WORK DAYS ARE CUT DOWN

Elgin National Watch Co. Works Only Five Days a Week—Child Burned to Death in Barn

Simultaneously with the posting of notices at the Elgin National Watch factory announcing that the working schedule would be reduced from five and one-half to five days per week, three Elgin factories informed their employees last week that they would shut down Saturday to remain closed until Monday, July 11.

Donald Stine, three year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Stine of Nora, Ill., was burned to death on Wednesday afternoon in a barn which was totally destroyed by fire. The tragedy was not discovered until an hour after the barn had been burned to the ground. At that time the parents of the lad missed him and immediately started on a search. The ruins of the building were explored and to their horror the body of the lad, burned almost to a crisp, was found.

What a young man earns in the daytime goes into his pocket, but what he spends in the evening goes into his character.

If you have to buy an automobile tire today, you pay just seven dollars more for it than you would have paid last Thursday. The raise on July first was exactly 25 per cent, the price going from $28 to $35.

As indicating the great wave of prosperity sweeping over the country, it is stated as a fact that the Washburn-Crosby flour mills in Minneapolis, employing 2,500 men, have voluntarily increased wages of employes eight per cent.

In the sight of hundreds of pleasure seekers at Crystal Lake, fifteen miles north of Elgin, Emory Arnold, 25 years of age, son of a wealthy Woodstock real estate dealer, was drowned and Arthur Granger, his companion, saved, as exhausted, he was about to give up hope, Friday afternoon.

Three metropolitan cities are already making preparations for world's fairs to be held in 1913. New York City, San Francisco and New Orleans are the cities that will have these fairs three years from now. The government will be called on to appropriate money with which to carry out these projects.

The criminal cases against the St. Paul Coal Company for violation of the child labor laws in the Cherry mine were taken up last week in the Bureau county court by State's Attorney L. M. Eckert, assisted by Barney Cohen, assistant chief of the department of factory inspection. The company entered a plea of guilty in nine cases and was fined $70 in each, making a total of $630.

Kirkland Enterprise: John MacQueen, who has visited ten northern states during the past two weeks, states that this section of Illinois is better favored as to crop prospects than any of the other nine states. He says that the conditions in the two Dakotas, Minnesota and northern Wisconsin are quite discouraging, on account of lack of moisture, while in parts of Nebraska conditions are just as bad the other way on account of too much rain.

SPOILS CELEBRATION

Smooth Swindler Puts One Over on the People of Hampshire

(Elgin News)

There was no high dive, no merry go round, no electric show, no society circus and there was but one instead of two vaudeville shows at Hampshire's celebration of the Fourth of July.

There was, however, several hundred irate residents of Hampshire and vicinity looking for Mr. Allen, alias Mr. Smith, self represented as manager of a Chicago amusement company—and thereby lies a tale.

Mr. Allen made his first appearance in Hampshire a week ago Sunday. He was suave. He was polished. His dark hair, his heavy mustache and dark complexion, the striped suit and the multi-colored vest fairly scintillated with the mystery of the theatrical world.

Mr. Allen was glad to meet everyone. Everyone was glad to meet Mr. Allen. The stranger represented a Chicago amusement company, he said, and if the merchants thought the town would support it, he would bring several thousand dollars worth of amusements to the city on the Fourth.

For one thing, he would bring a man who would dive 60 feet into a pan of water without striking the bottom of the pan. He would bring a merry go round, a vaudeville show, an electric show and a society circus. The last—Mr. Allen confided to the men of the town, winking as he did so—was just the least bit naughty but not offensive.

Mr. Allen admitted that he was a bit absent minded and had left most of his money in Chicago. He charged a suit of clothes, two pair of shoes and a panama hat to himself. Ten dollars were loaned to him by both Jacob Kanies and W. S. Shattuck. His board bill didn't worry him. His livery bill grew rather large but the liveryman had perfect confidence in him.

Mr. Allen said good-bye to Hampshire Thursday. Saturday, he dropped in to assure the townspeople that his shows would appear Monday. There were no shows on the grounds yesterday. Mr. Allen has not been heard of at Hampshire since.

COWS POISONED?

Strange Disease in McHenry County Hurtles Veterinarians

Lewis Fisher, a farmer living in Hebron township, McHenry county, has been unfortunate to the extent of losing six cows out of his dairy, all within a week, the cause of which is very obscure. When the animals were first attacked, the respiration and temperature seemed normal, but loss of appetite with but little desire for water seemed to be the initial symptoms, soon followed by intestinal irritation taking the form of dysentery, followed by death in about 48 hours after the first attack. Dr. Gray of Richmond, the attending veterinary, pronounces it hydrophobia, while others of large experience are suspicious of local poisoning, something obtained in the pasture.

Next Sunday Rev. J. E. DeLong of Kirkland will exchange pulpits with the local pastor. At 10:30 Rev. DeLong will preach in the church and in the evening at 7:30 on the lawn at S. S. Slater's, weather permitting. You are invited to these and other services of the church Sunday. J. T. McMullen, Pastor.

Former Marries Miss Annette Austin and the Latter Takes Miss Alta Lovell of DeKalb as Bride

A marriage ceremony was performed at DeKalb on the fourth of July, in the forenoon, Mr. Ed. Crawford of this city and Miss Alta Lovell of DeKalb being the principals. The couple came to Genoa the day following and for the present will make their home with the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Crawford. Mr. Crawford was born and raised in Genoa. The bride is well and favorably known in her home city where she has many friends who will wish her happiness.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE

Dixon Man, Reared on a Farm, is Self-Made Man

Arthur G. Harris was reared on a farm in Lee county, Illinois. After leaving the district school he was graduated from the Mendota high schools. He then taught a district school in the neighborhood for a time, meanwhile preparing himself for college. He entered Dixon College in 1896, receiving diplomas from the departments of oratory, the scientific course, and the Bachelor's and Master's Degree in the Northern Illinois College of Law. He was admitted to the bar in 1902 and entered at once upon the practice of his profession at Dixon, Ill., where he is now engaged. He was justice of the peace and served two full terms with great credit.

Mr. Harris is a self made man, whose early struggles have moulded him into a sturdy character. He has a wide acquaintance and is coming rapidly to the front. Even now he enjoys the acquaintance and intimate friendship of some of the best known men in the state. Calm in defeat, sober in victory, and genial of manner, he has always accepted victory and defeat with good nature, bearing no ill-will toward any who opposed him. This alone has made him many friends.

DR. D. S. BROWN RETURNS

People of Genoa Hope to see Engine Nearer than Sycamore—Farmers Have Little Faith

W. E. Hill, for whom the Railroad Company's hands killed some hogs last month, last week was the recipient of a check for the full amount of their value. Some ruffians are continually traveling about town nights, tearing down signs, tearing up croquet grounds, breaking windows, etc.

Luke Nichols, for many years Postmaster at Genoa, now owns one of the largest and finest farms in Hancock Co., Iowa. He reports everything in a flourishing condition.

Some of the farmers living in the northern part of Kingston township, are making an effort to open the south end of the road leading from across the big slough and Deer creek towards our village.

Mr. Laird, the proprietor of the Union House, has been engaged to take charge of the blacksmithing at Tylers establishments.

The infant son of James H. and the late Eva Kisten, was brought back to Genoa on Friday of last week. It is in feeble health.

