered as follows:

1. The ballots cast in Le Roy township, Boone county, Illinois, at said primary for the member of the state board of equalization of the Twelfth congressional district should be counted.

2. The ballots cast in Kendall county, Illinois, at said primary for member of the state board of equalization of the Twelfth district should be counted.

Respectfully yours,

JOHN C. NIEHAUS,
D. J. CARNES,
DORRANCE DIBELL.

WANTS MAN DECLARED DEAD

Mrs. George Binder of Earlville Would Recover $3,000

The suit to have Geo. Binder, formerly of Earlville, declared legally dead, was before Judge Mazinni Slusser in the circuit court at Geneva when Attorneys John C. Murphy and Edward Lyon of Aurora, representing Mrs. Mary Binder, wife of the missing man, put in additional proof to show that he hasn't been located.

The suit is an action to recover on a policy for $3,000 issued by the Modern Woodmen society and if a judgment is entered Mrs. Binder will get interest at the rate of six per cent from December 1912.

The law provides for declaring a person legally dead if they have been missing without anyone knowing their whereabouts for seven years.

R. B. SWIFT NAMED

Senatorial Committee Named the Defeated Candidate Before Primaries

The vacancy caused on the Republican ticket for the office of state senator in the Boone-Lake district has been filled by the senatorial committee by the appointment of Rodney B. Swift, the candidate that Senator Olson defeated by a narrow majority. The vote was so close that the appointment is the fairest that could be made.

A national candy day has been proposed.

Peace and Prosperity, not Because of Administration's Methods, but in Spite of them

WHAT ABOUT THE FUTURE?

Next Tuesday the American people go to the polls and make their decision between two men and two principles. Personally there can be no criticism of either Wilson or Hughes, but we are not placing men in the president's chair of this great nation because of our liking their personal characteristics. Every citizen next Tuesday should above everything else consider just what these two men and the two parties they represent, stand for.

The past record of Mr. Hughes has shown him to be a man of strong character not only personally but as an official, and he has always had the courage of his convictions. On the other hand we have Mr. Wilson with a strong personal character but of a vacillating nature entirely unsafe under normal conditions. We must not judge Mr. Wilson as the man of today, but as he might be in normal times. "He has kept us out of war" is the slogan that seems to meet with the approval of Democratic leaders, coming as it does from the voters thruout the land. Those who have been in the councils of the president know that he has not kept us out of war, or in other words, it is not due to his actions that we are now enjoying prosperous peace. If Mr. Wilson's methods were of a nature that would bid for peace, why did his secretary of state, Mr. Bryan, resign thru fear of war due to those methods? Those who have given the matter careful study, comparing the conditions of today with those of 1812, 1847, 1861 and 1897, know that Mr. Wilson could not have become mixed up in the European controversy if he had been as ambitious as Alexander the Great or Napoleon. There has never been a time when he could have pried into the European war with a "jimmy." In memory of Abraham Lincoln and Wm. McKinley we bow our heads with reverence, and yet even these great leaders did not keep us out of war, and no one looking back at the conditions at those times would ever think of censuring those immortals for taking up arms. Had such a man as Wilson been president at the time of the firing on Fort Sumpter, he would no doubt, as Mr. Adkins said the other evening, written a polite note to Jefferson Davis and asked him how many states wished to secede. At the time of the destruction of the Main in Havana harbor, had Mr. Wilson been president, the king of Spain would have received a polite note asking that he be more careful in the future or he would be held to "strict accountability." Looking back now, dear reader, would you have it thus? At the time of the mix up with Mexico in 1847, the Wilson policy would have given our neighbors the boundary line they desired. Would you in this day, in that event, look back at the past history of the United States with any pride?

In the future years our children will read history and blush with shame as they scan the pages. They will read of the hundreds who went down in the Lucitania and other boats and with pride they will read of the decisive action taken by our chief executive. They will read of the murders, pillaging and rapine in Mexico, where American citizens have been the sufferers and wonder what manner of man we had in the white house at the time. They will read of the contempt in which the citizens of the United States were held by the half civilized people of Mexico. They will read of the bluff at Vera Cruz following Huerta's refusal to salute the flag he had insulted. They will read of the expedition into Mexico to catch the most murderous bandit of the age and will hang their heads in shame to read further that by order of the executive of a decaying nation the great army of the United States was denied the use of the railways, denied the privilege of passing thru the towns and at last ordered to march in no other direction but back to the border. They will read of the movement of the national guard, of the fact that 150,000 American soldiers were on the border, eager to straighten matters out in Mexico, eager to capture the murderous Villa, and still discover that during the months that this big army was on the border, General Pershing was still backing away from Villa instead of following out the plans as demanded by the United States, but checked by a vacillating president. "Wilson kept us out of war!" Yes, but during the past two years more American citizens have been killed by waging peace in Mexico than were killed during the Spanish war.

Abnormal Prosperity

President Wilson could no more prevent the abnormal prosperity of the United States than he could have forced the nation into war. As stated in The Republican-Journal last week, we are prosperous in spite of the Underwood law and not because of it. The Chicago Journal says that only three per cent of the exports are munitions of war. The Journal tells that which is not true in this instance, in that it does not tell all the truth. As a matter of fact the exports from the United States to Europe during the past three years have consisted of over 53 per cent commodities for which there has been a demand owing to the war. Merely ammunition and guns do not tell the story. Since England has been engaged in the war she has had little time to take care of her great trade in South America and the Orient. This has fallen to the United States and added to the exports to the warring nations accounts absolutely for the prosperity. There have been no imports from Europe compared with times of peace. As a matter of fact the Underwood tariff law has cut no figure since the first ten months of the Democratic administration. A tariff law could not be drafted that would have any bearing on the trade today. There are certain articles that the United States must have irrespective of price and the European nations are in the same boat. You will only have to go back three years to see the results of the Underwood free trade bill. During the first ten months that the bill was in operation the country was being flooded with the goods made by cheap labor in Europe, factories were closing and men were beginning to hunt the "bread line." What would have been the condition today but for the war? Look back to the years of Democratic rule and the question is answered. Do you want to take a chance on a repetition of those conditions?

Think well before voting next Tuesday. With a protective tariff the United States will continue in prosperity when the war is closed. With free trade at the time we will soon have lost that prosperity as well as having lost the respect of other nations.

Exports of war munitions in the eight months ending August, 1916, were $545,225,000. Of this, explosives amounted to $459,000,000. For the full twelve months of 1915 the total value of war munitions was only $242,000,000. War accessories, such as automobiles, motorcycles, etc. (not included in the above figures) in the eight months amounted to $109,000,000, compared with $131,000,000 for the full twelve months of 1915. War supplies, such as horses, mules, railway cars, engines, etc., amounted to $200,000,000 against $247,000,000 for the full twelve months. In the eight months exports in war stuffs were valued at $853,000,000, against $620,000,000 for the full twelve months of 1915.

Church People Win

Members of the Rochelle M. E. church were displeased with the action of the conference in sending their pastor, Rev. W. L. Whipple to Poplar Grove instead of returning him to Rochelle and took the matter up with the bishop in so strenuous a manner that Rev. Whipple will remain in Rochelle for another year.

Genoa Enthusiasts Assist in Making "Burlington Way" Reality

MORE BOOSTING AT SYCAMORE

Meeting Last Tuesday Evening not Well Attended on Account of Bad Weather, but All are Alive

The Genoa enthusiasts whose names appear below have paid the sums set opposite their respective names for the purpose of defraying expenses of painting the poles along the proposed "Burlington Way" and painting signs. This is a good start and more funds will be forthcoming from the Genoa people if needed.

True Republican: The "Burlington Way" was given cordial endorsement at a meeting held in Townsend theatre on Tuesday evening of about 50 good roads enthusiasts and public-spirited citizens who assembled in spite of the cold, rainy and generally disagreeable weather. The meeting had been advertised in all the towns it is proposed shall be on the Peoria-Belvidere division of the "Orange and White Auto Trail," and assurances that a number of outside people would be present had been received, but the bad weather kept them away except delegations from DeKalb and Genoa.

A. E. Nilsen of Iowa City, Iowa, secretary of the Burlington Way association, gave a comprehensive and full history of the organization and stated what it is proposed to do and what will be required of each town on the Burlington Way.

At a meeting held at Ottawa on October 11 the extension of the trail northerly from Ottawa was definitely fixed. It will be run from Ottawa through Leland, Waterman, DeKalb, Sycamore and Genoa to Belvidere. This section of the trail will be called the Peoria-Belvidere Division.

J. F. Richardson, Jr., of Ottawa has been chosen general supervisor of this division, and vice-presidents have been chosen to represent the towns between Ottawa and Belvidere as follows:

Ottawa—A. Richards.
Leland—H. W. Watts.
Baker—A. Kirkhus.
Waterman—Thomas Roberts.
DeKalb—J. H. Jarbo.
Sycamore—C. M. Kugler.
Genoa—George Loptien.
Belvidere—A. G. White.

