ELGIN'S SENSATION.

Attachment Proceedings Commenced Against Mayor Grote.

Elgin's reign of unruffled calm has been broken with the startling announcement that her best mayor has been served with an injunction restraining him from paying certain bills and charging him with malfeasance in office. The payment in question is the bill of the Elgin City Railway against the city of Elgin for lighting the city hall. The drift of the opinion is that Mayor Grote is the president of the City Railway company and attention is asked on the ground that the mayor has violated a statute of the State laws in allowing himself to become in any way a beneficiary of the money spent by the city.

The complainants propose if the injunction is granted them to give the money to the grand jury and bring indictment proceedings against the mayor.

Attorney R. S. Egan, one of Elgin's best and talented attorneys, has been retained by the complainants and legal fight, which promises to be one of the hottest in the history of the county, will be bitterly fought.

Attorney Egan in an interview says: Mayor Grote is the head of a syndicate that controls Elgin. The city's work is all done by one of his companies, the street cleaning department in the greater part of its time running off the tracks of his electric cars. He has platted out the town to a sufficient size to accommodate 70,000 people have bought their lots of land at ruinous prices. He owns the Elgin Lumber Company, the Elgin Electric Company and City Railway, the Home Bank, besides stone quarries and other interests.

The rings of monopolists that he has set down to long, and have controlled the questionable means. Grote is a monopolist. The office of mayor allows him to control franchises and other franchises which no one else can. The people are determined to free from this despotism. The first step that can be taken is to impeach the mayor for having to do with the money distributed for city work. He has warrants to pay himself for work ordered him by the aldermanic committee composed of men who are closely identified with the same interests.

GENOA'S ENTERPRISE.

It is unnecessary to state that the new M. E. Church is a surety. Rev. Howard is meeting with most gratifying success in his efforts in raising the necessary funds.

Genoa's business men realize the importance and benefits a handsome church edifice will be to this town and are responding with a cheerfulness and alacrity that bespeaks volition for the future good of this favorite city.

The new M. E. Church plans were published by the Issuer yesterday. Every arrangement has been made with a view to the comfort and convenience of the congregation. The exterior of the church is imposing and attractive and when completed Genoa will have a house of worship which would do credit to a city many times larger.

Those who have not as yet received notice from Rev. Howard should not be slighted as he intends giving all opportunity to contribute to such a noble and worthy cause.

THE GOOD SISTERS' WORK.

The Chicago Evening Post recently contained an interview with Chauncey Flint, who is well known to Genoa people. Portions of the interview are as follows: "If there are such things as front seats in heaven I believe they should be reserved for the sisters who nurse the smallpox patients at the pesthouse," said Chauncey D. Flint to a representative of the Evening Post. "I'm an engineer by trade," he added, "and if I was detailed to haul them to the pearly gates I'd keep the throttle wide open until I pulled up at the end of the line. I'll never forget all they did for me and I am satisfied that I'd not been here to day but for the care and attention of those dear women." "The doctors took me out in the ambulance," he said, "and I was there just one day over six weeks. The ambulance service is fine and the doctors were very kind and attentive. I had learned to hate the very name 'pesthouse,' supposing it to mean a rattle-trap building, fitted with rude bunks and blankets, where patients were left to shift for themselves until they died or fought it out.

"Sick as I was I was agreeably surprised at what I saw when I was carried into the building, which is located at California avenue and Twenty-sixth street. The hall was carpeted with good Brussels carpet, the rooms were light and airy and the beds clean and neat. For the nurses I cannot say too much. They are angels. While I was out there I never saw one of them sitting down. They were always on the go from room to room and from bed to bed doing all they could to assuage suffering. For five weeks of my time I was as helpless as a baby. Every day my clothing had to be changed throughout and my shirts were cut off before my back could be greased to allow them to slip off. I was out of my head half of the time and they treated me as gently as possible. Every time I rang the bell a nurse hurried to my bedside and I was given everything I wanted. In the matter of eatables I had all that was good for me. I suffered terribly during the abscess stage. I had forty abscesses, but the nurses were tireless in their attention. My case was what they called confluent smallpox and all of my skin peeled off, revealing the dried pox beneath. For a long time my new skin was so tender that it would break at every turn.

"When I went out there I understood there were but four patients in the house, but when I left, about Dec. 1, there were eighteen. When I went away I was given a bath, my nails were cleaned and trimmed and I was rubbed down like a racehorse by the man in attendance. I was a mere skeleton, weighing but ninety-six pounds and before I left the bed could span my leg with one hand. Now I weigh over one hundred and fifty pounds and I never felt better in my life. For a time I gained flesh at the rate of five pounds a week. My clothing was thoroughly fumigated before I left and I was driven back to my home by Dr. Warren. He was the attending physician out there and he is a gentleman in every respect. He took splendid care of all the patients and handled the cases as they can be handled only by those familiar with every phase of the disease."

Mr. Flint's face is but slightly marked. He has been at work during the past few weeks in one of the big factories as a stationary engineer. "I want to say," he added in conclusion, "that it is an awful disease, but at the same time those suffering from it are most tenderly cared for at the pesthouse by the sisters and the doctors. They save many lives. It would be a good thing, though to change that awful name. It has a sound and significance that would scare the strongest man. But God bless the sisters is now my daily prayer. We learn that two of these sisters have been taken with small-pox, one of whom has since died.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION.

Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Worcester Celebrate Their 20th Anniversary.

A very happy occasion was the celebration March 2nd of the twentieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Worcester, at their pleasant country home near Kingston. About thirty relatives and friends gathered to do them honor. A very enjoyable program was rendered consisting of appropriate selections. A solo, "We are growing old together" with guitar accompaniment was well received. Rev. Hester, pastor of the M. E. Church at Kingston made a very happy speech. A daughter and grandson of the host and hostess highly pleased the guests with clever recitations. Mrs. J. E. White read a very touching original poem.

The Buckeye friends sent an art memento entitled "Chi-nay".

Altogether the affair was heartily enjoyed by all present. May many like anniversaries roll round for this esteemed couple is the earnest wish of a host of friends.

A Merited Success.

The interest manifested in the Garment Cutting School is unabated. The more one knows about the drill the easier it is and the better it is liked. Some at first think it is difficult to understand, but a few lessons remove that difficulty—and the task is easily accomplished. If girls of fourteen and fifteen years of age can readily learn and successfully operate the system it is a positive proof that young ladies need not grow up in ignorance of this useful art. If any one fails to be able to do their own cutting, fitting and sewing they must admit that it is their own fault. The course of instruction is thorough in every respect. The pupil is taught how to make all kinds of garments in all styles including cuffs, capes, collars, revers, ruffles as well as all other parts of the different garments worn by men, women or children. If parents will only consult the best interest of their daughters and investigate the work that is now going on daily in Crawford's Hall they will see the advantages derived from such training. When we consider that but a few months ago the Garment Cutter was unknown in this country and now its reputation is established and spreading like wild fire and there are hundreds of pupils now cutting garments successfully that but a few months ago knew nothing about such work we must acknowledge the statement is none too strong when we say it is wonderful, indeed. But many will say "why is this", the answer is easy enough. The people stand in need of just such a system and training as these schools are giving and as soon as these schools are investigated the people will acquaint themselves with the facts in the case, all are compelled to agree that the result is based on true merit. The school is now being taught in Crawford's Hall where the public are cordially invited to call and visit and examine the work for themselves. These people in charge of this work will only remain so long as their patronage is sufficient to justify them. All should act promptly in this matter and proceed at once. Ladies are especially invited to visit the room and examine the work. Lady teachers in charge of the room will meet and welcome you there.

