ACCIDENT WHILE TRAVELING

Returning from Trip Through the South, Hon. Henry Wood Fell From Train and Injuries Prove Fatal

For a number of years Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wood, who reside five miles south of Genoa, have spent the winter months in the southern states with headquarters at Citronelle, Alabama. It was while returning homeward last Thursday that one of the most distressing accidents happened which resulted in the death of Mr. Wood.

It was night time when the accident happened. Mrs. Wood and daughter had secured their berths but Mr. Wood preferred the day coach. Sometime during the night Mr. Wood arose, left the day coach unknown to all, and when Chicago was reached great alarm prevailed throughout the passengers. Messages were sent along the line to ascertain his whereabouts, for all knew he must have fallen from the train, and he was finally located at Vincennes, Indiana, beside the railroad track.

The relatives took the next train to Vincennes and removed Mr. Wood to a hospital at Evansville. After careful examination it was found that he was internally injured and could live but a short time. His death occurred Saturday.

Henry Wood was born in Randolph, Vermont, November 10, 1824. In 1836 he came to Illinois with his parents, first settling at Plainfield and later moving to DeKalb county. At the age of twenty years, Mr. Wood left for Missouri where he engaged in teaching school, and in 1847 returned to Sycamore. He had lived in this vicinity the greater part of his life and through careful toil had acquired one of the best improved farms in DeKalb county on the Genoa-Sycamore road.

In 1880, Mr. Wood was elected to represent the seventeenth district in the Legislature of Illinois and was re-elected in 1882. He had served on several committees connected with the farming interests of the state, and was president of the DeKalb County Agricultural society for two years.

Mr. Wood was united in marriage to Rhoda E. Richards, March 16, 1851. To them ten children have been born, five of whom are living. They are: Charles, Leroy, Will, Shepard and Emily, the latter residing with her parents.

During the past few years Mr. Wood's health has been constantly failing, so much so that careful watch has been given to his welfare. The funeral services were held Tuesday at the farm home at 1:30 o'clock, Rev. B. M. Southgate assisted by Rev. Moore of Sycamore officiating.

In his death the community has lost one of its respected and beloved citizens and his everyday examples will live long after the body has mouldered and crumbled to dust.

To Address Graduates

President Chas. A. Blanchard of Wheaton college will deliver the commencement address here June 10. His subject is "Life's Best Things."

DANIEL O'ROURKE IS DEAD

Hampshire Resident Sustains Fatal Injuries Last Wednesday

Daniel O'Rourke died Thursday morning at his home in Hampshire from effects of injuries sustained while trying to repair a barn on the Boerger farm in the near vicinity of Hampshire last Wednesday.

There was a lean-to on one side of the barn and while O'Rourke was supporting one of the bents a gust of wind blew over that side of the structure, carrying O'Rourke with it. When found he was pinned under the debris with his body bent double. Dr. Kirkpatrick was summoned and on investigation discovered that the patients back had been broken and that he was paralyzed from his waist down.

James O'Rourke, brother of the deceased, who was assisting him at the time of the accident, escaped with a broken ankle.

Deceased was well known in this locality, having made his residence here and at North Plato for twenty-five years.

Local Baseballists Score Victory

At the base ball park Saturday the high school team won an interesting game of ball from the Belvidere high school. The score was 19 to 16. During the early part Genoa had the game well in hand, but a few costly errors by the home team enabled the Boone county boys to creep closer.

The battery for Genoa was Evans and Stott; for Belvidere, Lawson and Watson.

The attendance will undoubtedly be larger Saturday when one of the best games of the season will be played, Elgin vs. Genoa.

Drowned at Kirkland

Joseph M. Gould, a former resident of Kingston township, was drowned in the Kishwaukee at Kirkland last Sunday. While fishing from a boat he plunged headforemost into the muck at the bottom of the river and seemed to be entangled in the debris. Friends nearby saw him fall and made a desperate effort to save him but when brought to the surface his life had ebbed out.

CANS MUST BE SEALED

Local Shippers Given Warning by Chicago Dealers

SECTIONS OF THE ORDINANCE

Shippers May Purchase Seals in Lots but Each Shipper Must Have His Own Seal for Cancellation

Following is the ordinance:

Accommodations for Base Ball

A commodious tier of seats has been arranged for the base ball park for the further comfort of those who attend. A row of seats sixty-four feet long and five in number has been erected and this will accommodate a large number of people.

