SUNDAY ORDAINED

W. A. Sunday, Evangelist, Was Ordained Wednesday Evening

The Chicago presbytery at last Monday's meeting voted to ordain William A. Sunday, the ex-National league baseball player, as a minister. Mr. Sunday, several years ago, gave up baseball for evangelistic work, and since that time has been, as he expressed it, showing the people, "how to make home runs for heaven."

Evangelist Sunday is well known to Genoa people, and a few years ago conducted large evangelistic meetings here.

Mr. Sunday was formally ordained Wednesday evening at the Jefferson Park Presbyterian church, when Dr. Wilbur Chapman preached the sermon and Dr. Alexander Patterson delivered the charge to the candidate. The former ballplayer applied to the Chicago presbytery for ordination as an evangelist on the advice of several ministers who had carefully observed his work during the past year.

Michael McDonald Weds

On Wednesday at Dixon, Michael McDonald, formerly of Genoa, and Miss Katherine Duffy were united in marriage. Mr. McDonald's many Genoa friends join the REPUBLICAN in extending congratulations to the happy couple.

BOY CRUSHED TO DEATH

DeKalb-Sycamore Electric R. R. Claims Victim

BOY IS THROWN TWENTY FEET

Walter Day, Twelve Years of Age, Meets Instant Death at DeKalb on Wednesday of Last Week

The DeKalb-Sycamore Electric Railway on Wednesday of last week claimed its first victim, since its existence.

The victim was the twelve year old son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Day, who reside on South Seventh street.

The accident occurred about four o'clock while the lad was returning from the normal school. He had stopped on the curbstone to talk with a few playmates, and had his back toward the car line. After a short conversation, he turned to continue his homeward walk, and before his companions could assist him the approaching car was upon him.

The force with which the car struck him hurled the body twenty feet from the point where the lad was struck.

The boy was taken at once to Dr. Wilder's office where he died thirty minutes later.

Mr. Day is employed by the American Steel and Wire company of DeKalb.

Horses Bring Good Prices

The Elgin Courier speaking of a sale of horses near that city, recently, says:

"Five hundred people attended Smith Youngs' horse sale at Youngsdale, on Thursday. Ninety-seven head were sold and the average price paid was $154.77. Louis Althen paid $440 for a draft team; J. Rohles invested $335 in a good team. Louis Rohrsen, who lives east of Elgin, was the highest bidder on a $450 team. Will Marshall of East Plato purchased a $400 pair of four-year old colts. One large draft horse sold to McClure & Struckmann for $200. Mr. Kelly of Lilly Lake paid $450 for a heavy mule team. Two other teams sold for $370 and $350 respectively.

Not more than three years ago a good horse could be bought for $35 to $60, and it was a beauty that would bring $100. Now there is a great demand and ready sale for heavy draft and general purpose horses, and the prices are very remunerative.

Will Hold Sale

The next public sale at Kellogg and Adams' feed stable will take place Saturday, May 9th at 1 o'clock.

A number of buyers from Chicago will attend, and the prospects of more depends on the amount of property listed.

Those wishing to list property may leave description and name at the REPUBLICAN office before Tuesday, May 5.

Five buyers were here from Chicago last Saturday, and the stock brought in was not sufficient to meet the demand.

PERKINS TICKET WON

New Officers Took Seats Thursday Night Of This Week

PERKINS PLURALITY WAS THIRTY-SIX

Alonzo Holroyd, E. H. Browne and Wm. Schmidt Will Act as Village Heads for Coming two Years.—Browne Leads Ticket

H. A. PERKINS
Genoa's New Mayor

An election that aroused more interest than has been witnessed in Genoa in many years was that of Tuesday when the "Perkins" ticket, under the Citizens' head, carried the corporation by a large plurality.

The vote was almost total, and 284 out of a possible 300 were polled. Of this number H. A. Perkins received 158 and J. E. Stott 122, which caused Mr. Perkins to be elected to the office of president of the village board by thirty-six votes. 207 straight tickets were cast; 127 for Perkins, 80 for Stott, and the remaining 77 were split tickets.

THE RESULT

For President	H. A. Perkins.....	158
	J. E. Stott.....	122
	Alonzo Holroyd.....	150
For Trustees (Perkins Ticket)	E. H. Browne.....	167
	Wm. Schmidt.....	157
	F. A. Tischler.....	115
For Trustees (Stott Ticket)	E. C. Crawford.....	108
	John Hadsall.....	109
For Clerk—Thos. M. Frazier.....		181
Total Vote	284.	Straight Tickets 207. Split Tickets 77.