Dr. D. S. Brown has returned from his bridal tour after an absence of more than a week, during which time he visited his sister Emma who lives in Adair Co., Iowa.

A quantity of the real estate given by Mr. Stephens to Thomas M. Dobbins in consideration of the C. & P. Co. locating a depot at Genoa in 1875, was subsequently sold for taxes, and Joe Stephens bought it, and has since become the lawful owner thereof. Dobbins it is said will make no effort to redeem it.

Albert Olmstead has purchased an elegant new carriage and harness to correspond, from J. V. Wing of Belvidere.

Elder Crocker's team became frightened last week, ran away and broke the wagon to fragments.

The Taylor restaurant has been undergoing some decided improvements.

FEBRUARY 26, 1873

The following is part of a letter from Genoa to The True, Republican of February 26, 1873:

The people are still hopeful of some day seeing an engine nearer to them than your city, and when that good time comes let Sycamore and the towns north look out for the supply of produce and an outlet for their dry goods and groceries.

The farmers here have but little faith in the much vaunted farmers' reform movement. They have a suspicion that the whole movement is manipulated by political gamblers, and in the end will gull rather than benefit them. They are ready for an open and honest reform, but think it will never come through secret clans and rings, any more than a clean can come from an unclean thing.

Yesterday, an old and well loved citizen and christian of this community Mrs. Gregory, was laid in the silence of the grave.

The people of New Lebanon, have a new lock on their old school house door, so that they can worship there now without a special door keeper. Certainly this is an age of improvement. They need, and are rich enough to have a nice new church there.

Yours, etc.

PROFITABLE DAIRYING

By HUGH G. VAN PELT
Dairy Expert Iowa State Dairy Association

Problems Up to Dairymen

With all the great advantages that dairy farming presents, it has without doubt its disadvantages, and many of them, so that the farmer who anticipates entering dairying as a business must not do so with the idea that there is nothing to be found in the business except profits. As a matter of fact, there are, comparatively speaking, very few farmers who will make out of dairying the greatest profits that are to be found therein.

Kind Treatment Necessary.
The dairy cow is more nearly an artificial being than any other animal to be found upon the farm, for, as a matter of fact, there was a time when her whole and sole duty was to beget a likeness of herself and produce milk in quantities only sufficient to large for the sustenance of her offspring and often for a period of only five or six months, when the youngster was weaned and compelled to work out his own salvation on the grasses of the prairies. But realizing the opportunities for developing the maternal instincts in this individual animal, man has taken and developed her to the point where at the present time we find that she not only reproduces herself but she also supplies milk in quantities sufficiently large to raise her offspring and supply to her owner a large and profitable amount of milk and butter-fat daily. In bringing about this change in her make-up, she has become more delicate and more sensitive to the treatment which she receives, and it rests within the power of the owner rather than in the cow herself to increase or decrease in a large measure her profit through care, feed and attention, kind or cruel treatment and proper or improper methods of handling. If the farmer realizes that it is not possible for him to be content with confinement to largely increase the dairy business which he now has upon his farm because the success of the business rests with continually working with the cow Sundays as well as other days and taking care of the small things, vidual cows to be found in any one of the four particular dairy breeds than there is to be found between the breeds themselves as a whole. There probably has been in the past a place for what might be termed the dual purpose cow, and likely in the future there will be some such place. It is not likely, however, that the man who has given the matter thorough consideration and study and wishes to conduct his dairy farm on business principles and from the standpoint of the greatest possible net profit, can be lured into the belief that he should install upon his farm dual purpose cattle or animals having the power perhaps to produce fairly good results from the standpoint of milk and butter production and fairly good results from the standpoint of the production of beef calves. Now, it is possible undoubtedly, to select cows of the beef breeds that will produce during the year an average of from 100 to 200 pounds of butter. More often, however, it is found that such a herd produces more nearly an average of 100 pounds of butter than 200 pounds; and, then, of course, the calves from these cows, being bred along beef lines, if raised and cared for properly, will prove fairly profitable from the standpoint of beef production. It is the buyer of beef that always advises the farmer to use dual purpose cattle for his farm and dairy rather than beef cattle, because he realizes that the time has come when it is unprofitable for the farmer to keep a cow for the entire year solely for the production of a calf; but it is possible, if she produces in addition to a calf which may be valued at from $5 to $10, 100 pounds of butter-fat which at this time is worth nearly $30, that she may be and probably is a source of real profit because, kept under the very cheapest conditions, her feed may not cost more than $30 and it may be estimated that the calf is worth $10. Now, if a grade calf, from the standpoint of beef production can be valued at more than $10 at the time it is born, I would like to have cow will have bull calves every year that are fit for nothing except to be killed at once. The time is rapidly coming, however, if not here already, when the farmer is to know that every heifer calf from a real dairy cow that has produced from 400 to 700 pounds of butter during the year, is worth more money the day it is born than are the two calves from one of the common beefier types of cows produced in two consecutive years, providing they be alternately male and female. But for the purpose of deciding in an unprejudiced manner which is the best breed for the dairy, we will leave out of consideration for the present time the value of the dairy cow's calves and take it for granted that they are destroyed immediately upon birth and we will allow the calf, whether male or female, from the dual purpose cow, to be worth $10 at birth, and further allow $1 per year in the valuation of the beefy type of cow, believing that when she is ready to die her carcass will be worth that much more to put in tin cans.

The 140 Pound Cow.

This is the type of cows that are being milked, the average production of which is 140 pounds. There are many herds of real dairy cows that are averaging from 300 to 400 pounds of butter a year, and taking this out of consideration we would probably find that the dual purpose cow or the cow of a beefy nature, with the power of producing a beef steer or a dairy heifer, is producing in butter fat quite likely about 100 pounds per year. Taking for granted that she herself is producing 140 pounds of butter per year on the average—and she is no more than paying for her keep from the standpoint of the butter she produces—and giving to her owner each year a calf, some skimmed milk for the pigs, and adding to the fertility of the farm, there is very little reason to complain about her existence, because in all liability she is a profitable animal to the farmer and, without doubt, more largely so than most any other animal on the farm. But the question that arises is whether or not she is making the profit that should be made from an animal upon which there is bestowed so much feed, care and labor. We have only to look to the herds that are producing an average of from 300 to 400 pounds of butter per year to be in a position to answer in the negative. Were we to sacrifice the calf and the extra value of the carcass of the cow at the time of death, an annual valuation to the amount of $11, and select instead of that a cow that will produce twice as much butter fat, or 280 pounds, and sell it for 28 cents, which has been less than the average price received by most dairymen during the past year, we would have instead of $11, $78.40.

Great Mistakes.