The Elgin high school aggregation that comes here Saturday to cross bats with our boys will have to play some in order to win this second game with them. The Genoa team is somewhat stronger than it was two weeks ago. They will also shine in a complete outfit of new suits, bats and other accessories necessary to base ball paraphernalia. There will no doubt be a good crowd to see the game.

WAGES ARE RAISED

Section Men on St. Paul Road Now Get $1.40 per Day

The pay of the section laborers on the Milwaukee road has been raised to $1.40 a day commencing the first of the month. The action was voluntary on the part of the company, and came as a surprise to the men, part of whom recently left the employ of the road on account of the low wages offered. Most of them had returned to work under the reduced schedule, but in order to hold the regular men the company has made this advance.

Rev. August Smith, Pastor of Advent Christian Church at that Place, Performs Ceremony

An event of considerable interest and one of much surprise to their many friends was the wedding of I. A. McCollom to Mrs. Emily Wyllys Wednesday afternoon at Rockford.

The news of the happy affair took Kingston and vicinity by storm, as no one was aware of the exact date of their marriage.

Mr. McCollom and his bride elect left Kingston at 10:30 a. m. over the St. Paul railroad Wednesday and in the early part of the afternoon the Rev. August Smith, pastor of the Advent Christian Church, presided over a short ceremony making them man and wife. The wedding was unattended by relatives. Upon their return to Kingston at 5:45 p. m. over the Northwestern they were welcomed to Kingston by a host of friends who earnestly congratulated them.

Another Lecture

Another stereoptican lecture will be given in the high school next Friday evening by Rev. C. S. Moore, pastor of the M. E. church of Sycamore. Mr. Moore is a man of marked ability as a speaker and has familiarized himself with his subject by much travel and study. The subject is "Rome, Ancient and Modern." As the subject indicates, the lecture will be both historical and descriptive. Few views of Rome would contain their deepest significance without some of their historical settings.

Those who attended the lecture last Friday night and saw the beautiful views of Yellowstone Park will no doubt wish to hear this lecture on Rome. It will be well worth the price of admission, only ten cents.

Lecture at School

Prof. J. N. Adee, Superintendent of the Sycamore public schools, gave a very interesting address at the public school building Friday evening, April 20. His subject was "The Yellowstone Park." Mr. Adee, while not classed as a professional lecturer, is certainly well qualified to speak on this subject, and as a whole his talk was most thoroughly enjoyed. About sixty views were shown of geysers.

With this issue The Republican enters on the third year of its existence. The paper has made many staunch friends who have been of vast help and encouragement in keeping it near the standard of excellence that all newspapers aim at. As in the past, The Republican will put forth its best effort to accomplish the right and do what it conceives to be the duty of a representative newspaper for Genoa and the people of the vicinity, never hesitating to call public notice to any and all conditions that are likely to bring discredit upon the town.

Death of Wm. Powers of Hampshire

After an illness of about one year's duration, Wm. Powers died Wednesday morning, April 27. Mr. Powers was born in Waterford, Ireland, Feb. 6, 1824, thus making him over 80 years of age. At the age of twenty he came to America and settled in New York. After residing there fifteen years he came west and settled on a farm near Burlington. He was married twice. By his first marriage three sons were born, and by his second, two daughters and two sons. All of the children, excepting one son, Morris, are still living. Those who remain to mourn his loss are: John Powers of California; Martin Powers of Iowa; Thomas Powers of Charter Grove; Mrs. Charles Hennigan of Sycamore; Wm. Powers of Rockford, and Mrs. Maggie Treman of this place, besides a number of grandchildren. The funeral took place at the Catholic church at 10 o'clock Friday morning.

Why He Didn't Shave.