Those who composed both tickets felt confident that they would win, and not until the official count was completed was the story told. J. E. Stott is the retiring president, and his chair will be filled by H. A. Perkins who has been on the board for the past two years.

Alonzo Holroyd, as trustee and whose term expired this year, will be re-seated by his re-election.

F. A. Tischler will retire, and his chair with that of H. A. Perkins will be filled by the newly-elected trustees, E. H. Browne and Wm. Schmidt.

Prior to Tuesday many "issues" were brought forth as has been the custom in many campaigns, but after the one of importance was righted in the eyes of the voter all passed off smoothly.

The men that stepped into office last evening were men of the people's choice, and in them will be found the interest for Genoa's welfare. They endorse progress, and it will be their aim to push the bringing of new industries to Genoa.

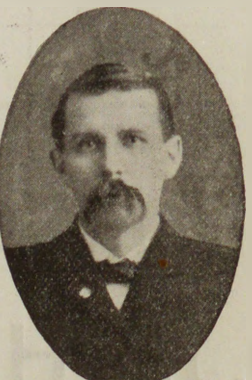

Those who were re-elected have been supported as representatives of the tax payers and along these lines they will serve Genoa during their administration.

As was the discredited method of many of our neighboring towns, Genoa politics were not marred with the issuing of circulars in which things are printed that could not be set forth honorably in their town publications.

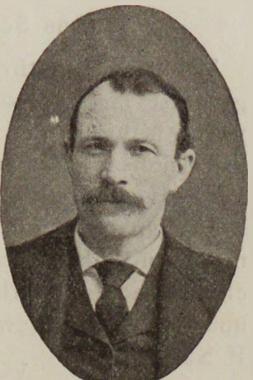

Again Genoa settles down in quietude to pass serenely along the path of the busy world, and when the stir of our village is again turned to the faithful city officers for re-election, we hope to see a total vote of 484 instead of 284; that will be the benefit derived from the coming of the Eureka Electric company.

40 New Houses Wanted for Eureka Company Employees!

Special Inducements are offered to those who will build at once!

EUREKA PARK ADDITION is located on a beautiful tract of land in the north-east part of Genoa, Illinois, one block north of the Chicago Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, just across the street from the new factory of the Eureka Electric company, one block from the Selz Shoe factory and only two blocks east of the Genoa High School. The Eureka Electric company makes telephones and a complete line of apparatus and equipment for telephone exchanges. They will employ 200 or more people, skilled artisans, refined and educated class that will make desirable, prosperous and permanent citizens.

Eureka Park Addition has been designed and laid out by competent engineers into six blocks with broad streets and avenues with also an alley in the rear of each lot. About the center of the subdivision, ground has been reserved for a park which will be improved and beautified at once and be known as Eureka Park. The streets will be graded, side walks built, water mains extended and ornamental shade trees planted on each lot. No effort or expense will be spared to make this the most desirable residence portion of Genoa.

There are 150 residence lots in Eureka Subdivision besides the ground reserved for Eureka Park. Each lot has 50 feet frontage on street or avenue with perfect drainage and there is not a single undesirable lot in the subdivision.

Fifty of these lots have been sold and reserved for Eureka Electric company employes, many of whom will build homes. Of the remaining 100 lots

NAME

ADDRESS

"Saving and home ownership should be advocated and encouraged, because it is the best way to make the industrial classes independent."

10 per cent a month

would be unpleasant if you were paying that rate of interest, but would be

Delightfully pleasant

if you were taking that much profit every month.

Genoa property has advanced ten per cent. monthly since February 1, when it was definitely settled that the Eureka Electric Company and the Advance Telephone and Electric Company would consolidate and remove their plants to Genoa.

If this rate of rise in values continues for a year the results for a year will exceed our prediction that Genoa real estate would double in value within a year.

"The desire for home ownership is instinctive; every man, no matter how discouraged he may be, still longs for and dreams of a snug little place all his own where his children may be reared, where under his own roof he can meet his friends and where, free from all annoyance, he can rest and enjoy himself."

We bought over One Thousand Dollars' worth of hand-made Harness from a concern that was being closed out. We bought these goods at less than cost and are selling them accordingly. We challenge the whole country to compete with our goods and prices.

