DEFENDER WINS.

America's Cup Will Stay on This Side of the Water.

SANDY HOOK, Sept. 12.—The second contest between the Valkyrie and Defender on Tuesday was marred by an untoward incident. The jockeying for position at the start was as fine a piece of work as has ever been seen, but, unfortunately, it ended in a foul just as the boats were crossing the line. The Defender stood over toward the Long Island shore, and the Valkyrie pursued her. The Defender gybed and stood for the line at 10:54. Capt. Cranfield swung the Valkyrie around, and he was then between the Defender and the wind. Both shot out baby jib topsails. Defender tried a luffing game, but Cranfield was too quick. He held the windward berth as both boats made for the line. They were almost side by side and Defender was trying to walk through the Britisher's lee. Five seconds before gun fire the boats came together, the Valkyrie's steel boom raking across the Defender's deck and carrying away the topmast backstay of the American boat. The Valkyrie then crossed the line and went on her way. The Defender lost several minutes while things were being straightened out. A protest flag was shown by Defender and answered from the judges' boat. The Defender pluckily went in pursuit of the enemy. The official time of start was:

Valkyrie, 11:00:13; Defender, 11:01:15. The damage caused by the accident prevented the Defender from carrying her jib topsail while the Valkyrie held on to hers. Valkyrie turned first mark at 12:57:43; Defender, 1:01:35.

The second leg was a broad stretch to port. The difference in sails was now more marked, and the Valkyrie drew rapidly away. A half an hour before reaching the second mark the English boat led by half a mile. At 1:40 when Capt. Cranfield started to take in the balloon jib, it dragged in the water and held his boat back somewhat. In a few minutes, however, he had it on board again. The Valkyrie was now quite near the mark, and behind her came the Defender. Coming in for the last 3 miles the American boat picked up considerable lost ground, and, notwithstanding her protest flag, finished gallantly.

The official bulletin read as follows: Valkyrie, 2:55:22; Defender, 2:57:40. Elapsed time—Valkyrie, 3:55:09; Defender, 3:56:25. Corrected time—Valkyrie, 3:55:09; Defender, 3:55:56.

Valkyrie wins, subject to protest, by 17 seconds.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The regatta committee of the New York Yacht club reached a decision late Wednesday afternoon in the Defender protest matter, giving the race to the American boat. Lord Dunraven accepts the decision, although he holds that his boat was crowded by the Defender, and that the accident was unavoidable. He said: "I believe in the ability and honesty of the regatta committee of the New York Yacht club. I believe that no effort has been made to influence their decision. . . . While it is very certain that the America's cup is lost by reason of the Valkyrie's racing showing, it is by no means certain that at some time the cup may not be carried across the Atlantic."

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The America's cup races ended in a fiasco. Lord Dunraven withdrew the Valkyrie immediately after the start and the Defender sailed over the course alone. The America's cup committee notified C. Oliver Iselin that three races and the cup were awarded the gallant Defender, and the crowds afloat and ashore cheered the ship that sustained Uncle Sam's supremacy on the seas, and the skipper and crew that sailed her. For at least another year the international trophy is ours, and in all probability it will be many years before a British yacht again challenges for the cup. The mishap of last Tuesday and the rather remarkable action of Lord Dunraven Thursday will not further the interests of international sport. Americans have complained of not being given fair play when racing in English waters, and both in 1893 and this year extra pains have been taken to prevent his lordship from having cause to complain of unfairness here. In withdrawing he does not charge any special unfairness to his boat, but bases his action upon the interference with both yachts caused by the large excursion fleet. The trouble was not caused Thursday, for the course was clear at the start when the British boat withdrew. The objections raised by the owner of the Valkyrie were made before the boats reached the line, and based upon the conduct of the attendant fleet on Saturday and Tuesday. Lord Dunraven sent the America's cup committee a strongly worded letter complaining about the action of steamboats and tugs, and stating that he was not willing to continue racing the Valkyrie unless a clear course was provided. He added that in his opinion the course should be distant from any large city.

Up to the time for the start for Thursday's race, Lord Dunraven had received no reply to his communication. After his withdrawal from the race, he said it was his intention to start if he received a reply, but none coming to hand he merely went down and crossed the line, to give the other boat a chance to make the race.

TALES OF THE PINERIES. BY HAMLIN GARLAND.

A LYNCHING IN MOSINEE.

(Copyright 1894, by Bachelier, Johnson & Bachelier.)

The Dimblebats were defeated, the Ripupagins were victorious, and Mosinee, like countless other towns that night, was in an uproar of jubilation such as had not been seen since the celebration of the great Dimblebat victory of 188-, after successive defeats for a quarter of a century.

Every saloon yawned like a crater and uttered noises like the mouth of hell. Laughter was loud, and now and then the shrill convulsive whoop of a drunken lumberman rose above the clamor, the trample, the clatter of passing teams and the braying of tin horns.

All the county was in Mosinee. The Ripupagins had assembled for the parade, and the Dimblebats were there to look on and jeer. It was the day after the presidential election. New York had been carried, and that settled it. The parade was hurried forward at once, and preparations for speeches and bonfires went forward simultaneously. Very little business was doing. All trade, all talk was of the election and its results.

Dan Clark, the sheriff (and a Dimblebat), was not depressed. As he sat at supper with his wife, in the county jail, that night, he said, prophetically: "Just you wait, Annie. They're goin' to pass a high tariff bill, and then you'll hear sumthin' drop. The people won't stand it."

Mrs. Clark was a small woman with a round firm face and piercing blue eyes, with little outward indication of the courage she was known to possess. "Are you goin' out again to-night?" she asked.

"Yes, I'm a little afraid of trouble. The town is full of hands from the mills and camps, and the saloons are all open. Why? Want to go down and see the parade?"

"No; but somethin' is going on in there." She nodded her head toward the prison part of the house.

"So? What makes you think so?"

"Well, they've been pretty lively in there—singin' a good deal, and I've caught Jack and Shorty talkin' to each other suspiciously."

"Confound 'em! What do they take on to-night for? Well, I won't be gone long. I'll look in, before going down."

As they ate their supper, the far-off clanging of the prisoners' voices could be heard as they sang in their cells. It was a wild sound, but Mrs. Clark was used to it, and paid attention to it only as one might study the moan of the wind as a sign of the weather. She was almost as renowned as Dan; for once, alone, she had quelled a murderous row, and at the point of a revolver had driven six escaping convicts back into their cells. Like many county jails in the west, the building was divided into dwelling and prison by a heavy wall cutting the building through the middle. A heavy door opened from the hall of the dwelling into a main corridor running at right angles to the wall of the house. This main corridor was in turn separated from the corridor before the cells by a heavy iron grating. There were two stories of cells, and during the day the prisoners had the run of the entire prison proper.

The change from Mrs. Clark's pleasant dining-room, to this prison, was as sudden as it was gruesome. A dim light at noonday, a sepulchral light at night, a cold clammy place at all hours; badly ventilated, having that indefinable, sickening odor which becomes an intolerable horror to the sensitive prisoner; and, worst of all, nothing for the convicts to do. Their quarters were clean, in a way, food abundant enough, but no employment. Modern civilization is slow in finding its way into a county jail and almshouse. In such an atmosphere guilty men (not to mention possible innocent cases), grow sullen, morbid, bitter, even insane, and to crimes. If such prisons were once excusable, they are so no longer.