"Why don't you buy a shave?"
"I guess I could stand a little scrape. I generally shave myself."
"Oh, I see! Got that tired feeling already."
"No. I should have shaved this morning, but I couldn't. Yesterday afternoon my wife became possessed of the insane idea to start house cleaning. She thought it would be a good plan to enamel our iron bed. She had the necessary fluid, but lacked a brush. And she was about to give up the project when she thought of my shaving brush. She dug it out of my dresser and worked hard all afternoon, and when I reached home I noticed that she looked extremely happy, while her manner indicated that she was proud of something she had done. I inquired the reason for the unusual display of chest, and she pointed to the immaculate bed. I asked her how she did it so nicely, and she pointed to my shaving brush. I did not say a word, but pointed to a four days' growth of shrubbery on my countenance."—Albany Journal.

A Common Experience.

The awe with which the small boy looks upon a retired mariner is probably due to the marvelous experiences the mariner remembers to have had. An example of this extreme marvelousness came up recently in the course of a conversation between a lad of six and an ex-sea captain.
"Captain Skaggs, did you ever get your legs bit off by a shark?" asked the boy.
"Did I, sonny?" he replied. "Did I? Well, rather! Dozens of times!"

Wonderful Bird Flight.

The most wonderful bird flight noted is the migratory achievement of the Virginia plover, which leaves its northern haunts in North America and, taking a course down the Atlantic, usually from 400 to 500 miles east of the Bermudas, reaches the coast of Brazil in one unbroken flight of fifteen hours, covering a distance of 3,200 miles at the rate of four miles a minute.

Marriage Bureaus.

The growing number of marriage advertisements in Austrian and German newspapers seems to indicate an increasing commercial element in matrimonial affairs. A journalist who investigated the matter discovered, however, that most of these advertisements are inserted by the marriage bureaus, which do a thriving business in plucking fools.

Andreano

"Halt! Close up there!"

The order rang out sharply, echoing from rock to rock and seeming to die away in hollow murmurs up the precipitous and bleak sides of the hills. The little band of Italian soldiery closed up rapidly as their grizzled old captain spoke and faced him silently with their carbines grounded and the look of dull and apathetic discipline on their faces that is characteristic of their class.

"My men," said the weather beaten and gray headed leader, regarding them sharply from under his shaggy eyebrows, "the wolf is driven to his last lair. All or nearly all of his people have been killed off during the weeks that we have been following them over these dreary hills. He—the bandit, the robber, the Andreano of the hills—cannot last out longer now. His hour is come, if we are but watchful. Up and up he has been driven, often nearly falling into our hands, yet as often escaping. Now behind him rises the sheer straight line of the hills, on either side are two good companies of our men; we stand in the front. The great Andreano, terror of our hills—the captain laughed softly in his throat—"is already as one dead. You know your orders. He is to be shot down like a dog by the first man who sights him. You understand?"

A low, deep murmur went up from the men, and then a single voice spoke, the speaker, who stood in the front rank, giving the salute rapidly.

"But, my captain, what of the child?"

The old man turned on him fiercely.

"The child! What child?"

The soldier, a little, lithe, swarthy man, with gleaming white teeth shining under his brown mustache, saluted again.

"The child, my captain, he brought from Massafino, below there in the valley—the child of the woman who had loved him."

The captain, interested in spite of himself, knitted his brows and bade the soldier proceed.

"What of the child? You may speak."

Thus encouraged, the little man with the gleaming teeth saluted once more and with many a gesture of fingers, shoulders and eyebrows rapidly told his story:

"'Twas but a year ago, my captain. The woman—I know not her name—had loved him in the days when he was a lad tilling the fields down there. She was alone. Her friends were dead or had left her. There was no one but the priest who could help her, and the priest was too poor. What would you?" with an appealing glance at his fellows and a rapid shrug of his shoulders. "She had been married, this woman who had loved the Andreano, and had a child, a girl child, but her man lay in the sandy graveyard over against the village church yonder, dead, a year before, of the fever. So she sent to Andreano."

He paused for a moment, spat quickly upon the ground and went on again:

"She sent a message to him up here in the hills, my captain, and he came to her. He came down in the night and saw her, came armed to the teeth and daring all or any to touch him. And in the morning, when the sun was coming up over the hills, he had gone, and the child with him, and the woman who had loved him lay dead, with a smile on her face. That is all, my captain."

The man saluted again and drew back.

"And the child—where is it now?" asked the captain slowly.

"The child is with him, my captain."

"What matters it?" muttered the captain. "Kill the child too. Kill off the whole brood. Come; we waste time. Forward!"