Kellogg & Adams have just received the Largest Shipment of New Buggies, Surries, Runabouts, Carts, Spring Wagons, etc., ever seen in DeKalb County!

WE have bought our goods from the leading manufacturers, such as the genuine Columbus Buggy company of Columbus, Ohio. We also handle the celebrated Staver Buggies of Chicago and the Brookville Buggies of Brookville, Indiana. Ask dealers elsewhere for these goods, and they will tell you they are too high priced for their trade. We know these makes are the very best, and are selling large numbers of these famous makes. There is nothing too good for our trade.

Woodmen Head Office Says Re-adjustment Was Voted

THREE FOR; ONE AGAINST

Claim that Delegates Will Vote in that Ratio.—Reports from the County Camps Are Said to Be In Rock Island Argus: Reports from the county camps held last Wednesday throughout the Woodmen jurisdiction are pouring into the head office by hundreds and even thousands. From these the fate of the re-adjustment question, which was the great, overshadowing issue, is read at the head office, and all doubt that the proposition for higher rates will carry in some form in practically all the state camps next month and in the Indianapolis head camp in June is removed.

It is stated that the position of the delegates elected last Wednesday throughout the jurisdiction will be recorded at the state camps in the proportion of seventy-five for and twenty-five against some form of re-adjustment. The administration, which has become identified with the movement to raise the rates, is therefore considered vindicated.

Not all the reports indicate what the instructions of the county camps have been, but in general the complexion of the delegates is judged from the acquaintance of the head officers with the views of the individual members. The reports are brief and were sent in by the clerks of the county camps immediately after the adjournment. They will be followed in a few days by more detailed records of the doings. As stated, however, there is no longer any doubt that the great majority of the members realize that a change must be made to perpetuate the life of the society.

The Knife Throwers

By FREDERIC VAN RENSSLAER DEY,
Author of "Not Like Other Men," Etc.

"We were passing the house when he entered it. Bustamente believed he recognized in him an old friend for whose address he had vainly sought. He accordingly inquired of the hallboy for that friend, but was told that no such person lived there."

"What is the name of your friend, Mr. Bustamente?"

"John Cuthbert," replied Bustamente promptly. "He is an Englishman."

"Proceed, Mr. Rodriguez."

"When he found that no such person resided there, he decided that his friend was making a call and resolved to wait till he came out. As it was getting late then he believed his friend would not remain long. I demurred, but he prevailed upon me to wait with him."

"And you waited more than an hour?"

"While we were waiting an old man came out sobbing. He seemed dazed and frightened. We at once thought something was the matter. I spoke to the old man, but he did not reply. After that we waited awhile longer and ultimately saw the man, whom we now know to be Wyndham, come from the house. His behavior was precisely as Mr. Escudera has described it to you."

"Why did you not accost your supposed friend, Mr. Bustamente? Or did you?"

"No. I saw at a glance that I was mistaken. The light shone in his face when he came out. I could not be deceived then."

"How do you know now that it was Wyndham you saw?"

"Because I have seen him many times since in the company of my friend, Escudera."

"And you also, Rodriguez?"

"Yes."

"What time was it when he came out of the house?"

"I cannot say exactly."

"Well, approximately."

"Somewhere about 11."

"It was 11 o'clock or a little after that when he re-entered the club," interrupted Escudera.

"How do you know that, Mr. Escudera?"

"I went into the club immediately behind him."

"Was that the time you were to meet Mr. Pendleton?"

"There was no stated hour, but it was understood to be late in the evening. I think I so stated."

"So you did, so you did. Excuse me."

"There was a rap at the door, and the clerk entered again. He laid a card upon which there was writing on the table, and the district attorney snatched it up with a furious scowl."

"You should place messages like this in my hands, John," he said severely. Then he glanced at the inscription and added:

"Tell them to wait at the door and to come in when I ring. I will call them as soon as I have finished with these gentlemen."

He turned then again to Escudera.

"And upon this you base your charges of murder against Craig Wyndham?" he asked in the pleasantest tone imaginable.

"I do."

"Why?"

"Because it is proved that he was the last person in the rooms of Pendleton. Burr Pendleton was never seen alive after that time. The inquest determined that he was murdered about that time; because the servant went away while Wyndham was still in the house and has not been seen since, and he was publicly accused of the crime, and the police are still searching for him, I understand."

"That is quite true. Is there anything more?"