As Clark rose to go into the jail he could hear the song beginning again. He listened a little, critically.

"They're all right. A little excited, that's all. They hear the noise outside, and it stirs 'em up."

He appeared to be speaking of a den of leopards.

As he opened the door, the song burst through, hollow, reverberating, thrillingly wild:

"Light in the darkness, sailor,
Day is at hand!"

These were the words, but the singers managed to give them the force and abandon of a robber's gloze in a resounding cove. Each man stood at the door of his cell, his face to the little grated window; thus each cell was a voice, and the iron walls vibrated like a violin.

As the door opened, some one gave a piercing whistle and instantly all fell silent.

"Hello, boys, what's the row?"

"Our evening hymn, Dan," said a voice from the open tier of cells.

"Well, don't say y'r prayers in that same key. Want the latest?"

"Yes, yes. Let's have it," shouted a half-dozen voices.

"The Rips are in it. New York goes—"

Some of the fellows sneered, others doubted. "Is it settled?"

"Well, yes. New York Herald concedes the victory."

"Well, that settles it."

"What's goin' on in town to-night?"

asked one voice eagerly, wistfully.

"Parade," said Dan. "Now no more questions and don't make any more noise than is necessary."

"They're all right," he reported to his wife. "But I'll come back early. Keep your ear to the tube, and if you hear anything suspicious, send Julia down to Jim's."

When he got out into the street he found everybody else there, and the procession was nearly formed. Torches were flying here and there, the bandmaster was bugling the "fall in," and the main street roared with voices, in song, in whoop, and in jest.

The electric lights sputtered, dying almost out at times, to the derisive groans of the crowd. They had but lately been put up, and every evidence of failure was hailed with joy by some, and with dismay by others.

Just behind the band Capt. Frank Willey, the master of ceremonies, had dismounted, and was arranging the boys' brigade, which was to lead.

Willey was a cashier in the bank, and one of the finest men of the town, an almost universal favorite. Handsome, in his slouch hat, gold-braided coat, and his graceful dark red sash, he was a great figure in the eyes of the boys, who held their flaming torches aloft with the gesture of veterans.

The crowd around the band was so thick it forced the passersby into the gutter, and the captain was saying, as the band struck up:

"Spread out, gentlemen. Don't crowd people onto the boys. All ready!"

A figure reeled off the sidewalk, toward the captain, with a revolver in his hand.

"Damn you, you're the man I've been looking for," he said, as he fired.

"Get out o' the way!" yelled the marshal. "We'll take care o' him. What's the matter?"

"He's shot Willey."

A wild clamor of voices burst out together: "I saw him!" "Kill the hellion—! Lynch 'im!"

"Clear the track!" commanded Dan. "I'll take care of him. Marshal, you look after Willey. Clear the way, there!"

He rushed the panting assassin through the crowd—or rather along with the crowd—toward the jail, which was only a short distance away. The prisoner made no resistance, and said nothing. He appeared dazed. As the sheriff got a little in advance, the crowd thinned, and he hurried his prisoner faster. The curious, furious throng was divided; part remained to see what became of the murdered man, the more careless and more youthful ran along beside Dan as they had often followed a circus. Everybody thought the case exaggerated, for few had heard the shot in the tumult.

They followed, however, up to the very door, and there were several voices crying: "Lynch the cowardly son of a dog!"

"Keep your hands off," said Dan, in a significant tone, as he waited for the door to open. "The law 'll look out for this feller. Don't worry."

"The law—yes. Some damn tricky lawyer 'll git him off with ten years, just like the—" The speaker's words were lost in the mutter of assent which rose.

When the door swung close behind them, Dan turned and looked at his prisoner.

"What is it, Dan?" asked Annie. The prisoners now were perfectly silent, hoping to hear about the arrest.

"O, a little row," Dan said, carelessly. "Come in here, young feller."

The man was dressed like a lumberman, in a gay "Mackinaw" jacket, with trousers of the same material, and red stockings of felt which came nearly to his knees. He was a lithe and powerful man, with a sullen face, now that the look of mortal fear was passing from it. He was dazed and breathless, and made no resistance as Dan thrust him into a lower cell.

"What's up, Dan?" asked the convict.

"Some drunks fighting," Dan replied, in a tone that silenced further inquiry, though they knew a drunk would not be brought to the county jail. He tried all the doors of the cells to see that they were secure, then joined his wife.

"I'm going down the street again. They need me. There's five thousand men out there, half of 'em full of whisky, and Joe can't handle 'em alone."

Five hundred men within a minute passed the word down the street: "Frank Willey's shot!"

All order disappeared. The parade broke into a disordered mass, hastening toward the band. The boys' brigade, the center of the mass, illumined with their flaming torches the wash and restless surge of humanity.

From every direction streams of men debouched into the main street like a spring overflow. Women and children lined the sidewalks.

"Who done it?" shouted furious voices.

"Some damn Dimblebat, of course."

"Where is he?"

"Clark run 'im into the jail."

"Where's Willey? Is he livin'?"

"Yes. He's in the drug store."

Then a sort of silence fell on the crowd. They stood in dense groups surrounding some eyewitness of the shooting. From time to time news emanated from the drug store.

"He's bad. They've sent for his wife." Then the talk would go back to the prisoner.

"What in God's heavens any man has against Frank Willey I don't see."

A carriage drove up through the crowd with a white-faced woman in it. The moaning hysterical sobs went to the heart like the thrust of a jagged knife. They stood aside in awe of her grief as she was hurried into the store by two men.

"My God! Just think what's on her!" was the universal comment of the crowd surged against the door.

"Stand back there! Don't crowd—"

There came a piercing shriek that made every man shiver as if an icy blast had blown on his naked heart. Then the word came out and was flung from lip to lip.

But as the carriage disappeared up the street, a crowd of men came out of a saloon, and there arose a strident, overtopping, ferocious voice in a far-reaching howl.

"Every man that's got any sand, feller me."

"Where to?"

"To the jail to hang that—"

Scores of voices replying out off his terrible oaths.

"That's right. The jail. Smash it in!"

"Come on, you cowards!"

Like a mass of logs let loose in a swift current, the "pack" of men began to move down the street toward the jail. As they moved they gathered strength. Each man seeing his neighbor moving moved with less fear. A sort of inhuman joy and elation came into their souls; many of them felt like singing as they marched.

Dan and Annie were standing on the steps of the jail, listening.

"There's no telling what they'll do," he was saying as he heard some of the wild voices. They heard a new sound—a chorus of savage shouts. The trample of feet grew plainer and more rapid, beating the frozen ground and the hollow sidewalk till an ominous roar arose.

"They're comin', Dan." Annie turned her resolute face to her husband.

"They're after him."

"They won't get 'im. I won't open up— Listen to that, will ye?"

ORDER OF THE GARTER. Its Alleged Bathroom Origin a Piece of Legendary Romance.

The origin of the order of the Golden Fleece is, like that of our own garter, shrouded in mystery, says the London Telegraph. Very few modern archaeologists attach any credence to the vulgar tradition, wholly unsupported by any authority, that, at a court ball given by Edward III. a lady, supposed to be the countess of Salisbury, dropped her garter, and the king, taking it up, and observing some of his courtiers to smile, as though they thought he had not obtained this favor merely by accident, exclaimed in a loud voice: "Honi soit qui mal y pense."