Yet, for all that, as the captain marched at the head of his men with knitted brows he was very silent and very thoughtful and might almost have been thought to have been in doubt. Once or twice he shook his head slowly and muttered something beneath his breath. He, too, had heard the strange story at an earlier time—had heard how this terrible and sin stained man, with a price upon his head, had gone down into the valley, into the midst of men ready and willing to sell him, carrying his life in his hand, to see a peasant woman who had sent for him. He had heard, too, how the robber had carried the child into the hills and had carefully tended it there ever since.

It was late in the afternoon when the little company drew near the end of its quest and, with leveled carbines, crept silently amid the rocks that lay strewn about the place. Suddenly one man, the little soldier with the gleaming teeth, who had spoken before, cried out sharply:

"See, my captain, he comes with the child!"

It was true. Even as they looked they saw an active, picturesque figure springing from rock to rock toward them, bearing on its shoulders a laughing, cowering, dark haired child. One hand of the man held the baby, the other grasped a carbine, and the late afternoon sun gleamed on the weapons in his belt. They saw, too, that the baby had, fastened lightly to one chubby fist, a fluttering white cloth. Seeing them, the man stood quite still, watching them, only the white cloth fluttering in the wind.

"A flag of truce!" grunted the captain, sharply calling a halt. He was too true a soldier not to regard such a sign. "What does he want, I wonder? Lower your arms there, men. There is plenty of time," he added grimly.

The robber came on again rapidly and finally halted a little distance above them, with the baby still perched upon his shoulder. Then he, too, lowered his carbine and stood there, with head upraised, looking at them defiantly.

"You have me!" he cried at last, his voice ringing out clearly through the still air. "You have tracked me up here—you, a hundred against one man. Yet even now you should not have taken me calmly thus, even though I stand alone—you should not have taken me thus, but for the little one."

He glanced up for a moment at the baby on his shoulder and drew one little hand down to his lips and then faced the soldiery again, speaking directly for the first time to the old officer.

"You are a brave man, captain," he added almost appealingly, "and such men do not make war on infants. What do you do with the little one, my captain?"

The captain shrugged his shoulders. "The child is nothing, Andreano," he said sternly. "She may die with you."

With a bound the bandit had sprung back from them, and in an instant the child was off his shoulder and behind him, and he knelt there with his carbine leveled, fiercely facing them.

"Beasts!" he cried. "I come to you under the white flag, well knowing that I must die and asking nothing for myself. I crave only that you should spare the innocent little one. Know this, then, since you will not, I will kill the child rather than she shall fall beneath your murderous blows, and will die such a death as few men have died, with a dozen comrades to bear me company. Now, what say you?"

He knelt there quite calmly, with his carbine leveled and with the child thrust behind him. But the old captain had stepped forward and raised his hand.

"Stop, Andreano!" he cried. "You are right. We make not war on babes. This hunting down of one man is but little to my liking, and I will not foul it more. The child is safe."

The man rose and laid down his carbine and took up the child again. "And the little one shall go with you down into the valley in safety?" he asked slowly.

"I have given my word. No harm shall come to the little one. Give it to me."

The robber kissed the baby's soft face passionately once, twice, thrice, and then moved quickly toward the captain, down the rocks, and passed the child into his arms.

"I thank you, my captain," he said gravely. "And now you are to shoot me?"

"Such are our orders, Andreano."

The other shrugged his shoulders. "So be it," he said softly; "only cover the face of the little one that she may not see."

The captain passed the child into the hands of the little soldier of the swarthy face, and they took it quickly out of his sight. Then came an order rapidly given and another. A volley rang out, startling the echoes on those lonely hills for a moment. There was a half sobbing cry, and Andreano's course was run.

So it came about that when the soldiers marched down into the valley again one of them bore upon a light pole the head of the notorious bandit for all the wide eyed peasantry to gaze at, and, strangest sight of all, upon the front of the captain's saddle, with the captain's arm about her, sat a laughing, cowering, dark haired baby.

A Royal Innkeeper.

The king of Wurttemberg is the only hotel keeper who is a king. When Peter the Great was traveling incognito through Europe he refused to stay anywhere but at an inn. To circumvent this whim the king of Wurttemberg put a tavern sign outside one of the royal palaces and, dressed as an innkeeper, himself welcomed the czar. This monarch's descendants have been in "the trade" ever since.