Now, without doubt, this places the consideration on a basis where any one can figure for himself which class or breed of cattle he is to choose for the dairy. During past years, and even at the present time, we find thousands of farmers that are annually sending $78.40 after this mythical $11 that they have been led to believe is to be found in the dual purpose cow as an advantage over the dairy cow; but it is apparent in the face of facts that it is the utmost of folly year after year to sacrifice $78.40 in the production of butter for the sake of securing a $10 calf and having a carcass that is worth $1 per year that is used for the purpose of beef after its useful life has ended. This is a matter that can very easily be figured out and is not subject to dispute. Of course, there are other ways of figuring, but in the end the same result has been reached. In arguing against the idea of the dairy cow invariably the point comes up that the United States is a beef-eating nation and must have beef, and this is a fact. There never will come a time, I hope, when we will not have a sufficient amount of beef to be consumed on every table in the United States, but it is taxing the dairy cow a little harder than is necessary to ask her to produce the millions of pounds of butter that are absolutely necessary, and at the same time produce the beef that is to be consumed upon the tables, unless she is to be paid accordingly. It would not be right to ask the farmer to do all that he is doing at the present time, working hard as he is, and at the same time produce in addition to the food and clothing for the world, the manufactured articles, reading material, etc. for the same world simply because we must have manufactured articles and reading material. There are many men and farmers who are not capable of conducting dairy herds in the most profitable degree because of their dislike for the business. Likely these same men are well adapted for the production of beef, and the dairymen will, no doubt, leave the production of that article to him, realizing that if he is to dairy, his profits, success and pleasure are to be found in the milking of real good dairy cows.

resting assured that the larger things will, to a great extent, take care of themselves.
Which Breed Best for Dairying?
When, finally, the farmer has made up his mind to actually begin dairying, the first question which presents itself to him, and the one which he asks more frequently than any other, is which breed of cows is the best for dairy purposes? There is probably no question to which it is so difficult to reply. It is easy to tell him that he should utilize one of the four dairy breeds. This is not enough, for he wishes to know which of the four breeds of dairy cows is the best. An unprejudiced reply to this question will always bring the answer that there are good cows and poor cows in every dairy breed, and the good cows of one breed are much better than the poor cows of another breed in every instance. And, after selecting the breed suitable to the conditions of the farm, the likes and dislikes of the owner, then it is a matter of selecting the good individual cows of that breed. There is a far greater difference between the indi-

RECLAMATION ACT IS VALID

Appellate Court Declares in Favor of Reaching Decision That the Law is Constitutional.

San Francisco, July 6.—A far-reaching decision directly affecting the $20,000,000 appropriation recently made by congress and the reclamation service, wherein the United States court of appeals sustains the circuit court of Idaho's contention that the reclamation act is constitutional, was rendered here.

The decision establishes the right of the secretary of the interior to acquire by condemnation or otherwise lands and waters in the furtherance of any reclamation project.

The decision also extends to the right of the government to take over any needed private water rights in carrying out the provisions of the act. This makes the irrigation projects of the west authorized by law and will permit a resumption of work in many sections without delay.

THE DRAWBACK.

"There are very few women architects."

"No wonder. Women do not relish being called 'designing creatures.'"

A Hibernian Verdict.
A New Yorker is the happy employer of an aged Irishman, who grows eloquent over the woes of the Emerald Isle. Said the boss: "Pat, the king of England is dead."

The old man was silent for a moment. Then he took off his hat.

"Well," he said slowly, "as a man he was a fine bit of a boy. As an Englishman go, he was as good as yez can make them. As a king, there was nobody on earth as could beat him. But still, I'll keep me eye on George."

Wrong Angle.
"There's a bright side to everything."

"A bright side! Bah!"
"Well, there is."

"Do you mean to tell me, doctor, that there is a bright side to my having had my leg amputated?"

"Indeed, there is; and if you could put yourself in my place you could really see it."

Up to Date Milking Scene.
"What's going on around here?" asked the surprised visitor. "Is this a hospital?"

"Oh, no," answered the tall man in the silk hat; "this is the stage setting for a New England farm drama. The next act will be the milking scene."

"But I thought the young lady in the antiseptic apron was a trained nurse?"

"Oh, no; she is the milkmaid. The young man in the rubber gloves that you thought was a doctor is the farmer boy. As soon as they bring in the sterilized stool and the pasteurized pails and find the cow's tooth brush the milking scene will begin."

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other Intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

The genuine has on its outside wrapper the Signature.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

NO BIBLES IN SCHOOLS

Supreme Court Hands Down Decision Regarding Reading

Religious exercises, consisting of the reading of the Bible, singing and prayer, cannot be held in the schools of Illinois during the time pupils are required to be in attendance, according to a decision handed down by the Supreme Court of Illinois.

The decision was the conclusion of the case of the Catholic residents of Winchester, Scott county, who protested against religious exercises in the schools of that county in which their children were compelled to join. They applied for a writ of mandamus requiring the board of education to discontinue the religious services.

The lower court denied the petition, but the Supreme Court upheld their contention and directed that the writ issue. In the opinion, written by Justice Dunn, and from which Justice Cartwright and Hand dissent, the history of the separation of church and state is gone into at length and various authorities are cited to uphold the decision of the court.

The Story of Your Teeth.

Ever hear of tooth needs? New-born babies have them in little sacs in their gums, the milk teeth on top. The baby begins cutting its first teeth at an average age of eight months. The milk teeth are 20 in number, and the permanent teeth 32. The milk teeth are gradually absorbed by the growing second teeth, so that sometimes the roots are practically removed. There are three sections to a tooth—the inside pulp cavity, the dentine and the outside enamel. The ache is always in the pulp cavity.

Hide Dismal Secrets.

In England there are hundreds of ancient buildings which possess their secret passages, and during excavations in London long-forgotten tunnels are often encountered. Underneath Lismore castle, Ireland, one of the seats of the Duke of Devonshire, are one or two curious secret tunnels leading to spacious caves in which skeletons and uniforms have been found.

Daysey Mayme.

Daysey Mayme Appleton has a heart that responds quickly to every appeal for charity. "The prizes I won at card parties," she explains, "come in handy in giving to the sickly and needy."—Aitchison (Kan.) Globe.

Rather Rude.

The manners of some omnibus conductors leave much to be desired. A lady wearing a fashionable hat entered an empty omnibus. "Hon you go, Bill! Full up!" shouted the conductor to the driver.—London Punch.

Genoa was a quiet place on the Fourth. Most of the people who left town found their way to Sycamore where there was something doing and no mistake. A few went to Hampshire and were disappointed, but no more disappointed than the Hampshire folks themselves. Many enjoyed the shady spots along the Kishwaukee, and we have no doubt these latter were just as happy the following day.

Some person or persons are becoming mighty careless in squirting tobacco juice of late. The sidewalk in front of the saloons in "Bridgeport" has been filthy on several mornings during the past week. It shows little sense and less decency for anyone to deliberately bespatter a public walk in that manner. There have been many strangers about town recently and perhaps they are responsible for the condition of affairs. If so, it would be well for the owners of property in that neighborhood to show them the error of their ways. If it is local talent that is doing the decorating, there is no excuse and an emphatic jacking up would be the proper medicine.

S. M. Henderson Here
S. M. Henderson, clerk of DeKalb county, and candidate for re-election, was in Genoa last Thursday. At the present time Mr. Henderson has no opposition and there is little probability of his having any. He has made a good official, giving entire satisfaction to all classes of people. He has always been accommodating and affable when approached on matters pertaining to his office, a fact that is not forgotten by the voters.

OLD-AGE PENSIONS.

The expected has happened. A bill for old-age pensions has been introduced in the house of representatives.

The mosquito season is at hand, and New Jersey, where the objectionable insect most abounds, is moving in the matter of destroying the pest.

Is Cuba to furnish the means of safeguarding the forests and producing paper at a moderate cost? It is announced from that island that experiments in manufacturing paper from sugar-cane fiber have proved entirely successful.