Because of the high speed at which Circular Saws are run more power is wasted in friction than is used in sawing where the bearings of the shabby, wooden saw frame get out of line. In the Armotor Saw Frame, the only Steel Saw Frame ever made, this difficulty is absolutely and wholly prevented because THE BEARINGS FOR THE SHAFT ARE MADE BY BAKING IT IN THE KINDS OF STEEL TUBING. THE STEEL TUBING AND BEARINGS ARE THEN LITTED AS TO TAKE UP WITH A BOLT. THE FRAME IS ALL STEEL, VERY RIGID, AND RIVETED TOGETHER SO THAT NOTHING CAN GET LOOSE OR OUT OF PLACE. THE GUARD SO ENVELOPES THE SAW AS TO MAKE IT IMPOSSIBLE FOR ANY ONE TO GET HURT, A POINT OF THE GREATEST IMPORTANCE IN A SAW TO BE USED BY UNSKILLED HANDS.

Since we offer this very superior saw frame with a 28 inch superior saw at a much less price than any cheap imperfect wooden frame can be bought for, we are sure that the friends of the Armotor will appreciate the fact that we have again been doing the public a great service and have distinguished ourselves in redesigning an old article and putting it into an infinitely improved shape.

For a saw of similar size and quality, and ordinary wooden frame, you would be charged $60. We make this altered frame and this superior saw at $40, AND GIVE YOU A CHANCE TO GET IT AT $26, for the benefit of our Gairesd Acromator.

We have sold an enormous number of Power Acromator outfits with which saws are used, and a poor saw that runs lead detracts from their usefulness and their reputation. If we furnish a very superior saw at a very low price, many careless cuts will be bought to drive them. Wherever one Gairesd Acromator goes, others are sure to follow.

When we take a well known article, redesign it, and put it in a shape very superior to anything that has appeared before, it widens and enlarges our reputation for doing well everything to which we put our hands, and this is the thing that has in the past brought so much business to our factory, and which in the future, we have no doubt, will bring, practically, all the business in our line. It is this reputation that we are daily working for.

We believe that this Armotor Steel Saw Frame and Saw will confirm and enhance the fame which we have gained in the manufacture of Steel Windmills and Steel Towers, hence, for the purpose of scattering them so that everybody may know that a good thing can be had for a small price, WE OFFER THIS STEEL SAW FRAME, with its Gairesd Acromator, AND FIVE COPIES OF ADVERTISEMENT No. 2 of this series as per conditions stated in No. 2. In our next advertisement, No. 4, we shall talk of galvanizing and making a safe of iron of universal interest. This is adv. No. 2. ARMOTOR CO.

CONTENTMENT.

Happy the face 'neath the tattered bonnet, Merry eyes matching the ribbons on it;

Her kingdom, the billowy meadows fair; Her subjects, the birds and butterflies there;

She cares not for fashion, cares not for fame; She knows not sorrow—to her, but a name;

To those who are blest with wealth untold, Come not such joy as her life doth hold.

They think they are happy—how little they feel The sweet content her eyes reveal;

We may find, if we search through all the land, A queen 'neath a tattered bonnet.

At this moment Matt, looking bright as sunshine, leaped out of the caravan. "There's my proof," said Marshall.

"Miss Monk, this amiable bridegroom of yours denies being concerned in harming Mr. Charles Brinkley. Is he telling the truth?"

"No," she said: "he's lying."

"Matt," cried Monk, fiercely, "take care!"

"He's lying," she repeated, not heeding him. "I see him do it with my own two eyes, and I see William Jones helping him and looking on;

"It is a plot!" Monk cried, presently. "an infamous plot to ruin me! You have been tampering, I see, with this wild girl whom you foolishly suppose kin to me by blood. Arrest me, if you please—I shall not take the trouble to resist, for I am perfectly innocent in this matter."

"Here," said a quiet voice.

Monk turned his eyes and started back in wonder, while William Jones shrieked and fell forward on his face.

"What do you say, Miss Monk?" said Brinkley. "This amiable looking person is your father's cousin. Shall I release your bridegroom in order that you may go with him to the altar of Hymen and complete the ceremony?"

Brinkley laughed. "Your sentiments are natural, but un-Christian. And the gentle Jones, now, who is looking at you so affectionately, what would you do with him? Drown him in the sea too?"

"No, no, Matt," interposed William Jones, abjectly; "speak up for me, Matt. I ha' been father to you all these years."

Matt seemed perplexed what to say. So Brinkley again took up the conversation.

"On reflection we will refer William Jones to his friends, the 'coast-guard chaps.' I think he will be punished enough by the distribution of his little property in the cave. Eh, Mr. Jones?"

Jones only wrung his hands and wailed, thinking of his precious treasure.

"And so, Matt," continued Brinkley, "there will be no wedding after all. I'm afraid you're awfully disappointed!"

Matt replied by taking his hand again, raising it to her lips, and kissing it fondly. The young man turned his head away, for his eyes had suddenly grown full of grateful tears.

CONCLUSION.

My tale is told. The adventure of the caravan has ended. Little more remains to be said.

Monk, of Monkshurst, was not brought to trial for his iniquities, but he was sorely enough punished by the loss of his ill-gotten estates. Before the claim of the foundling was fully proved he left England never to return.

William Jones, too, escaped legal punishment. A severer retribution came upon him in the seizure and disposal of the hoards in the great cave. So sorely did he take his loss to heart that he crept to his bed and had an attack of brain fever. When he reappeared on the scene of his old plunderings his intellect was weakened, and he showed curious evidences of imbecility. But the ruling passion remained strong within him. I saw him only last summer, rambling on the seashore, talking incoherently to himself and watching the sea in search of wreckage as of old.

"You will be anxious to ascertain," proceeded Brinkley, with his old air of lightness, "by what accident, or special Providence, I arose from the grave in which you politely entombed me? The explanation is very simple. My young friend here, Matt, the foundling, or, as I should rather call her, Miss Monk, of Monkshurst, came to my assistance, attended to my injuries, which were not so serious as you imagined, and enabled me before day-break to gain the kindly shelter of my caravan. Tim and a certain rural doctor did the rest. I am sorry to disappoint you, Mr. Monk, but I felt bound to keep my promise—to interfere seriously with your little arrangements if you persistently refused to do justice to this young lady."

As he spoke, Monk uttered a savage oath and rushed towards the road; but Marshall was after him in a moment and sprang upon him. There was a quick struggle. Suddenly Monk drew a knife, opened it and brandished it in the air; so that it would have gone ill with his assailant if the herculean Tim, coming to the rescue, had not pinioned him from behind.

"Now, governor, you'd better take it quietly!" said Marshall, while Monk struggled and gnashed his teeth in impotent rage. "You're a smart one, you are, but the game's up at last."

Monk recovered himself and laughed fiercely.

"Let me go! Of what do you accuse me? It was murder just now, but since he showed curious evidences of imbecility. But the ruling passion remained strong within him. I saw him only last summer, rambling on the seashore, talking incoherently to himself and watching the sea in search of wreckage as of old.

