WEEK'S PRINCIPAL EVENTS

Report of President Roosevelt's Condition.

REPUBLICAN LEAGUE MEETS.

Secretary Shaw Averts Financial Crisis—Gen. Funston Advocates the Re-establishment of Canteens.

[Special to The Republican.]

The president's physician authorized the following statement Tuesday morning. "The condition of the wound is satisfactory. His temperature this morning was normal. The patient slept well and at present is occupying a rolling chair. He is cheerful and from the beginning has shown neither impatience nor restlessness but has carried out the directions of the physicians with scrupulous care. Since the use of the asphering needle to evacuate the sac on the 22nd inst., which left no wound, there has been no operation until yesterday. [Signed] "CORTELYOU." President Roosevelt was subjected to another surgical operation on his wounded leg Sunday, an incision which exposed the bone being made. The bone was found to be affected by the abscess and it was necessary for the surgeons to resort to the scraping process to clean the wound thoroughly.

Secretary Shaw has offered to anticipate all interest on obligations of the government, maturing between October 1, 1902 and June 30, 1903, if presented within sixty days, at a rebate of one per cent. per month. This action was taken with the hope of relieving the financial situation by retarding to circulation useless while lying in the government vaults. Money which has once actually entered into the treasury cannot thereafter be deposited in banks, and the only way that such money can be again put in circulation is by the payment of the legal obligations of the government. Secretary Shaw's action has to a considerable degree relieved the financial crisis.

The English coal operators are not gaining much from the unusual American demand for anthracite. Owing to the regulations of the Miner's union, which forbid the miners increasing their daily output, the dealers cannot fill their orders. This has caused a sharp advance in the retail price of anthracite, with the result that the British consumer is suffering. General Manager Luther of the Philadelphia and Reading company's coal mines is authority for the statement that the company's mines are in fairly good condition and work can be resumed as soon as the strike ends.

The state department announced several important transfers and one new appointment last Saturday. Charlemagne Tower of Pennsylvania transferred from Russia to be minister to Germany. Robert S. McCormick of Chicago transferred from Austria-Hungary to Russia. Bellamy Stover of Ohio is transferred from Spain to Austria-Hungary. Arthur S. Hardy of New Hampshire, transferred from Switzerland to Spain. Charles Page Bryan of Illinois, transferred from Brazil to Switzerland. David E. Thompson of Nebraska is the newly appointed minister to Brazil.

The biennial convention of the National Republican league is now in session at the First Regiment Armory in Chicago. Large delegations are present from all parts of the country. The public interest centers chiefly in two big meetings on Thursday and Friday evenings. Thursday evening the meeting was addressed by Senator J. P. Dolliver of Iowa, Congressman A. J. Hopkins and Martin B. Madden. Tonight the speakers will be Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, Governor Yates and others.

The subject of the army canteen has again been brought into prominence by Brig. Gen. Funston, who in his annual report of the Department of the Colorado declares that the abolition of the canteen has lowered the discipline of the army, ruined scores of good soldiers, and enriched saloon-keepers, gamblers and dissolute women.

President Roosevelt has summoned the presidents of the coal carrying roads and the president of the miners' union, and will confer with them today. The president's action is in the interests of the American people, and he will do all in his power to bring the opposing forces to some agreement.

Emile Zola, the distinguished French novelist, was found dead in his home in Paris Monday morning. It is believed that his death was due to gas which escaped from a stove the pipes of which were out of order. Mme. Zola is seriously ill, but hopes of her recovery are entertained.

The state department has received word from Minister Conger that Russia is evacuating Manchuria, according to agreement. It was thought by many that the Russians would insist on holding that part of the Chinese Empire and that war would follow.

It is reported that the Roumanian government has refused to issue passports to Jews intending to emigrate to the United States. This is looked upon as a direct result of Secretary Hay's recent note on the subject.

A cyclone on September 25th swept the eastern coast of the Island of Sicily, killing 450 people.

BUTTER REMAINS FIRM.

The Price on the Elgin Board of Trade is Still Twenty-Two and One-Half Cents.—No Sales Made.

Butter remained firm at twenty two and one-half cents on the Elgin Board of Trade. There were no offerings or sales and the market was made by the committee, William Kruse acting in place of M. Long. The output for the week was 597,000 pounds.

MAN STRUCK BY THE OMAHA.

The Fast Train That Passes Through Genoa on the Illinois Central Railway Kills a Man at Rockford.

E. P. Webb, formerly a real estate man at Rockford, was struck by the Omaha express at that place Monday morning and died shortly after.

Webb was walking on the company's right of way and did not hear the approaching train.

Judge Charles E. Fuller

The Republican Nominee for Congress

I believe in the equality of all before the law, and so far as I am able, if I shall represent this district in congress, I shall give my best endeavors to the protection of the interests of the laboring man in this district, state and nation.