Dispatches from Seattle report an almost unprecedented rush to the gold fields of Alaska. This does not look as though there were general acceptance of that story that a Scranton alchemist has discovered a method of transmuting baser materials into gold and silver.

The movement for the devising of sanitary rules for all passenger trains and railroad stations is not aimed at the carrying operations, because it originated among them.

How will coming generations get their physical exercise in outdoor recreations? The motorcycle has played hob with the bicycle, and the power boat has the sailing boat and the oarsmen on the run.

NEGRO EASY VICTOR

JACK JOHNSON KNOCKS OUT JIM JEFFRIES IN FIFTEENTH ROUND.

BEATEN THRICE TO FLOOR

Onslaughts of Colored Champion Irresistible and White Man Proves Himself Not to Be the Wonderful Pugilist of Old.

Reno, Nev., July 5.—Jim Jeffries, only the empty shell of the great fighter of seven years ago, was whipped by Jack Johnson before the most remarkable assemblage of sporting men ever gathered together in the history of the game.

Johnson not only outclassed Jeffries, but actually played with the big white man as he played with Tommy Burns and Stanley Ketchel. The end, while it came with the suddenness of a thunderclap, was not a surprise; it had been in plain sight from the fifth round.

Old Form Missing. Jeffries did not display a semblance of his old-time form. There were none of his short, determined rushes; none of his trip hammer blows to the body.

When Jeffries lurched out of his corner to begin the fifteenth he shuffled into a clinch. There was nothing about his leg action to indicate that he was groggy, but he seemed tired and his face, over Johnson's shoulder, was a picture of defeat.

He hung on for a few seconds and then disentangled himself, backing slowly away toward the west side of the ring and toward his own corner.

Johnson following with left extended. Again the men clinched and this time Jeffries came to a halt with the upper rope across his back. This time it was Johnson who broke from the clinch and as he did so he drove the right hand to the body, following it immediately with a left to the point of the chin.

Lifted Back Into Ring.

Jack Jeffries moved over and placing his arms under his brother's shoulder, helped him back into the ring. Jeffries was helpless and staggering, and just as his knee cleared the floor, Johnson stepped forward to deliver a right to the jaw, but Rickard pushed the negro aside.

Stop it, Tex! Stop it!

Jeffries lurched to his feet just at the count of ten and as he raised himself from the floor he spat out a great mouthful of blood. The last blind instinct of the fighter warned Jeffries to clinch and he hung on with what little strength he had left while Johnson mauled him clear across the ring.

BROTHERS SPAR; ONE DIES

Coroner Halley Summoned to View Dead Man Discovers Own Son Been Accidentally Killed.

Quincy, Ill., July 5.—Coroner Michael Halley of Adams county made a hurried trip in answer to a call stating that a young man has been accidentally killed. Upon arriving at West Quincy, where he had been summoned, he learned that the dead man was his own son, James H. Halley, aged twenty, and Michael Halley, aged sixteen, sons of the coroner, were engaged in a friendly frolic without gloves.

Official's Body Is Found.

Detroit, Mich., July 5.—The body of Frank S. Goldthrite, formerly superintendent of the printing bureau of the Canadian government and accused of embezzlement of $200,000, was found floating in the river off Grosse Pointe Isle. This dispels the mystery caused by Goldthrite's disappearance from a steamer, which it was believed was a ruse to help him escape.

MELVILLE WESTON FULLER

EQUAL RATES AIM

TAFT SAYS ROADS NEED NOT BEAR NEW RATE LAW.

WILL NOT BE USED AS A CLUB

President Is Desirous of Reassuring All Interests That Interstate Commerce Commission Will Enforce Provisions of Act With Fairness.

Beverly, Mass., July 2.—Legitimate railroad interests need have no fear of the rate adjusting power that has been lodged with the interstate commerce commission under the new railroad law.

In a long interview with Chairman Martin A. Knapp of the commission President Taft went exhaustively into the provisions of the new law and later in conversation with callers he earnestly pointed out that there need be no apprehension that the commission will run amuck or that the new law will be used to club indiscriminately all railroads that propose an advance in rates.

Equal Rates for All.

The law, the president pointed out was not passed for the purpose of lowering rates, or even of holding all rates where they are at the time of the passage of the law, but rather for the purpose of equalizing rates and keeping them so far as possible in tune with business conditions at all times.

Fear has been expressed that the idea would go abroad that the United States government was about to embark upon a campaign of oppression against all railroads, which would be disastrous to the railroad business, with crop moving time approaching, through the avoidance of American securities by foreign investors. This is one of the things that the president desires to avoid.

Roads Given More Time.

In support of this fixed policy of the interstate commerce commission it was pointed out that while the recent decisions of the commission relative to freight rates in the west was against a number of proposed increases and in all of the cases has allowed the railroads until next October to show by a practical working of rates, as fixed by the commission, the reasonableness of the latter's rulings.

FIRE AT PETERHOF PALACE

Incendiary Blaze in Historic Building, Containing Valuable Treasures, Causes Loss of $2,000,000.

Paris, July 5.—A wing of the historic Peterhof palace of St. Petersburg, containing treasures of untold value, was destroyed by fire, according to a dispatch received here from St. Petersburg. The blaze was of incendiary origin, according to the report, and the loss is at least $2,000,000.

Dan Patch Goes to Pasture.

New York, July 6.—Dan Patch has been retired from the racing and speed exhibition circuit. M. W. Savage, his owner, is authority for the statement the animal never again will be asked to start in attempts to lower world's records.

BALLINGER DECLARES HE WILL NOT QUIT CABINET

Secretary Has Conference With President Concerning New Legislation Adopted by Congress.

Beverly, Mass., July 6.—Richard A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior, announced after his conference with President Taft, that he will remain in the cabinet. No matter what the verdict of the congressional investigating committee the secretary decided that he will not resign.

Secretary Ballinger announced that the policy toward public domain would retain the spirit of conservation, but would also encourage the privilege of development. When some one referred to it "and the Taft-Ballinger policy," he said:

"You may call it what you like, but I will tell you one thing—it will follow the lines of the law."

Before seeing Mr. Taft, Mr. Ballinger said that he "was not a quitter," but would not discuss a resignation. After his talk with the president, Mr. Ballinger announced positively that he would not quit.

The discussion with Mr. Taft was entirely on carrying out the orders signed by the president Saturday, and on carrying out legislation of the recent session of congress.

SANE FOURTH SAVES LIFE

Independence Day's Toll Is Much Smaller Than Usual—Nation's Dead Numbers 27.

Chicago, July 6.—Fewer accidents and injuries, as an aftermath of Fourth of July celebrations, were recorded in Chicago than in recent years.

Only one death and injury to twenty-five persons was the toll for independence day, and all because Chicago enjoyed a sane Fourth. Other cities which followed in the wake of the Chicago movement to celebrate the signing of the Declaration of Independence without the giant cracker and other dangerous explosives also reported less casualties.

The record throughout the country was 27 dead, 1,755 injured, and a fire loss of $591,815, all of which are figures much smaller than those recorded on any previous year since the inception of the sane Fourth movement.

LIFE SENTENCE GIVEN HYDE

Kansas City Physician, Convicted of Poisoning Millionaire, Appeals to Supreme Court.

