Village Grants E. B. Millard Franchise for Electric Lighting

MUSICIANS DENOUNCE RAG TIME

Mrs. Geo. H. Ide Entertains Several Elderly Ladies—Prain Buys a Dog

The following items were clipped from the Genoa Journal of May 24, 1901, the remarks in parenthesis being our own:

Earle Brown was home from DeKalb Sunday.

Chas. Snow and family have moved into their new home on Genoa street.

E. H. Richardson and W. P. Lloyd have taken out saloon licenses, having decided to pay the $800 license.

H. H. Slater and Andrew Merritt are putting up a brick building at the rear of the Slater store, on Emmett street. (Now Duval & Ave Garage.)

"Lady Lell," Olmstead's mare, made a good showing at Belvidere last week, covering the mile in 2:53.

Will Prain is negotiating for the purchase of a fine bull dog.

George, Carrie and Maggie White went to Shell Rock, Ia., to attend the funeral of a nephew, seventeen years old, who was drowned.

Mrs. Anna Slater was completely surprised Thursday evening by thirty-six lady friends. It was her birthday.

Owing to the lack of rain, many farmers are plowing up land which had been sown to oats and putting in corn.

Last Friday evening the village council granted E. B. Millard a twenty-year franchise for an electric light plant. The village is to have 20 arc lamps at a cost of $900 a year.

Mrs. Hatt Allen-Stonebreaker died on the 18th at her home north of Genoa of tuberculosis.

Phillips sold 1,500,000 bushels of May Corn on the Chicago board of trade, closing his deal in that option with a profit of $625,000.

Federation of musicians in convention at Denver adopted resolution declaring rag time music as "rot" (if rag time was "rot," how rotten is jazz?)

The market: wheat 71c, corn 52c, oats 29c, steers $5.85, hogs $5.75.

FARMERS TO TOUR

Kane County Men to Visit Wisconsin University

The University of Wisconsin, at Madison will be visited by Kane county farmers on their annual automobile excursion under the auspices of the Kane county farm bureau this year.

Several farms and points of interest will be inspected enroute to the bagger state capital.

The college of agriculture at the University of Wisconsin is rated as one of the best in the United States.

Experimental plots and the herds and flocks of the institution will be inspected. The type of farming in the section is similar to that in most of the best regions in Wisconsin.

Present plans are to make the trip June 24, 25 and 26. One day will be spent going, one at the University and the third returning. Members of the farm bureau and members of their families are making plans to join the excursion party.

GENEVA'S ATHLETIC FIELD

A whole city block has been purchased by the Community High school board of education in the Pleasant View addition in Geneva to be utilized as a play ground and athletic field, only one block from State street and two blocks from the car line on Anderson boulevard.

DOES ADVERTISING PAY?

Does advertising in local newspapers pay? The Avery implement people believe it does.

During 1920 the average sales per dealer of their 38 non-advertising dealers were $848.

During the same period the average sales per dealer of 244 advertising dealers were $5,429.

FOR STARVING CHINA

Stamps will be Sold in Genoa—Money Buys Food For Destitute

In a few days a systematic sale of stamps will be made in Genoa. The funds derived from this sale will be used in buying food for the starving millions in China.

And China seems far away. Yet in five great provinces in Northern China—Chili, Shensi, Shansi, Honan and Shantung—5,000,000 persons are destitute and have no hope of food except as America provides money. China, herself, and other countries will take care of millions, but these 5,000,000 according to all official information, remain dependent upon continuous and voluminous relief from Americans.

Failure of rain resulting in severe drought ruined three successive crops. An annual average rainfall of 25 inches dwindled in one year to less than three. From autumn to autumn in 1919 and 1920, in some sections, there was no rain. The result was the same as it would be in any land. The seed planted died.

No American is so poor that he cannot save a life at the lowest rate ever quoted—three cents a day or one dollar a month.

Life's market quotations fluctuate, sometimes in one nation, sometimes in another, but the lower the quotation, the greater the opportunity of humanity—the opportunity of human beings to save human life.

In ten days contributions made in America will have been "translated" into food and be saving a famine victim.

The distance is great and the disaster is tragic—but the solution is simple. Buy a few stamps.

MRS. TOENNIGES DEAD

Wife of DeKalb's Noted Musician Passes Away Monday

Mrs. C. F. Toenniges, wife of Prof. C. E. Toenniges, DeKalb's leading musician, passed away during the early morning hours May 23, at the home of Mrs. Shipman on Augusta avenue, after many months' illness.

Last week she was removed from the apartment on Lincoln Highway to the Shipman home on account of the heat of the rooms and the noise prevalent upon Lincoln Highway.

At the time she was removed, although she was ill, her condition was not considered serious and the family and friends had every hope of her recovery.

The following day she was reported as somewhat improved, and her passing comes as a shock to the relatives and the family's many friends.

JUNIORS ENTERTAIN

Seniors, Faculty and Board Guests at Home of Eunice Berkley

The Juniors of the Genoa Township high school were hosts at the home of Eunice Berkley last Friday evening, when they entertained the seniors, faculty, members of the board of education and their wives.

Under direction of Miss Skinner, teacher of domestic science, the junior girls prepared the banquet, while the boys of the same class furnished the ice cream, etc.

Prof. Mackenzie was toastmaster, toasts being given by Evelyn Patterson and Zelma Storm for the juniors and by Floyd Gustavison and Klea Schoonmaker for the seniors.

Mr. Sandall, the president of the board of education gave a short address and Miss Frieda Kohn favored the guests with a piano selection.

KILLED AT BALL GAME

Struck by a foul ball, while watching a game between two pick-up teams at Seneca last Sunday afternoon, Stanley Rivett, 9 years old, was killed instantly. The ball which was batted by Howard Corzell, struck the boy just above the heart. Stanley gasped once, and did not breathe again. He was sitting along the third base line when the accident occurred.

WASLH HONORED

Editor M. F. Walsh of the Harvard Herald has once more been given a distinct honor by being named as one of the delegates to the World Press congress which will convene in Honolulu next October.

CORNER BACK HOME

Dr. C. H. Wilkinson, corner, returned to his home in Waterman Friday evening from the Francis Willard hospital in Chicago where he recently underwent an operation for appendicitis.