—JUDGE CHARLES E. FULLER, republican nominee for congress.

It is not so much what a man says, as what he does. Many candidates make glorious speeches, advocate sound doctrines, and promise to be loyal to the people's interests—but after election they forget.

The past record of Judge Charles E. Fuller, however, is so full of good works in the public service that none can doubt his sincerity of purpose and eminent ability to accomplish his ends.

The judge and his past political career are so well known to people hereabouts that his election is a certainty. He will not only get the solid republican vote of this true blue republican district, but he will draw almost the entire independent vote. Those who vote for the best man regardless of party creeds have only to become familiar with Judge Fuller's career in order to know for whom to vote. His friends expect him to run ahead of his ticket.

The following sketch is condensed from a biography recently published in the Belvidere Republican:

Judge Charles E. Fuller, of Belvidere, Boone County, Illinois, is a native of the county of which he has been for so many years the favorite son. His ancestors were among the earliest settlers of New England and were of the bone and sinew of that noble band of pilgrims and patriots who there helped to lay the foundation of a

AND I want to declare myself in favor of another proposition: I am in favor of so much of what is called the referendum as provides for the nomination of candidates for all offices—city, county, district, state and national—by direct vote of the people. I believe that we have progressed in this country to a point where no one should set himself up as dictator as to what the people should do politically, but the people themselves should say, in primaries, whom they desire to represent them and serve them in all public offices. I would have primaries held in every precinct of the state upon the same day, so that no "band wagon" business could be had; so that there should be no more talk of factions and rings, so that the people in one day, all voting throughout the counties, districts or state, at the same time, should say by direct vote whom their candidates should be. (loud applause.) Then we shall hear no more of machines, of rings or of cliques in politics.—Extract from speech delivered by JUDGE FULLER on accepting the nomination for congress.

great and free republic. Early in life his parents came west and settled on the wild prairies of Boone county. There Chas. E. Fuller was born and there he attended the little country school. Later he read law in the office of the Honorable Jesse S. Hildrup, formerly member of the State Constitutional convention of 1870, and of several general assemblies, and later United States Marshall for the northern district of Illinois. During the time of his law studies Judge Fuller taught school in the country districts during the winters in order to earn money to pay his expenses. He was admitted to the bar in 1870, but even prior to that time had participated actively in the politics of the county, making speeches for the republican party and managing the campaigns of Mr. Hildrup. He

WILLARD S. ORTON CALLED.

Death Occurred at His Home in Elgin Monday Morning of This Week — Severe Illness Has Ended.

Willard S. Orton, only son of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Orton and cousin of John Shattuck of Genoa, died at 10:55 last Monday morning at his home 351 Chicago street, Elgin. About two years ago, Mr. Orton was compelled to give up work on account of ill health, and since had been gradually failing. Despite his suffering, he was always cheerful and contented, patiently awaiting the inevitable end.

Deceased was born in Elgin February 7, 1856, and has lived there the greater part of his life. For twenty years he was employed in the plate room of the watch factory and his companions knew him as a cheerful man and a capable workman.

Leaving there in '91 he secured a responsible position with the National Sewing Machine Company at Belvidere, but about two years ago was obliged to give up work and returned to Elgin.

His death has caused an irreparable vacancy and the blow to the family is a severe one. Mr. Orton was a member in high standing in the Masonic lodge and was a man held in general high esteem. His wife, Matilda, parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orton, and one sister, Mrs. Moore, survive.

The funeral was held Wednesday at two o'clock at the home. Mr. and Mrs. John Shattuck attended the funeral services at Elgin.

AN EXCELLENT COMPANY.

The Chicago Ladies' Concert Company Will be at the Genoa Opera House Tuesday Night, October 7.

One of the best concert companies on the road will appear Tuesday evening at the Genoa opera house.

The entertainment is one that it will pay you to attend.

The tickets are on sale at E. H. Browne's.

The following are the press comments of some of the leading publications in the towns visited:

In spite of the rain, a large audience attended the performance given by the Chicago Ladies' Concert company last evening. They gave one of the best entertainments seen here for some time. They seem to have the right kind of a show for these times, and they deserve to prosper.—Mt. Vernon Democrat.

The Chicago Ladies' Concert company attracted the customary large audience to the opera house last night. Miss Carlisle has long been a favorite upon the concert stage, and her sweet voice and attractive ways are as popular as ever. Lillie Weston in her musical act was one of the hits of the evening.—Shelbyville (Ind.) Republican.

FARMER IS DOPED.

Robert Hutchinson, a Wealthy Farmer of South Riley, Has Valuables Taken in Chicago Saloon.

The following is an article that appeared in the Chicago Journal of last Tuesday. It is learned that Hutchinson lives near the South Riley creamery and is known here:

Robert Hutchinson, said to be a wealthy farmer of DeKalb county, asked the police of the Central station this morning to explain how one little glass of gin could produce sleep. He declared that after taking one drink in a saloon on Canal street he immediately fell into a doze, and that when he awoke his pockets had been rifled of $25, and that his gold watch had been exchanged for a brass one.