Kansas City, Mo., July 6.—Dr. B. C. Hyde, convicted of having poisoned Col. Thomas Swope, the millionaire philanthropist, was sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor by Judge Ralph S. Lathaw in the criminal court here. An appeal to the state supreme court was filed by Hyde's attorney, and until it is taken up by the higher court the prisoner will remain in the county jail here.

SANDERS SUCCEEDS M'ENERY

Louisiana Governor Is Elected United States Senator by an Overwhelming Majority.

Baton Rouge, La., July 6.—Gov. Jared Y. Sanders was elected United States senator from Louisiana, succeeding Samuel Douglass McEnery, deceased. J. D. Wilkinson of Shreveport also was nominated, but Sanders' majority was overwhelming.

19 KILLED, 20 INJURED IN BIG FOUR ROAD WRECK

Section of Twentieth Century Limited Collides With Freight Through Misunderstanding of Orders.

Middletown, O., July 5.—The "Big Four" Twentieth Century Limited, east-bound with 200 passengers, was wrecked in a head-on collision with a Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton freight train one-half mile south of here.

Through an error in the interpretation of its orders the freight train met the passenger before it had taken the sidetrack. The collision took place on a sharp curve, and cars were piled up in the ditch.

When the engines crashed one of the steel monsters crushed through the combination baggage and smoking car and a day coach which was largely filled with women and children. It was some minutes before a move to rescue work could be started, as the crews as well as passengers were tossed about. When those still able reached the overturned cars they found dead and injured persons lying near or pinned under the heavy wreckage.

While the dead were being removed willing hands were working with might and under distressing circumstances. The shrieks of injured, some of whom were dying, the din and shouting, the noise of escaping steam as it hissed from battered engines, made the affair most distressing.

NEW YORK PRIMARY IS LOST

Senate Follows Action of Assembly and Defeats Law Approved by Ex-President Roosevelt.

Albany, N. Y., July 2.—Swiftly and emphatically the senate fell in line with the assembly and sent the Cobb direct nomination bill down to defeat. The final vote was 25 yeas to 19 noes, seven Republicans combining with the Democrats against the bill.

The measure was killed after the amendments proposed by Lloyd C. Griscom, chairman of the New York corporation committee, and endorsed by Theodore Roosevelt had been incorporated in the measure by a vote of 24 to 21. An emergency message from the governor made it possible for the senate to vote on the amended measure.

The result of the fight in the senate was even a more positive refusal to accept Theodore Roosevelt's leadership in the matter than that of the assembly.

WATTERSON'S SON IS INSANE

Shoots and Mortally Wounds Hotel Proprietor at Saugerties, N. Y.—Raves in Jail.

Saugerties, N. Y., July 2.—Ewing Watterson, eldest son of Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, who has been suffering from an affection of the mind for several years, became violently insane and shot and mortally wounded Michael J. Martin, proprietor of the Market Street hotel. The shooting was done in the cafe of the hotel and was without provocation. Watterson ran up the street waving his pistol wildly in the air and firing at everyone who crossed his path.

WAYMAN SUED FOR $50,000

Juror Spare Who Stood for Acquittal in Browne Trial Is Plaintiff.

Chicago, July 2.—State's Attorney John E. W. Wayman was made defendant in a suit for $50,000 filed in the supreme court by Attorney Max M. Goodman, representing Charles Spare, one of the jurors who stood for acquittal in the Lee O'Neil Browne bribery trial. The suit charges slander.

U. S. S. Mackinac Rescues the Passengers From Leaky Launch in Hay Lake.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., July 2.—Had it not been for the timely arrival of the revenue cutter Mackinac 16 persons would undoubtedly have drowned when the little launch Laura M. sprang a leak in Hay lake and filled with water two miles from shore.

CHIEF JUSTICE DEAD

MELVILLE FULLER, HEAD OF U. S. SUPREME COURT SUD-DENLY EXPIRES.

HOLDS OFFICE FOR 22 YEARS

Death Comes From Heart Failure and Was Wholly Unexpected and Removes One of Most Distinguished Members of American Bench.

Bar Harbor, Me., July 5.—Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller of the United States Supreme court, died from heart failure at his summer home in Sorrento.

The death of the chief magistrate was unexpected, as he had been in fairly good health lately, and there had been no premonitory symptoms of any kind of trouble. Sunday he attended church as usual, and when he retired at night he was to all appearances in his customary health.

Daughter at Bedside.

Death came about six o'clock in the morning. His daughter, Mrs. Nathaniel Francis, and Rev. James E. Freeman, who was a guest of Justice Fuller's at his Sorrento cottage, "Main Stay," were with the jurist when he died.

For many years the chief justice had spent his summers at Sorrento, a summer colony located on Frenchman's bay, five miles from Bar Harbor.

To Chief Justice Fuller fell the honor of third rank for length of service as presiding judge in the highest tribunal of the American government.

For twenty-one years he was chief justice of the Supreme court of the United States.

Before Grover Cleveland sent his name to the senate on April 30, 1888, for confirmation as chief justice, he was practically unknown except to members of the legal profession. In Maine, where he was born February 11, 1833, he had been known as a well-behaved, rather scholarly lad.

Finally he blossomed forth as a full-fledged lawyer and politician of a high-minded sort in his native city of Augusta.

His Great Argument.

From 1856 to 1888 he lived in Chicago, but attracted little attention outside his immediate circle of friends and associates at the bar until he undertook the defense of Bishop Cheney on a charge of heresy. His knowledge of ecclesiastical history and procedure astonished those who conducted the case, and his argument of the cause of the bishop before the supreme court of Illinois is referred to still as a forensic effort seldom if ever surpassed in that court.

He was a delegate to the national conventions of the Democratic party in 1864, 1872, 1876 and 1880.

The Maine boy who had "gone west" accomplished much, however, notwithstanding his quiet life. He had laid the foundations for a deep understanding of the commercial laws of the country, and along this line he had performed services for clients that was estimated to have netted him an annual income of $30,000.

These accomplishments led Republican senators from Illinois to urge upon a Democratic president the appointment of Mr. Fuller to succeed Chief Justice Waite.

The nomination of Mr. Fuller, then fifty-five years of age, was followed by a memorable contest in the senate. The judiciary committee, with 20 Republican majority, to which the nomination was sent April 30, held up the appointment until July 20. Then the committee reported it to the senate "without recommendation."

For three hours that body debated in executive session whether to confirm or reject the nomination. The attack on Mr. Fuller was led by Senators Edmunds, Evarts and Stewart. Senators Cullom and Farwell defended him.

The reports that he had been a "copperhead" during the Civil war and that he did not possess the requisite ability as a lawyer were gone over.

His Great Victory.

Finally, by a vote of 41 to 20, his nomination was confirmed.

Since that day the entire court, as it then existed, has passed away with the single exception of Justice Harlan. Of those prominent in the fight over his confirmation only Senator Cullom remains.

RACE RIOTS OVER BIG FIGHT

Five Negroes Dead or Dying—Thousands Throughout North and South Are Beaten.

New York, July 5.—The victory of Jack Johnson over Jim Jeffries was the cause of race riots in nearly every city of size in the United States. Thousands of negroes were beaten and five are dead or dying.

The mob spirit seemed to rise wherever a negro cheered for Johnson after the fight, or permitted his exultation over the victory to grow to an extent that made it offensive.

Negroes were chased through the streets of the cities of the south and north. In every city the police were on the jump all night quelling disturbances.