SYCAMORE IS OF SAME OPINION

Regarding Maintenance of Road Connecting the Two Cities

NOW UP TO THE COMMISSIONERS

True Republican Voices Sentiment of Residents Generally in Its Columns

In commenting on the resolutions adopted by the Genoa Good Road and Motor Club, the Sycamore True Republican says: The Sycamore-Genoa road carries the most traffic of any unpaved road in DeKalb county, yet the road is in bad condition, which should be remedied at once. The above are some of the points amplified in a preamble and resolutions unanimously adopted at the recent meeting of the directors of the Genoa Good Roads and Motor Club.

The Genoa people state what is needed and how to obtain it. Probably as much work has been done on the Sycamore-Genoa road as on any road in the county. Much of that work has been unwisely done and has been wasted, it is true, but these efforts of over half a century have resulted in good culverts, a high pike well out of danger from surface water, and a well rounded roadway sufficiently wide even for automobile traffic of late years; then the large amount of gravel placed on this road, much of it in the last few years, has made on this good foundation a surface that is fairly hard. And about five years ago this road was smoothed and in excellent condition and a source of pride and pleasure.

But now, notwithstanding all the work and expense of some three generations, the complaint of our Genoa neighbors voiced above is well founded, and it is true "that road is in bad condition all its eight miles for safety and comfortable travel."

The remedy is just where the Genoa good roads people say. It is in maintenance. This expensive road is bad only because the surface is bad. Scarifying, a little resurfacing, some oil, and then the patrol system—a system that means a man with a wheelbarrow, shovel and rake—little puttering touches here and there, the filling of a sag or rut before the water has lain in it and each passing wheel has enlarged it—keeping constantly at it—but none of the work to well care for several miles—this heavy or expensive, and one man able is the patrol system that in spite of the increasingly heavy automobile traffic, would make, at a reasonable expense, the Sycamore-Genoa road, or any road with a good foundation, a pleasure and a blessing to all who travel it.

TO ASK THE FARMER

Questionnaire to be Sent Out Regarding Present Conditions

Farmers of the DeKalb County Farm Bureau and the other 1,600 county farm bureaus in the United States are to be asked within the next few weeks their opinion on sixteen questions of national agricultural legislation. The answers from a million and a half farmers are to be used as a basis for the national agricultural problem of the American Farm Bureau Federation at Washington. The Illinois Agricultural Association will help each Illinois farm bureau to get the opinion of its members. The sixteen questions concern matters of freight rates, farm loans, waterways, farm taxes, farm finance, county roads and other matters of interest to farmers. It is the first time in agricultural history that an attempt has been made to learn the wishes of each individual in an organization comprising as many as a million and a half farmers.

C. F. KEZAR DEAD

Charles F. Kezar, who conducted a meat market in Genoa a quarter century ago, in the building occupied by F. O. Swan, died at his home in Springfield, Oregon, recently. He was born in Guilford, Boone county November 4, 1865.

GENOA LOSES ANOTHER

Clare Team Too Much for Locals in Sunday's Game

The Genoa Nationals were again defeated last Sunday, the Clare team doing the trick. The game was devoid of any brilliant work.

It is announced that there has been some shakeup in the Genoa organization since Sunday which may be for the better.

TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE

Farmer Dragged Under Plow Twenty Rods and Lives

Ashton Gazette: Roland P. Eisenberg had a narrow escape from death Saturday afternoon when he became caught in the plow following his tractor and was dragged a distance of 21 rods before the tractor stopped, having gotten onto soft ground. The accident happened about 3 o'clock in the afternoon and the result of his injuries will be a long period in which he will be unable to attend to farm work.

He was engaged in plowing with his Samson tractor and corn stalks having lodged against the rolling coulter Roland stepped off from the tractor to kick the stalks loose. In stepping upon the drawbar of the tractor his foot slipped and he fell. As the machine was moving, his body lodged under the plow. He was unable to extricate himself, and the tractor kept in its course until it turned onto freshly plowed ground, and the heavy weight of the plow stalled the tractor.

Roland cried for help and his neighbor, Alfred Killmer, who was working in a nearby field responded to his call. Mr. Killmer summoned Mrs. Eisenberg from the house and they set about to get Mr. Eisenberg from underneath the plow. His body was lodged just above the center of the coulter, and it was a miracle that he was not drawn beneath the sharp wheel and his body severed in two.

NORMAL COMMENCEMENT

Two Genoa Boys Will Graduate at DeKalb this Week

One hundred sixteen people will participate in the commencement exercises at the Northern Illinois State Normal school Friday morning at 9:30, at which time the program will be given. The ceremonies will take place in the Normal auditorium.

Rev. W. R. Yard acting as chaplain. Among the graduates are Walter Albertson and Edwin Byers of Genoa and Ethel Hannah of Hampshire formerly of Genoa.

FIGHT AT WOODSTOCK

Charging that numerous illegal voters were allowed to ballot and that mistakes were made in tabulating the actual vote, R. A. Pratt, defeated candidate for mayor of Woodstock, Monday filed a petition contesting the election of Frank J. Green. Green was named mayor over Pratt in one of the most closely contested elections in Woodstock in years. He finished with a majority of one vote.

FOR BOAT JOURNEY

Plans of the Fox River Valley Deep Waterway association are bringing joy to summer resorters in the section north of McHenry.

A channel, 120 miles long for motorboats and sailing skiffs is being dredged northward from McHenry dam through Pistakee and Nippersink bays. Fox, Long, Petite, Bluff, Channel, Marie and Grass lakes and then through the Fox river of Wisconsin to Wilmot, Wis.

Construction work of the McHenry dam has now started.

INDICTED FOR CONSPIRACY

Kane County Grand Jury Indicts Andrews and Maurer Monday

Walter Brennan, Sherman Hazleton, Harry McNeil and Clarence Neal were indicted for conspiracy by the grand jury in Kane county Monday. These are the four men recently arrested for attempting to burglarize Genoa stores several weeks ago. Neal was arrested in Genoa and is now serving a term in the county jail for carrying concealed weapons. The other three and Neal were indicted in Kane county for conspiracy. Brennan has been out for some time on bail. All but Brennan confessed after arrest that they had planned to rob stores in Kirkland and Genoa.