Hutchinson is a farmer. He wears a broad-brimmed, weather-beaten felt hat. When he entered the police station at dawn his trousers were rolled part way up his boots, and he appeared to be somewhat under the influence of a drug.

SWIMMERS' CRAMP.

It is Not So Very Dangerous if the Victim Will Keep Cool.

If swimmers could be trained to keep cool under all circumstances, there would be comparatively little drowning among bathers and summer pleasure seekers. Cramp is usually assigned as the cause when some good swimmer drowns. But cramp ought in reality to be nothing serious. Usually it affects only an arm or a leg or maybe only a hand or foot. Any moderately good swimmer can keep afloat with one arm or even without the use of that, yet good swimmers drown often as a result of cramp. If such fatalities were analyzed, they would be more properly classed as drowning from fright and loss of nerve. This comes from the fact that every one is taught in childhood to fear the water and comes as a grown man and a swimmer to fear cramp. The average opinion is that the man who is attacked when swimming in deep water is as good as drowned. Therefore, when a swimmer feels a leg or arm begin to cramp he is frightened in most cases entirely out of his wits. He loses his head, begins to splash and paw and struggle and then goes down.

What the swimmer should remember is that he can keep afloat with very, very little effort if he will turn on his back and keep his chest inflated. It is the simple matter of floating, which every swimmer knows and finds very easy. If the swimmer will keep cool and float, the cramping limb will frequently relax after a little and he will find himself as well as ever.—Outing.

Pat's Trouble.

Pat had come over to America with the expectation of finding money lying around loose, only waiting for some one to pick it up. Of course this was long ago. Pat had soon become disillusioned and was always glad to get hold of odd jobs which would not him a little something to help him keep body and soul together. Finally, becoming tired of the struggle, he decided to end it all and was very industriously tying a rope around his waist when his landlord happened in on him. After watching him curiously for a few minutes he asked: "What's up, Pat? What are you trying to do?"

"Troyin' to choke meself, av'course," was Pat's answer.

"Choke yourself? You can't do it that way. You'll have to put the rope around your neck."

"Sure an' I tried that, but I couldn't breathe."—New York Times.

On Sure Ground.

A well known artist overheard a countryman and his wife ridiculing his picture, which represented a farm scene. He was so indignant that he at last interposed with the remark:

"That painting is valued at £100. Allow me to ask if you are familiar with works of art?"

"Not very familiar with art," replied the farmer, "but I know something about nature, young man. When you make a cow that gets up from the ground by putting her fore feet first, you do something that nature never did."—London Answers.

Nothing Wasted.

A Scottish farmer when going to market, it was observed, always took a hen with him in his trap. The reason was never known until one day he took a friend with him on a drive. Every place the farmer stopped he put the nosebag on his horse, and then the hen was so trained that what dropped from the horse's bag the hen would pick up, so there was nothing wasted.—Pearson's Weekly.

INTERESTING LETTER.

From Frank Arbuckle, who is Cruising on Atlantic Waters.

On board the U. S. Training Ship "Monongahela."

Frinchal, Island of Maderia.

August, 23, 1902

My Dear Father and Mother:

I received your very welcome letter yesterday, the same day we arrived here coming in three days behind time.

Well, if I was ever in a hot place this place certainly beats them all for it is so hot here that we almost suffocate. The place here is very pretty. We can see bananas, peaches, pears and almost every kind of fruit growing wild. The boys went ashore today so I think I will go Tuesday or Wednesday. We have fruit for supper nearly every evening. We boys are going bare footed now as it is too hot to wear shoes. The beach is covered with small boats and any time of day it is lined with people in bathing.

The houses are built of soft stone or straw and are without floors. The boys had permission to go in swimming but on account of seeing two or three small sharks they would not go in any more.

Tomorrow is tarring down day so I suppose we will go to work about 9:30 the same as we did this morning. The town is built on a large mountain and from the ship we can see large vineyards. Palm trees are growing along the shore.

The women here dress in bright colors with ornaments and beads and wear rings in their ears and noses and also wear large straw hats. The men do not wear shoes and I think they must go without hats by their looks.

Coming here we passed the Island of Porto Santo where Columbus lived after he discovered America, which is about forty-five miles from here. The people don't work any more than they really have to. Nearly every man has a boat and it is generally laden with fruit, which can be bought for almost nothing. Grapes grow wild here. Well, it is getting toward masthead so will have to close.

Well, we went ashore yesterday and this is certainly a great place and I will try to tell you something of it. Four of us boys started to go up the mountain after we had walked an hour or so, stopping here and there to get some grapes which are very plentiful. We then met a few of the "Enterprise" boys and then we certainly did have a fine time.

