DAIRYMEN ARE CALLED TO REPORT

Evidence Before the Federal Grand Jury in Chicago This Week

TRUCK LOADS OF DOCUMENTS

More than One Thousand Dealers Farmers and Brokers have been Called to Testify

Evidence against the so-called "milk trust," with headquarters in Chicago and operating under the names of the Milk Producers' Co-operative Marketing association and the Milk Producers' association was presented before the federal grand jury Tuesday.

Truck loads of books, pamphlets, lefters, files and data seized by the Truck loads of books, pamphlets, government officials was and will be read to the jurors to prove that men bers of the milk association were v olating the antitrust Sherman act.

The government charges that th contracts entered into by the milk-pro ducing farmers and officials of th milk association indicate manipulatio in the price of milk.

These contracts-thousands o them-will be presented to the jur ors. The documents, according to Assistant District Attorney Frederic Dickinson, in charge of the milk in vestigation for the government, show that the farmers of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, within a radius of 200 miles of Chicago, pledged themselve to sell their milk to the Milk Produc ers' Co-operative Marketing associa

It is the contention of the govern ment-after an exhaustive investig tion-that officials of the Milk Prod cers' Co-operative Marketing associ tion were in league with the farme in raising the price of milk.

The leged manipulation has cause the consumers to pay the freight. Officials of the association asse that there has been no violation the Sherman anti-trust act, and tha the gradual increase in the price o milk in and around Chicago was cre ated by the law of supply and demand Charles S. Deneen of counsel for the association claims that the organ ization is a co-operative one and con ducting its business under the United States food administration rules.

W. J. Kittle, who is the Chicago secretary of the association under federal investigation, was served with a subpoena duces tecum to produce all data sought by the government. It is expected that the investiga tion by the federal grand jury will consume several weeks.

and brokers have been subpoenaed There are indictments now pending against members of the old Milk Producers' association which were beturned by the state grand jury more Bai than a year ago.

It is believed that the indicted persons will not be forced to trial by the state until the federal investigation is finished.

United States District Attorney Charles F. Clyne and State's Attorney Hoyne have combined their efforts i the the new investigation of an alleg ed combine of milk producers.

GOVERNMENT BUYS GRANT

remarked the schoolmaster. I looked up at him.

"Michael Henry's clothes!-sure, they're just the thing for you!" I followed him upstairs, wondering how it had happened that Michael Henry had clothes. He took me into his room and brought some handsome, soft clothes out of a press with shirt, socks and boots to match.

"There, my laddle buck," said he, "put them on."

"These will soon dry on me," I said. "Put them on-ye laggard! Michael Henry told me to give them to you. It's the birthday night o' little Ruth. my boy. There's a big cake with candles and chicken pie and jellied cookies and all the like o' that. Put them on. A wet poy at the feast would dampen the whole proceedings."

I put them on and with a great sense of relief and comfort. They were an admirable fit-too perfect for an accident, although at the time I thought only of their grandeur as I stood surveying myself in the lookingglass. They were of blue cloth and I saw that they went well with my blond hair and light skin. I was putting on my collar and necktie when been hung by the kitchen stove, were camp and wrinkled. Mr. Hacket came to my room before I had risen. "Michael Henry would rather see his clothes hanging on a good boy than on a nail in the closet," said he. "Sure they give no comfort to the nail at all."

"I guess mine are dry now, I answered.

"They're wet and heavy, boy. No son o' Baldur could keep a light heart in them. Sure ye'd be as much out o' place as a sunbeam in a cave o' bats. Merchant Fleets Will Be Nearly on Par Within Five Years, Peace Congress Experts Believe.

> By LLOYD ALLEN, Special Staff Correspondent.

1919, Western Newspaper Union.) ARIS.—America is starting out to become a big maritime power. With their great shipyards just coming into 100 per cent production, Americans can expect, within five years or so, to see their flag flying over a fleet of merchant carriers nearly as large as the British fleet of merchant boats. This prediction is made from figures and material supplied by the American shipping experts here in Paris and by estimates made by the British chamber of shipping in London, of which Lord Inchcape is the head. In 1921 the British will be in the lead. America will then have 16,000,000 tons of boats while the British will have 19,000,000 or 20,000,000. America expects to maintain her shipbuilding plants until she eventually has 20,000,000 tons of boatsgood, substantial boats. That will require five years perhaps. Much will be heard about friction between our government and the British over this question of shipping, but it may be taken for granted that America is maintaining a pretty fair kind of an understanding with her British friends on the proposition.