Lawrence Andrews and Stanley Maurer were indicted for burglary and larceny on two counts. Both are now in the Kane county jail awaiting trial. They were arrested several weeks ago by Kane county officials who found stolen property in their possession as they were about to ship a car load of household goods and farm tools to the West.

parents moved to that city, but having resided in Genoa all his school days, he prefers to remember the Genoa High as his alma mater.

Rev. J. E. Robeson will deliver the baccalaureate sermon at the M. E. church on Sunday evening, May 29, when the class will attend in a body. The choir is preparing special music for the occasion.

The commencement exercises will take place at the church on Thursday evening, June 2. J. O. Engleman of Decatur, who has just been elected to the superintendency of the Joliet schools, will deliver the address. Mr. Engleman comes highly recommended as a speaker and educator. His address should be a rare treat.

Members of the class will give three-minute orations, choosing their own theme.

The Class Play

A large and interested audience witnessed the class play "The Myrtles of Dow," at the opera house on Tuesday evening of this week. It was good, in fact so good that one might easily have forgotten that he was witnessing an amateur production. Mrs. Reinken, who so ably directed the play, had assigned the several roles with excellent judgment, bringing out the best that was in each of the characters.

Mrs. Reinken and all who took part in the drama are deserving of unreserved commendation. Congratulations they have received on every hand. Not only did the players do well in their lines; they handled their hands and feet as naturally as veterans of the stage. As a usual thing those appendages are decidedly troublesome for the amateur. The stage setting was beautiful and the costumes were a delight to the eye. The class of 1921 can always look back with justifiable pride to their efforts of Tuesday evening.

The numbers between the acts were also excellent, this feature being one that pleased the audience, there being no irksome long waits between acts.

BIG POWER PLANT

The new power plant of the Public Service company, which is to be built at Waukegan, will, when completed, be one of the largest of the kind in the country. Electricity used in Genoa will come from this plant.

TO HONOR THE SOLDIER DEAD

American Legion Arranges Good Program for Decoration Day

JUDGE SHURTLEFF THE SPEAKER

Burlington Band Will Play—School Children Invited to Bring Flowers

Decoration day, Monday, May 30, will be fittingly observed in Genoa, the American Legion having assumed complete charge of affairs and arranged a good program for the afternoon.

The Legion has been fortunate in securing Judge E. D. Shurtleff of Marengo as the speaker. The Burlington Band will furnish music during the parade and in the program at the cemetery.

All children are urged to meet with the old veterans and Legion on Main street and bring flowers for decoration purposes. Every veteran of any war is invited to participate in the exercises of the afternoon, whether a member of the G. A. R. or American Legion or not.

Parade forms in front of W. W. Cooper's store at 1:30 p. m. The band will lead the way to the cemetery where the graves will be decorated, after which the following program will be rendered:

Invocation—Rev. J. E. Robeson.
Music by Band.
Vocal music—Mixed Quartet.
Lincoln's Gettysburg speech—Mrs. Frank Wallace.
Music by Band.

Duet—Mrs. Myrtle Colton and Mrs. Mabel Baldwin.
Reading—Mrs. Frank Wallace.
Cornet Solo.
Music by Band.

Introduction of speaker—C. D. Schoonmaker.
Address—Judge E. D. Shurtleff.
Star Spangled Banner—Band.
Benediction.

JUDICIAL ELECTION

June Six First Time Women will Vote Unrestricted

Supervisor Stewart has posted notices for the judicial election to be held at all regular polling places in the district from 7 till 5 o'clock on Monday, June 6.

Three judges are to be elected in the district. Judge Cliffe of Sycamore, Judge Irwin of Elgin and Judge Slusser of Wheaton. Because there is no opposition to them and because of the busy season in which the election falls, there will probably be a light vote. Every citizen who possibly can, should make it a point to go to the polls and vote, for the moral effect, if for no other reason.

There will be but one ballot for men and women and both sexes can vote at this election with no restrictions whatever, for the first time in the history of Illinois. Heretofore separate ballots have been necessary but this was changed by a law signed by Gov. Small a few days ago.

EXCAVATION COMPLETED

Now Pouring Concrete for the New High School Building

Excavation for the new township high school building is completed and the contractors are now pouring concrete for the walls. This work will require at least three car loads of cement and as many cars of lumber in building forms. A large force of men is on the job, and with the use of power machinery the walls will be finished in short order.

The local branch of the Tibbits, Cameron Lumber Co., under management of Orrin Merritt, is furnishing most of the material for the entire building, including cement, lumber and brick. This fact is evidence that Genoa dealers are right in prices and can deliver the goods.

How Miserable This Woman Was Until She Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Toomsboro, Ga.—“I suffered terribly with backache and headache all the time, was so weak and nervous I didn't know what to do, and could not do my work. My trouble was deficient and irregular periods. I read in the papers what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others and decided to give it a trial. I got good results from its use so that I am now able to do my work. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to my friends who have troubles similar to mine and you may use these facts as a testimonial.”—Mrs. C. F. PHILLIPS, Toomsboro, Ga.

Weak, nervous women make unhappy homes, their condition irritates both husband and children. It has been said that nine-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous despondency, “the blues,” irritability and backache arise from some displacement or derangement of a woman's system. Mrs. Phillips' letter clearly shows that no other remedy is so successful in overcoming this condition as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

VI. RESCUED.

The reminiscent feeling was now more than ever strong, more insistent. The old saw failed; for once history was retelling a familiar chapter. All that she was apprehending, emotionally or through sensory perception, was mere repetition—all this she had known before.

Precisely as now had Mario carried her down the stairs of the burning tenement. Once more Mario lifted her into a waiting motor-car, shut the door and, as the driver jockeyed a way through the mob, gathered her tenderly into his arms.

Or was it Leonora to whom these things had one time happened and now were happening again?

Was this too a dream? Without one regret she resigned herself to the dominion of dream; and ability to discriminate between illusion and actuality lapsed into unalloyed abeyance. So with sense of personal

Her regard reverted to the living room. She thought it delightful in every detail of its unpretentious luxury. Riches alone could never have created it. The wood fire ready laid in the fieldstone fireplace would presently be grateful; already there was a hint of chill in the aromatic, rare air of the hills.