We crossed a small ravine and came down another side of the town which was nothing but wine dens and cellars. We took a ride up the mountain again in a car and came down on a sleigh with wooden runners and ran on small stones laid on the pavement. Nearly everywhere we went we could see oxen pulling their sleds around like rigs with a small boy ahead and another fellow with a long stick beside him. The men charged twenty-five reis an hour for the use of the sleds—ten reis is one cent of our money.

The bananas are all green but they taste better than we get in the states. Tomorrow we sail for "the good old states" again. We met about fifty of the German apprentice boys and they had an instructor with them to keep them out of trouble. The boys got up a race with them but Germany was a little too much for them and we were beaten by five boat lengths.

Some of the men drank too much wine here and when they awoke they found themselves in double irons. The captain in our part of the ship is in irons now because he kicked one of the boys in the foot when his shoes were off—but everything goes and no excuses.

Today there are about twenty-five boys on the sick list from eating too much fruit. I have a parrot and two other kinds of birds but I hardly think they will stand thirty days out at sea.

Hoping to hear from you at Yorktown, I remain,

Your loving son,
FRANK D. ARBUCKLE.

DR. L. E. MOYERS IS DEAD.

Prominent Physician of Fairdale Buried Monday at Kingston.

During the month of August, Dr. Leslie E. Moyers left his home in Fairdale for Colorado Springs, Colorado, in search of a better climate for his health. His father, John Moyers, of this place, accompanied him and spent many weeks at Denver and other places and returned about one month ago. Last Wednesday came a telegram to relatives announcing the death of the doctor and his father proceeded at once to Colorado and brought the remains here Monday morning.

The funeral services were conducted in the M. E. church on Monday at two o'clock in the afternoon, Rev. E. K. D. Hester of Genoa officiating and assisted by Rev. Adron of Fairdale and Rev. Dix of Kingston.

The M. W. of A., and Royal Neighbors of Fairdale and also the Woodmen of Kingston and the Masons of Kirkland were present at the services. Mr. Moyers was an active member of these orders.

Dr. Leslie Elias Moyers, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Moyers, was born in Mayfield township, DeKalb County, Illinois, December 19, 1865. His death occurred at Colorado Springs, Colorado, September 23, 1902.

He graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in Chicago in 1889.

Mr. Moyers was united in marriage to Miss Amanda Uplinger of Kingston, March 20, 1889, and to this union were born two sons, Earl and Ross.

Interment took place in Kingston cemetery.

The pall bearers were Drs. Ludwig of Kingston; Robinson of Genoa; Helm of Rockford; Everett of DeKalb and Blagden and Brown of Sycamore.

In all the relations of life Mr. Moyers presented a beautiful character, as a brother he was loving and kind, an affectionate and devoted husband, a true and unselfish friend. His death leaves a large circle of mourning relatives, a wife and two sons beside a father and mother and sister, Miss Maude, of this place, Bert of Mayfield and Boyd of Lake City, Iowa.

The floral emblems that voiced the love and respect in which he was held were many and beautiful.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS.

CHAPTER I.—Burglar No. 1 enters a house to rob it and encounters another burglar who has secured all the valuables. No. 1 is an old hand and at the point of the pistol compels No. 2 to divide the plunder. As a condition No. 1 agrees not to recognize No. 2 in case they meet. II—No. 1 meets No. 2 in the company of the lady of the house which was robbed and is engaged by him as groom. III—Burglar No. 2 is Chas. Goddard and the woman in the case Miss Belle Stetson. Goddard is an invalid in charge of a strange physician, Dr. Squires. The doctor is on terms of social intimacy with Miss Stetson. IV—No. 1 drives Goddard and Miss Stetson out. The two last named have words over Dr. Squires. V—No. 1 attempts to rob Dr. Squires' house. Alarm. In danger from watchdogs. Saved by Goddard. VI—No. 1 is promoted from groom to butler in Goddard's mansion. VII—Dr. Squires and Miss Stetson call at Goddard's, but the doctor is silent regarding the attempted burglary at his house. VIII—No. 1 carries a message from Goddard to Dr. Squires and gets a view of the interior of the house. IX—Goddard visits Dr. Squires at night once each week for treatment. No. 1 thinks the doctor is slowly poisoning his master. X—Dr. Squires says that Goddard is a leper, and he is experimenting on a cure. Miss Stetson in the secret.

CHAPTER XI.

It is not often that conflicting emotions trouble me. But on that afternoon as I walked back to Mr. Goddard's house I experienced the strangest contradiction of feelings. One moment I thought I would pursue the tragedy no further, but decamp immediately and let my master work out his own fate. After all, he was nothing to me, and he probably cared less for me than I did for him.