And Matt? Well, her title to Monkshurst and the property was fully proved. For a long time she did not realize her good fortune, but gradually the pleasant truth dawned upon her in a sunrise of nice dresses, jewelry and plenty of money. Chancery stepped in like a severe foster parent and sent her to school. There she remained for several years; but Charles Brinkley, who had first taken in hand the vindication of her claims, and who never ceased to be interested in her, saw her from time to time and took particular note of her improvement in her grammar and in the gentle art of speech.

"Matt," he said, when they met last Christmas in London, and when he saw before him, instead of a towsy girl, as bright and buxom a young lady as ever wore purple raiment and fine linen, "Matt, you are 'grewed-up' at last!"

Matt blushed and hung her head, with a touch of the old manner.

"Yes, I am grown, as you say. I wonder what William Jones would think if he saw me now."

"And if he noticed these pretty boots, Matt, and heard you play the piano and prattle a little in French. Upon my word, it's a transformation! You always were a nice girl, though."

"Do you really think so?" asked Matt, shyly. "Did you always think so?"

"Certainly."

"Even when I told you I liked you so much, and you told me 'it wouldn't do'?"

It was Brinkley's turn to blush now. It was clear that Matt, despite other changes, still retained her indomitable frankness.

"Even then," he replied, laughing. "But I say you were a precocious youngster. You proposed to me, you know!"

"I know I did," said Matt, "and it wasn't leap year then."

She added still more shyly: "But it's leap year now!"

Their eyes met. Both blushed more and more.

"Matt, don't! It won't do, you know! Yes, I say so still. You're a rich woman and I'm only a poor devil of a painter. You must marry some great swell."

But Matt replied: "I shall never marry anyone but you!"

"You won't? Do you mean it?"

"Of course I do."

He caught her in his arms.

"My darling Matt—yes, I shall call you by that dear name to the end of the chapter. You love me, then? I can't believe it!"

"I have loved you," she answered, laughing, "ever since I first came—to be took!"

And she rested her head on his shoulder just as she had done in the old days when she was an unsophisticated child of nature.

"So there's to be a wedding after all," he said, kissing her. "Matt, I've an idea!"

"When we marry suppose we arrange to spend the honeymoon in—a caravan!"

THE END

A Gentle Hint.

The attorney had made a motion for a new trial in a civil action and the judge looked it over carefully.

"Um," he said thoughtfully, "um, this sets forth that the verdict was unsupported by the evidence, was contrary to the evidence, was against the weight of the evidence, and that the evidence was insufficient to support the verdict as to any or all of the issues; because of errors of the justice in admitting and excluding evidence; errors of law in the instructions to the jury, improper conduct on the part of counsel for the caveator in addressing the jury, and in bills of exceptions."

"Yes, your honor," replied the attorney.

And do you believe it? "Certainly I do."

"Well, well," and the judge grew sympathetic. "it's a pity that the judge, and attorneys, and officials, and jury, and witnesses in that court don't know as much as you do. It really is, because if they did it would save me a great deal of worry and bother. Wouldn't you like to have a job as court instructor or something of that sort?"—Detroit Free Press.

COUNTY FAIRS FOR 1894.

Where Prize Pumpkins and Four-Legged Roosters Will Be Found.

Following is a list of county fairs for this year as reported up to date to the state board of agriculture:

Table with columns: COUNTY, Place, Date. Lists various counties and their fair dates.

MINERS IN DISTRESS.

They Can Work Only Two Days in the Week at Low Pay.

Miners in the vicinity of Canton are in a most deplorable condition, and their families are upon the verge of starvation. The coal mines at Dunfermline, near Canton, are operated by the White Breast Coal company, which has been compelled to reduce a week's work to two days and the wages of mining from 75 cents to 67 1/2 cents, because of the depressing effect of the mild winter upon the coal business.

BALLOT LAW DEFINED.

Cases Where Nominations Can Be Published in Independent Papers.

The Australian ballot law provides that the judges of election shall cause to be published prior to the day of election, in two different papers representing the political parties having the largest and next largest number of votes in the county, a list of the nominations made. Attorney General Moloney, in reply to the question whether the publication could be made in an independent paper if one party was not represented by a newspaper in the county, rendered an opinion in which he says:

All are of the opinion that the statute must be followed and that the publications must be made in the political papers of the different parties. We presume, however, that even a partisan paper, whose editor belongs to either of the political parties, would be a paper within the meaning of the law, especially where there are no political papers published in the county.

In another opinion the attorney general holds that where a city council passes an ordinance over the veto of the mayor and a motion is then made to reconsider the vote the mayor cannot vote upon the proposition to reconsider.

TRIPPED UP AND KILLED.

T. A. Elder Waylaid and Murdered for His Money at Toledo.

T. A. Elder, a prominent citizen of Toledo, was waylaid, murdered and robbed the other night at 9:15 o'clock on the way to his home in the south part of town. The murderer stretched a wire across the walk and concealed himself in an alley, and Mr. Elder being thrown down by the wire, the murderer struck him on the head with a club, killing him almost instantly, and after taking his watch and about $35 in money fled. There was great excitement among the citizens, and it was feared if the murderer was caught he would be lynched.

FOUR KILLED.

Terrible Tragedy Enacted in a New Jersey Home.

Two Burglars Murder a Mother and Her Babe—Both Brutes Killed by the Husband After a Most Desperate Struggle.

MET A BLOODY FATE.

New Brunswick, N. J., March 3.—Wednesday night two negroes named Henry Baker and William Thompson entered the residence of Moore Baker at Franklin Park, 6 miles west of this place, for the purpose of robbery. Upon being discovered by Mrs. Baker, who was up with a sick child, the robbers killed both her and the child. Mr. Baker then shot one of the negroes dead and killed the other with an ax. Mr. Baker was reported to have had a large sum of money in the house. The burglars effected an entrance to the house about midnight through the cellar door in the rear and went through the kitchen up the rear stairs to the second floor.

Mr. Baker, his wife and child slept in the front room. Mrs. Baker was up attending to the child, and hearing footsteps on the stairs she opened the door and saw Thompson, who carried an ax in his hand. He rushed at her with an oath and buried the blade in her skull, scattering the woman's brains over the walls of the room. Thompson then ran to the bed and struck the baby with the ax, killing it instantly.

Mr. Baker was horror-stricken at the sight of Thompson's crime, and with a cry of frenzy leaped at the slayer of his wife and babe. The black butcher turned with uplifted ax from his bloody work, and aimed a blow at Baker, but his aim was bad and the point of the ax buried itself in the floor. Then followed an unequal battle between the two, the second negro appearing confident of his confederate's success or dazed at the spectacle before him and not interfering. Baker, crazed with the horror of the crimes he had been unable to prevent, attacked the negro Thompson with the ferocity of a tiger. He tried to secure the ax, but Thompson was too quick, and they both laid hold of it at the same instant. Both strained for the possession of the weapon and in their fury they rolled and tumbled about in the rivers of blood that ran from the body of the murdered wife and that of the baby, which had fallen to the floor.

The contest was about equal for a time. The hands of both were lacerated into shreds by the sharp point of the ax. Finally Baker tripped his opponent, and as the negro fell the ax struck Baker in the face. The blood from the wound almost blinded Baker, but he brushed it aside and, raising the ax, brought it down upon the head of the negro, who was attempting to rise. The blow was a true one, for the keen blade of the weapon crashed into the head of the negro almost at the center of the crown and tore the skull asunder down to the bridge of the nose. Thompson dropped like a shot, his blood mingling with that of his victims.