"Because Wyndham was made sole heir of all that Pendleton possessed, and he above all others had a motive for the crime. He could easily bribe the servant to assist him or to go away and leave him to do the work alone."

"That has a reasonable sound. Have you any more reasons, Mr. Escudera?"

"Yes, one more, the weightiest of all."

"What is that?"

"That old servant James is living in the house where his master was murdered and is acting as the valet of Wyndham."

"What?" cried the district attorney again, and he added mentally: "By Jove, if I had heard this before Wyndham told me about it, it might have impressed me—all but the evidence of these two lying scoundrels with you, Mr. Escudera. Nobody with any sense would believe the story they tell."

"It is true," said Escudera, replying to the exclamation.

"How do you know that?"

"I have seen him there. I saw him there last night. I know him well. I have often seen him in Mexico, and I also saw him the night of the murder, you will remember."

"Now, Mr. Escudera, and you, gentlemen, what object have you in pursuing Mr. Wyndham with this terrible accusation?"

"Simply that justice be done, sir," replied Escudera. "I was Pendleton's friend. I would like to see his murderer punished."

"You want justice, then?"

"I do. I demand it."

"Then, by thunder, you shall have it!" He struck the bell sharply. The door opened, and three officers in plain clothes entered the room. The district attorney waved his hand.

"There are your men. Take them," he said. "Come out, Wyndham. These fellows make me sick."

CHAPTER XVII.

RODRIGUEZ'S CONFESSION.

FOR a moment the three Mexicans were too greatly astounded to move or to speak, and that moment was sufficient to give the officers a chance to seize them. Escudera wheeled like lightning, but, observing instantly that there was no chance to escape and doubtless realizing the futility of such a thing even if he could effect it, remained motionless where he stood while the officer nearest him snatched a pair of handcuffs on his wrist.

Rodriguez made one heroic dash toward the door, but ran straight into the embrace of the officer nearest him and was also handcuffed.

Bustamente acted as his half developed nature had taught him to act in emergencies. He whipped out a knife and struck with all his strength straight for the heart of the man who charged upon him. The weapon would have taken effect and there would have been a second murder chargeable against the trio but for the presence of Craig Wyndham.

He appeared from behind the screen where he had been concealed just in time to see the weapon raised, and he sprang toward the maddened man and seized his wrist. He was only partly successful, however. He diverted the blow so that it cut through the officer's sleeve and inflicted an ugly gash on the fleshy part of his arm.

Through it all the district attorney remained unmoved in his chair. Indeed there was scarcely time for him to do aught else, for the whole scene did not occupy more than half a dozen seconds. After that there was a picture which would have made excellent material for a tableau—the three men handcuffed, one calm and smiling cynically, another pale with fright and the third furious with baffled rage, the officers beside them, with firm hands upon their shoulders; on the other side of the table the district attorney, still seated in his armchair and looking ineffably bored, and beside him, with one hand on the back of his chair, the tall, athletic figure of Craig Wyndham, looking like the god of Vengeance satisfied.

Escudera was the first to break the silence that followed the short struggle.

"I suppose, Mr. Craig Wyndham, I owe this to you," he said.

"I think you owe it to yourself and your own treachery," replied Wyndham calmly.

"Do you believe that you can fasten your crime upon me?" continued the Mexican. But the district attorney interrupted before Wyndham could respond.

"Take those two men from the room," he commanded sternly. "Officer Dunn, remain here with your prisoner, Rodriguez. We have not done with him yet."

"Juan"—began Escudera, but again he was interrupted, this time by the officer who had him in charge, who clapped one hand rudely over his mouth and led him out of the room.

"Rodriguez," said the district attorney softly when the others had gone, "I do not believe that you are as bad as the others, and for that reason I have kept you here to talk with you alone."

The stenographer seized his pen again and resumed work.

"Do you know," continued the official, "that there has not been a moment since Pendleton was murdered when you and your friends have not been shadowed by the police? We have not had you arrested simply because we were waiting for additional proof. And where do you suppose we expected to get that? I will tell you because you could not guess—from Mexico."

"From Mexico?" exclaimed Rodriguez involuntarily. The craftiness of the district attorney was too much for him.

"Yes, from Mexico," continued the official, inventing as he went along from the tale that Wyndham had told him. "We know, for example, that there was a conspiracy hatched between four of you and that Captain Ignacio Romero, now lying wounded in the City of Mexico, is the chief conspirator. We know that Escudera, Bustamente and you came here for the avowed purpose to assassinate Burr Pendleton. We know it because Romero has confessed."