But the next moment I would have a revulsion of feelings. I would fall to pitying and sympathizing with both my master and Miss Stetson. Her love for him was genuine, and it must be a terrible blow to receive such intelligence. Was she not to be pitied more than Mr. Goddard? On the other hand he was conscious of the terrible doom that awaited him and was buoyed up only by the thought that possibly Dr. Squires could cure him. But now he could never gain his prize. Would she marry him even though pronounced cured?

What would be the result? Mr. Goddard would go away to some foreign country, and after grieving over him for a time Miss Stetson would yield to the importunities of Dr. Squires and marry him. I saw the climax of the tragedy, which, after all, would prove a tragedy only to my master, and it made me more faithful in my devotion to the unfortunate man. This decided me to stay by him until the time should come when my expectations would be fulfilled. Then I would return to my old ways. Meanwhile I was leading an honest life and making the money which I spent.

I had become quite efficient in my duties, and was trusted in many ways that never fell to the lot of my predecessor. I was more than butler—I was my master's confidential secretary in many respects. But there were some secrets that he would not reveal to me, and one was the dread disease which brought him so much care and sorrow. After hearing the truth from Dr. Squires' own lips my attention was drawn more closely to Mr. Goddard's appearance. I watched his languid manners, his pale face and all the symptoms of disease that he showed during his periodical fits of sickness. More than this, I read up all the medical books about leprosy and then watched for the signs. To an excited imagination these were readily visible.

About this time Miss Stetson and the doctor took lunch at the house again, and my attention was called to the matter by an incident that greatly affected all of us. I had not seen Miss Stetson since that afternoon when I watched her from my hiding place at the wayside brook. She was paler than usual, and her manner was nervous and excited, especially when Charles was near her.

During the progress of the lunch I caught her studying the hands and face of her host on every occasion when his eyes were turned away from her. I could not at first understand the reason for this secret scrutiny, but it suddenly dawned upon me that she, too, had been reading on the subject and was looking for symptoms of the disease.

The doctor, as usual, was the life of the party and kept the conversation flowing freely from one to the other, never being at a loss for words. Nevertheless there was an uneasiness in his manner which seemed very unnatural. My master alone appeared to be perfectly at his ease and normal.

When the conversation lagged a moment, he suddenly rubbed the back of one of his hands with the palm of the other and said:

"Doctor, I think I must have run up against some poison ivy or sumac in the woods, for I'm sure that my hands and face are poisoned."

"Very likely, very likely," the doctor replied quickly, but with a little tremor in his voice. "There is a great deal of it around, and one of your nature would be very susceptible to it."

"My hands and face itch terribly, and blotches are breaking out on my face and forehead," Mr. Goddard continued.

I looked at Miss Stetson. She was staring at my master with horror written all over her face. The hand that held her fork trembled so that she had to put it down.

My master displayed his hands and added:

"See these red spots on the back of my hand. Are they not the result of poison? And over my eyes and forehead. They seem to be breaking out all over."

"Probably, Charles. I will investigate after lunch," the doctor said hurriedly, glancing toward Miss Stetson.

For the first time Mr. Goddard turned his eyes toward her. Feeling that she was attracting attention, her overwrought nerves could stand the strain no longer. She had been thinking as I had—that the brown spots were the first and earliest symptoms of leprosy. We both knew just enough to be carried away by any symptoms that resembled those which indicate the beginning of the dread disease.

"Belle, what is the matter? Are you ill?"

Mr. Goddard had hardly spoken these words before she dropped her hands and fainted. She would have fallen to the floor had I not caught her in time.

They deposited her on a couch and rubbed her hands and moistened her brow with water. She slowly recovered consciousness.

"You should not have mentioned being poisoned to her," the doctor said admonishingly to my master. "To one of her sensitive disposition the mere mention of a thing like that might cause her to faint."

"How careless and brutal of me," my master said in tones of repentance. Then as she opened her eyes he knelt down by her side and, drawing one of her hands into his, said:

"Did I frighten you? I was a brute to do it. Look at me, Belle, and tell me that you forgive me."

For reply she turned her head away from him with a shudder and withdrew her hand from his clasp.

"What is it, dear?" he continued. "Do not draw away so. Tell me what it is that I have done. I will do anything to repair it. Speak, Belle."

"Leave me, please; leave me," she gasped. "I'm nervous and excited. Let me alone for a few minutes, and then I'll be better. But I must go home. Doctor, will you help me to get on my things?"

"Belle, you're not going to leave me like this," pleaded my master, approaching her again.

But she moved aside and said in a wavering voice:

"Let me go now, Charles. Maybe I can explain some day. I'm not myself now. Goodby!"

She did not extend her hand or offer to take his, but walked quickly out of the room.

Mr. Goddard stood quite still for some time, puzzled, perplexed, discouraged.

CHAPTER XII.

I WAS probably as much troubled as my master over this sad state of affairs. Miss Stetson's treatment hurt him more than he cared to confess. He seemed so perplexed and worried over the matter that I was several times on the point of telling him the reason for her sudden aversion for him.