Wrenching the ax from the head of the negro brute Baker made a dash for the other negro, who had started to run away. Baker followed him in close pursuit, leaving a trail of blood behind. As the negro reached the rear door of the kitchen, in seeking to escape, Baker caught up a shotgun from a rack, and, pausing an instant in the doorway, took deliberate aim at the fugitive and fired both barrels. As he recoiled from the shock of the gun he saw the negro spring into the air and then fall face downward.

How Baker managed to return to the room where the murders and retribution occurred he does not remember, but his neighbors, who were aroused by the report of the gun, found him clinging to the chair when they rushed over to learn the cause of the disturbance. Baker could not add anything to the story told by the horrible scene they gazed upon. Some of his neighbors took him to his own room and dressed his wounds, which may yet prove fatal, while others made an examination of the bodies in the front room. All three, mother, child and murderer, were dead, their bodies frightfully mangled and indistinguishable in color by reason of the deep dye that covered every part of them. The body of the negro, Henry Baker, was found in the spot where the bullets from Moore Baker's gun had overtaken him. The burglar was not dead, and the neighbors were unanimously in favor of lynching him, but before they could carry out their plans he died.

The coroner took charge of the bodies and held an inquest. The jury found that the negroes had killed Mrs. Baker and her child Gertrude, and returned a verdict of justifiable homicide in the case of the killing of the negroes by Baker.

Insane Man Kills His Wife.

LIMA, O., March 3.—Edward Froidreux became insane over religion at Point Pleasant and secured a club, and after telling his family that he had been commanded by God to kill them, attacked his wife. He had beaten her to death when neighbors, who had been notified of his insanity by little children, appeared on the scene and after a struggle succeeded in overpowering him.

indescribable trust and sweetness, took his hand—the hand which was free—and put it to her lips. "The proof is here," he said, calmly; "here upon my person. I am not quite dead, you see, Mr. Monk, of Monkshurst, and I thought I should like to bring it to you myself. It consists, as you are aware, of Col. Monk's dying message, written on the fly-leaf of his prayerbook, and of the marriage certificate of his wife, both these having been placed upon his child's person, concealed by the unsuspecting and illiterate Jones, and found by me after a lapse of many years."

Monk did not speak; his tongue was frozen. He stood aghast, opening and shutting his clinched hands spasmodithe murdered person is alive (d-n him!) I should like to know on what charge you arrest me."

"Oh, there's no difficulty about that," said Brinkley, looking at him superciliously. "In the first place you have by fraud and perjury possessed yourself of what never legally belonged to you. In the second place, you attempted murder, at any rate. But upon my life, I don't think you are worth prosecuting. I think, Mr. Marshall, you might let him go."

"It's letting a mad dog loose, sir," replied Marshall. "He'll hurt somebody."

"What do you say, Miss Monk?" said Brinkley. "This amiable looking person is your father's cousin. Shall I release your bridegroom in order that you may go with him to the altar of Hymen and complete the ceremony?"

"I hate him!" cried Matt; "I should like to drown him in the sea."

Brinkley laughed. "Your sentiments are natural, but un-Christian. And the gentle Jones, now, who is looking at you so affectionately, what would you do with him? Drown him in the sea too?"

"No, no, Matt," interposed William Jones, abjectly; "speak up for me, Matt. I ha' been father to you all these years."

Monk seemed perplexed what to say. So Brinkley again took up the conversation.

"On reflection we will refer William Jones to his friends, the 'coast-guard chaps.' I think he will be punished enough by the distribution of his little property in the cave. Eh, Mr. Jones?"

Jones only wrung his hands and wailed, thinking of his precious treasure.

"And so, Matt," continued Brinkley, "there will be no wedding after all. I'm afraid you're awfully disappointed!"

Matt replied by taking his hand again, raising it to her lips, and kissing it fondly. The young man turned his head away, for his eyes had suddenly grown full of grateful tears.

CONCLUSION.

My tale is told. The adventure of the caravan has ended. Little more remains to be said.

Monk, of Monkshurst, was not brought to trial for his iniquities, but he was sorely enough punished by the loss of his ill-gotten estates. Before the claim of the foundling was fully proved he left England never to return. Whether he is alive or dead I cannot tell.

I AM NOT QUITE DEAD, MR. MONK, OF MONKSHURST.

THE GENOA ISSUE.

With this number of THE ISSU I sever my connection with the paper, and engage in another business. During my stay in Genoa, I have received all kindness and warm-hearted support from the business men and from the people, and for this I am deeply grateful; their memories will always be most pleasant. There have been formed, too, many friendships, which will last longer than the parting, and be life-long ties to Genoa and its people. Mr. Sisley, the new editor, is a gentleman fully competent to meet the wants of the community in a wide-awake, lively newspaper, and a prosperous future for the ISSUE at his hands is assured. I bespeak for him as kindly a reception as mine has been. And so, with best wishes for the ISSUE and Genoa, I bid it and its readers good-bye.

AND now comes news from Kentucky of the awful punishment meted out to a negro who committed a dastardly crime, who was first skinned alive, then burned to death. The young lady, the victim of the wretch, applying the match. But still these horrible crimes continue despite the frightful punishments inflicted.

It is said that a dangerous counterfeit $5 gold piece is in circulation. We have carefully examined our stock but failed to find anything dangerous about them. The gold consists of three plates soldered together so as to be of the thickness of a genuine coin. The outer plates are of pure gold and are the obverse and reverse faces of the coin. The middle plate is of base metal.

A JURY in Peoria, Ill., declared that a man was practically justified for shooting the members of a charivari party. This old time barbaric custom is dying out, and there is one man at least, vows he will never, no never do it again. CHICAGO'S police think they have caught the World's Fair fire-bug. Another blaze was discovered and put out before any damage had been done. A man named Murphy was caught prowling around the building set fire to, and was promptly arrested. It is to be hoped that the officers have the right man, and prompt and severe punishment meted out to him.

THE man that invented that trite statement, "Nothing new under the sun" knew not what he was talking about. A little girl at Elgin, ten years of age, made pin money for herself by scattering the refuse from her father's brewery on the ground, which the destructive English Sparrow dispatched, with avidity. A justice of the peace, if called on, would enter a charge against Mr. Sparrow in consequence, of "plain drunk, ten days." The aforesaid little girl instead gathered up the inebriated by the basketful and collected the usual bounty from the town clerk.

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Della Tibbets was born in Canada, Jan., 1814, and died at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. Gregory, in Talmage, Neb., March 3, '94. Mrs. Tibbets came to Illinois with her husband in 1852, and settled on a farm just south east of Genoa, on Derby Line. Her husband died in 1868, when he moved to Genoa. For the last six or eight years she has lived with her daughter. Some thirty years ago she was converted and joined with the M. E. Church, where her membership has since remained. Her body accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Gregory, arrived last Tuesday morning, and was laid beside the grave of her husband in our silent city. A brief service was held at the residence of John Patterson, Esq. Rev. W. C. Howard having charge. Mrs. Emerson, of Caledonia, Ill., and Mrs. Chamberlain, of Genoa are also daughters of the deceased. Mrs. Tibbets was held in the highest esteem by those who knew her, and is well remembered by the older people of our community.

F. H. PALMER, SUPT. OF SCHOOL. Hunt & Fuller, Kingston.

Gentlemen:—It is with pleasure that I embrace the opportunity of testifying to the merits of your remedy, the Iron Phosphate Restorative.