A SUNDAY RIDE.

Result, Woe to the Outfit and a Quaint Verdict From a Jury.

"Shortly after I began the practice of law," said Colonel Ingersoll, "I had occasion to make a western trip and incidentally to look up some records in the country offices of a certain town.

"When my research was finished I had some hours of leisure on my hands and naturally drifted into the courtroom, where a case was being tried.

"It was a damage suit for a wrecked buggy and foundered horse. It appeared that the defendant, a young man of about twenty-one, had taken his best girl out riding on a Sunday afternoon. They came home, the girl on horseback, the fellow leading a disheveled beast considerably the worse for wear.

"The girl was in court, but in a bad temper, and was the most reluctant witness I ever saw. It took some time to get the facts from the young man. It seemed that, being a very warm day, the horse wanted a drink, and as there was a track through a stream where the animal was accustomed to go he took the bit in his teeth, waded in knee deep and stopped.

"The checkrein had not been let down, and the horse couldn't get his head free to drink. Not being familiar with such gear, the pair did not know what to do. Finally the youth leaned over the dashboard and unbuckled the crupper.

"That didn't work, so he got out and, securing a rail that lay by the roadside, placed one end under the rear axle and tried to lift the hind end of the buggy so that the horse could get his nose to the water.

"The buggy lurched, the horse was frightened, began to paw and back, broke and overturned the vehicle and spilled the girl into the stream. The fellow dropped the rail, leaped into the water and caught the bundle of muslin and saved her, but, oh, so wet and bedraggled!

"The young man and the girl blamed the horse, and the jury after mature deliberation brought in a verdict against the plaintiff on the ground that a man who would let a turnout to an idiot must expect to take the consequences."

What Treasure Is In England.

Treasure trove, according to the authorities on English common law—that is, money, coin, gold and silver plate or bullion—all belong to the crown. Only gold and silver are treasure, so that if one finds antique bronzes, an old Roman sword or Celtic battle-axe or any trifle of that nature he may keep it without fear of incurring the penalties attached to concealment of treasure. And such penalties are still in existence. Formerly the punishment was no less than death, now it is only fine and imprisonment, although it may be doubted whether any jury could be so capricious as to convict of such an offense, which most people would confess to be capable of themselves committing should the occasion happily arise.—All the Year Round.

Couldn't Sing "H."

The young English tenor had been asked to favor the company with a song and responded with an interpretation of "Happy Be Thy Dreams," in which the singer's antipathy to the letter H was painfully manifest.

"I say, young man," said a blunt old chap after the singer had finished, "you didn't sound a single H, and the song is full of 'em."

"I beg your pardon, sir," replied the young man, with freezing dignity; "you are mistaken. The notes on the pianer don't go any higher than G."

Paternal Advice.

Medical Student—I think, father, when I have graduated I will become a specialist.

Father—What sort of specialist?
"I think I will make a specialty of ear diseases."

"I think you had better become a tooth specialist. Man has only two ears, but he has thirty-two teeth that are always more or less out of order."—London Tit-Bits.

Lucky.

"You don't mean to say he has paid you in advance for the full course of singing lessons?" said the first vocal instructor.

"Yes," replied the other gleefully, "because of a lucky misunderstanding. I said to him, 'You doubtless know our first lesson begins with "do".' He immediately apologized and produced the dough."—Philadelphia Press.

His Limit.

Bill—You say you swallowed a cent?

Jill—That's what I did.

"And the doctor made you cough it up?"

"He did."

"And then he wanted you to cough up a dollar, I suppose."

MAN AND THE DOG.

The Animal Is Loved, Yet His Name Serves For Insults.

How is it possible that we love dogs so much, yet when we are angry we call people dogs? When the Turks speak of us they say we are "Christian dogs!" If we despise a man we call him a puppy. If we love a girl we call her sparrow, kitten, dove, chicken. We say "that dog of a coward," "that contemptible cur," "that low down yellow dog," etc. Dog protects man. He lives in man's house and guards man's property and life. Yet we use "dog" always as an insulting epithet. An offensive person is as impudent as a dog! We regularly record the dog days. The dog has the honor of being always in the heavens in the constellations of the great and little dog. Sirius, the dog star, is the brightest of all the stars in the firmament.