The fond father held the manuscript while his son practised the oration.

The father was wrestling with the manuscript. "Oh, yes," he muttered, "here it is: 'to desecrate.' Go on."

"It's desecrate," cried the boy, indignantly. "Shall we permit the ruthless hand of the hydra-headed tyrant to desecrate the—the—the—why don't you prompt me?"

The father was staring hard at the manuscript.

"The—the poodle—paddle—poodle—of our liver ties," he stammered. "It's the palladium of our liberties," roared the boy. "Gimme that paper—I'll say it myself."

And he stalked away angrily.

"Oh, to make the soup good."

SYNOPSIS.

A young woman cast ashore on a lonely island, finds a solitary inhabitant, a young white man, dressed like a savage and unable to speak in any known language. She decides to educate him and mold his mind to her own ideals. She finds evidence that leads her to believe that the man is John Revell Charnock of Virginia, and that he was cast ashore when a child. Katharine Brenton was a highly specialized product of a leading university. Her writings on the sex problem attracted wide attention. The son of a multi-millionaire becomes infatuated with her and they decide to put her theories into practice. With no other ceremony than a handshake, they go away together. A few days on his yacht reveals to her that he only professed lofty ideals to possess her. While drunk he attempts to kiss her. She knocks him down and leaves him unconscious, escaping in the darkness in a gasoline launch. During a storm she is cast ashore on an island. Three years' teaching gives the man a splendid education. The love for each other is revealed when she rescues her from a cave where she had been imprisoned by an earthquake. A ship is sighted and they light a beacon to summon it.

"They cannot fall to see it."
"And how will they regard it?"
"As a signal."
"And what will they do?"
"Turn about and head for the island."
"And how can we tell what they are doing?"
"When the smoke ceases to elongate," she replied, "it will show us that they have turned and are heading this way."
There was no breeze, apparently, and the smoke would follow the wake of the ship. They watched the little speck on the horizon with strained intensity for a few moments.
"How if she passes on?" asked the man at last.
"I shall take it as a sign," said the woman, slowly, "that—Look!" she cried, in sudden gladness.
The ship had turned and the cloud of smoke now rose straight above her in the still air.
"They have seen the signal," went on the woman. "They will come here. We shall be taken away!"
"It is your fault," said the man, grimly. "I wanted nothing but to be alone with you."

CHAPTER XIII.

The Long Search.
Mr. Valentine Arthur Langford was wearily pacing the quarter deck of his magnificent yacht, the Southern Cross. Mr. Langford was an intensely disappointed and embittered man. He had made two ventures which, by a stretch of language in one case at least, could be called matrimonial, and both of them had resulted in disaster. Death opportunely had relieved him of one wife; the other who had stood in the place of the former without the legal ceremony or the spiritual benediction had vanished under circumstances so mysterious that he had no idea whether she was alive or dead. On a certain night some three years ago he had a dim remembrance that he had behaved like a brute to a woman. His remembrance was only dim as to details. It was entirely clear as to the fact.

What had happened as a result of his conduct he could not clearly state. The next morning the crew had found him lying insensible on the cabin floor with a fractured skull. The woman was gone, also the power boat which had trailed astern of the yacht in the pleasant weather. Such was his physical condition that when he was not unconscious, he was delirious. He had been able to give no coherent account of affairs and equally unable to give any directions as to the future movements of the yacht, which had been bound nowhere in particular upon a pleasure cruise.

The old sailing-master and captain, much distressed by the situation and the emergency in which he found himself suddenly plunged, decided that his best course, in fact, his only course, was to get back to civilization and a doctor as soon as possible. He had instantly put the yacht about and headed for the nearest land where he might hope to get suitable care for his terribly ill young employer. He pushed the yacht to the utmost speed, and in three weeks dropped anchor in Honolulu, just in time to save the young man's life. Indeed, for a long time it was touch and go as to whether his life could be saved at all, and it was not until nearly a year had elapsed before the Southern Cross sailed for San Francisco with a weak and shaky, but convalescent owner, on her quarter deck.

The departure of Katharine Brenton with Valentine Langford had made a great sensation, but it was nothing to the sensation which raged when it became known that Valentine Langford had returned without her. She was a woman of too much importance, she had played too large a part in the affairs of the world, civilization had manifested too much interest in her, to allow her to drop out of its sight without at least making an effort to find her. The position of Mr. Valentine Langford became interestingly difficult in the face of a storm of inquiry. Mr. Langford's previous marriage was, fortunately for him, unknown, but the world had had a complete and adequate idea of the terms of the union which had been entered upon so lithely between Langford and Miss Brenton that the first question that met him when he came back alone was as to which one had repented. Had the woman come to her senses, had the man grown tired of her, had they parted, and where was the woman? These were queries which were put to him with the direct simplicity of the American public through its impetuous representatives, the reporters. And to these questions Mr. Langford could return no adequate answer whatever except the truth, which he could not bring himself to tell. He declared that she had left the yacht in the South seas, that he did not know her present whereabouts, and refused to say anything further privately or in public. Miss Brenton had no near relations; what was everybody's business was nobody's, and presently public interest in her declined. She and her philosophy were practically forgotten by all but Langford himself.

Fortune, which had done him some evil turns, here, however, interposed to his advantage. The lady who legally bore his name departed this life and left him a free man. Brute though he had been, Langford was not without some strong idea of honor and decency. Indeed, he had enjoyed long and undistributed hours of meditation upon his sins of omission and commission during his period of convalescence, and the calm consideration of character and career had done him good. At heart, in spite of his brutal conduct, for which drink had largely been responsible, he was a gentleman, and capable of things fine and high under the stimulus of some really great emotion. He had come to realize, to put it mildly, what an awful fool he had been to say nothing of his villainy. What had led him to this realization had been the remembrance of the hours he had passed with Katharine Brenton before the clouds had arisen which had culminated in that awful storm, the recollection of which fairly made him shudder. However, he had deceived her by professed adherence to her wild theories and impossible philosophies, he had honestly loved her, and association with her had been of benefit to him. If he only had not given away to his temper and his appetite! If it had not been for his former obligation!

He had married his wife in a moment of boyish infatuation. The union had been impossible almost from the first. She was little more than an adventuress, much older than he, who had entrapped him for his money. There had been a separation on a liberal financial basis, to which the woman had readily, even cheerfully, agreed, and he had no lingering remains of affection to hold him back. Her death was only a relief to him. He felt that he owed reparation to Katharine Brenton, and he was more willing to pay the debt because he was honestly and genuinely in love with her so far as a man of his temperament could be in love with a woman. He wanted to make amends for his treatment. He would have given anything he possessed to have been able to say how ashamed he was of all that he had done, and to beg her to forgive him and marry him.

The death of his father and the necessity for the administration of the vast interests of the bonanza king's estate prevented him from at once engaging upon the search which he promised himself he would make, but he expedited matters, sometimes to his own loss, as rapidly as he could, and after nearly a year's stay in San Francisco, he found himself in position to undertake his quest. For a year thereafter he and the Southern Cross traversed the unexplored, unvisited waters of the South seas. He had landed upon island after island which he had examined with minute particularity. Some he had found inhabited by natives, whom, through interpreters he had procured, he questioned unavailingly. He ran across stray vessels trading among the islands, and through them with constantly increasing, ever widening mediums, he carried on his search, but without result. In this sweeping the Pacific, he visited everything that was charted, and all that he could find that was not, and was now homeward bound, convinced that the launch must have foundered and that he would never solve the mystery of her disappearance.