For years I had been a great sufferer from nervousness, causing insomnia or sleeplessness, which gradually increased with the necessary study and work of the school and music room.

Your remedy was recommended by a friend, so I purchased a bottle and used it, and the results were very favorable. My nervous trouble has disappeared, and now I can rest at night and obtain a good refreshing sleep—which is very essential to all who wish to enjoy good health. It is an invaluable remedy for nervousness, I think, and I can cheerfully and conscientiously recommend it. Yours truly, F. H. PALMER.

FROM BELOIT, WIS. Hunt & Fuller, Kingston: You may send me another bottle of the RESTORATIVE as that I purchased of you the last time I called on you, did all you claimed for it. My mother has long been a sufferer from weakness and nervousness, and she thinks your remedy has done more in toning up her system than anything she has tried. Wishing you success, I am, Yours truly, CHARLES OLIVER, Cigar Manufacturer

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Christ the Conqueror and What He Has Done.

His Work Being Accomplished, It Remains With Us to Accept It—The Martyrs of Commercial and Domestic Life.

Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage chose for the subject of a sacramental sermon in the Brooklyn tabernacle, "Christ the Conqueror," taking for his text:

Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? this that is glorious in his apparel, traveling in the greatness of his strength?—Isaiah liii.

Edom and Bozrah, having been the scene of fierce battle, when those words are used here or in any other part of the Bible, they are figures of speech setting forth scenes of severe conflict. As now we often use the word Waterloo to describe a decisive contest of any kind, so the words Bozrah and Edom in this text are figures of speech descriptive of a scene of great slaughter. Whatever else the prophet may have meant to describe, he most certainly meant to depict the Lord Jesus Christ, saying: "Who is that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah, traveling in the greatness of his strength?"

When a general is about to go out to the wars, a flag and a sword are publicly presented to him, and the maidens bring flowers, and the young men load the cannon, and the train starts amid a huzza that drowns the thunder of the wheels and the shriek of the whistle. But all this will give no idea of the excitement that there must have been in Heaven when Christ started out on the campaign of the world's conquest. If they could have foreseen the siege that would be laid to Him, and the maltreatment He would suffer, and the burdens He would have to carry, and the battles He would have to fight, I think there would have been a million volunteers in Heaven who would have insisted on coming along with Him; but no, they only accompanied Him to the gate, their last shout heard clear down to the earth, the space between the two worlds bridged with a great hosanna. You know there is a wide difference between a man's going off to battle and coming back again. When he goes off, it is with epaulets untangled, with banner unspecked, with horses sleek and shining from the groom. All that here is of struggle and pain is to come yet. So it was with Christ. He had not yet fought a battle. He was starting out, and though this world did not give Him a warm-hearted greeting, there was a gentle mother who folded Him in her arms; and a babe finds no difference between a stable and a palace, between courtiers and camel-drivers. As Jesus stepped on the stage of this world, it was amidst angelic shouts in the galleries and amidst the kindest maternal administrations. But soon hostile forces began to gather. They deployed from the Sanhedrim. They were detailed from the standing army. They came out from the Caesarian castles. The vagabonds in the street joined the gentlemen of the mansion. Spirits rode up from hell, and in long array there came a force together that threatened to put to rout this newly-arrived one from Heaven. Jesus now seeing the battle gathering lifted His own standard; but who gathered about it? How feeble the recruits! A few shoremen, a blind beggar, a woman with an alabaster box, another woman with two mites, and a group of friendless, moneyless and positionless people came to His standard. What chance was there for Him? Nazareth against Him, Bethlehem against Him, Capernaum against Him, Jerusalem against Him, Galilee against Him. The courts against Him. The army against Him. The throne against Him. The world against Him. All hell against Him. No wonder they asked Him to surrender. But He could not surrender, He could not apologize, He could not take any back steps. He had come to strike for the deliverance of an enslaved race, and He must do the work. Then they sent out their pickets to watch Him. They saw in what house He went, and when He came out. They watched what He ate, and who with; what He drank, and how much. They did not dare to make their final assault, for they knew not but that behind Him there might be re-enforcement that was not seen. But at last the battle came. It was to be more fierce than Bozrah, more bloody than Gettysburg, involving more than Austerlitz, more combatants employed than at Chalons, a ghastlier conflict than all the battles of the earth together, though Edmund Burke's estimate of thirty-five thousand millions of the slain be accurate. The day was Friday. The hour was between 12 and 3 o'clock. The field was a slight hillock northwest of Jerusalem. The forces engaged were earth and hell, joined as allies, on one side, and Heaven represented by a solitary inhabitant, on the other.

The hour came. Oh, what a time it was! I think that that day the universe looked on. The spirits that could be spared from the heavenly temple, and could get conveyance of wing or chariot, came down from above, and spirits getting furlough from beneath came up, and they listened, and they looked, and they watched. Oh, what an uneven battle!

Two worlds armed on 'one side; an unarmed man on the other. The regiment of the Roman army at that time stationed at Jerusalem began the attack. They knew how to fight, for they belonged to the most thoroughly drilled army of all the world. With spears glittering in the sun they charge up the hill. The horses prance and rear amidst the excitement of the populace—the heels of the riders plucked in the flanks, urging them on. The weapons begin to tell on Christ. See how faint He looks. There the blood starts, and there, and there, and there. If He is to have reinforcements let Him call them up now. No; He must do this work alone—alone. He is dying. Feel for yourself of the wrist; the pulse is feeble. Feel under the arm; the warmth is less. He is dying. Ay, they pronounce Him dead. And just at that moment that they pronounced Him dead He rallied, and from His wounds He unsheathed a weapon which staggered the Roman legions down the hill and hurled the satanic battalions into the pit. It was a weapon of love—infinite love, all-conquering love. Mightier than javelin or spear. It triumphed over all. Put back, ye armies of earth and hell! The tide of battle turns. Jesus hath overcome. Let the people stand apart and make a line, that He may pass down from Calvary to Jerusalem, and thence on and out all around the world. The battle is fought. The victory is achieved. The triumphal march is begun. Hark to the hoofs of the warrior's steel, and the tramping of a great multitude; for He has many friends now. The Hero of earth and Heaven advances. Cheer! cheer! "Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah, traveling in the greatness of His strength?"

We behold here a new revelation of a blessed and startling fact. People talk of Christ as though He were going to do something grand for us after awhile. He has done it. People talk as though, ten or twenty years from now, in the closing hours of our life, or in some terrible pass of life, Jesus will help us. He has done the work already. He did it eighteen hundred and sixty-one years ago. You might as well talk of Washington as though he were going to achieve our national independence in 1950, as to speak of Christ as though He was going to achieve our salvation in the future. He did it in the year of our Lord 33, eighteen hundred and sixty-one years ago, on the field of Bozrah, the captain of our salvation fighting unto death for you and my emancipation. All we have to do is to accept that fact in our heart of hearts, and we are free for this world and we are free for the world to come. But, lest we might not accept, Christ comes through here to-day, "traveling in the greatness of His strength," not to tell you that He is going to fight for you some battle in the future, but to tell you that the battle is already fought, and the victory already won.