From the British shipping interests there probably will come a long series of protests over the fact that America is branching out as a powerful factor in the shipping business. But these howls, even though they be long and loud and very sincere, will not mean that America and Great Britain are at daggers' points over the matter of ships. America will, without doubt, have her arguments with the British over many issues that will come up incldentally as the shipbuilding program grows-and through it all one may expect to see the eminently fair and just elements in the British government agreeing in word and spirit to the fundamental policy of the American government on shipping affairsa policy that is not new. This policy was first expounded by Benjamin Franklin, namely, that America should have enough ships to carry 50 per cent of her exports and imports. Franklin held that every nation needing foreignmade goods or raw materials, and having raw materials and manufactured goods to sell JOR LAUNCHING overseas, should own a fleet capable of carrying half of its national imports and exports.

He used to draw a picture of a theoretically perfect balance in this important economic question. For the sake of illustrating his point. Franklin would state that a fair balance, in the ship business, could always be maintained if warehouses, put half way across an ocean, served as points of interchange for the overseas trade between two nations. One nation would take, in its own ships, all of its goods for export and leave them at the warehouse—this imaginary point in the middle of the sea. There the ship would load up with goods from the second nation and haul them back home. Ships of the other nation would follow the same program.

Naturally enough midocean warehouses are a physical impossibility. And no two nations could ever have anything like equal tonnage to exchange. For all practical purposes, except in the matter of framing policies, the Franklin scheme is blackboard stuff, very useful in explaining the theory of foreign trade to a schoolroom, but of no vital importance to the ship-building engineer or foreign trader.

All Cannot Be Shipping Nations.

Then the whole world cannot be guided by the Franklin idea. Many nations are unable to get into the shipping game seriously. They lack materials for shipbuilding, perhaps, or they lack deep-water ports open the year around. Russia, under the czars, made a 300-year-long fight for a deep-water port open 12 months out of every year. Switzerland has no ports. Italy lacks steel and coal for operating shipyards. And so the story goes. Most nations for one reason or another keep out of the big shipping game on account of natural obstacles.

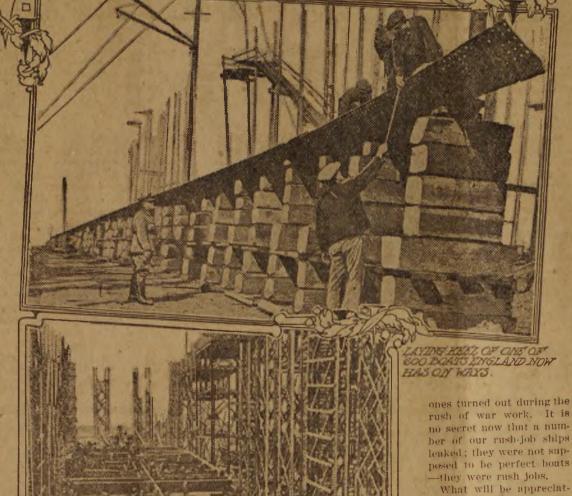

In this very situation, what might be termed the economic and political misfortunes of the smaller nations work to the advantage of the bigger maritime nations, helping their ship business.

Today, America and Great Britain have entirely different policies on the problem of world shipping. We are going into the game, according to our shipping experts here in Paris for the peace conference, because it is of vital importance for the future of America to own and operate a fleet big enough to carry 50 per cent of our exports and imports. Such a program is almost mandatory for the future prosperity of the United States. We need a merchant marine to complete our already enormous industrial system, our chain of big factories. We need ships to haul our grain to foreign lands; to transport our raw materials. We must not face the future placing ourselves at the mercy of any other nation's ships and shipping interests, our shipping officials say. In this war-just ended with the defeat of Germany-the whole world had a concrete example of what ships mean to a nation. Japan, by gaining for a time the shipping supremacy in the Pacific, has been able to almost paralyze Chinese foreign trade with America and boost Japanese trade with the United States by the simple expedient of operating Japanese-owned ships for the benefit of Japan; a thing she had every right to do. There were not enough ships to go around-and the Japanese adopted the policy that Chinese trade should suffer rather than Japanese.

This condition will rapidly right itself; but in the meantime the Chinese had to suffer in silence. There are dozens of other examples that shipping men point to by way of illustrating the necessity for America to go into the shipping business to a point where the American fleet is balancing the American factory and agricultural resources. Plan Fleet of 20,000,000 Tons.