So assiduously had he prosecuted his search that the crew of the Southern Cross, who knew nothing as to the cause of the eagerness, with the exception of the ship master, looked upon him as a harmless visionary. They had been away so long and had visited so many islands with so much danger from uncharted reefs in the unknown seas that they were one and all widely anxious to return from the, to them, aimless wandering. If he had communicated to them at the first his quest, they would have shared his eagerness, but he kept it to himself, as he had kept his own counsel in San Francisco, and he straitly charged his sailing master to say nothing of it.

Consequently the lookout on the fore-topmast cross-tree on a certain stormy morning, catching sight of a dim, blue haze on the horizon far off to starboard, made no report of it. What was the use? It would only delay matters and they were within a few weeks of Honolulu now, and another fortnight beyond Hawaii would bring them back to the United States, for which they all longed with the desire of men who had been away from home and confined to the narrow decks of a cruising ship for over a year.

Something—as to whether it was Providence or not he was somewhat doubtful in his mind afterward—brought Langford on deck before his usual time for rising. The watch was in charge of a rather sleepy, stupid second officer, unimaginative and unobservant. He had not noticed the land which it was difficult to see from the deck at any rate, especially as it did not lie between the yacht and the sun, and as it had not been reported from the masthead, he knew nothing of it.

Langford had found sleep impossible. The year of search, the constant disappointment, the pressing sense of mystery, the feeling that his conduct was indeed irreparable had preyed upon him. He was thin, worn, nervous and irritable. He walked up and down the deck in the cool of the morning thinking. For three years practically he had had this woman before his eyes as the goal of his efforts. Now she was gone, and he must concentrate his life upon something else. He gazed languidly and indifferently about the horizon, his unpracticed eye noticing nothing for a time. Suddenly, however, starting off to starboard listlessly during a pause in his steady tramp, he thought he caught a glimpse of light. He looked idly in the direction whence the reflection had come for a few moments and saw it again; a thin cloud of smoke, or was it haze, rose above it. He was puzzled by it, of course, and stood staring. The concentration in his gaze, he thought, discovered to him a cloudy blink in the gray of the dawn which might mean land. He knew there was no land charted in those seas, for he had carefully studied the chart the night before, saying nothing to anyone, for he had become somewhat sensitive about the matter.

He ran down the companion ladder into his cabin and fetched thence a new and powerful glass, which, upon his return to the deck, he focused upon the distant point of light. By the aid of those powerful binoculars he made out what it was. He was a man of quick decision and purpose. He called the officer to him, pointed to the light, and handed the glass to the man in question.
"What do you make of that, Mr. Holtzman?"
The officer took a quick look through the glasses, handed them back to their owner, and said laconically: "Land! Fire! Smoke, sir."
"Head the yacht to that island at once."

"Very good, sir," said the officer, turning to the man at the wheel and ordering the helm to be put apart.
The yacht's bows swung slowly round until the island and the light were both dead ahead.

"Now, Mr. Holtzman," said Langford, when the maneuver was completed, "who is at the masthead?"
"I'll see, sir," answered the second officer, stepping forward.
"Bring him to me," said the owner as the officer turned away.

In a few moments the officer came back to the quarterdeck followed by one of the seamen. The man looked very much frightened, for Langford was in a towering passion, and when he was in a passion he was not a pleasant spectacle.
"Did you see that island yonder?" began the owner, fiercely.
"I—er—"

He Focused Upon the Distant Point of Light.

"Answer me!"
"Yes, sir," said the man, desperately.
"You did?"
"Yes, sir."
"Why didn't you report it?"
The man hesitated, shifting from one foot to another, muttered something about a wild goose chase. Carried away by anger, Langford sprang at him, and would have done him bodily violence, had he not been quickly restrained by the second officer.

"They are going down the hill," said Harper. "I have lost them among the trees. We are approaching swiftly," he continued. "Mr. Holtzman, half speed, if you please."

Bells jangled below as Mr. Holtzman rapidly set the indicator and the speed of the yacht was quickly checked. She still approached the island with sufficient rapidity, however, and after perhaps 15 minutes of easy going, Capt. Harper signaled her to stop, fearful of any nearer approach.

"What now?" asked the owner.
"I think we had better not chance it nearer, sir," said the captain. "It is not more than a half-mile to the shore. Shall I call away the launch, or will you be rowed?"
The launch was stowed amidships; the gig swung from the davits. It would be quicker to take the gig.

"I'll be rowed," said Langford.
And in a moment the voice of the boatswain's mate could be heard calling away the crew. All hands were on deck. The conversation between the captain and the owner had been heard by many, and their tenor communicated to all. Consequently when the gig manned by six of the best oarsmen in the ship dropped alongside and Langford descended to the stern sheets and took the tiller in his hand, the crew spontaneously manned the rail and sent him off with three ringing cheers.

It did not take the men long to cover the distance between the motionless ship and the island. As they approached the latter, they perceived the barrier reef, which, unless they could find an opening, would effectually prevent their getting on the shore. Langford swung the boat about at a judicious distance from the reef, over which the sea always broke with more or less force, and closely scrutinized the line of foam. The coxswain of the boat who rowed the stroke oar also followed with his eyes the jagged why not she? Indeed, I am sure it must be."

Something of the man's confidence infected the old sailor. He took up the glass from where it lay on the cabin skylight and going forward studied the island.

"'Tis one of those volcanic islands, I take it," he said as he came back. "It seems to be covered with trees. There is a hill rising from the midst of it. The fire is on the top. There should be an encircling reef round about it, and deep water up to the very barrier."

"Could you see anything else?"
"No, sir. No glass would reveal anything more at this distance. Try for yourself, Mr. Langford."

He handed the binoculars to the owner, but his own scrutiny revealed nothing more than the captain had told him.

"How are we going now?" he said, looking over the side.
"About eight, I should judge, sir," answered Harper.

"Let us have full speed until we get nearer."

"Very good, sir."
The captain turned and spoke a word to the second officer, who signaled to the engine room, and in a few moments the motion of the great vessel through the water was perceptibly accelerated.

"Have you had your breakfast, Mr. Langford?" asked the captain, at last.
"Not yet."

"Then if you'll allow me, sir, I think you would better get it. We won't be within landing distance of that island for an hour or an hour and a half. In fact, we'll presently have to slow down. I don't like to dash in full tilt so near land through these unknown waters, and you will do well, sir, to go below and get a bite to eat."
"Your advice is good," said Langford, turning away and entering the cabin.

Never had man less appetite than he. Somehow, he could not tell why, he felt certain that this which would be his last attempt, would not prove fruitless; that his search hitherto unavailing would now be rewarded. He took time to re-examine the chart of those seas. It was quite possible he thought, for the woman to have made that particular island before them from the point at which she had left the ship. The more he studied it, the more sure he became. He forced himself to break his fast, but in a short time he was on deck once more.

The island was perceptibly nearer. Capt. Harper was forward staring through the glass. Running along the waist Langford joined him on the forecastle.

"Can you make out anything?" said the young man, catching the old one by the arm.

"Aye," was the answer.
"Is she there?" he asked, hoarsely, his heart in his mouth.