You have noticed that, when soldiers come home from the wars, they carry on their flags the names of the battlefields where they were distinguished. The Englishman coming back has on his banner Inkermann and Balaklava; the Frenchman, Jena and Eylau; the German, Versailles and Sedan. And Christ has on the banner He carries as conqueror the names of ten thousand battlefields He won for you and for me. He rides past all our homes of bereavement—by the door bell swathed in sorrow, by the wardrobe black with woe, by the dismantled fortress of our strength. Come out and greet Him to-day, O ye people! See the names of all the battle-passes on His flag. Ye who are poor read on this ensign the story of Christ's hard crusts and pillowless head. Ye who are persecuted read here of the ruffians who chased Him from His first breath to His last. Mighty to soothe your troubles, mighty to balm your foes, "traveling in the greatness of His strength." Though the horse be brown with the dust of His master, and the fetlocks be wet with the carnage, and the bit be red with the blood of your spiritual foes, He comes up now, not exhausted from the battle, but fresh as when He went into it—coming up from Bozrah, "traveling in the greatness of His strength."

You know that when Augustus, and Constantine, and Trajan, and Titus came back from the wars what a time there was. You know they came on horseback or in chariots, and there were trophies before and there were captives behind, and there were people shouting from all sides, and there were garlands flung from the windows, and over the highway a triumphal arch was sprung. The solid masonry to-day at Beneventum, Rimini and Rome still tell their admiration of their heroes. And shall we let our Conqueror go without lifting any acclaim? Have we not flowers red enough to depict the carnage, white enough to celebrate the victory, fragrant enough to breathe the joy? Those men of whom I just spoke dragged their victims at the chariot wheels; but Christ, our Lord, takes those who once were captives and invites them into His chariot to ride, while He puts around them the arm of His strength, saying: "I have loved thee with an everlasting love, and the waters shall not drown it, and the fires shall not burn it, and eternity shall not exhaust it."

If this be true, I can not see how any man can carry his sorrows a great while. If this Conqueror from Bozrah is going to beat back all your griefs, why not trust Him? Oh! do you not feel under this Gospel your griefs falling back, and your tears drying up, as you hear the tramp of a thousand illustrious promises led on by the Conqueror from Bozrah, "traveling, traveling, in the greatness of His strength?" On that Friday which the Episcopal church rightly celebrates, calling it "Good Friday," your soul and mine were contended for. On that day Jesus proved Himself mightier than earth and hell; and when the lances struck Him, He gathered them up into a sheaf, as a reaper gathers the grain, and He stacked them. Mounting the horse of the Apocalypse, He rode down through the ages, "traveling in the greatness of His strength." On that day your sin and mine perished, if we will only believe it.

There may be some one here who may say: "I don't like the color of this Conqueror's garments. You tell me that His garments were not only spattered with the blood of conflict, but also that they were soaked, that they were saturated, that they were dyed in it. I admit it. You say you do not like that. Then I quote to you two passages of Scripture: "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission." "In the blood is the atonement." But it was not your blood. It was His own. Not only enough to red-dye His garments and to redder His horse, but enough to wash away the sins of the world. Oh, the blood on His brow, the blood on His hands, the blood on His feet, the blood on His side! It seems as if an artery must have been cut.

There is a fountain filled with blood,
Drawn from Emmanuel's veins,
And sinners plunged beneath that flood
Lose all their guilty stains.

But we need not go so far. What is that monument in Greenwood? It is to the doctors who fell in the southern epidemics. Why go? Were there not enough sick to be attended in these northern latitudes? Oh, yes; but the doctor puts a few medical books in his valise, and some vials of medicine, and leaves his patients here in the hands of other physicians, and takes the rail-train. Before he gets to the infected regions he passes crowded rail-trains, regular and extra, taking the flying and affrighted populations. He arrives in a city over which a great horror is brooding. He goes from couch to couch, feeling of pulse and studying symptoms, and prescribing day after day, night after night, until a fellow physician says: "Doctor, you had better go home and rest; you look miserable." But he can not rest while so many are suffering. On and on, until some morning finds him in a delirium, in which he talks of home, and then rises and says he must go and look after those patients. He is told to lie down; but he fights his attendants until he falls back, and is weaker and weaker, and dies for people with whom he had no kinship, and far away from his own family, and is hastily put away in a stranger's tomb, and only the fifth part of a newspaper line tells us of his sacrifice—his name just mentioned among five. Yet he has touched the furthest height of sublimity in that three weeks of humanitarian service. He goes straight as an arrow to the bosom of Him who said: "I was sick and ye visited Me." Life for life. Blood for blood. Substitution!

Some of our modern theologians who want to give God lessons about the best way to save the world tell us they do not want any blood in their redemption. They want to take His horse by the bit and hurl him back on his haunches and tell this rider from Bozrah to go around some other way. Look out, lest ye fall under the flying hoof of His horse; lest ye go down under the sword of this Conqueror from Bozrah. What meant the blood of the pigeons in the old dispensation? the blood of the Bullock? the blood of the heifer? of the lamb? It meant to prophesy the cleansing blood of this Conqueror who came from Bozrah, "traveling in the greatness of His strength." I catch a handful of the red torrent that rushes out from the heart of the Lord, and now I throw it over this audience, hoping that one drop of its cleansing power may come upon your soul. O Jesus! in that crimson tide wash our souls! We accept Thy sacrifice! Conqueror of Bozrah, have mercy upon us! We throw our garments in the way! We fall into line! Ride on, Jesus, ride on! "Traveling, traveling in the greatness of Thy strength."

But after awhile, the returning Conqueror will reach the gate, and all the armies of the saved will be with Him. I hope you will be there, and I will be there. As we go through the gate and around about the throne for the review, "a great multitude that no man can number"—all Heaven can tell without asking, right away, which one is Jesus, not only because of the brightness of His face, but because, while the other inhabitants in glory are robed in white—saints in white, cherubim in white, seraphim in white—His robes shall be scarlet, even the dyed garments of Bozrah. I catch a glimpse of that triumphant joy, but the gates open and shut so quickly I can hear only half a sentence, and it is this: "Unto Him who hath washed us in His blood!"

—The seeming shipwrecks we meet with in the voyage of life often prove the very things which best speed our course to the haven where we would be.

WOULD END STRIKES.

Lawyers Say That Would Be the Effect of Judge Jenkins' Rule.

Effort to Secure a Modification of His Northern Pacific Order—Its Continuance Would Place Labor in an Attitude of Slavery.

IMPORTANT LEGAL FIGHT.

MILWAUKEE, March 5.—Capital and labor met face to face in Judge Jenkins' court here Friday and began what promises to be a battle over a principle that is of national importance. It was a bold stand that capital, represented by the attorneys of the Northern Pacific railroad, took—the position that a judge could by writ compel men to refrain from quitting the service of an employer. In opposition to this the attorney for the United Organization of Railway Employees took the ground that it was the right of every man to quit the service of any other man, to work when he pleased and to rest when he pleased. Involved between these two widely divergent lines was the question of the right of labor to organize, to act in unison or to in any way combine to advance its interests.

The arguments Friday were upon the petition to Judge Jenkins to have him modify his famous strike order wherein he enjoined the employees of the Northern Pacific railway from quitting the service of the road, and to combat this the receivers were represented by a full array of counsel, with ex-United States Senator John C. Spooner at their head. The labor organizations were also well prepared for the struggle, having Attorney T. W. Harper, of Terre Haute, Ind., and Quarles, Spence & Quarles, of this city. The courtroom was crowded all day.

Simply Wanted Better Wages.

Attorney Harper began the arguments for the plaintiff. He discussed the original and supplemental petitions of the Northern Pacific receivers, which averred that the Northern Pacific employees were all members of the eight great railroad organizations and asked for an injunction restraining the chiefs of these orders from advising or ordering the men to strike, without which order or advice they would not strike.