Secretary Nilsen explained the organization and addressed the meeting for nearly an hour on the subject of hard roads. He urged co-operation with the board of supervisors and highway commissioners of the various districts, taking the position that one shovel would build more roads than a carload of hammers. Co-operation and organization is the only way to secure good roads, and they will never come from knocking the public officials.

The Burlington Way and its great stretch of eighteen hundred miles of marked auto trails was unfolded to the interested listeners, and its history and steady growth and efficient organization was dilated upon by the speaker.

He was followed by Eugene Brown, Peoria vice-president of the Burlington Way, who spoke on the benefits that can be derived from the trail, on good roads in general.

We, the undersigned agree to pay the sum set opposite our names for the purpose of painting the poles on the proposed "Burlington Way" and painting signs for same.

BURLINGTON SAFE "CRACKED"

Fred Pfingston Loses Some Cash and Safe is Ruined

Residents of Burlington village are sound sleepers, says the Elgin News. An explosion which wrecked a large safe in the Fred Pfingston garage some time during Wednesday night of last week failed to arouse them and crackmen escaped without leaving a trace of their identity.

Damage to the safe is almost equal to the loot secured. According to Supervisor Pfingston but between $50 and $75 in cash was obtained. Two checks, one for $133 and another for $124 also disappeared but payment on them has been stopped. It will cost more than $50 to repair the safe.

The burglars entered the garage by smashing a window. They broke in the vault door with tools obtained at the Schneider blacksmith shop. The steel plates of the safe were drilled, cracks were "soaped" and a charge of nitroglycerine used as the explosive. It is believed that the vault door was closed to muffle the sound.

Sheriff Richardson was in Burlington Thursday investigating the robbery. He said he had a good clue but would give out no further information. Workmen left the garage about 8 o'clock that night. The robbery was discovered shortly before 7 o'clock the next morning. Whether the safe blowers came in an automobile could not be ascertained.

GRAND JURY INDICTMENTS

George J. Patterson Granted Divorce from Verde L. Patterson

True Republican: A number of divorces were granted and other orders entered by Judge Slusser in circuit court last week, and the grand jury returned indictments as follows:

John Price, burglary and larceny.
Ed Stiller and Roy Hamel, malicious mischief.

Frank Kolkay, forgery (2).

William Geocarie and Jane Vlahos, confidence game.

William Geocarie, larceny.
John H. Hutchison, selling intoxicating liquor in anti-saloon territory and keeping nuisance.

Several decrees were entered in partition cases and cases to quiet title.

A divorce was granted George J. Patterson from Verde L. Patterson.

In the divorce case of Emma Schult vs. Fritz Schult, Attorney James Cliffe entered appearance for the mother Emma Schult and consented that custody of both Frida and Louis Schult be determined on list already taken. Finding that mother is unfit to have nurture and custody of children. Court takes under advisement final custody, but pending decision gives temporary custody of Louis to W. C. Lindsay and of Frida to James Cliffe.

TUBERCULOSIS SUNDAY

Will be Observed in 100,000 Churches in December

More than 100,000 churches and other religious organizations are expected to observe Tuberculosis Sunday on December 3 or 10, this year making the seventh annual participation of religious bodies in an intensive campaign to educate the public on the subject of tuberculosis.

Two Sundays have been designated by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis in order that the churches may choose the one which will best fit in with their program of services. These dates come at the beginning and end of Tuberculosis Week, which is conducted under the direction of the National Association. For those worshipping on Saturday, December 2 and 9 have been set aside.

Ford Pays $4,000,000 Monthly

Henry Ford, the automobile manufacturing magnate, has in round number, 50,000 men and women in his employ. They are mostly men and the great majority receive $5 a day or more as wages. Yet in spite of the payroll of about $4,000,000 a month or $48,000,000 a year, the profits of the company last year amounted to almost $60,000,000.

SCHOOL LAW VOID

Act Providing for High School Districts Held Unconstitutional

NO ELECTION ON THE EIGHTH

The Supreme Court of Illinois by its Decision Makes "Grabbing" Territory Unnecessary in Future

There will be no election in Genoa township on the 8th for the purpose of establishing a township high school district, a decision rendered by the supreme court of Illinois last week knocking all plans in this and other vicinities into a cocked hat. The court holds that the law enacted in 1911 (and revised several times since that date) is unconstitutional. The good-school enthusiasts in Genoa will have no further cause to worry over the other fellow "cutting in" on us. We may now take our time in working up the consolidated school proposition without fear of some other town "grabbing" off a piece of the territory in the meantime.

There are many township high school districts in the state that will be hit by the decision of the court and they are in various stages of development. In some instances they had gone no further than had Genoa, while in others the question had been carried and bonds issued. No doubt the schools already established and in operation under the provision of the defunct law, will in some manner be legalized.

The people of the city of Genoa are not bemoaning the lost opportunity for establishing a township high school, for a very few here were enthusiasts in that direction. A consolidated school, taking in all the grades, has been the plan for years and is still the plan that will be worked out sooner or later. The high school proposition was brought about merely as a precaution in preventing the territory getting away from us. As stated in The Republican-Journal time and again, no district can be forced into consolidation. A majority of the legal voters in each and every district of the proposed territory must sign the petition. It is on this fair basis that the workers wish to establish a school. It will be a long time coming, no doubt, but there are new converts being made every day.

The Sycamore papers both had real spasms this week over the awful thing that the city of Genoa was trying to put over, but the county seat publishers were just a little tardy in denouncing the "good-school boosters" of Genoa. Long before the sleepy editors of the touchy city of Sycamore had written the lengthy and "heavy" articles which appeared in Tuesday's edition's, the supreme court had settled matters.

Notice to Voters

The Supreme Court of Illinois in its October session having declared the Township High School District Act of 1911 unconstitutional, the call for an election on October 8th in the City Hall, Genoa, Ill., is hereby made void and will not be held.

McQUEEN WINS SUIT

Gets Clear Title to Eighty Acres of Land Near Kirkland

Among the decisions by the Illinois supreme court Tuesday afternoon was one in which the title to 80 acres of land near Kirkland was involved. The court decided in favor of John McQueen, who had purchased the land from Thomas Renwick, father of Mrs. W. H. Anderson, of Kirkland.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson sought to have the deed given Mr. McQueen set aside on the ground they had a verbal contract with Mrs. Anderson's father for the 80 acres.

It appears that Mr. Renwick deeded 160 acres of land to Mrs. Anderson. The eighty in dispute is land adjoining the farm of 160 acres. For a number of years they worked the eighty, after clearing the land and ploughing it, paying a rental of $2.50 per acre to Mr. Renwick and with the verbal understanding, they contended, that the eighty would be deeded to them.

Mr. Renwick sold the eighty to Mr. McQueen about two years ago and the Andersons brought suit in the circuit court of DeKalb county to oust McQueen from possession. The court decided against them.

Then they retained W. L. Pierce and A. J. Strom, of this city, to appeal the case to supreme court.

By the decision Tuesday the verdict of the lower court is affirmed and McQueen's deed held valid.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

A very sublime and grand thing is truth, in its way though, like other sublime and grand things, such as thunderstorms, and that we're not always over and above glad to see it—Dickens.

PALATABLE FOODS.

A nice, rich, steamed brown bread with raisins may be served with a rich pudding sauce, making an excellent dessert, and no one need be the wiser as to its being a makeshift in an emergency. If no raisins are steamed in the bread a few may be steamed and sprinkled over each slice with a few chopped nuts.

Savory Beans.—A pint of kidney beans boiled until tender with a piece of salt pork or bacon, when done, will have a rich sauce. Add more water if necessary; add a fried onion and some chopped parsley to the beans. Season to taste and when serving add a tablespoonful each of oil and vinegar to further season them.

Roquefort Cheese Dressing.—Mix together half a teaspoonful of salt, a quarter of a teaspoonful of white pepper, six tablespoonfuls of olive oil, and when well mixed add three tablespoonfuls of vinegar or lemon juice. Beat all together until an emulsion is formed. Add to this an eighth of a pound of Roquefort cheese, crushed fine, and a little chopped pimento or tabasco sauce.

Boiled Fresh Tongue Sardellen Sauce.—Cook a fresh tongue in simmering water for three hours until it is tender. Skim it and cut in quarter-inch slices, arrange on a platter and pour over it the following sauce: Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter and add two tablespoonfuls of flour; mix and cook, then add gradually two cups of the liquor in which the tongue was boiled, six anchovies, cut fine, let boil a minute, season with salt and pepper and pour over the tongue.

Blitzkuchen.—Cream a cupful of butter, add a cupful of powdered sugar, add the grated rind of half a lemon, sift two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a teaspoonful of salt and two cupfuls of flour together; add three-quarters of a cupful of milk, alternating with the flour, and the yolks of four eggs; beat well, fold in the whites and bake in a shallow pan; brush the top with egg, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon and finely chopped almonds. Bake 20 minutes.