There is another opinion which traces the origin of this order, which, according to the learned Selden, "exceeds in majesty, honor and fame all the chivalrous orders of the world," to Richard Coeur de Lion having, upon the occasion of some warlike expedition during his wars in Palestine, chosen a leather-thonged garter as the distinctive mark of his partisans. Yet another theory ascribes the foundation of the order to the fact that Edward, at the battle of Crecy, issued his garter as a signal for battle, which, proving successful, determined him to institute the order in memory of the event.

Both these opinions are to a certain extent feasible, and the first is materially fortified by the well-known historic fact that, when the Crusaders captured St. Jean d'Acre in a nocturnal assault, the knights of the Christian army were ordered to wear a strap of white leather bound round the leg under the left knee in order to distinguish them from the infidels.

Mines of Wood.

A curious source of wealth is reported by the French consul at Mongtze, in upper Tonquin. It lies in wood mines. The wood originally was a pine forest, which the earth swallowed in some cataclysm. Some of the trees are a yard in diameter. They lie in a slanting direction, and in sandy soils which cover them to a depth of about eight yards. As the top branches are well preserved, it is thought the geological convulsion which buried them cannot be of great antiquity. The wood furnished by these timber mines is imperishable, and the Chinese gladly buy it for coffins. Along the coast regions of some parts of New Jersey there are trunks of cypress trees, deeply buried in the sand, the recovery of which forms a valuable industry, the timber being used for making shingles.

Strength of a Brick Arch.

The strength of a brick arch having a span of 13 feet 1 1/2 inches and a rise of 1 foot 11 1/2 inches was recently tested at Beane, France, with a view to determine the suitability of such a construction for a service reservoir now being built there. The bricks measured 11.8x5.1x1.3 inches, and were laid flat, with a joint of cement mortar 0.4-inch thick between them and an 8-10-inch layer of mortar outside. A section 2 feet wide was built on rock abutments and loaded with 820 pounds per square foot, which load was carried without any signs of failure for eighteen hours.

The Lesson He Drew.

"It's no use," she said dejectedly, "I've simply got to suffer."

"What's the matter?"

"Young Mr. Slogo called last night. I endured his society patiently until in self-defense I was forced to remark: 'Really, Mr. Slogo, I'm very much afraid it's getting late.'"

"And what did he do then?"

"He simply smiled and said that women are naturally timid."—Washington Star.

NO BONDS NEEDED. Other Means to Be Adopted to Maintain the Reserve.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The true treasury gold reserve stood at the close of business Monday at $95,248,642, the lowest point it has reached since the last bond issue raised the reserve above the $100,000,000 mark.

New York, Sept. 17.—Crossman & Brothers have engaged $1,000,000 gold at the subtreasury for export Tuesday.

There were indications Monday morning that there would be an increase in the rate for money during the day. If this should prove to be the case and the increased rate be maintained, it was believed the change would have an immediate effect in reducing the rate of foreign exchange.

New York, Sept. 17.—Assistant Treasurer Conrad N. Jordan says in relation to a probable new government loan:

"I have not had any conferences or joined in any discussion about a government bond issue with Mr. Curtis or anyone else, except in an informal and gossip way. A great many well informed financiers, including, I believe, Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, do not consider a new government bond issue desirable, at the present time at all events."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Many offers to supply the treasury with gold in small quantities, from $5,000 to $100,000, have been received, and all the offers considered favorable to the government have been accepted. Several offers have been declined. One of these was from a Louisville (Ky.) bank which desired the gold they offered to be accepted at its face value. Two other offers where the banks wanted the treasury to pay the express charges on the gold and currency, both ways, were also rejected. All offers of gold within the limit of tolerance in exchange for currency forwardable at government contract rates, have been and will continue to be accepted by the treasury as long as this special concession is continued in force. Several offers of "light weight" gold have been declined. These lots of light-weight gold always make their appearance on occasions such as the present, but so far the treasury has not been caught in the trap.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—A few days of calm reflection on the effects of the latest gold leak in the treasury have convinced Secretary Carlisle that there is no reason for alarm. Comments on the situation Monday morning by officials of the treasury were all reassuring in tone and along the line of "no bond issue" and "no extra session of congress."

The present situation is said to differ from the preceding instance where the gold reserve has been reduced and threatened with further depletion, because it occurs with improving times and upon the eve of increased commercial and industrial activity. This of itself is having the effect of reassuring the treasury officials. Said one of them Monday:

"Extensive shipments of gold must necessarily cease with the shipments of crops to Europe and the fact that no improvement in the situation has yet become apparent is due to the tardiness in the movement of the crops both south and west. There are several causes that have contributed to the present condition of affairs which in themselves furnish reason for encouragement. In the first place, the cotton products of the south, believing that the increasing prosperity of the country will have the effect of increasing the prices of their staple, have been holding their crop for better times. Already their hopes are being realized and better prices are being offered than have been obtained for nearly two years. The market shows an upward tendency and still greater advances are hoped for and anticipated. The same is true of the western wheat growers. As a result the exports have been smaller than are usual at this time of the year and the withdrawals of gold from the treasury, which are inevitable while the balance of trade is against the United States, are continuing longer than would be probable under normal conditions."

The treasury receipts are increasing and will come near defraying the current expenditures of the government. The deficit for the present month is smaller than for the preceding months, and with improved commercial conditions the receipts should show continuing improvement. It is, therefore, with little apprehension that the treasury officials anticipate the two months that must intervene before the assembling of the next congress, and it is not believed that either an extra session of congress or an issue of bonds will be needed."

GUNBOATS TO THE SCENE. Penalties Imposed on Leaders in Chinese Riots Will Be Enforced.

FOO CROW, Sept. 17.—In consequence of the attitude of obstruction assumed by the Chinese officials toward the progress of the inquiry into the recent outrages at Ku Cheng and their refusal to carry out the sentences imposed by the examining court upon the ringleaders in the attacks upon the Christian missions at that place, two gunboats have been ordered to ascend the river to demand the enforcement of the penalties imposed. A rebellion has begun in the province of Fo Kien and the local officials, instead of attempting to suppress the rising, have fled. A force of imperial troops are on their way to the scene to try to put down the insurrection.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The Times publishes a dispatch from Shanghai saying that the Chinese regard the inquiry into the massacre of Christians at Ku-cheng as a mockery, and have begun to release the prisoners without consulting the British consul.

Corner Stone Day.

This is what outside papers have to say regarding the big corner stone ceremony to take place at DeKalb, October 1st:

In a business way DeKalb is a "corner." There are two reasons for this. One is, when DeKalb wants anything the whole town catches hold of the rope and pulls and never "rings" until the thing sought for is pulled into town and staked down. The other, the people who live there, and most especially the moneyed men, are DeKalb citizens in every sense of the word. They live, work and plan for DeKalb, and DeKalb is what they make it.

The fact that the citizens of DeKalb have guaranteed $6,000 with which to pay the expenses of the laying of the corner stone of the Northern Illinois Normal School building should also be a guarantee that those who attend that day will be amply repaid—Geneva Republican.