She moved aimlessly to the middle of the room and paused again. A long breath sighed on her lips. As she turned uneasily toward the veranda a duplication of the gesture made her aware of a mirror on the wall opposite. She inspected herself gravely.

She had waked up without a shadow of doubt upon her understanding; she recalled without a break every link in the chain of events which had brought her to this place; she was acutely conscious of her anomalous position in this household, profoundly disturbed.

A remote droning noise crept into the stillness of the evening so gradually that she noted it without any astonishment; but when, gaining in volume, it became recognizable as the sustained growl of a motorcar rapidly climbing the mountain road, she began to tremble.

The car swept swiftly across the far side of the clearing, swung into the drive that led to the garage and disappeared. The throbbing of its motor was stilled. Impatient footsteps sounded on the gravel walk.

Her body was vibrating now like a reed. Almost the impulse was more strong than her will, to fly back to her bedchamber, lock herself in, refuse to see or speak to him.

How could she face him and tell him the truth? How break his heart? And not his alone.

Running up the steps to the veranda he saw her waiting in the shadows and cried out to her in the name of Leonora. She could not reply. Mental rehearsal of what her attitude at this meeting should be proved valueless. She had meant to guard against his arms with a respect, an authority, which must command respect and win her time enough to tell him; she was captive and powerless before she could lift a hand or articulate one syllable of protest. The passion of his kisses, the murmuring of his voice were overpowering. The quickened tumult of her pulses was like the storming of a strong surf. She loved him.

Stunned, breathless, quivering, humiliated, she found that she had somehow contrived to put him from her. The pained perplexity in his gaze cut like a knife. She turned aside, that she might not see.

“Forgive me,” he begged. “I have been inconsiderate, thoughtless, in the joy of having you restored to me! Forgive—”

“There is nothing to forgive,” she interrupted. “You've done nothing that wasn't right and natural. Only . . . Oh! How can I make you understand?”

He gave a helpless gesture. “Tell me what you wish me to understand. I will try. I love you so . . .”

Touched, she sought to smile kindly through her tears. “Give me a moment,” she pleaded tremulous hands busy with the disarray of her hair—“give me a little time, Mario.”

The mellow booming of a tubular gong sounded. Mario turned impatiently. Bowing and smiling, the Japanese boy stood in the entrance to the dining room.

“Dinner is served.”

By a resolute effort she succeeded in composing face and manner. Mario maintained an inquiring attitude, differential, puzzled, hurt. Somehow she mustered a smile that only mystified him the more.

“Do something for me, Mario . . .”
“You know you need not ask.”
“Let us have dinner. I think—I'm sure I'm hungry. And let us not talk during dinner; let's pretend nothing has happened. Afterward, I promise you . . .”

“But it shall be as you wish—of course!”

CHAPTER TEN

The Day of Reckoning.

I. THE BUNGALOW.

On entering the living room she heard a clock strike. Immediately she paused, counting.

Eight chimes died singing in the scented evening hush; but she did not stir, her pose remained that of one arrested sharply in some act of charming stealth, so delicately poised in apprehensiveness she seemed scarcely to touch the floor. The room was quiet, dim with shadows, but for herself unattended.

A slight sound drew her attention. She discovered a dining room beyond the living room. Soft-footed, a Japanese boy in white linen appeared, carrying two candelabra of three branches each, and vanished after placing them upon the round dining table, where upon rich light fell softly on lustrous napery, burnished silver, an iridescent bowl of cut glass filled with burning roses.

She remarked that there were places set for two.

She said, with difficulty, in a low voice, looking down at her plate: “I am glad to be with you, Mario.”

It was true: in spite of everything, she was strangely glad. But it was wrong of her to say so. . . .

“I myself slept till noon,” he volunteered. “Then I waited and waited for you to wake up, but you were sleeping like a child, you never stirred; one had not the heart to disturb you. Then when it got so late, and I could no longer put off going down into the valley, I gave Martha instructions not to leave your bedside till I returned or you awakened.”

She wondered: “Why?”

“I was afraid, I dared not leave anything to chance. One could not foretell in what condition you would wake up. If anything had happened . . .”

“I think another disappearance would have driven me insane!”
She avoided his eyes, and asked, rather mechanically, more to say something than out of desire to know: “Why did you have to go down into the valley?”

“To telegraph New York and call off the detectives I had employed to look for you. Also to tell the villagers you were safely found, and thank them. They were most kind, those good people; fully half a hundred of them stayed up all night with me, while we scoured the woods; and though many had not had a wink of sleep, they were still searching yesterday afternoon when I despaired and determined to seek you in New York.”

Thus reminded of the sad futility of that search, she was too deeply disturbed to wonder why he could not have telephoned to the village. . . .

The Japanese served their coffee in the living room. It was now quite dark, and the air though sweet was keen. The fire was burning but the windows and door were not closed; and the faintly acrid smell of wood smoke blended pleasantly with the pungent perfume of the pines.

Mario placed an easy chair for Priscilla, made it easier with cushions for her back and head, offered her cigarettes—and showed surprise when she refused them—lighted one for himself and threw it away half smoked, and knelt down beside her chair, resting his elbows on his arm and capturing one of her hands.

She tried to steel herself against the weakness of the flesh, the protests of her affections, the enervation of her sympathies, reminding herself she must be cruel to be kind. But it was terribly hard to hurt him as she must. It wasn't as if she didn't care . . . The mere contact of his hand thrilled her heart to a faster tempo, quickening breath and pulses, affected all her being with tremors of fear and gladness, made her infirm and weak of purpose. She had for him only a pathetic apology for a smile, a forlorn little shake of her head.

A deeper concern shadowed his face. He asked tenderly: “What is it, dear? You must tell me . . .”

“It's going to be so hard,” she said reluctantly, “to say what I must. I can't think how to begin, except in the bluntest way.”

“Do not be afraid. Tell me frankly how I have failed you, in what respect I have fallen short—”

“But you haven't!”

“Then what was I to do to make you run away from me?”

“I'm sure you could have done nothing—”

“Still, you ran away!”

“No—I didn't.”

He remonstrated sharply; “Leonora!”

“I'm not,” she declared desperately—“I'm not Leonora.”

“What?”

“I am not your wife, Mario.”