Among men who have any sound and sterling qualities there is nothing so contagious as pure openness of heart.

Speak with tact. Without it, better not to speak at all.

FOR BREAKFAST.

There are several things which enter into the right kind of a breakfast, first, the individual to be served, age, state of health, occupation, season and climate, as well as the supplies to be obtained.

The old standbys of bacon, toast, coffee, preceded by some sort of fruit is the breakfast of the average person. It is the meal which most housewives complain about the oftenest, being hard to give variety.

Grapes are one of the fruits most enjoyed in the fall and are a most wholesome fruit; apples, pears and peaches all have a wholesome acid, very beneficial to the digestion.

Plain boiled rice makes a welcome breakfast cereal; omelets of various kinds give a change from the everyday shell-cooked, poached or fried egg. A most appetizing method of serving eggs is to drop them into individual ramekins, cover with cream, dot with bits of butter and season with salt and pepper; place in the oven in a dish of hot water and bake until the eggs are set.

Where fresh mackerel is obtained, no more tasty dish can be offered than broiled mackerel or the fish backed in cream. Place it in a dripping pan with a little water, skin side down, and place in the hot oven; when the water has evaporated pour over the fish a cupful of good cream; heat through and serve, adding the seasonings at the last, not to curdle the cream, although that need not entirely spoil the dish, but it does detract from its appearance.

Chops, liver and bacon, sausages of various kinds, are all meats used for breakfast. Only a small portion should be served, as it is much better for the health to eat meat but once a day and that at the heavy meal, or dinner.

Hot breads are liked for breakfast, and griddle cakes the year round never seem to lose their popularity. For the Sunday breakfast it is wise to have an entire change. As it is a meal of more leisure than every-day breakfasts, it may be a little more elaborate.

A fruit that is subacid is best to serve in the morning; a cereal with cream is given, though the practice of serving acid fruits and cereals with cream is quite general.

The next best thing to understanding the whole of any subject, is to be aware of that part of it we do not understand.—Whately.

A drop of ink may make a million think.

APPETIZING DISHES.

Very pretty and useful little receptacles for holding ices may be made by using the sweet waters held together at the ends with frosting to make boxlike dishes; fill with cream and serve.

Fig Preserve.—Wash ripe figs in soda water and drop the figs into boiling hot sirup, using six pounds of sugar to eight pounds of fruit; cook until the figs become clear, a half hour or longer. Flavor with a branch of lemon verbena, leaves of rose geranium and a small box of crystallized ginger. Seal with paraffin in small jars.

Delicious Muffins.—Beat well the yolks of two eggs. Into this stir one pint of flour in which three teaspoonfuls of baking powder have been mixed; then stir in gradually, one pint of water and the beaten whites of three eggs, and a pinch of salt. Bake in hot, well greased muffin pans 20 minutes.

Oyster Salad.—Heat a quart of small oysters until they are plump, then pour off the liquor, add the juice of a lemon and place on ice until well chilled. Before serving mix them with finely cut celery, a half cupful of nuts or more and a cupful of mayonnaise dressing; garnish with beets, tiny cucumbers or pimientos cut in fancy shapes.

Escaloped Eggs.—If the price of eggs keeps on going up this dish may be one we will enjoy looking at and hoping for when eggs are reasonable. Cook hard six eggs, by dropping them into three quarts of boiling water; cover closely, allow to stand near the heat, but not on it, for a half hour. Then remove them, lay in cold water, and take off the shells. Make a white sauce of a quarter of a cupful each of butter and flour cooked together; then add a pint of milk, cook until smooth and add one chopped green pepper and salt and pepper to season. Slice the eggs and put them into a buttered dish, a layer of white sauce and a layer of eggs; sprinkle with grated cheese, finish with a layer of white sauce and a thick covering of buttered crumbs. Bake until brown in a hot oven.

A college education is not a scheme to enable a man to live without work. Its purpose is to help him to work to advantage, to make every stroke count.—David Starr Jordan.

FOR THE HOME TABLE.

When serving a roast of beef the Yorkshire pudding or muffins will help out with the meat.

Yorkshire Muffins.—Stir into two cupfuls of sifted flour a pinch of salt, three well-beaten eggs, and two cupfuls of milk, beating with an egg beater until the batter is full of bubbles. Half an hour before the roast is to be served, pour out a little of the drippings into a shallow pan containing hot-greased muffin rings and fill with the batter. Serve nicely browned as a border to the roast.

Royal Bouillon.—Take two and a half pounds of lean beef, finely chopped, cover with two quarts of water, allowing it to stand an hour, then bring to the simmering point and cook three hours, removing any scum that may arise. Now add one small onion, a carrot, one bay leaf, two cloves, four peppercorns, and two stalks of minced celery; simmer until the vegetables are tender. Strain into an earthenware bowl and let it cool. When ready to serve remove any fat, clear by stirring in the white of an egg, boil up, strain and serve at once.

Fish Pudding, Russian.—Take one and a half to two pounds of fresh mackerel, one and a half tablespoonfuls of butter, one cupful of cracker crumbs, three cupfuls of milk, six eggs, one grated onion, six peppercorns, and one tablespoonful of sour cream. Cut the fish lengthwise, wash it, take out the bones, removing the skin. Chop the meat fine, with half a tablespoonful of butter, put into a bowl the yolks of the eggs, with the salt needed, onion, peppercorns, cracker crumbs, a tablespoonful of butter and the sour cream. Beat well, add the fish, stir in the beaten whites and put into a buttered baking dish; cover and cook slowly for two hours. Serve with caper sauce.

Caper Sauce.—Cook together a tablespoonful each of butter and flour, add pepper, a cupful of milk, salt and two tablespoonfuls of capers. Cook slowly and serve hot.

Almond cakes may be prepared the same way, using six egg whites, a pound of sugar and a pound of almonds finely sliced.

FAMOUS FASHION WRITER

Julia Bottomley is recognized as one of the best informed women's fashion writers in the United States. She knows exactly the needs and desires of women in the small towns and country, for not many years ago she conducted a dressmaking and millinery shop in a little city in Colorado. And the articles she prepares for us are written with a view to meeting the conservative ideas of the ladies of our community. The tawdry and extravagant are taboo with her. Leading wholesale and retail dealers and manufacturers of women's apparel recognize in Mrs. Bottomley an authority and the editor of the Ladies' Home Journal has consulted her frequently. She is at present associate editor of one monthly fashion periodical, is a regular contributor to another and is fashion editor for an important newspaper syndicate. Before the war Mrs. Bottomley went annually to the Paris fashion center, and since then has kept in touch by personal correspondence. We publish these articles by special arrangement.

FASHIONABLE COAT FOR LITTLE MAID.

After reviewing coats made for the small girl it seems that they range through as great a variety of materials, and almost as great a variety of styles, as coats for grown-ups. All the soft, woolly goods, several fur-fabrics and plushes, velvet in various colors, and all-fur coats promise a season of rich and comfortable outdoor wear for the little miss.

It is a fad of the season to have a hat or bonnet and a tiny muff made of the same material as the coat. From top to toe almost everything small ladies wear is of one kind of cloth. For trimming, narrow bandings of the shorthaired and least costly furs are used. Snooking and shirring play important roles in making coats of wool velours, bolivia and similar cloths, and they are at their best on velvet. But coats of fur-fabrics or plush, like that shown in the picture, must be made on the plainest lines.

All-fur coats of white rabbit with caps and muffs to match make the most captivating sets imaginable. Baby Bunting's father spends his time to good advantage when he manages to clothe his small daughter in these snowy skins. Rabbit is frankly rabbit this year, and costs money, at that. There are fascinating coats of white broadcloth trimmed with bandings of brown fur, and they are quaint replicas of models made for grown people.

Jersey.

Paris likes it. America likes it. So it will go merrily on. It will not pass with the summer. Silk Jersey is expected to remain all winter.

It makes a smart and useful all-round rig. In a coated belt dress it is altogether modish.

CAULIFLOWER IN FAVOR

Vegetable Is Closely Related to the Cabbage Tribe.

Very Rich Soil Required, and It Must Be Given Most Particular Treatment—Market Demands Snowy White Heads.

Cauliflower is closely related to the cabbage tribe, but much more refined in its habits and more difficult to cultivate. It requires a very rich soil and the most particular treatment, and no farmer or gardener would be justified in attempting its cultivation on a large scale, or to depend upon it as a market crop without first having thoroughly studied its peculiarities and requirements.