Briefly, the American policy is to create a fleet of something like 15,000,000 tons by 1921 and 20,-000,000 eventually. This will help replace the ships lost in war and needed by the world at large and will put the American merchant marine on its Eventually we will try to operate a fleet of just a bit more than our rightful 50 per cent, since we expect to have a constantly growing South American trade that should be handled in American boats as much as possible.

While America is looking at the ship business on a sort of 50-50 plan, the British view the whole situation from an entirely different point of view. They could not possibly operate on a policy that would fit American ideals and plans for the future. The British, industrially and geographically, differ too much from America to permit them to follow a program similar to ours. Here are the main points where the policies of the two countries differ on the authority of the best-informed American ship men here in Paris: America will operate her ships on a nonprofit basis. The fleet will be considered, during the next few years, as an adjunct to America's resources, a servant of our farms and factories. The British, in the meantime, will continue their policy of operating ships for a profit. Shipping with them is a business in itself, a business that is supposed to pay, and does pay, satisfactory

While the Americans consider ships as a means toward an end-that is the building up of a foreign trade, the British will operate their ships for the profit that is made by ships. They are in the game to make money out of carrying tonnage across the seven seas-they have acquired the heritage of Tyre, and they intend holding their

We will both be great sea powers. Britain will endeavor to have all the tonnage she can; America will strive to keep up a first-class fleet that can transport overseas 50 per cent of our imports and exports, which is our just share of deep-sea traffic. And we will also take on, as the months pass and as the world gradually returns to the ways of peace, a goodly proportion of the South American trade, providing plans of the American officials do not go awry.

How will America and Britain achieve the aims of their big shipping men? What is the job ahead for American ship yards? What will the entry of America mean in the world business of shipping? These questions represent some of the outstanding points of the whole situation. British shipbuilders and owners, who are now protesting against continuation of governmental control, will build something like 3,000,000 tons of ships in the next two years, possibly more, in order to bring the British mercantile marine up to 19,000,000 tons, according to the British chamber of shipping in London. It is expected that the American shipyards will he capable of turning out 11,000,000 tons in the next two years. If both programs are realized the world will have returned to better than a prewar footing in the matter of ships. When the peace conference started there was a world shortage of something like 6,000,000 tons. Some experts estimated the deficit at 9,000,000. One of the things we can expect from the American shipyards is a better lot of ships than the ones turned out during the rush of war work. It is they were rush jobs. What will be appreciated by the sailor is the good quarters and high pay American ships will afford. Our entry into the world shipping game has already improved the sailors' lot all over the world. The Scandinavian nations are discarding the old-time cramped forecastle from their new boats and are putting in quarters featuring comforts that were unknown in the old sailing days. Hereafter the business of being a sailor will not be the disagreeable job it was before and during the war. The pay is going to be better—first in the American boats and later in the foreign trade. It will be the same proposition as a business house (America) introducing industrial reforms and giving higher pay and enlarged opportunity, thereby virtually obliging rival concerns (Great Britain and the other shipping powers) to maintain the same wage schedules and reforms in order to keep their employees satisfied.

Use of either of these modern power generators eliminates the old-time stoker aboard ship -the worst class of labor needed.

In place of the old-fashioned sailor will come in due time-probably much sooner than we expectthe trained ship worker, whose position in the world will be infinitely higher than his predeces-

Lots of criticism is heard regarding the ships American yards turned out during the rush of war work. Many of them leaked; the rivets were not put in carefully-there was not enough time. Europe had to be fed-armies in the field needed munitions—time was at a premium.

American shipping men do not consider our warbuilt ships as fair examples of what our yards can turn out and are predicting, with much assurance, that American-built boats will be as stanch as America's steel buildings.

America Now Leads World.

Today America leads the world in ship building. The neutral nations ran out of steel and are not competitors. The French and Italians are building only a relatively small number of boats. The British, counting nearly 200 boats being built in Canada and other British dominions, have about 600 boats under way, a total of a little more than 2,000,000 tons. America has almost twice as many being built, totaling about three and a half million tons, and we are "just getting started." Government ownership of shipping is a policy private ship owners are fighting in America and England as well. Lord Incheape, president of the British chamber of shipping and chairman of the great British ship concern, the Peninsular and Oriental company, has emphatically stated he will sell out his large interests in British shipping activities it government ownership and control are to be continued indefinitely.