We give below a brief synopsis of what will take place on that day:

The principal address will be delivered by Governor John P. Altgeld. The ceremony will be under the auspices of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Illinois, who will be in session in Chicago and will take a recess for this purpose, coming to DeKalb by a special train, and will be the first ceremony of the kind ever held in the state by the Grand Lodge as a whole.

Addresses will also be made by President John W. Cook, of the Normal University; Orville T. Bright, Superintendent of School of Cook County, in behalf of the Northern Illinois Teachers' Association; Judge A. A. Goodrich of the Board of Trustees; Hon. David Litter, of Springfield, representing the State Senate; Hon. Michael Stoskopf, of Freeport, representing the House of Representatives; Hon. D. J. Carnes, in behalf of DeKalb County. Short addresses will also be made by Senators Cullum, Snyder, Palmer, ex-Governor Fifer, Congressman A. J. Hopkins, Hon. C. Porter Johnson, Hon. F. P. Morris, President Harper, of Chicago University, President Draper, University of Ill., and others.

The grand parade will be formed at 10 o'clock, and will be composed of nights Templar, Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows, Woodmen and other civic societies, National Guard, citizens, etc. The procession will be under the command of E. C. Lott, with fifteen aids, and will be headed by the justly celebrated Pullman Military band with forty men.

The program at the park will be embellished by selections by a chorus of 150 voices, two professional quartettes, the best in the state, and soloists; 50,000 feet of square canvas has been obtained and will be put up on the ground to guard against inclement weather and to provide a place for a grand basket picnic by which method the masses of the people must be fed, as no other arrangements can be made. Numerous field sports, consisting of base ball, foot ball, bicycle races, etc., will occupy the afternoon, and will be free to the public. The display of fireworks arranged for the evening, is along the line of the World's Fair display and will consist of batteries of rockets, large bombs and special pieces and will excel anything of the kind ever before offered out of the large cities. An open air concert will also be a feature of the evening, in which the Pullman band and the quartets will participate.

Arrangements have been made for the round trip on all roads north of the Rock Island, and the Chicago & Northwestern and the Chicago & Great Western will run special trains at short intervals all day.

How Dr. Miles' Nervine Restored One of Kentucky's Business Men to Health.

NO DISEASE has ever presented so many peculiarities as LaGrippe. No disease leaves its victims so debilitated, useless, sleepless, nervous, as LaGrippe.

Mr. D. W. Hilton, state agent of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Kentucky, says: "In 1889 and '90 I had two severe attacks of LaGrippe, the last one attacking my nervous system with such severity that my life was despaired of. I had not slept for more than two months except by the use of narcotics that stupefied me, but gave me no rest. I was only conscious of intense mental weakness, agonizing bodily pain and the fact that I was hourly growing weaker."

When in this condition, I commenced using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. In two days I began to improve and in one month's time I was cured, much to the surprise of all who knew of my condition. I have been in excellent health since and have recommended your remedies to many of my friends."

Yellowstone Park Geysers.

Advices just received at the Northern Pacific offices from W. P. Howe, in charge of the lunch station at the Upper Geyser Basin, state that the geysers are playing better than ever. They are much finer than last year. The giant one of the finest in the park, plays to a height of about 250 feet. Last year its eruptions took place once in about five days and continued for 90 minutes. This year it is playing more frequently. Mr. Howe is regularly noting the temperature of the Geysers another of the large geysers. It is also playing frequently and its temperature at time of playing ranges from 193 to 198 Fahrenheit. For six cents sent to Chas S. Fee, General Passenger Agent Northern Pacific Railroad, St. Paul, Minn. you will receive a fine tourist book that contains a chapter on the park.

$50,000.00 at 6 per cent. Eastern money to loan on approved or farm security. JOHN BROWN, room 16 and 17. Towns block, Elgin.

Electric Peak.

Is the highest mountain around Yellowstone Park. It is 11,153 feet above sea level. As the park tourist leaves the train at Cinnabar, he will see this grand old mountain looming up in the west. After the stage leaves Golden Gate and enters Swan Lake Valley it is seen again to the north. From this place it stands out in fine style. The mountain lies about eight miles northwest from Mammoth Hot Springs, and the Northern boundary of the park runs across it. Send six cents to Chas S. Fee, General Passenger Agent Northern Pacific Railroad, St. Paul, Minn. for a beautiful tourist book.

BIG PROFITS ON SMALL INVESTMENTS.

Returning prosperity will make many rich, but nowhere can they make so much within a short time as by successful speculation in grain, provisions and stock.

10.00 FOR EACH DOLLAR INVESTED Can be made by our SYSTEMATIC PLAN OF SPECULATION.

Originated by us. All successful speculators operate on a regular system. It is a well known fact that there are thousands of men in all parts of the United States, who by systematic trading through Chicago brokers, make large amounts every year, ranging from a few thousand dollars for the man who invests a hundred or two hundred dollars up to $50,000 to $100,000 or more by those who invest a few thousand. It is also a fact that those who make the largest from comparatively small investments on this plan are persons who live away from Chicago and invest through brokers who thoroughly understand systematic trading. Our plan does not risk the whole amount invested on any trade, but covers both sides, so that whether the market rises or falls it brings a steady profit that piles up enormously in alshort time. WRITE FOR CONVINCING PROOFS, also our Manual on successful speculation and our daily Market Report, full of money-making pointers. ALL FREE. Our manual explains margin trading fully. The Second Game of The Kirkland Series Lost by Genoa.

The second game of the Jacob-Stewart series was won by Monroe by a score of 14 to 5. One of the best exhibitions of ball playing ever seen in this section was put up by the Genoa up to the seventh inning, when fate and a case of general "kerflumucks" dropped down onto them with the most chilling result. From superb playing they dropped down to the most complete case of "rattles" ever seen. Up to the fifth inning Monroe couldn't get a man over the rubber. In the third inning with one man out, three men on bases and three balls called on batter, "Kid" Holmes retired the side without a run by superb pitching. Twice was this done, but the unlucky seventh was awful to contemplate. Sager supported Holmes in splendid form. He is improving in his throwing and can play his position thoroughly.

A slim Jim by the name of Still was brought down from Fielding by the Monroes and foisted into the game as umpire. A careful research of Webster and an unusual stretch of the imagination fails to bring to light any evidence that this slim Jim from Fielding could be declared an umpire. What he knows about the national game wouldn't cover a copper, but what he don't know, well, the time nor space at our disposal is sufficient. Not only this, but he was so apparently unjust in his decisions against Genoa. Had an impartial umpire been in the game it would have been different.

Hart, the stocky-built pitcher for the Monroes is deaf and dumb. He was recently released by the Rockford league on account of an overabundance of pitchers. He was all right and needed no "fixing." Although he was a little swift for amateur company our boys touched him up liberally, only seven striking out, while twelve of the Monroes mowed the air.

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rushford, N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know of the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicines referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup; Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the sides and chest, and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. "FIVE PICTURES."

Rev. Dr. Talmage Discourses on Saint Stephen,

And Draws Word Pictures of the Last Hours of the Martyr—A Theme Both Picturesque and Spiritually Inspiring.

The following discourse on "Five Pictures," depicting the last hours of Saint Stephen, is chosen by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage for publication this week. It is based on the text:

Behold I see the heavens opened.—Acts vii., 57.