The market desires snowy white heads, so that protection is universally practiced to accomplish this purpose. Three methods are used: (1) The breaking of half a dozen or more leaves over the top of the cauliflower head. The stems of the leaves are not severed entirely, so that the leaves remain green. (2) Breaking or bending over the leaves as just explained, and pinning with toothpicks or small pins. This is a very satisfactory method for all sections. (3) Bringing the leaves together over the head and tying. This is an excellent plan, but requires more time than securing with the toothpicks. The protection should begin when the heads are about an inch and a half in diameter.

Cauliflower is considered a delicacy on most tables, and it pays to exercise special care in the marketing. Although barrels are often used, crates or baskets are better. A package which will not hold more than a dozen or at most two dozen heads certainly has an advantage over the barrels.

If the heads are of good size, snowy white, wrapped in fancy paper, and marketed in new, clean packages they cannot fail to attract attention, and command good prices.

AUTUMN DEMAND FOR CELERY

Tendency to Rush Product to Market Before It Is Well Blended—Loss in Trimming.

The bracing fall weather will stimulate the demand for celery. At this season when it is selling readily at good prices, there is a tendency to rush celery to market before it is well blended. This is a mistake, because it necessitates severe trimming at the market end, and the product goes to the cheaper trade. To catch the best grade, celery must be fully blanched, clean and well trimmed.

"Handling" celery should be finished promptly and the rows ridged as fast as possible. If the soil is allowed to get into the hearts of the plants it will cause rot. Celery intended for storage should not be ridged. In some quarters there is a prejudice against blanching celery with boards. It is claimed that blanching with earth makes it crispier and gives it a better flavor. Just the same, much of the product grown in various parts of the country is blanched with boards, and it sells for top prices, too.

POTATO GATHERER IS HANDY

Mechanism Is Placed on Forward End of Frame of Device—Conveyor Carries Potatoes.

Wisconsin is coming to the front as a potato state, and as a standardized variety potato state that uses pedigreed seed it leads them all. Naturally, potato interests are receiving the attention of inventors more or less in that state. Here we are showing a drawing of a recent patent of a potato gatherer by a Louisville (Wis.) man.

Potato Gatherer.

The gathering mechanism is placed in the forward end of the frame that is pivoted on a wheeled axle, a conveyor for carrying the potatoes back to the rear from the gathering mechanism being also carried. The frame carries fingers of unequal length, placed successively long and short, and directed forward over the conveyor. A second conveyor is mounted on the frame above the first one, the upper one carrying transverse rake bars.—Farming Business.

MANURE APPLIED IN GARDEN

Fresh Fertilizer Induces Rank Growth of Stem and Leaf—Yield Is Greatly Reduced.

Barnyard manure is good for the garden if applied at the right time, but there are times when its application is harmful. Fresh manure, when applied immediately before planting, cannot be thoroughly incorporated with the soil. As a result the land is hard to work and the ground is loose instead of compact. Fresh manure also induces a rank growth of stem and leaf, and, as a result of these factors, the yield of most vegetables is greatly reduced.

VALUABLE AS GREEN FODDER

Opinion of Growers of Sudan Grass Is That It Will Largely Take Place of Millet and Sorghum.

Most of the earlier accounts of Sudan grass failed to make clear that this new crop is nothing more or less than a fine-stemmed, nonsaccharine sorghum. It has most of the characteristics of the ordinary sorghum, and its requirements as regards soil and climate are similar except that the Sudan grass differs from sorghums by maturing earlier and having such fine stems that it is readily cured into hay.

Experiments made at the Kentucky state station in 1915 produced a crop of eight tons per acre of dry hay in two cuttings. This exceptionally high yield was made possible by unusually fertile soil and good culture. The plots were drilled about the middle of May, using 20 to 25 pounds of seed to the acre, seeded with an ordinary grain drill.

The first crop was cut when the Sudan grass was fully headed, and the second crop in time to avoid the first frost.

Where Sudan grass has been grown for two or three years it is the opinion of the growers that it will largely take the place of millet and sorghum for fodder purposes, and also be valuable as a green fodder to cut for supplementing pasture.

SELECTION OF CHOICE SEED

Crops Don't "Run Out," Say Experts at Ames—Fanning and Grading Are of Importance.

The old idea that farm crops "run out" may safely be looked upon as a humbug, say the farm crops men at the Iowa experiment station at Ames; that is, if reasonable care is given to the selection of good seed and proper methods of soil culture each year. Under careless management, of course, crops will deteriorate the same as animals or men.

If, due to careless handling, farm crops do run down or "run out," the best thing to do is to run them out. Dispose of the poor stuff and make a fresh start with good seed from the farm of a thrifty neighbor. Then keep the seed good.

With tests of hundreds of varieties of different classes of crops at the experiment station at Ontario, Canada, Ames and other places, where reasonable attention was given to fanning and grading seed each year, cases of "run out" are practically unknown. This has also been the case on all well-managed farms, also.

With proper management and normal conditions the seed grown on the farm should always be the best seed for that farm.

LITMUS PAPER FOR TESTING

Easy Matter for Farmer to Ascertain If Soils Are Acid—How Operation Is Performed.

Have you tested your soil for acidity? Just a few cents' worth of blue litmus paper will enable each farmer to determine whether his soil needs lime now. One of the easiest methods of testing is pointed out by M. A. Bachtel of the Agricultural college extension service, Ohio State university, is to go into a field when the soil is moist, insert a knife blade into the under layer of soil and place a strip of the litmus paper in the opening made by the blade. Then press the soil firmly together on the paper and let stand for 20 minutes. Then remove the paper and notice its appearance. If delicate streaks of red are found on the paper, lime should be applied to correct the acidity. Ordinarily from two to four tons of ground limestone will neutralize the acids in soil.

FEEDING HOGS IN THE FIELD

Rape, Alfalfa and Clover Furnish Ideal Combination—Keep Tankage in Self-Feeder.

A cornfield with rape either in the field or along one side and alfalfa or clover patch on the other side is the most ideal combination imaginable for feeding hogs in the field. In the absence of complete supplement of this kind put in a self-feeder and keep tankage or meat meal in it. The pigs will eat what they need and can use to advantage, and no more.

In Japan the nursery is still protected from the inroads of measles and other infections by means of an inscription over the nursery door saying with exquisite urbanity "this child is not at home." In the Wellcome Historical Medical museum, says the London Lancet, a most fascinating exhibition is on view, illustrative of "Japanese charms, amulets, votive offerings and objects of medical interest," among which these nursery notices occupy an important place. Akin to these notices are the charms embodied as toys. A yellow tiger with a wagging head is now said to be a toy, but anciently it was a form of exorcism against palsy and numbness of the limbs.

Perhaps if during vacation time the state legislators will study the constitution they may be able to pass a few laws that will "hold water." Or perhaps it would be better to revise the state constitution so that others besides the members of the supreme court may read it understandingly.

Do you remember about four years ago the Democrats promised that they would investigate the causes of high prices and lower the living cost? We would not throw this back at the Democrats for the world except to show them up in another direction. They are not to blame for the high cost of living no more than they are to "blame" for our great prosperity, the high wages and for "keeping us out of war." All these conditions have come about despite the Democrats and Democratic doctrines.

If the city of Sycamore ever contemplates establishing a consolidated school of course it would never consider taking in a part of DeKalb, Cortland and Mayfield townships. Sycamore will never get that far, however, if it has within its borders many live ones like George Brown and L. M. Gross. And the latter was county superintendent of schools for sixteen years. He is evidently out of the school business—if he was ever really in it.

"HOWL" and "GOBBLE"

How about "howl and gobble?" Sycamore has made a great "howl" about Genoa attempting to "gobble" up some of Sycamore territory. Has the city of Sycamore any patent on any territory outside her city limits? Had the alarmists noted that some of the most progressive and able community workers in the proposed territory were residents of Sycamore township? Is it necessary for such men to get the consent of the Commercial Club and the board of education of the city of Sycamore to think or act? Had the terror stricken editors of the county seat papers noticed that it was not a project of the city of Genoa, but of the entire territory included in the project and that many of the most earnest workers were outside of the city of Genoa? And will not Sycamore concede that such people were sincere in the belief that they were working for the best plan for school betterment available under existing laws as then understood? But why should the city of Sycamore show such spasmodic horror about Genoa trying to get something away from her and send out her agents to knock school and highway betterment? Was it just because Sycamore thought the city of Genoa, or some one in it, might derive some slight benefit? And speaking of "fair play," "consideration for your neighbors" and "keeping hands off," did Sycamore think of that when she recently took from Genoa an enterprise for which Genoa had arranged? Does Sycamore intend to send her agents to knock or take every enterprise that Genoa endeavors to promote or in which this city may be interested?

We are mighty glad that the township high school proposition is a dead issue. There is no telling how long our friend, George, could have stood up under the strain. It is no easy task to undertake directing the destinies of two communities like Genoa and Sycamore. Of course, with that bulwark of mental power and oratorical splendor displayed by Mr. Gross backing him, there might have been some chance of his pulling thru the ordeal.