Rodriguez started back and uttered a Spanish oath that is untranslatable. Then, whiter than before, he fixed his eyes again upon the district attorney, who after a moment's pause continued:

"It is more than likely, Rodriguez, that you will all go to the electric chair. Escudera and Bustamente certainly will, but you may possibly escape it."

"How?" gasped the man, now thoroughly frightened.

"By confessing freely everything you know concerning this matter. By doing that you will save us time, expense and trouble, and in return for that I can promise you that the judge will be lenient. You will not be executed. You may get off with a short term in prison. Think it over and answer me, for this is the last opportunity you will have."

"I am willing to tell all I know, sir. My life is worth more to me than their friendship."

"I thought so."

"Escudera killed Pendleton."

"Oh, I know that already! Tell me something I don't know."

"He can throw a knife straighter than you can shoot a pistol ball. He stood in the bedroom doorway and threw a knife into Pendleton's heart."

"I know that too. Tell me something I don't know."

"I followed him and Pendleton when they left the club that night. I crept up the stairs after them. I was even in the outer room where I could see Escudera throw the weapon when he did it, and I did see him."

"That is better. I know that also, to be sure, but I did not know all of it. Go on."

"I was obeying Escudera's orders. He was afraid that we might have to do for the old servant as well, and he thought it might take two of us. It was necessary that Pendleton should be put out of the way at once. I don't know why. It was something about some property."

"Yes; go on."

"Escudera told me to follow them and go up the stairs. The minute he was alone he was to open the door so that I could enter the room and secrete myself until the right moment. He had, while Pendleton was in Mexico, asked him to take charge of some papers for him which he pretended were of great value. He asked Pendleton for those papers that night. That was how he got him out of the room long enough to let me in. I hid behind the curtains at one of the windows. We did not much fear discovery, for if we had been discovered the old servant would have been killed also—that is, if my courage had held out, but I don't think it. Go on."

"Nor I. Go on."

"Pendleton said he was tired and proposed taking a rest because he expected to be up late that night to transact some business with Mr. Wyndham, who was to go to him there."

"I understand. Well?"

"Escudera got his papers and pretended to go, but he waited in the hallway. Presently Pendleton went into the bedroom, closing the door after him. Then old James came in and went out once or twice. The last time he went out through the main entrance. He had his hat on, and I knew the coast was clear. I opened the door into the hall, and Escudera came into the room. He ordered me to do the knife throwing, but I refused. Then he went to the bedroom door and opened it softly. Pendleton was already asleep in his chair and did not hear him. It would not have made any difference if he had, for he would have been killed anyway. Escudera motioned to me and pointed into the room. I looked in and saw Pendleton asleep; then I stepped back. Escudera stood on the threshold in the doorway and threw the knife from there; then he reached in, seized the knob of the door and closed it. I asked him why he did not go in and get his knife, and he told me to mind my own business. We went out then, I last, and I left the door on the latch so that those who found the body might suspect that anybody might have entered from the street. That is all I know about the killing, sir."

"It seems to be quite enough. Where was Bustamente all this time?"

"He was watching Mr. Wyndham. He followed him to the house. Escudera and I waited with Bustamente on the other side of the street while Mr. Wyndham went in, for we expected that there would be an uproar at once. To our surprise, there was not. After awhile James came out, and the rest is practically as you have already heard me tell, except about the faked friend of Bustamente."

"Well, and after that?"

"Escudera went to the club to be there ahead of Wyndham, but he got there about the same moment. Bustamente and I got a drink and went down town."

"Now, Rodriguez, I will have your statement drawn off, and you will swear to it. I suppose?"

"Certainly."

"Officer, take him into the little room. Remain there until I am ready for you."

"Craig," said the district attorney when they were alone, "I have a suspicion that this is the best day's work you ever did in your life. Do you know if that scoundrel Escudera had got here first with his yarn it would have bothered me, and I shouldn't wonder if I had issued a warrant for you. As it was, his story corroborated everything you had said, only it turned the tables on himself. It's a great piece of work for the district attorney's office to accomplish, eh? I think it deserves a small bottle. Let's go and have one."

That evening, at the Savoy, Craig related to Carmen every event of the day, and they were exceedingly happy, knowing that justice had placed its iron hands upon the murderers of Burr Pendleton.