Stephen had been preaching a rousing sermon, and the people could not stand it. They resolved to do as men sometimes would like to do in this day, if they dared, with some plain preacher of righteousness—kill him. The only way to silence this man was to knock the breath out of him. So they rushed Stephen out of the gates of the city, and with curse, and whoop, and below, they brought him to the cliff, as was the custom when they wanted to take away life by stoning. Having brought him to the edge of the cliff, they pushed him off. After he had fallen they came and looked down, and seeing that he was not yet dead, they began to drop stones upon him, stone after stone. Amid this horrible rain of missiles, Stephen clambered up on his knees and folds his hands, while the blood drips from his temples; and then, looking up, he makes two prayers—one for himself and one for his murderers. "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit," that was for himself. "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge," that was for his murderers. Then, from pain and loss of blood, he swooned away and fell asleep.

I want to show you to-day five pictures. Stephen gazing into Heaven. Stephen looking at Christ. Stephen stoned. Stephen in his dying prayer. Stephen asleep.

First, look at Stephen gazing into Heaven. Before you take a leap you want to know where you are going to land. Before you climb a ladder you want to know to what point the ladder reaches. And it was right that Stephen, within a few moments of Heaven, should be gazing into it. We would all do well to be found in the same posture. There is enough in Heaven to keep us gazing. A man of large wealth may have statuary in the hall, and paintings in the sitting room, and works of art in all parts of the house, but he has the chief pictures in the art gallery, and there hour after hour you walk with catalogue and glass and ever-increasing admiration. Well, Heaven is the gallery where God has gathered the chief treasures of His realm. The whole universe is His palace. In the lower room where we stop there are many adornments; tessellated floor of amethyst, and on the winding cloud-stairs are stretched out canvases on which commingle azure, and purple, and saffron, and gold. But Heaven is the gallery in which the chief glories are gathered. There are the brightest robes. There are the richest crowns. There are the highest exhilarations. St. John says of it: "The kings of the earth shall bring their honor and glory into it." And I see the procession forming, and in the line come all empires, and the stars spring up into an arch for the hosts to march under. They keep step to the sound of earthquake and the pitch of avalanche from the mountains, and the flag they bear is the flame of a consuming world, and all Heaven turns out with harps and trumpets and myriad-voiced acclamations of angelic dominions to welcome them in, and so the kings of the earth bring their honor and glory into it. Do you wonder that good people often stand, like Stephen, looking into Heaven? We have many friends there.

There is not a man so isolated in life but there is some one in Heaven with whom he once shook hands. As a man gets older, the number of his celestial acquaintances very rapidly multiplies. We have not had one glimpse of them since the night we kissed them goodbye, and they went away; but still we stand gazing at Heaven. As when some of our friends go across the sea, we stand on the dock, or on the steam tug, and watch them and after awhile the hulk of the vessel disappears, and there is only a patch of sail on the sky, and soon that is gone, and they are all out of sight, and yet we stand looking in the same direction; so when our friends go away from us into the future world we keep looking down through the Narrows, and gazing and gazing as though we expected that they would come out and stand on some cloud, and give us one glimpse of their blissful and transfigured faces.

While you long to join their companionship, and the years and the days go with such tedium that they break your heart, and the vipers obtain, and sorrow, and bereavement keep gnawing at your vitals, you will stand, like Stephen, gazing into Heaven. You wonder if they have changed since you saw them last. You wonder if they would recognize your face now, so changed has it been with trouble. You wonder if, amid the myriad delights they have, they care as much for you as they used to when they gave you a helping hand and put their shoulder under your burdens. You wonder if they look any older; and sometimes in the evening-tide, when the house is all quiet, you wonder if you should call them by their first name if they would not answer; and perhaps sometimes you do make the experiment, and when no one but God and yourself are there you distinctly call their names, and listen, and sit gazing into Heaven.

Pass on now and see Stephen looking upon Christ. My text says he saw the Son of man at the right hand of God. Just how Christ looked in this world, just how He looks in Heaven, we can not say. The painters of the different ages have tried to imagine the features of Christ, and put them upon canvas; but we will have to wait until with our own eyes we see Him and with our own ears we can hear Him. And yet there is a way of seeing Him and hearing Him now. I have to tell you that unless you see and hear Christ on earth, you will never see or hear Him in Heaven.

Look! There He is! Behold the Lamb of God! Can you not see Him? Then pray to God to take the scales off your eyes. Look that way—try to look that way. His voice comes down to you this day—comes down to the blindest, to the deafest soul, saying: "Look unto me, all ye ends of the earth, and be ye saved, for I am God, and there is none else." Proclamation of universal emancipation for all slaves. Tell me, ye who know most of the world's history, what other king ever asked the abandoned, and the forlorn, and the wretched, and the outcast to come and sit beside him? Oh, wonderful invitation! You can take it to-day, and stand at the head of the darkest alley in all this city, and say: "Come! Clothes for your rags, salve for your sores, a throne for your eternal reigning." A Christ that talks like that, and acts like that, and pardons like that—do you wonder that Stephen stood looking at Him? I hope to spend eternity doing the same thing. I must see Him; I must look upon that face once clouded with my sin, but how radiant with my pardon. I want to hear the voice that pronounced my deliverance. Behold Him, little children, for if you live to three-score years and ten, you will see none so fair. Behold Him, ye aged ones; for He only can shine through the dimness of your failing eyesight. Behold Him, earth. Behold Him, Heaven. What a moment when all the nations of the saved shall gather around Christ! All faces that way. All thrones that way, gazing on Jesus.

His worth if all the nations knew. Sure the whole earth would love Him, too. I pass on now, and look at Stephen stoned. The world has always wanted to get rid of good men. Their very life is an assault upon wickedness. Out with Stephen through the gates of the city. Down with him over the precipices. Let every man come up and drop a stone upon his head. But these men did not so much kill Stephen as they killed themselves. Every stone rebounded upon them. While these murderers were transfixed by the scorn of all good men, Stephen lives in the admiration of all christendom. Stephen stoned, but Stephen alive. So all good men must be pelted. "All who will live godly in Christ Jesus must suffer persecution." It is no eulogy of a man to say that everybody likes him. Show me any one who is doing all his duty to state or church, and I will show you scores of men who utterly abhor him.

If all the men speak well of you it is because you are either a laggard or a dolt. If a steamer makes rapid progress through the waves, the water will boil and foam all around it. Brave soldiers of Jesus Christ will hear the carbines click. When I see a man with voice, and money, and influence all on the right side, and some caricature him, and some sneer at him, and some denounce him, and men who pretend to be actuated by right motives conspire to cripple him, to cast him out, to destroy him, I say: "Stephen stoned."