“One moment . . .” Clouded with doubt, his eyes challenged the candor of hers, but found it flawless. At a loss—“What are you saying?” he muttered.

“The truth,” she affirmed. “Oh, I'm sorry, Mario, so sorry—”

“But I don't understand . . .”

She sat up, closing his hand within her own.

“I'm so sorry,” she iterated—“but I must tell you, I can't avoid telling you: Leonora is dead.”

He disengaged his hand and stood up sharply.

“Leonora!”

“Is dead. She was killed day before yesterday—”

“Are you out of your mind? Or am I?”

I see you sitting there, telling me this atrocious thing, that you are dead!”

“Not I, but Leonora—”

“But you are Leonora!”

“I tried, to begin with, to tell you I wasn't.”

“But I see you—I tell you, I see you—”

“It's true, I believe, I look like Leonora—”

“Look like her?” He laughed shortly. “You are her!”

“But I am not,” she persisted patiently. “Please, Mario, please listen to me before you question my sanity.”

He was briefly silent, in a dazed stare, then made a sign of impatient deference to her wish. “Go on,” he bade her thickly.

With what calm she could, but with resolution, she sought to win credulity from him by dint of repetition: “Leonora is dead. While you were away, day before yesterday, Carnehan found her here and killed her.”

“How could that be, and the servants not know?”

“I only tell you what I know. I don't imagine Carnehan came to the house, I think he must have waylaid her, or met her by some accident, in the woods. I think Leonora was restless and lonely, unhappy without you, and wandered away during the afternoon, perhaps walked down the road toward evening, to meet you. If you remember, you promised to be home before dinner. And that gave Carnehan his opportunity for revenge. He trapped her and killed her—I don't know how—threw her body into a lake—”

“Enough!” Mario silenced her savagely. “It is not your sanity I question, but your good faith. How can you lie to me so abominably?”

“Ah, Mario!” she uttered sadly—“if I could only make you believe!”

“But why should you wish to? My God! what have I done, how injured you, that you should wish to break my heart!”

“I would rather mine broke, if it would save you this suffering.”

He rounded on her in a fury which subsided as he perceived anew the unimpeachable honesty of her countenance.

“Your voice is sincere,” he protested in amazement, “your look is kind. . . . But how can I accept the testimony of my senses when I hear you lie? You do not love me.”

She was mute in fear lest she betray herself if she attempted to answer that.

“You no longer love me,” he insisted, nodding morosely. “You thought you did for a time, no doubt; but it was not so, you had deceived yourself, you wearied of my love. . . . Then, at the first opportunity, you ran away from me, you ran back to lose yourself from me in that life from which—in my vanity, I thought—my love had saved you.”

Melancholy yielded to a surge of indignation. “And when I find you there, in that vile den, in peril of your life, and rescue you and bring you back, you thank me by making up this prepostorous tale, with your own tongue you tell me to my face you are dead, you attempt to deny the fact of your own existence! What am I to believe, then? That you are a vision, a creature of my imagination, a ghost? Ah, have done! A child would not attempt a deception so transparent.”

“But I See You—With My Own Eyes— You Sitting There, Telling Me This Atrocious Thing That You Are Dead.”

“Oh, I am sorry, so sorry, Mario!”

The artlessness of that reiterated cry brought him back.

“If that is so, if you wish me to believe you are sorry—then let us have an end of this madness: admit you are my wife.”

She could only shake her head. . . . He brooded with a fixed and vacant gaze.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.
An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.
However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

THREW FLOWERS AND GEMS

London Crowd Benefited by Woman's Enthusiasm Over the Ending of the Great War.

During the peace rejoicings one night in London several guests standing at the upper windows of a West End restaurant began to throw roses down to the crowds packed in the street below. A woman in evening dress, after throwing out numbers of roses, took a bracelet from her arm and tossed it to the people, following this with a ring from her finger. Then, after throwing more roses, she took the ornaments from her hair and threw these also into the struggling mass of people below.

An elderly man at an adjoining window threw out several spoons and forks, and then, finding nothing else at hand, threw an apple which was deftly caught and promptly returned, striking the window close by, but, fortunately, without breaking the glass.

The women then began to throw out treasury notes, wadding them into small balls and flinging them one by one to the excited crowd. After getting rid of seven or eight notes, she expressively spread out her hands to indicate that she had nothing more, and was loudly cheered.

DOG CAUGHT HIS OWN FISH

Sportsman Given Authority for Remarkable Story That Appears in a London Periodical.

The London “zoo” fishing cat which so steadfastly refuses to show itself—except at meal times—has a rival in the fishing dog, says London Answers. A sportsman was on the west coast of Madagascar, when he observed a dog come out of the thick bush in front of him and trot briskly down to the edge of the sea. When it had got a little way into the water it stopped and remained perfectly still, as a heron might when fishing at home. Its glance was never once taken off the water.

Suddenly it thrust its head into an oncoming wave, and reappeared with a large fish in its mouth. Quickly taking its capture ashore it squatted down and made a hearty meal. After a while the fishing operation was repeated, and it was evident to the witness of the incident that the dog made a regular practice of it.

TALK ON TOBACCO

Writer Discourses Amusedly Concerning "Filthy Weed."

One Reason Why Cigarette is Seldom Seen in Old Man's Mouth—As to Women Smokers.

Tobacco is a weed grown in a warm climate and consigned to a warmer climate by persons who have not learned to chew or smoke it. A taste for tobacco is acquired by males during the adolescent, or foolish, period of life, Robert Quillen writes in the Saturday Evening Post. The small boy desires to smoke for the same reason that he desires whiskers and long pants. These things are to him the outward and visible evidence of manhood, and manhood is desirable because it makes an end of restraint. He would be a man, therefore he learns the vices of a man. It is a hard commentary on the nature of mortals that boys covet the vices rather than the virtues of their elders and think of maturity in terms of license.

Every mother knows that noise is evidence of virtue. Quiet children are engaged in mischief. When the boys of a neighborhood are playing together out of doors and neither shout nor laugh attests their innocence one may assume that mischief is afoot. If little Willie comes to the house an hour later very white about the lips and a little uncertain in his gait and confesses a yearning to talk about heaven one may assume that the mischief had to do with a first rendezvous with Lady Nicotine.