He went on to say that there was not a single allegation that if every man on the road quit work others could not be found to take their places. The petition did not aver that the men would quit for the purpose of crippling the road; it simply alleged that if they did quit it would cripple the road was an incident to, not the end of, their quitting. The end was simply to get higher wages elsewhere. Mr. Harper said that the men had the right to sell their services to the highest bidder.

Judge Interrupts the Attorney.

"Who disputes that?" interrupted Judge Jenkins, somewhat petulantly. "This order, as I understand it," retorted Mr. Harper, somewhat savagely. "If it does not then I am about through. It not only enjoins them from quitting to receive higher wages elsewhere; it enjoins them from even talking about quitting."

The attorney followed in this vein, and said the liberties of the people must be carefully guarded and the men had a perfect right to work when they pleased and loaf when they pleased.

After some further talk Mr. Harper was suddenly interrupted by the court demanding what a strike was, anyway, and there was a lively spat between the judge and the lawyer.

"Before I get through," roared the lawyer, "I will show you a special act of congress giving the men the very rights you have enjoined them from exercising."

The judge seemed disposed to argue with the attorney, and said that one cause of the misunderstanding between the parties in the case was a misapprehension of what a strike really was.

Mr. Harper read the act of congress providing for the establishment of national labor unions, which declared that the men had the right to combine to regulate wages, reduce the hours of labor or improve their condition in any manner. What they could not do was to institute a boycott or keep other men from working, and the men did not ask to have those restrictions removed. He stated to the court that the chiefs who had been restrained could not order a strike. All they could do was to consent to a strike after two-thirds of the men on a road had voted to strike, and it was their special duty to see that two-thirds of the men had voted to strike before they gave their consent.

Calls It Involuntary Servitude.

He then referred to the amendment to the constitution, which declares that there shall not be slavery nor involuntary servitude in the United States except as punishment for crime. Here there had been no crime, and if there had been the men should have been tried and convicted before they were compelled to work. It was a clear case of involuntary servitude. The men were not working because they wanted to or out of love for the receivers, but under the mandate of the court.

Mr. Quarles' Argument.

Charles Quarles, of this city, followed Mr. Harper. He had not got fairly started before Judge Jenkins interrupted with the remark: "Will you please point out the clause which prohibits the chiefs from conferring with the men.

Mr. Quarles read the clause in reference to ordering or advising a strike. "What is a strike?" asked the court sharply.

"It is a cessation of work by a concerted action for the purpose of securing an advantage to the party ceasing work," replied the lawyer.

Mr. Quarles continued on the line that the men had a perfect right to combine and to quit work if necessary. He had not got very far when the court interrupted him with the question: "But look here, Mr. Quarles, is it not a fact that they simply quit to enforce their demand?"

"Yes, it may be, and what the court wants to know evidently is whether they have the right to use this lever. As I said before, I claim they have the right to use the lever of inconvenience to the receivers. But your injunction forbids them to quit under any circumstances."

"They can quit to-morrow and go to Texas if they will," retorted the judge, a little excitedly. "But they don't want to do that. Their officers may advise them, too."

"But, your honor, they can't go unless each man puts as good a man in his place as he is himself, because your injunction forbids them from in any manner embarrassing the receivers in the operation of the road. If the object of the strike is to gain an advantage it is legal; if the object is to do injury, it is malicious. In either case no injunction is necessary, as the law punishes malicious trespass."

Definition of a Strike.

At the opening of the afternoon session Attorney Quarles read a definition of a strike furnished by Grand Chief Clarke, of the order of Railway Conductors. It was as follows:

"A strike is a concerted cessation of or refusal to work until or unless certain conditions which obtain or are incident to the terms of employment are changed. The employee declines to longer work, knowing full well that the employer may immediately employ another to fill his place, also knowing that he may and may not be reemployed or returned to service. The employer has the option of acceding to the demand and returning the old employees to service, of employing new men or of forcing conditions under which the old men are glad to return to service under the old conditions."

Following this up Mr. Quarles said that a strike was merely a combination to secure better wages or to protest against any unjust reduction. In this case the Northern Pacific employees had done no unlawful act and the only thing they were suspected of being about to do when the injunction was issued was to get the highest wages possible, a perfectly lawful proceeding, provided they did not violate any law.

The Other Side.

Col. John H. McNaught opened the argument for the receivers. He began by making the broad statement that the object of the writ issued by the court was not intended to limit the right of the employees to quit. He added that he knew the writ did not prevent the men from quitting at any time they might choose, because he had asked the court to include that clause and the court had refused.

If the order to strike had been issued, said the attorney, great damage would have been done. People along the line of the Northern Pacific would have suffered for the necessities of life by the road being compelled to stop running trains. As it was, the turbulent element was held in check.

Mr. McNaught went on to read the clause in the by-laws of one of the labor unions, wherein it was specified that any man refusing to obey an order of the union leaders would be expelled. Attorney Harper interrupted to say that this did not apply to strikes but to orders relative to a settlement.

Can Prevent Men from Quitting.

Changing his course a little Mr. McNaught argued that the court did have the power to prevent the men quitting, as the road was being operated under his orders.

"The court," shouted the lawyer, has the same power over these men that he has over his clerk."

"The clerk could quit," said Mr. Harper.

"Not if his action in so doing would embarrass the court."

"Humph," ejaculated Harper, "the receivers could quit."

"And throw this great estate into the street," shouted McNaught. "Ruin this great business involving millions of dollars."

"Yes, they can quit any time they see fit. The law can compel no man to serve in a position against his will."

Called Harper an Anarchist.

Here occurred the most dramatic incident of the day. Attorney McNaught suddenly wheeled and facing Attorney Harper he exclaimed in a voice so shrill that it was almost a shriek: "That is anarchy; that is communism. I thought you were a lawyer, pardon me for saying it."

Harper is a man of massive proportions, and he did not move a muscle of his face, but, rising, said: "I repeat that the receivers can quit whenever they see fit. The law can compel no man to serve in a position against his will, and if that be anarchy make the most of it."

Before the adjournment the court said that he desired to hear counsel on the last clause in the injunction which restrained the heads of the various organizations from conferring or ordering a strike. Arguments will be resumed to-day.

As a result of the crusade inaugurated by Mayor Weir, scarlet women of Lincoln, Neb., are leaving for other points.

THREE SHOT DOWN.

Fatal Result of a Political Quarrel in Mississippi.

Rev. Mr. Ratliffe Kills Representative Jackson and a Bystander at Kosciusko—Another Spectator Is Mortally Wounded.

A SOUTHERN TRAGEDY.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 6.—The most sensational tragedy in the history of Mississippi occurred at Kosciusko, the county seat of Attala county, Saturday. S. A. Jackson, a member of the state legislature and one of the most prominent democratic politicians in the state, was shot and instantly killed and Samuel Russell and William Sanders, two innocent bystanders, fatally wounded by Rev. W. P. Ratliffe, also a member of the legislature and one of the leaders of the populist party in Missouri.

The tragedy was the culmination of a political feud of long standing which was brought to a climax by a bitter newspaper controversy. Ratliffe published an editorial in his paper, the Vindicator, reflecting on Jackson's vote in the recent contest in the legislature over the election of a successor to United States Senator Walthall. Jackson replied in a card in another paper, in which he denounced Ratliffe as a liar.