There was but little doubt that he had noticed her dislike for him, but he was too proud and sensitive to mention the matter to any one. He was not a kind to speak of such personal questions even to Dr. Squires. For several days he remained away from the Stetson mansion, sending me over twice a day to inquire after Miss Stetson's health. I never saw her myself in any of these visits except the last. Then, instead of sending the message down to me by one of the servants, she called me up to her library.

The first thing I noticed about her was a peculiar careworn, suffering expression on her face. Under the dark eyes and around the lips there were delicate lines and tints which revealed more than words. She had suffered and was doomed to suffer more. Pathetic acceptance of her lot was apparent on every lineament of her face. She had evidently battled successfully with herself and had become resigned to her fate.

The room in which she ushered me was an old-fashioned library where her father, the doctor, had gathered together many rare books and curios. The heavy woodwork, the dark paper and furnishings of the library cast a gloomy aspect over the sole occupant, and her white face gleamed out of the darkness like an old-fashioned picture in a somber setting. In spite of her surroundings she was still beautiful—more beautiful it seemed to me than when fully exposed to broad daylight. Hers was a beauty that did not fade in light or shade.

"You come from Mr. Goddard with a message for me?" she said interrogatively as I entered the room.

"Yes, ma'am. He sent to inquire after your health," I replied, bowing respectfully.

"And he trusts you without a written message?" she continued.

"In this matter he does, for he considered you too ill to write, and he did not wish to put you to any unnecessary trouble."

"That is the true reason," she said quietly. "He is always very considerate to me."

"He is to every one," I added, wishing to show my devotion to him.

"Yes, yes; he is kind to all. He is a good man."

"I have never met a better, ma'am, if you will permit me to say it, and I've seen many kinds of men in the world. He is always thinking of other people, and if he does wrong I believe he has some good reason for it."

She looked at me as if she liked to hear me praise him, and when I stopped her expression seemed to say, "Go on, go on; it's music to me." But I knew my position and would say no more.

"Is Mr. Goddard well himself?" she asked when she found that I was mute.

"Yes. Except for an attack of poison, which has now gone away entirely, he has been very well."

She turned a shade paler and then flushed a little as she remembered that I had been present on the day when she fainted.

"Oh, yes; I remember he spoke of the poison the last time I saw him," she said in a moment, recovering her mental poise. "Have the spots or eruption entirely disappeared?"

"Entirely, ma'am. There are no signs of any left."

"I suppose Dr. Squires gave him something to cure them."

I knew that she was thinking of the doctor's cure for leprosy and that she imagined he had given my master something which would drive away the first symptoms of the disease, at least temporarily. But I knew differently, and I courted the opportunity to disabuse her mind of the mistake.

"No, ma'am; the doctor did nothing for my master," I answered. "I gave him something which cured the eruption."

"You? What did you know about the matter?"

"Not very much, ma'am, except that I had been poisoned once, and I remembered what helped me. I asked my master to let me get him a bottle."

"A bottle of what?"

"Witch hazel. It was one of my mother's cures for poison from ivy or sumac."

"And that cured him?"

Her face brightened wonderfully. She began to realize that she had been a victim of her imagination.

"Completely," I answered. "Then it was not—nothing more serious than ordinary poison," she added, with a sigh of relief.

"Nothing, ma'am."

She gave expression to her relieved feelings in a short laugh. The sweet-

"You come from Mr. Goddard?"

ness of it made me turn my head to look at her. The beautiful face had suddenly lighted up so that it seemed almost divine in its expression. Here, I thought, was true love, and I willingly adored her for it.

"Pardon me," she said after a moment of silence. "I was thinking of something else which amused me. You must take a message to your master."

She drew toward the library table and drew pen and paper from a drawer. She hesitated a moment and then added:

"No; I won't write. I will send a verbal message by you. Charles has trusted you to bring one, and I will return it in the same way."

"Thank you, ma'am. I shall endeavor to prove worthy of the trust."

"Well, tell Mr. Goddard that I am quite recovered and that I expect to have him call on me today. Be sure to tell him that I must see him at once. He must give me some other engagement to come to me. Now, do you understand? Can you put it so he can't say no?"

"I can, ma'am, and I'll venture to give you my word of honor that he will be here before the sun sets."

"Go, then, and prove your words."

As I left her presence I felt that my mission had been one of mercy that morning, for I had, apparently unconsciously, been the means of lifting a burden temporarily from one heavy heart. I knew also that I carried a message that would bring a ray of sunlight into the life of another.

I might have stretched the importance of this interview to my master or I might have given him the literal truth. I know not which now. However, I delivered the message. It was sufficient to make him obey it.