The chewing of tobacco is more prevalent in rural districts than in cities. One who chews feels more at ease in wide-open spaces, where it is not difficult to dispose of the by-product. Students of human misery know little of their subject until they have observed a confirmed chewer loaded to capacity and held by convention where no friendly receptacle invites one to lighten cargo.

As a rule tobacco chewers enjoy good health, but one does not know whether their physical well-being is occasioned by the tobacco or by the necessity of remaining out of doors.

Smoking is more nearly universal than chewing. Cigarettes are smoked by boys, by young men and by women. One seldom sees a cigarette in the mouth of an old man. It may be that an old man knows better; or it may be that one who smokes cigarettes doesn't linger here long enough to become old.

A boy may smoke cigarettes without becoming either a bandit or an idiot, but he can't smoke cigarettes and make the track team, nor can he smoke cigarettes and head his class in mathematics. The harm done by cigarettes is frequently overstated. All proselyting is prone to exaggeration.

Until recent years women addicted to cigarettes were divided into two classes—those who had fallen so low that the opinion of the majority did not interest them and those who had climbed so high that the opinion of the majority did not interest them.

Today smoking among women is not confined to a class or condition. Those who wish to smoke do so without apparent loss of caste. Doubtless it is their right. Yet an old-fashioned man finds cause to be thankful that the habit is not general among women who bear children. When I observe a smartly tailored woman drawing solace from a cigarette in the lobby of a great hotel I am not conscious of aversion. But I do not believe that I could rise to equal tolerance if I should observe a sweet-faced woman in gingham darned holes in children's stockings and pausing occasionally for a deep pull at a cigarette.

A pipe is pleasant company for the one who furnishes the draft, but it affords little pleasure to the innocent bystander. As pity prompts us to espouse the cause of one who has been cast out by society, so does our love for a pipe grow as others frown upon it and sniff their displeasure. The erring son holds the greater part of the mother's love; the lost sheep is the most desirable in the flock; the worth of a pipe may be measured by the degree of its disrepute. The pipe smoker may mislay his treasure, but he does not despair of finding it. If his eyes cannot discover it he need but close them and follow his nose. One who has learned to love a pipe can select his own from a dozen of similar forms and age though he be blindfolded. Few mothers would willingly risk title to an infant in a similar test.

More Than Two Sides.

Edwin James, the war correspondent, who had just returned to America and was on a vacation in Virginia, met one of the farmers of that state, who immediately engaged him in a discussion of the League of Nations.

At times the argument grew heated, the warmth abating with the farmer's concluding remark.

"Well, you should know, Mr. James," he said, "there's always three sides to every question—my side, your side and the right side."—Saturday Evening Post.

Human Brain Getting Bigger.

Scientists say that it is a fact that our skulls are getting thinner. This is because our brains are getting bigger. This was borne out by observations made by surgeons who operated on heads during the war.

PLAN THREE GREAT TUNNELS

Projectors Say Burrowings in Rocky Mountains Will Solve Some of America's Greatest Problems.

And what is this latest product of vision's urge?

Tunnels! The greatest tunnels the world has ever known; 17½ miles of them cut through nature's solid masonry under the Rocky mountains; tunnels that will open up vast resources to supply America's vital industrial needs for generations to come; tunnels that will answer the question: "Will we ever run out of gasoline?" by making available ten times as much as has ever been pumped out of the ground.

These new tunnels will open up enough coal to supply the United States for the next hundred years, Harry C. Drum writes in Leslie's. They will spew forth 10,000,000,000 feet of lumber. They will reach enough sulphate of ammonia to fertilize the entire Mississippi valley. They will provide the only short, year-round, unobstructed military road from coast to coast.

Passenger and freight trains will carry their burdens beneath millions of tons of rocks and in shorter time than it was ever before possible to make the transcontinental trip.

This new cut through the eternal hills will give to America untold quantities of gold, silver, copper, lead, iron, gypsum, asphalt, tungsten, zinc and other precious metals and open up a frontier larger in area than the New England states. The opening up of these tunnels will realize an industrial project second in importance only to the Panama canal. And they will advance the state of Colorado from a position of comparative obscurity to one of the most powerful units of the industrial structure of the country.

The greatest of these, the Moffat, is to pierce the divide on the north; the Monarch, over six miles long, to cut the central ridge, and the San Juan the south.

The Moffat tunnel is to be used by both trains and automobiles; the automobile section to be wide enough to accommodate troops for the largest army transports.

Used Bricks for Shingles.

The desire of a house owner to utilize brick in every possible manner led to the adoption of a roof constructed entirely with shingles of this material. The shingles are similar in size and shape to the ordinary variety, with the exception of the thickness, which apparently is in excess of the usual. This is due, no doubt, to the brittleness of the material and the ease with which a thin piece would break. They are made from the usual brick material and are molded to any desired form. Apart from the thickness of the shingles, the roof resembles the ordinary roof.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Trapper Tells How It Feels to Be Trapped.

Bear Hunter Experienced Uncomfortable Night in Snare He Had Prepared for Ferocious Old Grizzly.

"Old Mose" was one of the most ferocious bears in the Rockies. He was a notorious "bad actor," according to Mr. A. L. Corson in the Wide World Magazine.

On one occasion a man named Hancock tried to trap him. In playing the bait inside the trap, Hancock accidentally touched the trigger.

He tried to pry the heavy timbers apart, but found that he could not shift them an inch. From one side of the trap to the other he went, unconsciously imitating the movements Bruin would have made in hunting for a weak point.

The pangs of hunger were now coming on, and night was near. Hancock scraped up some chips and twigs, made a fire and roasted part of the trap that he had brought to bait the trap.

Knowing his savage nature, Hancock withdrew to the other side of the trap as the big form rose up on his hind legs. He could feel the bear's hot breath surging through between the logs upon his face.

The next morning, the neighbors, seeing Hancock's horse in the yard, surmised that the "outlaw of the Rockies" had secured another victim.

Several cattlemen started out in search of Hancock. In the middle of the afternoon they heard shooting, but at first they could see nothing.

Hancock had torn his shirt into strips, making a rope about 20 feet long. He had then tied two stones to a string about a yard long and fastened one end of the line to the middle.