The two men met at the courthouse in Kosciusko Saturday for the first time since the publication of Jackson's article. There was a large crowd on hand attending a bankrupt sale by the sheriff. No one noticed the meeting of the two men until they began scuffling in the courthouse door. Both Ratliffe and Jackson pulled their revolvers and began a terrible duel to the death.

When the smoke of battle cleared away Jackson was found with a bullet hole in his forehead, while his right arm near the shoulder was shattered by a glancing shot aimed at his head. A few feet away lay Samuel Russell and William Sanders, two bystanders, with mortal wounds. Russell was shot through the head and expired in a few minutes. Sanders was shot in the thigh and is expected to die. Ratliffe discharged every chamber of his revolver, and, finding that he had no more ammunition, he coolly stood and watched the writhing of his victims until the sheriff arrested him and took him to jail.

Ratliffe was seen in the jail and asked for a statement, but he refused to talk further than to say he shot Jackson in self-defense. Jackson was a prominent merchant of Kosciusko and was reputed to be a wealthy man. He leaves a wife and several children. Russell and Sanders, the bystanders who were shot, were farmers. The jail is strongly guarded to prevent Ratliffe being lynched by Jackson's friends.

Mr. Ratliffe was leader of the populist party in this section, and represented this county in the legislature. He is a "hardshell" Baptist preacher.

GOT HIS RELEASE.

Ed Williamson, the Famous Shortstop, Dies at Hot Springs.

CHICAGO, March 6.—A telegram from Hot Springs, Ark., on Sunday announced the death of Ed N. Williamson, the famous ex-shortstop of the Chicago baseball club. His death was caused by dropsy. Williamson grew very portly after he stopped playing ball in the fall of 1890. His health, however, was not considered in jeopardy until last December.

Williamson was probably the greatest all-around ball player who ever donned a uniform. In addition to his skill at shortfield Williamson was a good catcher and a first-class pitcher. He played little in the outfield because his skill was in greater demand elsewhere, but he doubtless would have become an unsurpassed outfielder. He was one of the best batters in the profession and was a brilliant base runner, being a clever slider. He was also the undisputed champion long-distance thrower of the profession, and easily won the prize offered for that feat in Cincinnati in the fall of 1890.

He was 37 years of age. He played his first engagement as a professional ball player with the Newcastle (Pa.) team in 1876. Before the close of that season he accepted an engagement with the Alleghenies, of Pennsylvania, a professional team, which, while a member of no organization, was one of the strongest clubs in the country. He remained there over a year and then accepted a place in the team that was being formed to represent Indianapolis in the league in 1878. At the end of the season he left the Indianapolis and joined the Chicago club, with which organization he remained until 1890, at which time, owing to an injury received in Paris while on the famous tour of the world trip, he was compelled to retire. Since then he has been engaged in the saloon business in this city.

HAVE A RIGHT TO QUIT.

Admission That Judge Jenkins' Order Was Too Sweeping.

MILWAUKEE, March 6.—The attorneys for the Northern Pacific receivers admitted Saturday that the injunctive orders of Judge Jenkins might be too sweeping and said they would not object to their modification. This is an important concession to the railroad labor chiefs who are making the fight and who want to know if strikes are to come under the ban of the federal courts.

The arguments on the motion to modify the anti-strike orders by eliminating the portions objectionable to the railroad chiefs was concluded late Saturday afternoon. Judge Jenkins took the matter under advisement and his decision will probably not be announced for a week or two.

ROSEBERY RULES.

Gladstone's Successor Assumes the Reins of Government.

LONDON, March 7.—Rosebery is premier of England de facto. He assumed the duties Monday of the great office vacated by Gladstone, holding a conference with his ministers and paying a visit to the queen. The latter prorogued parliament and gave her assent to the local government bill. This is the situation in brief at the end of this important day, politically, to Britain.

Mr. John Morley has consented to retain his portfolio as chief secretary for Ireland at the urgent request of Lord Rosebery and others of his colleagues.

The Standard makes the following official announcement:

"The earl of Kimberley will assume the foreign portfolio; Rt. Hon. Henry Fowler the Indian portfolio; and Mr. T. E. Ellis, now a lord of the treasury, will become patronage secretary to the treasury, succeeding Mr. Majorbanks, the liberal 'whip.' The appointment of Mr. Fowler, who is now president of the local government board, is a surprise, but is regarded as a good one, as he is well informed upon the financial questions and difficulties of India."

Parliament was prorogued shortly after noon. Queen Victoria, Princess Beatrice and ex-Empress Frederick of Germany arrived in London about noon from Windsor and proceeded to Buckingham palace. The house of lords met at 1:30 p. m. There were many ladies present in the galleries. The royal assent was given to the local government bill. The queen's speech was then read and the house adjourned. The queen's speech was purely formal, only fifteen lines in length. The queen thanked the commons for the supplies granted and concluded with the remark that she anticipated lasting advantages from the laws enacted.

The St. James Gazette gives prominence to the report that a reunion is probable between Lord Rosebery and the liberal unionist leaders.

Interest now seems to center in the attitude of the Parnellite party, as the position of the McCarthyites is said to be settled, they to rely upon the government to give proper attention to Irish legislation in due course of time.

DEADWOOD'S BIG FIRE.

One Life Probably Lost in a Blaze That Caused a Loss of $150,000.

DEADWOOD, S. D., March 7.—Never since the memorable fire of 1879 has this city seen visited with such a blaze as occurred Monday morning. The efforts of the firemen were thwarted by a lack of water in the mains, and the flames, fed by pitch-pine buildings on the north side of Main street, got such a headway that they swept everything before them. It is supposed that one life was lost in a lodging house. This is the only casualty known except that of a fireman named Warner, who fell from a ladder and was badly hurt. Thirty-two buildings in all were destroyed. The lessees were the largest losers, excepting Gib Stone & Co., who owned their buildings and let their insurance run out a short time ago. Many of the buildings destroyed belonged to the Swift Bros., of Wilmington, Del. These will be rebuilt with brick, as the locations are good and will readily command good rents. The loss to the insurance companies foots up $33,500. The total loss of the fire will be fully $150,000.

HAVOC AT RIO.

Yellow Fever's Ravages Among Political Prisoners.

RIO JANEIRO, Brazil, via Galveston, Tex., March 7.—The jails here are full of political prisoners, and yellow fever is working frightful havoc among them. Admiral da Gama's fleet is in a critical condition, being unable to obtain provisions on account of the plague.

Geo. M. Rollins, who volunteered to act as an intermediary between Admiral da Gama and the American merchantmen in the incident which culminated in the United States cruiser Detroit firing upon the insurgent warships Trojono and Guanabara, died Monday of yellow fever. Capt. W. A. Sturgis, of the American warship Santuit, which towed the pirating (Destroyer) from New York to Pernambuco to join President Peixoto's new fleet, also died Monday of the same disease.

SIX HURLED TO DEATH.

Railroad Workers in Germany Tossed High in Air by a Train.

BERLIN, March 7.—While a gang of railway laborers were repairing the track at Charlottenburg they were interrupted by the appearance of a train. They stepped from the track upon which the train was coming and stood upon the track upon which the trains were run in an opposite direction. As the train rushed by the men were enveloped in steam, and did not see a train which was coming on the track they stood on. Before they could realize their danger they were struck and hurled into the air. Six of them were instantly killed and not one of the others escaped injury.