EASY MONEY

And "Easy Marks" Found in Women thruout Country

Thousands of women have been victimized by what is known as the endless chain scheme whereby a fine silk petticoat could be obtained by sending a ten-cent piece in an envelope to the National Mail Order Brokerage Exchange in the Grove building at Minneapolis, Minn.

The plan as outlined is simple, but that so many would fall for it is surprising. To every woman who would send 10 cents in silver and write five friends to join in the chain, the "exchange" promised a "new 1916 model silk petticoat."

So great was the volume of ten-cent pieces rolling into the "exchange" and so great the complaint of non-fulfillment of orders, that the postal authorities were advised of the concern, with the result that the first inquiry led to the flight of the promoters of the scheme and the trail is now on to find them.

Cheese Sandwich Land

Monroe, Wis., celebrated cheese day recently. Thirty thousand visitors sat in the public square and ate cheese sandwiches. They were Swiss cheese sandwiches, too, and the cheese was made in factories near at hand. In fact more of this variety of cheese is now made in the county of which Monroe is the center than in the republic after which it is named. And it is just as good as the original because the manufacturers are real Swiss people that have settled there.

COULD NOT SLEEP

When such men as J. L. Terry, who is so well known in this state, and whom hundreds hold in the highest esteem for his worth as a man of unquestioned integrity, praise Tanlac, the "Master Medicine," that is now being distributed in Kingston and Genoa, it cannot be denied that the preparation is all that is claimed for it. Mr. Terry who has resided in Springfield, Ill., for nearly forty-eight years, has spent most of his life in the manufacture of pipe-organs with which line he is well acquainted. Mr. Terry said last week:

"As far as relieving physical ailments is concerned, Tanlac in my judgment is an excellent medicine. For toning up a run down system it is incomparable, and a great tissue builder. Since taking Tanlac my general health is greatly improved. 'Before I was convinced of the merits of Tanlac or before I began using the medicine, I suffered a great deal from nervousness. I had very little appetite and my food did not taste right, nor did it afford me the right nourishment. I could not sleep soundly at night and felt exhausted during the day.'

"Since taking Tanlac I feel a great deal better. My nervous condition has entirely disappeared and my appetite is increasing every day. Everything considered I believe Tanlac is the best medicine I have ever taken."

Tanlac, the "Master Medicine," is now being sold in Kingston and Genoa at the drug stores of I. W. Douglass.

To Partition Olmstead Estate

Belvidere Republican: Attorney R. V. Carpenter and Geo. M. Marshall spent yesterday in Sycamore and Genoa. Attorney Carpenter has brought for the widow of the late Lorin M. Olmstead a partition proceeding in relation to a farm of 280 acres and a residence in Genoa. This is made necessary by the fact that Mr. Olmstead left no children and the heirs are quite numerous and widely scattered. Mr. Marshall is the administrator of the estate. The circuit court, Judge Slusser presiding, entered a decree of partition yesterday, and it is expected the real estate will be sold by the master in chancery of DeKalb county in about a month.

Typhoid At Elgin

A tabulation of typhoid fever cases at Elgin showed that 208 cases were registered in the epidemic, starting July 1. There have been 24 deaths, which is a rate of a little more than 11 per cent. About three-fourths of other patients have recovered.

White Space His Stock in Trade.

The publisher's stock in trade is the white space in his paper which he has to sell, the value of which the merchant can determine by his efforts to make good use of it, not by a little four or six inch ad once a month, but by a good, large, well prepared ad running week after week.

The local merchants and townspeople who are fighting the retail mail order houses can find no more valuable aid than the local editor.

The local merchant can do business on a smaller margin of profit than the mail order house, as his expenses are less. He does not need to carry such a large stock, as he knows his people and their desires, and he knows and can prove that he can sell better goods for the money than the other fellow.

How to Get Results. No doubt the principal reason why a few merchants say that advertising in local papers does not pay is because they themselves make small use of the space they buy. This is the day of bargains, and consequently the space in the paper attracts attention. Give a little time and thought to the preparation of your ads. The merchant who will do this will get results and will no longer have cause to complain of the local press being no good as a drawing medium.

How many of them employ modern, up-to-date methods in the conduct of their business? Do they advertise intelligently and consistently, telling the public what they have for sale and at what price? When there is a slight business depression in their town do they increase their advertising or do they hurry to the local newspaper and cut out their ad?

He Wouldn't Advertise. By constant and liberal use of the advertising columns of the local press the merchants encourage the editors to greater effort in providing more and better local reading matter and in this way the advertising worth of the paper is materially increased as the arrival of a paper worth while is always awaited in the homes of your consumers.

And when you come to the end of life's journey do not be in a position to have the following inscribed upon your tombstone:

Where no rude clamor may dispel The quiet that he loved so well, And when the world may know its loss Place on his grave a wreath of moss And on the stone above, "Here lies A chump who wouldn't advertise."

Seems Improbable. Stephenson county has at least one adult resident who has never seen or ridden on a street car and has never seen an electric light, to say nothing of enjoying the "movies" and other marvels of the twentieth century.

The person referred to is James Nelson, who has been a resident of Buckeye township since 1842 but has never left his farm in thirty years. Mr. Nelson is 86 years old and a native of Ireland.

WEEK'S SOCIAL EVENTS

MRS. HELEN SEYMOUR, Editor

Entertain at Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Frank McQuarrie entertained at a five o'clock dinner Sunday evening. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Harvey and son Maurice.

Birthday Party

Monday evening a party of friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Ainley to help celebrate the latter's birthday. The evening was delightfully spent in games and music. A bounteous supper was served, the chief item on the menu being a large birthday cake. The guests numbered twenty.

Woman's Club

The Woman's Club met at the home of Mrs. F. E. Wells Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. S. T. Zeller gave a very interesting paper on "Pleasures of Life." Mrs. Wells supplied the musical entertainment for the afternoon in having Miss Florence Rogers sing. She rendered several selections much to the pleasure of her hearers.

Halloween Party

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Scherf entertained about twenty-five friends at a Halloween party Tuesday evening. All sorts of "spooky" games were played and music, both vocal and instrumental, was enjoyed. A midnight supper was served. The home was artistically decorated in the usual Halloween colors; there were black cats, witch, pumpkins and corn stalks in profusion.

Thimble Club

The members of the Thimble Club were the guests of Mrs. J. L. Patterson and Mrs. A. J. Kohn at the home of the latter last Thursday afternoon. During the afternoon a straw ballot for president was taken in which Charles E. Hughes received fourteen votes and Woodrow Wilson five. A rather unique Christmas idea was carried out, the name of each member being put into a hat and each lady drew out a name, and for that member she is to make a Christmas gift and it is to be kept secret regarding just who they are making the gift for until the meeting before Christmas when they will be distributed. An excellent two course luncheon was served.

Entertains at Cards

Mrs. Herbert Abbott assisted by her mother, Mrs. Lydia Kirkpatrick, entertained a number of friends at a Halloween party Tuesday evening. Cards served as pastime. A two course luncheon was served amid Halloween decorations. A large Jack o'lantern made a very appropriate centerpiece and when the guests were seated all the lights, with the exception of the candle in Mr. Jack O'Lantern, were extinguished. Favors were also of a Halloween nature. The following were present: Mesdames John Canavan, Myrtle Snyder, Misses Mary Canavan, Birdie Drake, Flora Buck and Edyth Westover.

Miss Beth Scott's Party

Miss Beth Scott very pleasantly entertained a number of young ladies and gentlemen at a Halloween party Friday evening. The house was prettily decorated with Jack o'lanterns, black cats, witches and other things suitable for the occasion. The evening was spent in music and games. At a late hour a delicious supper was served, the menu consisting of Witches' Brew, Black Cat Stew, Compound Magic, Frozen Wands, Devil Cake, Cat's Eyes, Dried Bats and Devil Fruit. After supper a grab-bag was enjoyed by all and each carried home a gift as a remembrance of happy evening.

Halloween Social

The M. E. church basement was the scene of a merry Halloween party Tuesday evening. The festivities began with a ghost story, during the recital of which, a ghost and a witch proved themselves very much in evidence. There were also mysterious sounds and noises throught this ghostly tale. From nine o'clock until ten a series of competitive games afforded great amusement, from ten until eleven each guest in turn was ushered thru the room of mystery, and from the frightened looks on their faces when they returned from this spooky trip one would indeed think they had visited ghost land. The basement was appropriately decorated for this event in the usual corn stalks, pumpkins, black cats, bats, witches, and there was a witch's den and over a (red hot) fire a caldron swayed, from which the witches' brew poured forth its ghostly fumes. After this pleasant evening a light lunch was served. This was the first of a series of parties arranged for the young people, one of which will be given each month during the coming year.

Fortnightly Club Luncheon

Mesdames L. W. Duval, J. G. Forsythe, J. R. Furr, T. M. Frazier, H. G.