We make laws for the dog's protection, we love him, cherish, wash, comb and dress him, minister unto him when he is ill, pay taxes to own him, let him lie in our laps, kiss him, take him to ride in carriages. Indians and Chinamen eat him. Yet in all Scripture "dog" is a most degrading expression. In the Levitic-

The Tyrant—Ha! Thou art afraid, Damocles.

Damocles—Oh, no; not a bit. But I was thinking it would be awfully annoying if that hair dropped into my soup.

MEMORIAL DAY EXERCISES

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Issues Pamphlet

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Bayliss has issued and mailed to teachers generally throughout the state a little pamphlet which will prove of the greatest assistance in making ready the special exercises for Memorial day.

It is composed of contributions from soldiers now living in Illinois and these bits of war history, told by the men who were a part of them, cannot fail of their purpose in illustrating to the children the glory and heroism of the war and its soldiers.

The day set aside for remembering the men who saved the country from dissolution will be made the more valuable on account of the little booklet and the labors of the teachers will be lightened by its assistance.

It is said that nothing is sure except death and taxes, but this is not altogether true. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is a sure cure for all lung and throat troubles. Thousands can testify to that. Mrs. C. B. Van Metre of Shepherdstown, W. Va., says "I had a severe case of bronchitis and for a year tried everything I heard of, but got no relief. One bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery then cured me absolutely." It's infallible for croup, whooping cough, grip, pneumonia and consumption. Try it. It's guaranteed by Hunt's Pharmacy. Trial bottles free. Regular sizes 50c, $1.00.

A Startling Test

To save a life, Dr. T. G. Merritt of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes, "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages, caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attack in 14 months." Electric Bitters are positively guaranteed for dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation and kidney troubles. Try them. Only 50c at Hunt's Pharmacy.

Must Hand Out Mail

A few weeks ago some of our exchanges published an item stating that patrons of the free rural delivery who might wish to get their mail at the office would have to rent a box as the postal clerks were not required to go through the boxes of the rural carriers. This item traveled to Washington and was taken up by the postoffice department and corrected by Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Conrad in the following language:

The extension of rural service in any community does not debar its patrons from the privilege of receiving at the office, if called for during the regular office hours, any mail that may have arrived for them after the departure of the carriers upon their route. It is not required that rural patrons rent a box in order to obtain this local service.

"I've come to kill a printer," said the little man. "Any printer in particular?" asked the foreman. "Oh, anyone will do. I would prefer a small one, but I've got to make some sort of a show at fight or leave home, since the paper called my wife's tea party a 'swill affair.'"

American Saving Stamps

of 10c and upwards at the stores of the below named merchants of Genoa, who, as a token of appreciation, have decided to present these stamps to all of their customers who will make cash purchases in their stores.

The American Saving Stamps have an enviable reputation all over the United States, and wherever introduced, have met with a spontaneous reputation. By saving these stamps you will be enabled to obtain any of the beautiful articles now displayed in the store of and will also have your choice of hundreds of other articles which are always to be had at the headquarters of the American Saving Stamp Co., absolutely free of charge. Remember that the prices of merchandise will remain as low as formerly, and in fact prices on a great many goods will be reduced, for the reason that the merchants who will handle the American Saving Stamps will have a greater outlet for their merchandise, and will thus reduce expenses and be enabled to offer their customers a greater variety of goods at less prices than formerly.

The American Saving Stamps have come to stay, and are as well established as the Currency of the United States. Old time foggyism gives way to modern merchandising, and the spirit of the 20th century prevails where the enterprising and progressive merchants have established this famous and well known stamp. For the purpose of introducing the American stamp, we will give to each consumer who visits our headquarters on

An Open Letter

From the Chapin, S. C., News: Early in the spring my wife and I were taken with diarrhoea and so severe were the pains that we called a physician who prescribed for us, but his medicines failed to give any relief. A friend who had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy on hand gave each of us a dose and we at once felt the effects. I procured a bottle and before using the entire contents we were entirely cured. It is a wonderful remedy and should be found in every household. H. C. Bailey, editor. This remedy is for sale by G. H. Hunt.