It is understood, on American authority here in Paris, that government control of American shipping is to last only a relatively short time—until the defunct law of supply and demand has again gone into operation, when the world trade routes have been reconstructed from the havoc wrought

It is expected, however, that the American government will always stand committed to a policy of ship control on certain definite phases of the business. For instance, the government should not be expected to permit rival ship lines flying the American flag to embark on cut-throat competitive programs for business. It would be against the government's policy-after the days of rigid control have passed—to permit rival ship lines to operate more ships on a given trade line than the tonnage of that route demanded.

More American ships mean more naval vessels. Our navy must be maintained so as to compare favorably in size with the merchant fleet. Not that we are making ready for an era of excessive arma-

This much is settled, however: America is beginning her career as a great maritime power, and the American government is going to try to make the life of our sailors as comfortable, as well paid and as respectable as the life of any well-paid employee in a modern American business concern.

Our young men of this generation and the coming decades then will gradually become greater world travelers than they have been since the early days of our republic, and America probably will never regain the feeling of isolation from world affairs she had before her entry into the great war.

of Dry Goods, Cloaks, Suits, Dress Shoes and Furnishing Goods for women and children to be ENTIRE STOCK placed on sale, starting Wednesday, April 30, for 10 DAYS at less than the present market value.

The Cause

We are overloaded with merchandise of the highest character and the best money can buy. We must reduce our stock. The backward season and the inclement weather conditions has left us with a $15,000 stock. We must cut it in two in ten days, no matter how great a sacrifice. And beginning Wednesday, April 30, we will inaugurate the greatest sale of Dry Goods, Ready-to-wear, Shoes and Furnishings for Women and children that has ever been held in this entire vicinity.

U.S. NO LONGER ON DEBTOR LIST

Conditions of Few Years Ago Have Been Entirely Reversed by War.

DUTY NOW TO PAY OUR WAY

Looking to World Leadership in National Ethics and International Commerce Brings Us Face to Face With Problem.

> By WILLIAM G. REDFIELD, Secretary of Commerce.

Five years ago the United States was a debtor nation. We had financed many of our largest enterprises with the aid of European funds. The visible balance of trade was in our favor but was nearly or quite offset by such unseen items as payments for interest, for services (transporation) for the expenditures of Americans traveling abroad, etc. We were as a whole an expending rather than an investing country. The work of developing the full range of our resources was incomplete. We were far from being independent in the economic sense, but looked to the world outside our limits for many essentials, viz.: for credits, for materials and for many manufactured products which we did not ourselves produce.

There were then three great competitors in the international market-Great Britain, Germany and the United States-which ranked in the order stated. The first two were intrenched all around the globe with banking facilities and transportation systems everywhere at their command. Great Britain possessed the largest merchant fleet and the greatest aggregate of cost us much; it has robbed us of the and sweep them thoroughly with a When you put the matting down, get liquid capital in the world. Now that over. the strife seems over the world looks to us for essential materials and equipment with which to rebuild that which war has destroyed and to resume the normal work of life. We must not only feed and supply the world, but must furnish in large part the credits from which we shall be paid. Industries which we did not have are created and operated. We are far more economically independent than ever before and have come to realize the danger of being dependent on foreign sources of supply for any essential factors of commerce. Vast Change Is Wrought.

We may not, therefore, think in the present and of the future as we thought in and of the past. Ideas which seemed remote have been condensed into the facts. Relations that seemed dreams are now realities. Isolation has been changed into world leadership. We can no longer confine thought and action to the three-mile limit but have entered into the wide realm of world activity. This calls on us for action and for finance on a scale this country, which is one-third of the of satin, the first a utility wrap and teresting models which can be turned of flour. GREAT WAR TAUGHT ECONOMY

Millions of Men, Women and Children Proudly Responded to Urgent Appeal to Give and Help Win.

By GEORGE M. REYNOLDS. President, Continental & Commercial National Bank of Chicago.

By tradition and training Americans possess, in marked degree, those qualities that fit them for the larger relationships that are bound to grow out of the sacrifices and achievements of the great war. Our mixture of citizenry and ancestry makes it very vital, in this time of looking forward to a greater America, that we should study American history, learn to revere American institutions and strive to discover and attain American ideals. These have made us great, guided our matchless progress in the past; these will lead us into a more glorious future.

From the experience of the past four years, first as onlookers and later as participants, we have gained a more intimate knowledge of the outside world, a knowledge that will be of inestimable value in our foreign relations, commercially, financially and diplomatically. We have also been getting a much clearer understanding of our own responsibilities to each other.