Brown, L. C. Brown, R. B. Patterson, E. G. Harvey, J. J. Hammond and Miss Blanche R. Patterson were hostesses at a one-thirty o'clock luncheon at the home of Mrs. L. W. Duval Saturday of last week. Guests numbered thirty-five and were members of the Fortnightly Club. Black cats, witches, owls and pumpkins could be seen in every nook and corner, lending the Halloween air to the occasion. Luncheon was served on small tables of which there were eight. Nut baskets, to represent a witches' caldron, formed a very appropriate centerpiece and with beautiful yellow crysanthemums used as favors, made most attractive tables. In the early afternoon Mrs. Ellis Colton favored with a vocal solo and Mrs. B. F. Kepner gave a reading in her own pleasing way. The remainder of the afternoon was given up to a progressive "stunt party." Amid a great deal of confusion and laughter, the guests proceeded to carry beans with two toothpicks, pick apples from off the floor with a knife, jab peanuts with a hat pin, cut out witches and black cats and several other like stunts and in this Mrs. L. G. Hemenway carried away the honors, while Mrs. T. M. Frazier contented herself with the consolation prize.

Cipher and Zero.

Did you know that the words "cipher" and "zero" came from the same Arabic original? Of course you know that they commonly mean the same thing, but they don't at all look as if they had the same root.

It came about in this way: The Arabic word was "sifr." The old Latin treatises on arithmetic took this word from the Arabic, but Latinized it into "zephyrum." The Italians contracted this into "zefiro." We knocked the two middle letters out and still further shortened it to "zero." The French, on the other hand, contracted the Latin term into "cifre," thus getting nearer to the Arabic.

And since the English language has always taken what it wanted from the French—whether it was needed or not—we took this word, changing its spelling to "cipher."

We have differentiated the meanings of the two words, now; zero means nothing and cipher means the character for nothing.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Race Origins.

Herbert Bruce Hannay, an Englishman, has written a book on "European and Other Race Origins" in which, taking various people back to their earliest ancestors, he sets forth that the Prussians are the descendants of the Ishmaelites, the Dutch and Hessians of the Hittites, the French of the Canaanites, the Slavs of the Medes, the non-Prussians and non-Hessian Germans of the Persians and the English of the house of Judah. He is quite certain that the English, notwithstanding their alleged descent from the Angles, the Saxons and the Jutes, are not Teutons, but hark back to the Hebrew race. It will be recalled that a theory like unto this was advanced by a Lieutenant Totten, who proved to his own satisfaction that the people of England and most of the people of America were of Saxon origin and that the word Saxons was itself a corruption of "Isachsolus"—that is, sons of Isaac, the son of Abraham.

Correct Pronunciation.

A study of individual pronunciations suffices to show that many "accepted rules of speech" exist only in imagination and are regularly broken—very often unconsciously—even by those who delight in laying down the rules. Daniel Jones, one of our leading authorities on English pronunciation, tells an amusing story in support of this statement. He had remarked that most educated people pronounce "always" as if it were written "orlwiz." One stately old dame was horrified at the idea and repudiated the mere thought. She summed up the whole discussion by declaring, with an air of finality, "Personally I orlwiz say 'always.'" The only test of what is correct in pronunciation is to find out what is the general practice of educated people.—London Standard.

Censoring Shakespeare.

A masterpiece of censorship was once performed by the Turkish censor, Nischan Effendi, on the occasion of the production of Shakespeare's "Othello" at Constantinople. He "corrected" the drama so thoroughly as to leave hardly a trace of the original. Among other words, he expunged "Cyprus," giving ingenious reasons for this correction. "Cyprus," he said, "is a Turkish island. It would be politically unwise to send Othello to Cyprus, because the territorial integrity of Turkey is guaranteed by treaties. Why not put, instead of Cyprus, some Greek island, such as Corfu?" And thus it came to pass that from respect to the treaty of Paris Othello had to go to Corfu.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

E. H. Browne received a letter from Gust Schmitz of Chicago last week. This would lead us to believe that Mr. Schmitz is not dead, nor has he been dead at any time. The Republican-Journal received a "bum steer" when it wrote up the death notice some time ago.

All subscribers to the Republican-Journal, residing outside the state must be paid in advance before the first of January. Those in arrears after that date will be cut off the list and the accounts left for collection. The great cost of paper makes it impossible for any publisher to carry a subscriber year after year, and in many cases lose the money altogether. To be on the safe side the cash-in-advance policy will be put in to effect. Those who really want the paper and intend to pay for it will not find any fault with the plan.

It is estimated that about 500 people attended the community ball and cabaret at the opera house last Friday night. The music was all that had been claimed for it and the cabaret singing was a pleasing as well as a novel feature in country dances. The management announces another dance for Friday evening of next week. The same music has been engaged and the singers will again be on hand to entertain. There were people here last week from every town in this vicinity, some coming from Huntley, Marengo, DeKalb, Union and Harvard as well as the near-by towns.

Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Barcus had as their guests on Sunday the former's sister, Mrs. H. Chambers, and husband and Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Chambers of Oak Park. Mrs. O. H. Chambers remained until Monday evening.

Mrs. D. S. Brown and Miss Margaret Slater left Friday morning for Los Angeles, Calif. They will stop at Denver and other points of interest enroute. Mrs. Brown expects to be gone about two months but Miss Slater will remain indefinitely.

SYNOPSIS.

Adele, in Chennys, a belle of New France, is forced into marriage with Cassion, a Frenchman, who is plotting to oust La Salle and his garrison from the frontier Fort St. Louis, on the Illinois river. Adele had overheard the plotters say she had inherited a great fortune from her father and they had kept it from her. La Salle and Cassion learned of the girl's knowledge—thus the marriage and the hurried departure of Cassion and a company for Fort St. Louis. The bride refuses to share sleeping quarters with her husband. She has but one friend, young Rene D'Artigny, a guide. He is chary of helping her. Chevet, the girl's uncle, one of the party, is found murdered.

Her only kin dead by a murderer's hand, Adele feels more alone in the world than ever. Her husband's jealousy and rancor become pronounced, yet she is strangely hopeful of getting away from the man and from her present circumstance in life. Then comes death near to her. How she barely escaped, why she has more reasons than one to be profoundly thankful, is told graphically in this installment.

Following the discovery of Chevet, murdered, Cassion accuses D'Artigny of the crime—but not in D'Artigny's presence.

"True, so I did," he said at last. "They were to depart before dawn. The villain is yonder—see; well off that farthest point, and 'tis too late to overtake him now. Sacre! there is naught for us to do, that I see, but to bury Hugo Chevet and go our way—the king's business cannot wait."

On the beach all was in readiness for departure, and it was evident enough that Moulou had already spread the news of Chevet's murder among his comrades. Cassion, however, permitted the fellows little time for discussion, for at his sharp orders they took their places in the canoes and pushed off. The priest was obliged to assume Chevet's former position, and I would gladly have accompanied him, but Cassion suddenly gripped me in his arms, and without so much as a word, waded out through the surf, and put me down in his boat, clambering in himself, and shouting his orders to the paddlers.

I think we were all of us glad enough to get away. I know I sat silent and motionless just where he placed me and stared back across the widening water at the desolate, dismal scene. How lonely and heart-breaking it was, those few log houses against the hill, the blackened stumps littering the hillside, and the gloomy forest beyond. The figures of a few men were visible along the beach, and once I saw a black-robed priest emerge from the door of the mission house, and start down the steep path.

The picture slowly faded as we advanced, until finally the last glimpse of the log chapel disappeared in the haze, and we were alone on the mystery of the great lake, gliding along a bare, uninhabited shore. I was aroused by the touch of Cassion's hand on my own as it grasped the side of the canoe.

"Adele," he said, almost tenderly. "Why should you be so serious? Cannot we be friends?"

My eyes met his in surprise.

"Friends, monsieur! Are we not? Why do you address me like that?"

"Because you treat me as though I were a criminal," he said earnestly. "As if I had done you an evil in making you my wife. 'Twas not I who hastened the matter, but La Barre. 'Tis not just to condemn me unheard, yet I have been patient and kind. I thought it might be that you loved another—in truth I imagined that D'Artigny had cast his spell upon you; yet you surely cannot continue to trust that villain—the murderer of your uncle."

"How know you that to be true?" I asked.

"Because there is no other accounting for it," he explained sternly. "The quarrel last evening, the early departure before dawn—"

"At your orders, monsieur."

"Ay, but the sergeant tells me the fellow was absent from the camp for two hours during the night; that in the moonlight he saw him come down the hill. Even if he did not do the deed himself, he must have discovered the body—yet he voiced no alarm."

I was silent, and my eyes fell from his face to the green water.

"'Twill be hard to explain," he went on. "But he shall have a chance."

"A chance! You will question him; and then—"

He hesitated whether to answer me, but there was a cruel smile on his thin lips.