The result of their meeting was manifest at once. Both of them appeared happy and normal again, and the old relationship seemed to be re-established. How much Miss Stetson explained to him about her fears and knowledge of his case I never knew, but for a time at least she was determined to put down all feelings of aversion for my master because of her knowledge that he was a doomed leper. Or perhaps—like another self-sacrificing virgin that I have read about—she had decided to consecrate her life to him, to live by him and nurse him through the coming years of pain and suffering and mental agony.

Advance
Engines
and Threshers

The Advance Husker-Shredder

The Advance Husker-Shredder is built on honor. It has strength, durability, safety and capacity. It is designed to do a large work for the thresherman after his separator is laid away, thereby continuing the earning power of his engine far into the winter. The advent of the Husker-Shredder has brought many of the farmer's troubles to an end, and the long job of husking by hand is now crowded into a few days. The crop may be quickly marketed, and the increase in "results" by the saving of the corn fodder hay is wonderful. Corn hay has proven to be more profitable as a food for stock than either clover or timothy, and is rapidly appearing in the market in baled form. The Advance Husker Shredder has a windstacker attached, which enables the farmer to carefully mow the corn hay away without the expense of the help needed for other hay crops. A feeder may be attached if desired, while the shelled corn is entirely removed from the stack and neatly sacked by a bagger attached. After leaving the husking rolls, the carrier delivers the corn ears to the wagon in marketable shape.

May Save Millions of Dollars!

Millions of dollars are annually going to waste in corn-raising states, owing to the fact that farmers have husked the standing corn, leaving the fodder in the field for their stock to run over, treading the most valuable portion underfoot. Corn hay may be had at very small cost, and produces more heat, more flesh, more and richer milk than does timothy or clover. It will pay you to see our sample machine, and talk the matter over.

Jamie Daven was confined to his bed the early part of the week.

L. N. Jackman of Elgin spent Sunday here the guest of his daughter.

If a man marries you for your looks, what will you be after the smallpox?

Slater & Douglas are among the new advertisers in the REPUBLICAN this week.

The shoe factory laid off the greater part of its hands this week to take invoice.

Jas. Daven was here from Milwaukee the fore part of the week arranging to move his family to Milwaukee where he is employed.

If this eye catches your eye you will know that it is intended to inform you that the eye man, Prof. Madison, Chicago's expert optician, will again be at the Commercial hotel, Genoa, from noon Tuesday, October 14 until Friday night, October 17, for the express purpose of attending your eyes.

MRS. W. W. PRITCHARD.

Passed Away Friday at Cherry Valley.—Aged Husband Died Last Sunday and Wife Soon Follows.

Mrs. Matilda N. Pritchard, wife of the late W. W. Pritchard, died at the home of her son in Cherry Valley Friday morning at eight o'clock.

One week ago last Sunday her husband passed into death. She succumbed to the shock of the parting with the one with whom she had shared home and fortune for more than half a century. She was prostrated and since that time the stricken wife has been growing weaker until at last the life flickered and went out.

The funeral took place Monday at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon from the home. Interment took place at Belvidere. Mrs. S. Abraham of Genoa, who is a relative, attended the services.

A LONG LIFE ENDED.

Mrs. Mary A. Willard Dies at Dundee.—Mrs. Sarah J. Willard, of Hampshire is a Daughter.

Mrs. Mary Ann Willard, widow of the late George Willard, passed away last Friday evening at six o'clock at her home at Dundee aged eighty-six years and six months. She came from New York to Illinois with her parents in 1838. She was first married to Harlow Sawyer. Of this union six children were born, three of whom survive her, Mrs. Sarah J. Willard of Hampshire; Lyman Sawyer of Bloomington, Wisconsin, and Geo. A. Sawyer of Dundee. Her second husband was George Willard and to this union two children were born, Mrs. Millie Andrews, deceased, and Abe Willard of Dundee.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.

Interesting Matters of Business Recently Transacted by the Methodist People of This Place.

At the adjourned session of the quarterly conference held at the M. E. church last week Thursday afternoon, the following interesting items of business were transacted.

S. S. Slater, Stout Hepburn and L. Robinson were elected as delegates to the Lay association to be held in connection with the annual conference at Austin, Ill., on Thursday next.

A unanimous vote of thanks was extended the Rev. E. K. D. Hester for his work the past four years and a resolution was carried requesting his return another year.

Look Out For Them.

A new swindle is being worked in portions of Illinois and Iowa. The sharpers carry cases containing samples of high grade fence wire, and claim to represent a firm in Indiana. They offer wire fencing at a low price, the goods to be sent C. O. D. When the farmer buys the goods he is shown a model of a fine ornamental automatic gate to be sent free with each order if the farmer pays a small sum in advance on the order of fence wire. This generally catches the farmer for sums of $5 and up, the agent is seen no more and the fence wire ordered by the farmer never comes.—Peoria Star.

Jack Frost is astonished at himself.

KIRKLAND PEOPLE WED.