Then he threw the stones out between the cracks of his prison toward the rifle. After two hours of practice he was able to drag the gun within reach.

He then tried desperately to cut his way out by shooting holes through a log about a foot in diameter. Before he got very far his comrades had located the shots and released him.

Had Feared the Worst. It is a sad thing to have to relate, but Mr. Spongedry came home the other night "wet." Not externally, but internally; he had drunk wine or spirits or beer!

With uncertain footsteps he climbed the stairs, with itchy, nervous fingers he unclothed himself, with swimming head he lay down in his bed.

Mrs. Spongedry had, however, heard his anti-cattle tread. Thinking to frighten him, she covered her head with a sheet and approached his bed.

"Who is that?" he asked. "I am a ghost!" came the answer from the sheet.

"Oh, that's all right, then: But you did give me a fright! I thought you were my wife!"—London Tit-Bits.

The Business of Farming

In the business of farming, buying is just as important as raising and selling, and there are three powerful reasons for buying lumber TODAY:

Buy lumber because the price is right. Lumber is back to normal and it is our belief that everything considered, there is nothing to be gained by waiting longer.

Buy lumber to protect your investment. Repairs which have been postponed from previous years can now be made at normal costs. Repairs made when needed often save many times the amount expended.

Buy lumber to bring greater returns from your farm. Lumber is the big item in many improvements which will cut the cost of hired help, reduce waste, give greater storage, or add to the comfort and convenience of the home—and lumber prices are down where they should be.

Bring your building problem to us. We believe that our business can serve your business to your best interests, and our friendly help and counsel are at your disposal, without obligation.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE

Vera Sowers

The girls of the Senior Domestic Science Class closed their work for this year with a practical demonstration of what they had learned. They first served a breakfast at which Evelyn Patterson acted as hostess, and Rhea Saul as host. The guests were Gladys Montgomery, Ruth Austin, Mabel Montgomery and Harriet Doty. On the following Thursday, the girls served a luncheon to Mesdames, MacKenzie, Sandall, Gallagher, Austin, and Miss Austin, with Mabel Montgomery as hostess.

The following Tuesday Mesdames C. D. Schoonmaker, J. L. Paterson, C. Saul and W. Moore were served a dinner with Eunice Berkley as hostess.

On Wednesday evening a 6:30 dinner was served to seven of the members of the school board.

The sewing classes will hold an exhibit Friday afternoon from 2 to 5 p. m. in the church basement. Everyone interested is cordially invited.

Terrifying calamity takes place, school steps blasted to pieces—none hurt.

At last anarchism has reached our peaceful little town.

Tuesday morning, the school authorities on opening the back door of the Genoa Township High School, found the magnificent stone step literally destroyed. An investigation followed shortly, and two suspects have been arrested. They are two of the worst elements of the school, already subject, at their age, to anarchism, the culprits certainly did a good job in a short time. There are two probable solutions for the wrecking of the architecture. First, that it was blown to pieces, second, that the immense, solid iron, sixteen-pound athletic shot was deliberately dropped upon it.

It convicted the two miscreants will have the choice between a long imprisonment or of having the immense cement mixer of Harshman and Son, reconstruct the step.

The step was of magnificent splendor, white and scarcely nicked, it reposed in the sunlight, serving all school children as a "stepping stone" to higher knowledge. And now it is dust.

STARTS HIM ON NEW TACK

Mr. Billtops Reconsiders Subject After Gentle Reminder From His Very Much Better Half.

"Till midnight the young man stays sometimes," said Mr. Billtops, "and as I sit with Mrs. Billtops waiting I wonder if he will ever go. Ten or half past is as late as I think he ought to stay, and I have devised many plans to start him about that hour; but to everything I suggest Mrs. Billtops smilingly says no, and so I sit and fret and fume and get more and more nervous.

"Is this a new custom? I say to Mrs. B., something that has come in with the many new-fangled ways of the present day?"

"Is it a new custom?" says the smiling Mrs. Billtops. "Why, it is a custom as old as time. Don't you remember how late you used to stay when you came calling on me?"

"And really it was quite a shock to me, that reminder; for I will admit that I was myself a frightfully late stayer.

"But did her father ever come in with a large club at about 10:30 and say to me that he thought now was about time for me to go? Never! In fact, he was always very kind to me, as I now gratefully remember; but now here was I getting all wrought up because a young man stayed late in my house.

"Grown older, I had come to have fixed and settled habits, and I like to see the whole household ordered in like manner and keeping regular and early hours." But I was reminded now that youth looks at things from a different point of view; youth takes little note of time; to youth clocks are of no interest.

"So, thinking back, and as I see here the smiling face of the blessed Mrs. Billtops, I wait with a somewhat better grace for the young man to go."

Clay Passed Joke Along.

Henry Clay made a speech in New York one time, and among his hearers was Michael Walsh, afterward a congressman, but at the time an apprentice in a printing office. His fellow workers dared him to shake hands with Clay, whose rooms were directly opposite the shop where Walsh worked. Never taking a dare, the impulsive apprentice ran across the street and joined the line of guests who were passing Clay and shaking his hand. Walsh had not stopped to wash his hands, and the result was that the great orator after shaking hands with the shirt-sleeved young man found his palm sticky with printers' ink.

He looked at the mess for a moment with a grim smile slowly appearing on his face. Without a word of reproach he allowed the printer's boy to go on his way, but he took care that those waiting in line did not see what had happened to him. Many of those assembled wore white kid gloves, and all were dainty and clean of hand. Clay calmly continued to shake hands, and guest after guest departed with daubs of ink on hand and glove. By the time the last one had gone Clay's hand was clean.

Appropriate Name.

There were a husband and wife who had many quarrels. But a woman never is a fair antagonist, because she always weeps during every quarrel in order to win her point.

The other night she brought home—as a bargain at greatly increased prices—a new pale mauve hat, which she proudly exhibited to her husband. He did not like it, and "proceeded to say so.

"Why, it looks queer, even to the dog," he ended. "Look how he's barking at it! He thinks it's a squirrel in a tree!"

"Do you call me a tree?" she cried, and then began to cry. "I shall go home to mother! I suppose you're going to say next that I'm either a larch or an ugly old oak tree!"

"No," he smiled blandly. "I should think a weeping willow would be a more appropriate name."