"There is a figure on the weather side of the fire yonder."

"A figure!" asked Langford, trembling so he could scarcely control himself. "Is it a woman?"
"I can't tell. It's too far off."

"Give me the glass."
"I make out another figure. There are two of them," returned Harper, slowly lowering the glass and handing it to Langford.

"Two!" cried the other, rapidly focusing the glass, disappointment in his tone which he strove to keep out of his heart. "You are right," he said at last, "there are two figures, but 'tis impossible to make them out."

He handed the glass back to the captain, who in his turn fixed it again upon the island.

"They are going down the hill," said Harper. "I have lost them among the trees. We are approaching swiftly," he continued. "Mr. Holtzman, half speed, if you please."

Bells jangled below as Mr. Holtzman rapidly set the indicator and the speed of the yacht was quickly checked. She still approached the island with sufficient rapidity, however, and after perhaps 15 minutes of easy going, Capt. Harper signaled her to stop, fearful of any nearer approach.

"What now?" asked the owner.
"I think we had better not chance it nearer, sir," said the captain. "It is not more than a half-mile to the shore. Shall I call away the launch, or will you be rowed?"
The launch was stowed amidships; the gig swung from the davits. It would be quicker to take the gig.

"I'll be rowed," said Langford.
And in a moment the voice of the boatswain's mate could be heard calling away the crew. All hands were on deck. The conversation between the captain and the owner had been heard by many, and their tenor communicated to all. Consequently when the gig manned by six of the best oarsmen in the ship dropped alongside and Langford descended to the stern sheets and took the tiller in his hand, the crew spontaneously manned the rail and sent him off with three ringing cheers.

It did not take the men long to cover the distance between the motionless ship and the island. As they approached the latter, they perceived the barrier reef, which, unless they could find an opening, would effectually prevent their getting on the shore. Langford swung the boat about at a judicious distance from the reef, over which the sea always broke with more or less force, and closely scrutinized the line of foam. The coxswain of the boat who rowed the stroke oar also followed with his eyes the jagged reef. It was he who detected the two figures on the beach of the island waving palm branches and apparently pointing. He called the attention of Langford to the figures, and suggested that the inhabitants were trying to show an opening through the barrier. Following the indicated direction presently smooth water was discovered. Langford headed the boat for it. The men bent to their oars, and soon parted the quiet waters of the lagoon. The two figures stood in plain view upon the beach still too far for those in the boat to make out who they were. Langford could only see that one was taller than the other; that both were dressed in some sort of loose tunic that fell to the knees and left the arms bare. He was disappointed, and yet hopeful. The suspense was almost unbearable. The men were doing their utmost, seeing the anxiety in his face, but their utmost was too slow for the impatient man.

CHAPTER XIV.

Past and Present.

"How long do you think it will be before they will be here?" asked the man, after they had sat silent on the hill to windward of the fire watching the trail of smoke.

"I should think that it would be perhaps an hour or a little more. Why?" she returned, after a moment's pause.

"Are you anxious to have them here?"
For the life of her she could not keep the bitterness out of her question. The man looked at her in surprise. She had never lost her temper before him in the years they had been together. There had been something singularly simple, free and unstrained in their life. Nothing had ever occurred to vex her, at least not after the man had known enough to notice it. She was a woman of sunny, even temper under any circumstances, and she had felt it incumbent upon her to be as nearly perfect as possible, since she represented humanity to him, nor had it been a difficult task for her to be gentle. This flash of resentment, therefore, struck him as something entirely novel. In his amazement for a moment he forgot the injustice of it, the unkindness of it. He looked at her strangely and said to her, with a little touch of severity:

"You know that it is not that, Woman."

He had no terms of endearment. He had never heard the words that lovers use, and although he knew that her name was Katharine, and he believed that his was John, and though sometimes they made use of these names, generally they called each other by the broad generic terms which stood for sex. Names are only for differentiation and identification in any event, and here was no need for such appellation. She loved to call him "Man," and she loved to hear him call her "Woman."

"You know," he said, "that 'tis not I who brought the world upon us."
"I was unjust, unkind," she answered quickly enough, stretching out her hand to him. "You must forgive me. You see even the approach of yonder ship brings bitterness into our hearts and into our speech."
"I guessed that it would be so when I saw you weep," said the man. "I wish now that I had not given you the flint and steel; that I had not allowed you to light the beacon."

"My friend, it had to be. Don't reproach yourself for that. Sooner or later this island would have been visited by some one. Sooner or later the ship would have come to fetch us off."

"But we were so happy here," he protested.
"Yes," she answered, "but not since yesterday."

"Are you unhappy because I love you?"
"Because," she made swift to reply, "I am no longer sure that you will love me always."

"But you love me, do you not?" he questioned, eagerly.
"Yes."
"Are you sure of yourself?"
"Absolutely."

"Why not of me, then? Am I less true? Do I love less than you?"
"Not now."
"What is the difference between us, then?"
"I have seen the world and you have not."

"But I tell you that will make no difference; that—"
"No man can say that who has no experience to draw upon."
"You are my mentor," said the man, gently. "You have taught me all I know, but sometimes I think that about some things I know more than you, and this is one thing of which I am sure."

"Yes," said the woman, "you can be sure so long as conditions remain as they are at present, but other times, other manners—"
"You have something to tell me?" interposed the other, swiftly.
The woman nodded.

"You said yesterday you would tell me to-day. Why not tell me now?"

UNDEFEATED CHAMPION OF THE NORTHWEST.

T. A. Ireland, Rifle Shot, of Colfax, Wash., Tells a Story.

Mr. Ireland is the holder of four world records and has yet to lose his first match—says he: "Kidney trouble so affected my vision as to interfere with my shooting. I became so nervous I could hardly hold a gun. There was severe pain in my back and head and my kidneys were terribly disordered. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me after I had doctored and taken nearly every remedy imaginable without relief. I will give further details of my case to anyone enclosing stamp."

INCOMPETENT.

Mrs. Hare—Old Snail got his boy a position last week and he only held it one day.

Mr. Hare—What was it?
Mrs. Hare—A messenger boy.

But He Wasn't.

Senator Depew, in his Washington residence on his seventy-sixth birthday, told a reporter that his health was perfect.

"You do, indeed, sir," said the reporter, heartily, "look the picture of health."

"Yes," said the senator, "I shouldn't have said I was well if my appearance didn't bear me out. A self-congratulatory statement is merely ludicrous. You have heard about the census taker?"

"A census taker rang the bell of a Hillier place residence the other day and an elderly gentleman opened the door.

"I'd like to see the head of the house," said the census taker.
"Sh! Not so loud!" whispered the elderly gentleman. "Now, what is it? I'm the head of the house?"

The Luggage Question.

DeLancey Nicoll, lawyer, is always a well-dressed man, and abominates a slovenly appearance. At the Union club he said of a westerner one day: "He has come on to New York for a week and I don't believe he has brought a stitch of luggage with him." Here Mr. Nicoll smiled.

"Unless, indeed," he added, "he's stowed something in the large bags he carries in the knees of his trousers."

There's a Reason.

"Paul, if I were to die, should you marry Widow Muller?"
"Good heavens, no!"
"Why not? Every one says how like me she is."
"Yes, that's just the reason."

Some people would accomplish a lot more if they didn't waste so much time telling others what they are going to do.