Pass on now, and see Stephen in his dying prayer. His first thought was not how the stones hurt his head, nor what would become of his body. His first thought was about his spirit. "Lord Jesus receive my spirit." The murderer standing on the trap door, the black cap being drawn over his head before the execution, may grimace about the future, but you and I have no shame in confessing some anxiety about where we are going to come out. You are not all body. There is within you a soul. I see it gleam from your eyes to-day, and I see it irradiating your countenance. Sometimes I am abashed before an audience, not because I come under your physical eyesight, but because I realize the truth that I stand before so many immortal spirits. The probability is that your body will at least find a sepulcher in some of the cemeteries that surround this city. There is no doubt but that your obsequies will be decent and respectful, and you will be able to pillow your head under the maple, or the Norway spruce, or the cypress, or the blossoming fir; but this spirit about which Stephen prayed, what direction will that take? What guide will escort it? What gate will open to receive it? What cloud will be cleft for its pathway. After it has got beyond the light of our sun, will there be torches lighted for it the rest of the way?

I do not care what you do with my body when my soul is gone, or whether you believe in cremation or inhumation. I shall sleep just as well in a wrapping of sackcloth as in satin lined with eagle's down. But my soul—before I close this discourse I will find out where it will land. Thank God for the intimation of my text, that when we die Jesus takes us. That answers all questions for me. What though there were massive bars between here and the city of light. Jesus could remove them. What though there were great Saharas of darkness, Jesus could illumine them. What though I got weary on the way. Christ could lift me on His omnipotent shoulder. What though there were chasms to cross, His hand could transport me. Then let Stephen's prayer be my dying litany: "Lord, Jesus, receive my spirit." It may be in that hour we will be too feeble to say a long prayer. It may be in that hour we will not be able to say the "Lord's Prayer," for it has seven petitions. Perhaps we may be too feeble even to say the infant prayer our mothers taught us, which John Quincy Adams, seventy years of age, said every night when he put his head upon his pillow:

Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep.

We may be too feeble to employ either of these familiar forms; but this prayer of Stephen is so short, is so concise, is so earnest, is so comprehensive, we surely will be able to say that: "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." Oh, if that prayer is answered, how sweet it will be to die! This world is clever enough to us. Perhaps it has treated us a great deal better than we deserved to be treated; but if on the dying pillow they shall break the light of that better world, we shall have no more regret than about leaving a small, dark, damp house for one large, beautiful, and capacious. That dying minister in Philadelphia, some years ago, beautifully depicted it when, in the last moment, he threw up his hands and cried out: "I move into the light!"

Pass on, now, and I will show you one more picture, and that is Stephen asleep. With a pathos of simplicity peculiar to the Scriptures, the text says of Stephen: "He fell asleep." "Oh," you say, "what a place that was to sleep!" A hard rock under him, stones falling down upon him, the blood streaming, the mob howling. What a place it was to sleep! And yet my text takes that symbol of slumber to describe his departure, so sweet was it, so contented was it, so peaceful was it. Stephen had lived a very laborious life. His chief work had been to care for the poor. How many loaves of bread he had distributed, how many bare feet he had sandaled, how many cots of sickness and distress he had blessed with ministries of kindness and love, I do not know; yet from the way he lived, and the way he preached, and the way he died, I know he was a laborious Christian. But that is all over now. He has pressed the cup to the last fainting lip. He has taken the last insult from his enemies. The last stone to whose crushing weight he is susceptible has been hurled. Stephen is dead. The disciples come! They take him up! They wash away the blood from the wounds. They straighten out the bruised limbs. They brush back the tangled hair from the brow, and then they pass around to look upon the calm countenance of him who had lived for the poor and died for the truth. Stephen asleep!

I saw such an one. He fought all his days against poverty and against abuse. They traduced his name. They rattled at the door-knob while he was dying with duns for debts he could not pay; yet the peace of God brooded over his pillow, and while the world faded, Heaven dawned, and the deepening twilight of earth's night was only the opening twilight of Heaven's morn. Not a sigh. Not a tear. Not a struggle. Hush! Stephen asleep.

I have not the faculty as many have to tell the weather. I can never tell by the setting sun whether there will be a drought or not. I can not tell by the blowing of the wind whether it will be fair weather or foul on the morrow. But I can prophesy, and I will prophesy what weather it will be when you, the Christian, come to die. You may have it very rough now. It may be this week one annoyance, the next another annoyance. It may be this year one bereavement the next another bereavement. But at the last Christ will come in and darkness will go out. And though there may be no hand close to your eyes, and no breast on which to rest your dying head, and no candle to lift the night, the odors of God's hanging garden will regale your soul, and at your bedside will halt the chariot of the king. No more rents to pay, no more agony because flour has gone up, no more struggle with "the world, the flesh and the devil;" but peace—long, deep, everlasting peace. Stephen asleep!

Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none can ever wake to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Uninjured by the last of foes.

Asleep in Jesus, far from thee
Thy kindred and their graves may be;
But there is still a blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep.

You have seen enough for one day. No one can successfully examine more than five pictures in a day. Therefore we stop, having seen this cluster of divine Raphaels—Stephen gazing into Heaven; Stephen looking at Christ; Stephen stoned; Stephen in his prayer; Stephen asleep.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT.

Veterans of the Late War Meet in Louisville.

The Blue and the Gray Join Hands—Heroes March the Streets—Watterson's Eloquent Address—Commander in Chief Chosen.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 12.—It is doubtful if this city, famous for fair women and fast horses, ever before entertained as many guests as were here Tuesday. Certain it is the town never before had within its limits so many battle-scarred soldiers. It is conservatively estimated that nearly 200,000 strangers are here, but the majority of them thirty years ago bore arms either for the blue or the gray. But the blue and gray are one to-day, and men who were then at war walk arm in arm as brothers. The bitter hatred of these dark days has vanished.

The hour set for the starting of the naval veterans' parade was 10:30 o'clock. But, as usual, there was some delay, not enough, however, to tire the anxious patriotic thousands who had gathered to see it. When the order to "forward, march" was given, the old-timers moved. There were fully 10,000 men in line. Of course, they were not all veterans, or of the United States navy. But these veterans of the navy were the center of attraction, and as those grizzled and gray old heroes passed through the streets they were greeted by patriotic cheers from the throats of the tens of thousands of citizens on the sidewalks, from the windows and housetops.

The Big Parade.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 13.—Fifty thousand ex-soldiers of the union army marched through the streets of this southern city Wednesday. Before them at the head of the column rode two Kentuckians who enlisted in the confederate service at the outset of hostilities and fought to the last ditch. One bore aloft the stars and stripes, the other a silken banner of virgin white, having in its center a golden dove, and in its mouth an olive branch. This was typified "The Flag of Peace"—the reunion thirty years after of the victors and vanquished. Three hundred thousand people lined the streets and windows and house tops and gave the marching hosts a reception that will be memorable in grand army annals, and remembrances of which will be carried by every participant to his last hours.

These great throngs of spectators were tens of thousands of those that fought on the other side, that even today speak with pride of the fact that they rallied under the stars and bars and wore the gray that was so dear to southern hearts. These were the loudest in their plaudits and the most vociferous in joining in the chorus when the strains of "Rally Round the Flag" and other northern war songs filled the air and proudly the great unarmed army received the plaudits of their one time foemen.

Mounted police first cleared the way. The parade was headed in front of the first division by two distinguished ex-confederates on horseback, Capt. John H. Weller and Capt. William H. Harrison. They did not wear the gray, but were dressed in black Prince Alberts with silk hats and red, white and blue sashes, the same as the members of the citizens' committee. They also wore red, white and blue scarfs and rosettes. Capt. Weller carried a very large flag, and the stars and stripes were proudly borne by him. Capt. Harrison carried a very large white banner of peace mounted on a staff like the stars and stripes carried by his confederate comrade.