There are some specific requirements that must not be overlooked in our preparation for marching in the front rank of nations. Industry, thrift, the relationship of capital and labor to the general welfare, and financial power come within this classi-

War Has Taught Economy.

One of the lessons taught by the was was economy. Capital and Labor.

The relationship between capital and labor is one of the big problems. because these are the two main fundamentals of modern life. Capital 18 useless without labor, and labor cannot find employment in our complex civilization unless somebody risks capital in the business of farming, mining, manufacturing, construction and transportation. The banker and every other man with an unbiased view of the whole situation hopes for co-operation between these two necessary elements. Fair adjustment is needed here if anywhere. Labor should have its just reward, capital should receive such compensation as will encourage its use in industry.

No country, however fortunate in other respects, can continue prosperous at home or be a great factor in international trade without a safe banking and currency system.

We Must Feed Germany, So That She May Pay for the Evil She Has Done

By ROBERT LANSING, Secretary of State

Germany has suffered bitterly, is suffering bitterly. She has paid a fearful penalty for the crime of plunging the world into four years of blood and fire. Today starvation and want are the portions of the German people. Violence and murder stalk through the streets of their great cities. Political institutions, industrial enterprise and the very structure of society are tottering. It is the price of their own evildoing, the just retribution of their crimes.

Political chaos and outlawry have supplanted the highly organized government of imperial Germany.

Social order is breaking down under the difficulties of defeat and the hopelessness of the future. Like the anarchy which for years made an inferno of Russia, the fires of terrorism are ablaze in the states of Germany. It is no time to allow sentiments of vengeance and hatred to fled fat, the excess fat of the chicken. suggest using it only in cakes and stand in the way of checking this conflagration, which will soon be at the German borders and threatening other lands.

To make Germany capable of resisting anarchy and the hideous did take it out before I made the after rendering it carefully in the way despotism of the red terror Germany must be allowed to purchase food, gravy. If it can be used satisfactorily, noted on this slip. I think you will and to earn that food industrial conditions must be restored by a treaty of peace. Political parties of the United States can be backed into the ocean butter. The difference between chicken for frying purposes just as it is. When tomorrow by churches united on any moral issue.

Civilization has at hand in unified religious bodies the most powerful machine for moral and social advancement conceived in any age.

Bringing the inter-church movement down to plain facts and figures, it corresponds in the moral and religious field to the co-ordination of commercial effort and achievement accomplished by the National Association of Commerce. We do not base our efforts on doctrinal or organic one. unity but on co-ordinate Christian effort. The movement leaves every or church.

Any society of nations, the proposed league of nations, must crumble unless the world is leavened with a unity of moral ideas. These moral and social ideals can't be put over by unrelated denominations. We desire Old Skirt, Ready for Rag Bag, blouse? However, you do need unity in the matter of economic justice and on all moral issues and do not concern ourselves with the splitting of hairs or theological discussion.

Tomorrow 174,000 preachers will go to work, all driving at the same thing—the advancement of the world's moral welfare. If this army of spiritual leaders were united in a battle for some great issue, nothing in the world could stand against the drive.

Defeat Reveals the True Character of the German Nation and People

By J. E. LOUGH, Professor of Psychology

From the viewpoint of a psychologist the German mind is showing often makes the success or failure of the same imperfections in defeat which it exhibited so conspicuously while a skirt. Even off the bottom, and if the war was in active progress. The most striking trait of this character is a lack of moral fiber, which throughout history all nations, like all per- is a false hem? It may be of the same or of will surely be sour. man runs away; he has not the fiber to stand and share in the fate of his people, which he brought about by his own acts. Yet in Germany no one appears to have uttered one word in criticism of the kaiser's course.

The surrender of the German fleet, from the Teutonic viewpoint, was the right thing. They would rather be live cowards than dead heroes.

It seems inconsistent that this appalling cowardice should be exhibited by the same people who fought their way into Belgium, France, Ser- of similar material. In case you have far better than placing them on the him. He also asks a divorce, allegbia, Russia and Roumania. But it is a matter of everyday observation that any cowardly person will maintain what he may term his courage as long as he is winning.

The pretense of a defensive war which the Germans have set up affords another indication of this same mental characteristic. If we grant that the masses of their people believe that the war was defensive we are desired and cut the top of the blouse ing add a teaspoonful of cinnamon to confronted by the fact that the nation abjectly surrendered before a foot by a plain waist pattern. Before the war the Germans had pretty well concealed their true national character by making a display of several admirable qualities. The truth has at last burst upon us and there is no mistaking it.