"Faith, I do not know. 'Tis like to be a court-martial at the Rock, if ever we get him there; though the chances are the fellow will take to the woods when he finds himself suspected. No doubt the best thing I can do will be to say nothing until we hold him safe, though 'tis hard to pretend with such a villain."

He paused, as if hoping I might speak, and my silence angered him.

"Bah, if I had my way the young cockerel would face a file at our first camp. Ay! and it will be for you to decide if he does not."

"What is your meaning, monsieur?"

"That I am tired of your play-acting; of your making eyes at this forest dandy behind my back. Sang dieu! I am done with all this—do you hear?"

And I have a grip now which will make you think twice, my dear, before you work any more sly tricks on me. Sacre, you think me easy, hey? I have in my hand so," and he opened and closed his fingers suggestively, "the life of the lad."

I had one glimpse of his face as he leaned forward, and there was a look in it which made me shudder and turn away. His was no idle threat, and whether the man truly loved me or not, his hatred of D'Artigny was sufficient for any cruelty.

I realized the danger, the necessity for compromise, and yet for the moment I lacked power to speak, to question, fearful lest his demands would be greater than I could grant. I had no thought of what I saw, and still that which my eyes rested upon remains pictured on my brain, the sparkle of sun on the water, the distant green of the shore, the soldiers huddled in the canoe, the dark shining bodies of the Indians ceaselessly plying the paddles, and beyond us, to the left, another canoe, cleaving the water swiftly, with Pere Alouez' face turned toward us, as though he sought to guess our conversation. I was aroused by the grip of Cassion's hand.

"Well, my beauty," he said harshly, "haven't I waited long enough to learn if it is war or peace between us?"

I laughed, yet I doubt if he gained any comfort from the expression of the eyes which met his.

"Why I choose peace of course, monsieur," I answered, assuming a carelessness I was far from feeling. "Am I not your wife? Surely you remind me of it often enough, so I am not likely to forget; but I resent the insult of your words, nor will you ever win favor from me by such methods. I have been friendly with Sieur D'Artigny, it is true, but there is nothing between us. Indeed no word has passed my lips in his presence I would not be willing for you to hear. So there is no cause for you to spare him on my account, or rest his fate on any action of mine."

"You will have naught to do with the fellow?"

"There would be small chance if I wished, monsieur; and do you suppose I would seek companionship with one who had killed my uncle?"

"'Twould scarce seem so, yet I know not what you believe."

"Nor do I myself; yet the evidence is all against the man thus far. I confess I should like to hear his defense, but I make you this pledge in all honor—I will have no word with him, on condition that you file no charges until we arrive at Fort St. Louis."

"Ah!" suspiciously, "you think he has friends there to hold him innocent?"

"Why should I, monsieur? Indeed, why should I care but to have justice done? I do not wish his blood on your hands, or to imagine that he is condemned because of his friendship for me rather than any other crime. I know not what friends the man has at the Rock on the Illinois. He was of La Salle's party, and they are no longer in control. La Barre said that De Baugis commanded that post, and for all I know De Tonty and all his men may have departed."

"'Tis not altogether true, and for that reason we are ordered to join the company. De Baugis has the right of it under commission from La Barre, but does not possess sufficient soldiers to exercise authority. La Salle's men remain loyal to De Tonty, and the Indian tribes look to him for leadership."

"Mon dieu! it was reported in Quebec that 12,000 savages were lying about the fort—ay! and D'Artigny said he doubted it not, for the meadows were covered with tepees—so De Baugis has small chance to rule until he has force behind him. They say this De Tonty is of a fighting breed—the savages call him the man with the iron hand—and so the two rule between them, the one for La Barre, and the other for La Salle, and we go to give the governor's man more power."

"You have sufficient force?"

"Unless the Indians become hostile; besides there is to be an overland party later to join us in the spring and Sieur de La Durantaye, of the regiment of Carignan-Salliers is at the Chicago portage. This I learned at St. Ignace."

"Then it would seem to me, monsieur, that you could safely wait the trial of D'Artigny until our arrival at the fort. If he does not feel himself suspected, he will make no effort to escape, and I give you the pledge you ask."

It was not altogether graciously that he agreed to this, yet the man could not refuse, and I was glad enough to escape thus easily, for it was my fear that he might insist on my yielding much more to preserve D'Artigny from immediate condemnation and death. The fellow had the power, and the inclination, and what good fortune saved me, I can never know. I think he felt a certain fear of me, a doubt of how far he might presume on my good nature.

Certainly I gave him small encouragement to venture further, and yet he had done so I would have been at my wit's end. Twice the words were upon his lips—a demand that I yield to his mastery—but he must have read in my eyes a defiance he feared to front, for they were not uttered. 'Twas that he might have this very talk that he had found me place alone in his canoe, and I would have respected him more had he dared to carry out his desire. The coward in the man was too apparent, and yet that very cowardice was proof of treachery. What he hesitated to claim boldly he would attain otherwise if he could. I could place no confidence in his word, nor reliance upon his honor.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Break of Storm.

We had no more pleasant weather for days, the skies being overcast and the wind damp and chill. It did not rain, nor were the waves dangerous, although choppy enough to make paddling tiresome and difficult.

A mist obscured the view and compelled us to cling close to the shore so as to prevent becoming lost in the smother, and as we dare not venture to strike out boldly from point to point, we lost much time in creeping along the curves.

The canoes kept closer together, never venturing to become separated, and the men stationed on watch in the bows continually called to each other across the tossing waters in guidance. Even D'Artigny kept within sight, and made camp with us at night, although he made no effort to seek me, nor did I once detect that he even glanced in my direction. The studied indifference of the man puzzled me more than it angered, but I believed it was his consciousness of guilt, rather than any dislike which caused his avoidance. In a way I rejoiced at his following this course, as I felt bound by my pledge to Cassion, and had no desire to further arouse the jealousy of the latter, yet I remained a woman, and consequently felt a measure of regret at being thus neglected and ignored.

I had no knowledge of the date, nor a very clear conception of where we were. The night before we had camped at the mouth of a small stream, the surrounding forest growing down close to the shore, and so thick as to be almost impenetrable. The men had set up my tent so close to the water the waves broke scarcely a foot away, and the fire about which the others clustered for warmth was but a few yards distant.

Wrapped in my blankets I saw D'Artigny emerge from the darkness and approach Cassion, who drew a map from his belt pocket and spread it open on the ground in the glare of the fire. The two men bent over it, tracing the lines with finger tips, evidently determining their course for the morrow. Then D'Artigny made a few notes on a scrap of paper, arose to his feet and disappeared.

They had scarcely exchanged a word, and the feeling of enmity between them was apparent. Cassion sat quiet, the map still open, and stared after the younger man until he vanished in the darkness. The look upon his face was not a pleasant one.

Impelled by a sudden impulse I arose to my feet, the blanket still draped about my shoulders, and crossed the open space to the fire. Cassion, hearing the sound of my approach, glanced around, his frown changing instantly into a smile.

"Ah, quite an adventure this," he said, adopting a tone of pleasantry. "The first time you have left your tent, madame?"

"The first time I have felt desire to do so," I retorted. "I feel curiosity to examine your map."

"And waited until I was alone; I appreciate the compliment," and he removed his hat in mock gallantry. "There was a time when you would have come earlier."

"Your sarcasm is quite uncalled for. You have my pledge relative to the Sieur D'Artigny, monsieur, which suffices. If you do not care to give me glimpse of your map, I will retire again."

"Pou! do not be so easily pricked, I spoke in jest. Ay, look at the paper, but the tracing is so poor 'tis no better than a guess where we are. Sit you down, madame, so the fire gives light, and I will show you our position the best I can."

"Did not D'Artigny know?"

"He thinks he does, but his memory is not over clear, as he was only over this course the once. 'Tis here he has put the mark, while my guess would be a few leagues beyond."

I bent over, my eyes seeking the points indicated. I had seen the map before, yet it told me little, for I was unaccustomed to such study, and the few points, and streams named had no real meaning to my mind. The only familiar term was Chicago Portage, and I pointed to it with my fingers.

"Is it there we leave the lake, monsieur?"

"Ay; the rest will be river work. You see this stream? 'Tis called the Des Plaines, and leads into the Illinois. D'Artigny says it is two miles inland, across a flat country. 'Twas Pere Marquette who passed this way first, but since then many have traversed it. 'Tis like to take us two days to make the portage."

"And way up here is Port des Morts, where we crossed the opening into Green Bay, and we have come since all this distance. Surely 'tis not far along the shore now to the portage?"

"Mon dieu, you know! 'Tis looks but a step on the map, yet 'tis not likely the distance has ever been measured."

"What said the Sieur D'Artigny?"