Henry Watterson Cheered.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 14.—Glad of the opportunity to rest awhile from the pleasures and festivities that have been showered upon them during the week, the official delegates to the twenty-ninth encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic assembled Thursday morning in Music hall, which had been handsomely decorated with national colors and the official flags of the organization. Promptly at 10 o'clock Commander in Chief Lawler called the encampment to order, and State Commander Kelly was presented to extend greetings to the delegates in behalf of the city and the Kentucky grand army department. Ex-Congressman Warner, of Kansas City, responded for the grand army. Then amid a scene of wild enthusiasm, the delegates rising en masse, and cheering and waving of hats, Henry Watterson, whose oration at Pittsburgh last year brought the encampment to Louisville, was escorted to the footlights, and addressed the grand encampment in a speech full of patriotism and good taste. He said:

Part of the Address.

"Except that historic distinctions have long been obliterated here, it might be mentioned that I appear before you as the representative alike of those who wore the blue and of those who wore the gray in that great sectional combat, which, whatever else it did or did not, left no shadow upon American soldiery, no stain upon American manhood. But, in Kentucky, the war ended 30 years ago. Familiar inter-communication between those who fought in it upon opposing sides; marriage and giving in marriage; the rearing of a common progeny; the ministrations of private friendship; the all-subduing influence of home and church and school, of wife and child, have culminated in such a closely-knit web of interests and affections that none of us care to disentangle the threads that compose it, and few of us could do so if we would.

"God Bless the Flag."
"And the flag! God bless the flag! As the heart of McCallum Moore warmed to the tartan, do all hearts warm to the flag! Have you upon your round of sight-seeing missed it hereabouts? Does it make itself on any hand conspicuous by its absence? Can you doubt the loyal sincerity of those who from housetop and rooftop have thrown it to the breeze? Let some sacrilegious hand be raised to haul it down and see! No, no, comrades; the people en masse do not deal in subtleties; they do not stoop to conquer; they may be wrong; they may be perverse; but they never dissemble. These are honest flags with honest hearts behind them. They are the symbols of a nationality as precious to us as to you.

Welcome of the South.

"It is with a kind of exultation that I fling open the gates of this gateway to the south! I bid you welcome in the name of the people whose voice is the voice of God. You came, and we resisted you; you come, and we greet you; for times change and men change with them. You will find here scarcely a sign of the battle, not a reminiscence of its passions. Grim-visaged war has smoothed his wrinkled front, and whichever way you turn on either side, deepening as you advance—across the Chaplin Hills, where Jackson fell; to Stone's river, where Rosy fought—and on to Chattanooga and Chickamauga and over Missionary Ridge, and down by Resaca and Renssaw and Allatoona, where Corse 'held the fort,' as a second time you march to the sea—pausing awhile about Atlanta to look with wonder on a scene risen as by the hand of enchantment—thence returning by way of Franklin and Nashville—you shall encounter, as you pass those moldering heaps, which remind you of your valor and travail, only the magnanimous spirit of dead heroes, with Grant and Sherman and Thomas and McPherson and Logan looking down from the happy stars, as if repeating the words of the master: 'Charity for all, malice toward none.'

"We, too, have our graves, we, too, had our heroes! All, all are comrades now upon the other side, where you and I must shortly join them: blessed, thrice blessed we who have lived to see it fulfilled."

The Business Session.

The hall was then cleared of all non-members of the G. A. R., and after prayer the business session of the encampment began. Commander in Chief

COL. I. N. WALKER.

Lawler, in his annual address, touched on many subjects of interest to the veterans.

Adjutant General's Report.

The report of Adjt. Gen. C. C. Jones showed that the total membership in good standing on July 1 was 357,639. The number of members suspended at the same date was 49,600, figures which he regards as astounding. Nearly 8,000 veterans died during the year. There are 7,245 posts in the country.

St. Paul Wins.

When the encampment reassembled at 2:30 the location of the next encampment was made the special order. The claims of St. Paul were presented by Henry A. Castle and ex-Gov. McGill, those of Denver by Nicholas O'Brien and Gen. John Cook, Jr., and those of Buffalo by F. L. Atkinson, ex-consul to Toronto, and James Graham. The first ballot resulted: St. Paul, 35; Buffalo, 236; Denver, 187; Nashville, 26. The selection of St. Paul was made unanimous.

Indiana Honored.

The election of officers was the next order. For commander in chief Gen. I. N. Walker, of Indianapolis, was nominated by his only competitor, Gen. Thayer, of Nebraska, and chosen unanimously. For senior vice commander in chief Gen. G. H. Hobson, of Greensburg, Ky., and for junior vice commander in chief S. G. Cosgrove, of the state of Washington, were chosen by acclamation.

Veterans at a Barbecue.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 16.—While the Ladies of the Grand Army and the Woman's Relief Corps, as well as the national encampment proper, continued their sessions Friday, there was a special attraction for those who are not delegates in either of these three assemblages. At Wilder park the entire day was devoted to the biggest "old Kentucky barbecue" that was ever spread.

The committee on pensions made a voluminous report in which the order voices its solemn protest against any policy which will impair or diminish the liberal provisions made during the past thirty years for the assistance of veterans of the late war. The report denounces the burdens and restrictions imposed upon pensioners by recent constructions placed upon the laws as unjust and unwise in the extreme. It insists that the law which constitutes a pension once granted a vested right of which the possessor cannot be deprived except by due process of law shall be carried out with the utmost good faith. The newly elected officers were installed and the encampment adjourned sine die.

At the meeting of the new council of administration Friday night Commander-in-Chief Walker announced the appointment of Gen. Irvin Robbins, of Indianapolis, to be adjutant general.

FIERCE FLAMES.

They Attack the British Steamship Iona at Sea.

The Fire Rages for Four Hours Before Being Controlled - Seven Persons Are Burned to Death in the Cabin.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Fire broke out on board the steamer Iona, from Edinburgh to London, Monday. The flames spread with so much rapidity that before aid reached the vessel six of the passengers and the stewardess of the Iona were burned to death. The fire was put out after four hours' struggle.

The fire broke out when the Iona was off Clacton, in the fore part of the vessel. The passengers were aroused, and it was supposed that all had escaped from the burning cabin.

While the crew were busy fighting the flames, soldiers on board assisted in lowering the boats and in supplying passengers with life belts. There was no wind, and the sea was perfectly smooth. There was so much excitement and confusion among the passengers that the captain was unable to restore order.

Suddenly it was discovered that some women and children were missing. The stewardess reentered the burning cabin, it is presumed, to try to rescue those who were missing, and she also perished. The darkness and the volumes of smoke issuing from the burning cabin combined to make a terrible scene.

There are various rumors as to the origin of the fire. Some of the passengers allege that male passengers acted in a cowardly manner, seeking first their own safety instead of assisting the women and children into the boats.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The Daily News publishes a dispatch from Berlin saying that an unconfirmed rumor has reached that city that a North German Lloyd steamer has foundered and that 150 persons were drowned.