A week later Carmen received a telegram from Mexico informing her that Ignacio Romero was dead, and subsequently a letter came explaining that he had committed suicide. He had made some trivial excuse to borrow a penknife from one of the nurses and with it had taken his own worthless life. Under his pillow was found a letter from New York, which told of the arrest and undoubted conviction of his friends. Doubtless that was his reason for the act.

A month later than that, while Craig and Carmen were sitting at the same table where they had their first luncheon together, he said to her:

"Carmelita, you know I told you once that I was a sudden fellow, but I do not think I have been very sudden in this affair of ours. One week from tomorrow I must sail for Europe on important business which cannot be postponed. Will you marry me one week from tomorrow and go with me?"

Her answer was "Yes."

THE END.

THE ANTARCTIC NIGHT.

It is Far More Trying Than the Arctic Darkness.

From this day (May 17) we were to see the sun again for two months. At the beginning we did not dread the prospect of this long polar night before us, but before the sun had been gone many days one of us became very ill. Danco lacked the constitution to hold out, and on June 5 he died. It is useless to dwell on sad recollections. He was loved on board the Belgica, and this loss, following on the death of the sailor Wiencke, who was washed overboard by a wave in Bransfield strait, made a deep impression on us. In the obscurity of the midday twilight we carried Danco's body to a hole which had been cut in the ice and committed it to the deep. A bitter wind was blowing as with bared heads, each of us silent and sad, we left him there—and the floe drifted on.

In the antarctic regions, thanks doubtless to the detestable climate, the disastrous effects of the polar night are far more marked than in the north. There is a general lowering of the system, and the heart acts feebly. Several of us developed serious symptoms, and without daily care on the part of the doctor others would not have survived the period of darkness, though it was relatively short. One part of Cook's treatment was very effective and ingenious. Those who were most affected by deficient circulation were made to stand in a half naked condition close to the red-hot stove for several hours daily. In this way the action of the solar radiation was in part restored by rays of artificial heat in a manner admittedly primitive, but none the less beneficial.

Life on board during the polar night was of great interest from a psychological point of view. One finds oneself in conditions of existence altogether abnormal and crowded against one's fellows in an uncomfortably narrow space. Some became nervous, excitable and sleepless, with the imagination continually wandering and dreaming. I was one of these. Others, more happily constituted, became chronically tired and indifferent. These slept much. But everybody was content to spend twelve hours a day or more in bed. One of the crew developed maniacal tendencies; another, in more evil case, was brought home insane.—Henryk Arctowsky in Geographical Journal.

Death Superstitions.

According to one superstition a favorite method death has of announcing that a person is to become his victim is to cause the doomed one to sneeze while viewing a corpse, or to have the subject see his face reflected in a mirror while standing near the body of one in whom life is extinct. A sparrow flew into an open window of the consumptive ward at the hospital one day while I was attending a patient and without alighting flew out of another. I was immediately besieged upon all sides by tearful requests to redouble my efforts to effect a cure, as the action of the bird was a certain omen that death would claim some one present within a week.

One of the patients died the next day, and the other poor fated ones resuscitated the little spark of hope which feebly flickered previous to the advent of the little bird, thinking, probably, that as one had succumbed they had some chance of regaining their health.—Exchange.

New Year's in China.

In China it is considered obligatory on all persons to settle every pecuniary obligation before the first day of the new year, a custom that might with profit be imitated elsewhere. The Chinese have also the singular practice of dating all births on the first day of the year on which they occur, so that as far as the record shows every Chinaman has but one birthday, the first day of January. The widest variance is observable in the selection of the day which should be considered the first of the year. Some nations have begun it in the spring, others in the autumn, some in midsummer, most in midwinter; but, whatever the day, the usages and rejoicings which characterized it have not varied so greatly as might be supposed, but have remained for ages almost unchanged.

Bad sense and bad management breed bad luck.

How to Ward Off an Attack of rheumatism. "For years when spring time came on and I went into gardening, I was sure to have an attack of rheumatism and every attack was more severe than the preceding one," says Josie McDonald, of Man, Logan county, West Va. "I tried everything with no relief whatever, until I procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and the application gave me ease, and before the first bottle was used I felt like a new person. Now I feel that I am cured, but I always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in the house, and when I feel any symptoms of a return I soon drive it away with one or two applications of this liniment." For sale by F. T. Robinson.