Bertrand W. Adams and Miss Ida M. Lyons Take Marriage Vows on Wednesday at Home of Rev. Hester.

At two o'clock Wednesday at the home of Rev. E. K. D. Hester, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of Genoa, occurred the wedding of Miss Ida M. Lyons and Bertrand W. Adams.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of only the near relatives.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Adams journeyed to Kirkland where they will make their home.

Mr. Adams is a bright, young man and has the esteem of a large circle of friends. He is engaged as a carpenter.

THE REPUBLICAN unites in wishing them happiness.

Company Not Reliable.

In a bill filed in the Circuit court Monday of last week against the Dominion company, a publishing firm at 334 Dearborn street, L. R. Levan, a former agent of the concern seeks to secure the appointment of a receiver for it and an injunction restraining the concern from transferring its property so as to prevent him from enforcing any degree that may be entered against it.

Levan, who is the son of John P. Levan, president of the Second National bank of Altoona, Pa., alleges that he signed a contract with the defendant concern last February to manage an agency for it at Altoona. He was required to deposit $800 "as an earnest of good faith," he says, and was promised a salary of $125 a month and additional commission.

In his bill Levan alleges that the company abandoned its branch office in Philadelphia; that the books furnished him were unsalable; that the company has failed to pay him salary amounting to $375, and also has declined to refund him the $800 he deposited.—Chicago Daily.

TO MEET AT ROCKFORD.

STOCKHOLDERS

Free Transportation to Attend the Special and Annual Meetings at Chicago.

Public notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad company will be held at the company's office in Chicago, Illinois, on Friday, Aug. 29, 1902, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon; also that the regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the company will be held at its offices in Chicago, Illinois, on Wednesday, October 15, 1902, at noon.

To permit personal attendance at these meetings there will be issued to each holder of one or more shares of the capital stock of the Illinois Central Railroad company as registered on the books of the company at the close of business on Friday, Aug. 1, 1902, and to stockholders of record on Friday, September 19, 1902, a ticket enabling him, or her, to travel free over the company's lines from the station on the Illinois Central railroad nearest to his or her registered address to Chicago, and return, such ticket to be good for the journey to Chicago only during the four days immediately preceding, and the day of the meeting, and for the return journey from Chicago only on the day of the meeting, and the four days immediately following, when properly countersigned and stamped during business hours—that is to say, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.—in the office of the assistant secretary, Mr. W. G. Bruen, in Chicago. Such ticket may be obtained by any holder of stock registered as above, on application in writing, to the president of the company in Chicago. Each application must state the full name and address of the stockholder exactly as given in his or her certificate of stock, together with the number and date of such certificate. No more than one person will be carried free in respect to any one holding of stock as registered on the books of the company. A. G. Hackstaff, secretary.

FULLER FOR CONGRESS.

was elected State's Attorney in 1876; State Senator in 1878 representative in the general assembly in 1882-1884 and 1886, and again State Senator in 1888; and Circuit Judge in 1897. He never held an appointive office. Whatever of political preferment has been his, has come from the votes of the people and not from the favoritism or pull of any politician or office holder.

As State's Attorney he was an efficient officer and a terror to law breakers. His record in that office shows that he never had an indictment quashed and never failed to secure a conviction in any case he prosecuted. Such was his reputation in that respect that he was often engaged during the years of his active practice, by the authorities of other counties in important criminal matters. As State Senator he forged to the front in his first session. At that session he introduced bills to reduce the contract rate of interest, to abolish sale mortgages and permit foreclosure to be made only in court with the right to redeem from any foreclosure sale; and to compel manufacturers of butterine and oleomargarine to label their products and to permit the same to be sold only for what they actually were, being the first anti-butterine legislation ever attempted in this state.

He was the manager and leader of the Logan forces in the memorable struggle of 1885, which resulted after four months balloting in returning General Logan to the United States Senate. General Logan consulted with him daily, and to all his other lieutenants simply said, "Follow Charley Fuller, do just what he says." The confidence was not misplaced, and to the skill, ability and resourcefulness of Judge Fuller General Logan owed his reelection, and recognized that fact in a personal autographic letter which Judge Fuller now has and which he highly prizes.

In the election of 1888 Judge Fuller was again returned to the state senate, where he served until 1892, when he declined reelection and determined to devote himself to the practice of the law in which he was eminently successful.

In 1897 Judge Fuller was unanimously nominated for Circuit Judge, and now holds that office. The performance of his duties in that position has been such that every lawyer in his circuit would regret to see him leave the bench, yet from personal friendship, and recognition of his fitness for higher honors, nearly or quite every member of the bar in the counties of the circuit which are in the congressional district will give Judge Fuller his earnest support for congressional honors.

In every campaign for thirty years Judge Fuller's services have been freely given to the republican cause. There is hardly a county in the state where his voice has not been heard, and where he is not known as an able and eloquent advocate of republican principles and policies.