ARMY OF THE TENNESSEE. Twenty-Seventh Annual Reunion Is Held in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 17.—The large lecture-room of the Grand hotel was crowded to the doors Monday morning with distinguished men who wore the button of the Tennessee, when Gen. G. M. Dodge, of Iowa, called to order the twenty-seventh annual reunion of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee.

Over 100 officers of high rank were registered. In the afternoon the distinguished visitors attended a reception at Fort Thomas, in Kentucky, tendered by Commandant Cochran and other army officers.

Gov. McKinley delivered an eloquent welcome Monday evening for the state of Ohio. Ex-Congressman John A. Caldwell, mayor of Cincinnati, spoke the welcome for the Queen city.

Col. Grant's address was unusually interesting. It outlined Gen. Grant's plan of campaign for closing the war and described the order in which Gen. Grant would have narrated the story in the second volume of his memoirs had his life been spared.

All the speakers at the meeting were applauded. Gov. McKinley coming in for a very large share. Col. Fred Grant met with an ovation when introduced, the applause continuing a minute or more. He was generously applauded at the close of his address.

ATLANTA IS READY.

Preparations for Opening Her Great Exposition Complete.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 1.—The multitudes whose presence denotes that the opening of the cotton states and international exposition is at hand already fill the streets of Atlanta and every incoming train brings hundreds of travelers.

Inside the grounds of the exposition the buildings are receiving their finishing touches and the passageways are obstructed by piles of exhibits which are being rapidly placed in position.

On Wednesday at high noon the people thus assembled will gather in the main auditorium to assist in the opening of the first great event in the southern states since the war which is entirely divested of sectional character and full grown to national proportions.

Several features of the programme for opening day attest this fact. To begin with, the exposition was suggested by men southern to the manor born, yet on Wednesday the opening address will be delivered by Judge Emory Jones, of the United States district court, who won his laurels and his office as a republican fighting democratic traditions.

Occupying a prominent place and sandwiched in between prominent men of all sections, with the audience largely white, Prof. Booker T. Washington will hold the attention of the audience and will speak of the hopes, ambitions and accomplishments of the negro race.

Near by will be found one of the largest buildings of the grounds devoted wholly to the exhibition of the work of the negro during the thirty years of freedom. These facts show how far the south of 1895 has moved away from the south of 1865.

A general look over the field just preparatory to its occupation by the thousands of sight-seers who will come in from all parts of the union shows the solid development which, as proved by the exhibits, has been made in those states south of the Mason and Dixon line.

In the inventions, in the arts, everywhere there is evidence of progress and a high state of perfection. It is calculated here that fully 50,000 strangers will witness the turning of the machinery on Wednesday afternoon, when, at the pressing of a button by President Cleveland at Buzzard's Bay, the wheels will revolve and the world will be given notice that the cotton states and international exposition is a thing of life.

There will be a great many special features during the exposition. There have been booked for the month of October visits from the state press associations of thirty states. On Friday next the Grand Army of the Republic, which has been in session in Louisville in such large numbers, will, after stopping at Chickamauga, continue on its way here and visit the exposition, where it will be greeted by the confederate veterans.

Friday has been designated as gray and blue day. On October 23 President Cleveland has promised to be present, and on that occasion it is estimated that not less than 200,000 persons will crowd into Atlanta.

One of the great features of the entertainment department of the exposition, which was supposed to have fallen through, has been revived in that the bull fights are now certain to take place. It will be recollected that the societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals made strong objection, when the project was first broached and William Hosea Ballou had much to say in the New York press of the atrocity of bull fights.

In answer to these criticisms it was decided by the exposition board that the bull-fight feature should be abandoned. Monday, however, President Porteus, who is at the head of the company having the concession for the Mexican village and of the bull fights, arrived and is putting everything in shape.

The arena where the bull fights were scheduled to take place is completed and the bulls are now on the way to Atlanta.

STRUCK BY A TRAIN. Five Lives Lost at a Railway Crossing in Virginia.

LYNCHBURG, Va., Sept. 17.—Train No. 35, fast mail, from Washington to Atlanta, ran into a wagon containing six persons at Lawyers, a station 12 miles south of this city, Monday evening. It is said that five of the persons were killed, and it is likely the other one will die. This train does not stop at Lawyers, and was probably going at full speed.

Particulars of the wreck thus far obtained are very meager. A man was killed who is supposed to have been Joseph Callahan, living near Rustburg, Campbell county. Two women and two children were in the vehicle he was driving. All were killed, as was also the horse.

THE SWARMING OF THE BEES.

Napoleon Regained His Empire Twenty Days After Leaving Elba.

At nine o'clock a mighty shout is heard without. "The emperor! The emperor!" The palace echoes the cry, as across the bridge of the palace and along the Seine embankment in through the Tuileries gate, thronged about by a clamorous crowd, and surrounded by his soldiers and his generals, Napoleon enters the courtyard.

Paris is wild with joy. The veterans fling themselves upon the emperor's carriage. They seize him in their arms. They drag him out, and, bearing him on their shoulders, they rush with him through the doorway even to the foot of the great staircase.

The palace rocks with the shouts of welcome. The crowd bearing the emperor, and the throng pouring down the staircase to greet him, block the way. Progress is impossible. People are everywhere, and Philip, standing at the top of the noble stairway of honor, laughs as he cheers, to see Corporal Peyrolles sitting astride the great silver statue of peace, his chapereau on the end of his cane, his face red with shouting and wet with tears of joy.

At last a passageway is broken through the crowd. Philip and M. de Lavalette back their way aloft to keep the passage open, and so, up the clamoring stairway, along the gallery of Diana, through the blue room and into the emperor's study, amid tears and cheers and shouts, and tossing of hats and waving of handkerchiefs, the emperor comes to his own again.

In twenty days after leaving Elba Napoleon has regained his empire. With but a thousand grenadiers he has conquered thirty millions of people. The swarming of the bees ends in a carnival of joy.—Elbridge S. Brooks, in St. Nicholas.

BLATANT PATRIOTISM.

An American Who Remembered His Country Before Everything Else.

A couple of Englishmen, en route for Rome, were joined by an American, whose blatant patriotism first amused, then bored them. No matter what was admirable, rich or rare, there was always something in America to eclipse it, according to our countryman.

The Britishers determined to teach the Yankee a lesson, and taking advantage of the chronic thirst of their companion, they plied him with all the liquor that he could be induced to absorb, and then proposed a visit to the catacombs. Before they reached their destination they were obliged to guide his errant steps between them, and at length, overcome by drowsiness, the American begged to be left alone to lie down at his ease.

When sounds as of a discharge of musketry issued at regular intervals from the nose of the prostrate patriot, his companions concluded that he was dreaming of the Fourth of July, and would therefore be oblivious of anything at hand. Producing a sheet, purloined from their hotel and until now carefully concealed, they wrapped the sleeper like a mummy in its folds, and then left him to "do" the catacombs on their own account.

Returning an hour later they found him still sleeping. One of them then drew from under his coat a tin fishhorn, and blew upon it a blast that only elicited a grunt and produced a fluttering of the eyelids of the sleeper. A second blast, however, longer and louder, brought him to a sitting posture, with eyes wide open and senses all alert.

A moment of bewilderment, and then he exclaimed, joyously: "Gabriel's trumpet! Resurrection day! First man up! Hurray! America still ahead!"—Harper's Magazine.