"Bah! the Sieur D'Artigny; ever it is the Sieur D'Artigny. 'Tis little he knows about it, in my judgment. He would have it thirty leagues yet, but I make it we are ten leagues to the south of where he puts us. What are you going already? Faith, I had hopes you might tarry here a while yet, and hold converse with me."

I paused, in no way tempted, yet uncertain.

"You had some word you wished to say, monsieur?"

"There are words enough if you would listen."

"'Tis no fault of yours if I do not. But not now, monsieur. It is late and cold. We take the boats early and I would rest while I can."

He was on his feet, the map gripped in his hand, but made no effort to stop me, as I dropped him a curtsy, and retreated. But he was there still when I glanced back from out the safety of the tent, his forehead creased by a frown. When he finally turned away the map was crushed shapeless in his fingers.

The morning dawned somewhat warmer, but with every promise of a storm, threatening clouds hanging above the water, sullen and menacing, their edges tipped with lightning. The roar of distant thunder came to our ears, yet there was no wind, and Cassion decided that the clouds would drift southward, and leave us safe passage along the shore. His canoe had been wrenched in making landing the evening before, and had taken in considerable water during the night. This was bailed out, but the interior was so wet and uncomfortable that I begged to be given place in another boat, and Cassion consented, after I had exhibited some temper, ordering a soldier in the sergeant's canoe to exchange places with me.

We may have proceeded for half a league, when a fog swept in toward the land enveloping us in its folds, although we were close enough to the shore so as to keep safely together, the word being passed back down the line, and as we drew nearer I became aware that D'Artigny's boat had turned about, and he was endeavoring to induce Cassion to go ashore and make camp before the storm broke. The latter, however, was obstinate, claiming we were close enough for safety, and finally, in angry voice, insisted upon proceeding on our course.

D'Artigny, evidently feeling argument useless, made no reply, but I noticed he held back his paddles and permitted Cassion's canoe to forge ahead. He must have discovered that I was not with monsieur, for I saw him stare intently at each of the other canoes, as though to make sure of my presence, shading his eyes with one hand, as he peered through the thickening mist. This action evidenced the first intimation I had for days of his continued interest in my welfare, and my heart throbbed with sudden pleasure. Whether or not he felt some premonition of danger, he certainly spoke words of instruction to his Indian paddlers, and so manipulated his craft as to keep not far distant, although slightly farther from shore, than the canoe in which I sat.

Cassion had already vanished in the fog, which swept thicker and thicker along the surface of the water, the nearer boats becoming mere indistinct shadows. Even within my own canoe the faces of those about me appeared gray and blurred, as the damp vapor swept over us in dense clouds. It was a ghastly scene, rendered more awesome by the glare of lightning which seemed to split the vapor, and the sound of thunder reverberating from the surface of the lake.

The water, a ghastly, greenish gray, heaved beneath, giving us little difficulty, yet terrifying in its suggestion of sullen strength, and the shore line was barely discernible to the left as we struggled forward. What obstinacy compelled Cassion to keep us at the task I know not—perchance a dislike to yield to D'Artigny's advice—but the sergeant swore to himself, and turned the prow of our canoe inward, hugging the shore as closely as he dared, his anxious eyes searching every rift in the mist.

Yet, dark and drear as the day was, we had no true warning of the approaching storm, for the vapor clinging to the water concealed from our sight the clouds above. When it came it burst upon us with mad ferocity, the wind whirling to the north and striking us with all the force of three hundred miles of open sea. The mist was swept away with that first fierce gust, and we were struggling for life in a wild turmoil of waters. I had but a glimpse of it—a glimpse of wild, raging sea; of black, scurrying clouds, so close above I could almost reach out and touch them; of dimly revealed canoes hung about like chips, driving before the blast.

Our own was hurled forward like an arrow, the Indian paddlers working like mad to keep stern to the wind, their long hair whipping about. The soldiers crouched in the bottom, clinging grimly to any support, their white faces exhibiting the abasement of fear. The sergeant alone spoke, yelling his orders, as he wielded steering paddle, his hat blown from his head, his face ghastly with sudden terror. It was but the glimpse of an instant; then a paddle broke, the canoe swung sideways, balanced on the crest of a wave and went over.

I was conscious of cries, shrill, instantly smothered, and then I sank, struggling hard to keep above water, yet borne down by the weight of the canoe. I came up again, choking and half strangled, and sought to grip the boat as it whirled past. My fingers found nothing to cling to, slipping along the wet keel, until I went down again, but this time holding my breath. My water-soaked garments and heavy shoes made swimming almost impossible, yet I struggled to keep face above water. Two men had reached the canoe, and had somehow found hold. One of these was an Indian, but they were already too far away to aid me, and in another moment had vanished in the white crested waves. Not another of our boat's crew was visible, nor could I be sure of where the shore lay.

Twice I went down, waves breaking over me, and flinging me about like a cork. Yet I was conscious, though strangely dazed and hopeless. I struggled, but more as 'if in a dream than in reality. Something black, shapeless, seemed to sweep past me through the water; it was borne high on a wave, and I flung up my hands in protection; I felt myself gripped lifted partially, then the grasp failed and I dropped back into the churning water. The canoe, or whatever else it was, was gone, swept remorselessly past by the raging wind, but as I came up again to the surface a hand clasped me, drew me close until I had grip on a broad shoulder.

Beyond this I knew nothing; with the coming of help, the sense that I was no longer struggling unaided for life in those treacherous waters, all strength and consciousness left me. When I again awoke, dazed, trembling, a strange blur before my eyes. I was lying upon a sandy beach, with a cliff towering above me, its crest tree-lined, and I could hear the dash of waves breaking not far distant. I endeavored to raise myself to look about, but sank back helpless, fairly struggling for breath. An arm lifted my head from the sand, and I stared into a face bending above me, at first without recollection.

Do you think now that bad luck has left Adele, that her husband is gone forever and that her future is to be a matter of her own choosing?

Elgin News: Eugene Carroll, postmaster at Gilberts was arrested Monday morning charged with being short in his accounts.

An inspector who went over the records of the office last week found that approximately $200 was lacking to balance the accounts.

Carroll was taken to Chicago by a deputy United States marshal at 1:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. The marshal was accompanied to Gilberts by the inspector who formally charged Carroll with being short. He will be given a hearing in the federal district court.

Carroll has been postmaster in Gilberts for about three years, being appointed to the position under the Wilson administration. He is a young

Taking Fish From Rock River

Contracts have been let for the removal of rough fish, such as buffalo, carp, stone rollers and suckers from Rock river, the work to begin soon. One contract covers the river from the Rockford dam to Rockton; another from Dixon to Byron, and the others cover districts of the like size. The efforts of the Rock River Rod and Reel Club resulted in inducing the State Fish and Game commission to seine the river. All game fish taken out must be returned to the stream. The rough fish find a ready market. It is understood the state receives one cent a pound which it utilizes to stock the river with game fish.

AN INHUMAN FATHER

Beats Child with "Cat o' nine Tails" and Gets Two Months

It will be nearly two months before Victor Barch of East Dundee has an opportunity again to "beat up" members of his family, says the Elgin News.

By that time it is believed by authorities that he will have been relieved of his perpetual "grouch." Hewill at least be given an opportunity to think it over. His thoughts will not be interrupted by childish pranks and family differences which he said "got his goat." His thoughts will be exclusively his own within the narrow confines of a cell in the county jail at Geneva.

He was taken to the county seat by Night Officer Sutherland at noon Saturday after he had been unable to pay a fine of $200 and costs imposed by Police Magistrate Nute. The payment of $217.56 will necessitate serving forty-four days in jail.

Barch was arrested Thursday night upon complaint of neighbors that he was abusing his family. Dave Tuckington and John Morgan signed a warrant charging him with assault and battery. It developed at the hearing upon testimony of Mrs. Barch and two of her children, that Barch had used an improvised "cat o' nine tails" on his two and one-half year old son.

At the hearing, which was attended by Assistant State's Attorney R. R. Phillips, the charge was changed to that of cruelty to children and he was given the maximum sentence.

ANOTHER LAW VOID

Supreme Court Holds Tuition Act Unconstitutional

The supreme court, in an opinion handed down on the 24th, held the high school tuition act unconstitutional and void.

The opinion was given in the case of Vermillion county against the Board of Education of school district No. 19.

The law requires the use of a part of the distributive fund for the payment of tuition of pupils in districts which have no high school. It also limits the amount that can be charged by high schools for tuition. The court holds that these provisions are in violation of the constitutional provisions.

CONGOLEUM

Floor Coverings

Here is the floor covering that combines low price with real beauty and durability.

As compared with printed linoleum, which it resembles, Congoleum is more durable and more attractive, yet the price is less. Besides, it is waterproof and is easily laid. The large variety of designs, including tile, matting, floral and conventional patterns, make it suitable for every room.

Congoleum Rug Borders cannot be told from polished quartered oak when laid next to a rug or carpet. They solve many a problem in the household.