On to Battle.

In a small town upstate there was not one person who knew how to play the organ at the church. At last a girl who could play just a few and very few hymns at that, came to the town.

One day the preacher asked the organist: "Can you play a wedding march for a wedding tomorrow?" The organist replied: "I am very sorry, but I do not know one note of a wedding march."

The preacher knew that they must have some kind of music for the wedding, so he said: "Play the nearest thing to a wedding march that you know."

As the bride and bridegroom came down the aisle, "Onward Christian Soldiers" was the tune that rolled forth from the organ.—Indianapolis News.

Disappearing Native Race.

Native Hawaiians are facing extinction, and if the present ratio of births and deaths is maintained the remaining life of the race will be only about 75 years. At present there are approximately 25,000 natives of pure blood on the islands, and reports for past years show their number to be rapidly decreasing.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

What Makes a Wave Wild?

Bess—You ought to change hair-dressers, Tess.

Tess (tridly)—Indeed.

Bess—Just so. As a friend to friend I'm telling you that your marcel wave is too choppy.—Buffalo Express.

Still Ahead.

Mrs. T— was much given to what she proudly termed "illness," but what her neighbors called mere "hypo"—that is, just a desire to complain and be petted. They told her husband that they felt sure if he would go away and leave her alone for several months without any one to humor her and listen to her complaints, she would simply have to get well.

So away he traveled and stayed two months. He came home and when he saw his wife and how well she looked he was sure that their predictions had been realized. And then came her first sentence: "Just think, John, while you've been gone I have been doctoring with six different doctors, and none of them has been able to find out what is the matter with me."

REPUBLIC'S HEAD HONORS HEROES

President Arrives in Gotham on Mayflower to Attend Funeral Ceremony.

5,000 WAR DEAD IN THE CITY

Executive and Party Attend Services in Honor of Dead Yanks Before Bodies Are Shipped to Their Former Homes.

New York, May 25.—"It must not be again." With these solemn words President Harding laid a wreath on the coffin of the first American soldier to die on German soil, at a funeral ceremony for 5,000 war dead at the army piers in Hoboken, following his arrival here on the yacht Mayflower.

His voice husky and his eyes brimmed with tears; the President gazed at the rows upon rows of coffins. Then he said:

"One hundred thousand sorrows are touching my heart. It must not be again. God grant that it will not be. I do not pretend that the millennium days have come and that there will be no more war. I would wish a nation so powerful that none will dare to provoke its wrath."

Then in the great army shed on the shores of the Hudson, with its stark, whitewashed walls, there fell a silence profound and deep. Mrs. Harding could be seen weeping softly as she looked upon the flag-draped coffins.

The President continued: "There grows on me the realization of the unusual character of this occasion. Our republic has been at war before; it has asked and received the supreme sacrifices of its sons and daughters, and faith in America has been justified. Many sons and daughters made the sublime offering and went to hallowed graves as the nation's defenders. But we never before sent so many to battle under the flag in foreign lands, never before was there the impressive spectacle of thousands of dead returned to find eternal resting place in the beloved homeland. The incident is without any parallel in history that I know."

"These dead know nothing of our ceremony today. They sense nothing of the sentiment or the tenderness which brings their wasted bodies to the homeland for burial, close to kin and friends and cherished associations. These poor bodies are but the clay tenements once possessed of souls which flamed in patriotic devotion, lighted new hopes on the battle grounds of civilization and in their sacrifices sped on to accuse autocracy before the court of eternal justice."

"We are not met for them, though we love and honor and speak a grateful tribute. It would be futile to speak to those who do not hear, or to sorrow for those who cannot sense it, or to exalt those who cannot know. But we can speak for country, we can reach those who sorrowed and sacrificed through their giving, who glory with the republic through their heroic achievements, who rejoice in the civilization their heroism preserved."

"Every funeral, every memorial, every tribute to the living ones, an offering in compensation of sorrows. When the light of life goes out there is a new radiance in eternity, and somehow the glow of it relieves the darkness which is left behind."

"Never a death but somewhere a new life, never a sacrifice but somewhere an atonement, never a service but somewhere and somehow an achievement."

In placing the wreath on the casket, the President said:

"In the name of the republic I bestow this tribute on the casket of the first soldier who perished on the soil of the enemy. This opportunity is not chosen to express the suggestion of hatred in the American heart, for there is no hatred in the American heart, but I have chosen it because I am offering the tribute to one returned whose death on enemy soil marked the day when our civilization went face forward and when assault on our present-day civilization knew it had failed. May 24, 1918, is the date on which this soldier was killed and the name is that of Joseph W. Guyton, Company I, of the One Hundred and Twenty-sixth infantry, a resident patriot and hero of the state of Michigan, of the United States of America."

After the ceremony President Harding, accompanied by Mrs. Harding, several senators and their wives and army officials of high rank, returned to Manhattan to address the Academy of Political Science at its luncheon in the Hotel Astor before reviewing the old One Hundred and Sixth United States infantry in Brooklyn.

HER FRIENDS DISHEARTENED

Troubles Disappear When She Takes Tanlac, and Nerves Now Are as Steady as Can Be—General Health Splendid.

"I was on the verge of a collapse and was actually afraid to leave the house, but I am overjoyed now at the way Tanlac has restored my health so perfectly," declared Mrs. Cora M. Jackson, 504 Mulberry St., Terre Haute, Ind.

"I was almost a nervous wreck, and at times for anyone to even talk to me upset me completely. Even at night I could not get easy and quiet and would lie wide-awake, hardly able to sleep at all, and often just got up out of bed. I was so restless. Nervous headaches often came on me and frequently lasted for days at a time. Then I had rheumatism so bad in my joints I was almost helpless. My legs and elbows hurt fearfully and sometimes I just ached all over. There seemed to be no relief for me, my friends were all worried and I was almost disheartened."

"But, happily for me, one of my friends suggested that I try Tanlac. I never will forget how I began to improve and now I think it is wonderful that I am feeling so well and strong. My nerves are just as steady as can be and I haven't a rheumatic pain about me. I am in just splendid health and wish everybody knew what a grand medicine Tanlac is." Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Advertisement.

Help That Bad Back!

Why be miserable with a "bad back"? It's time you found out what is wrong! Kidney weakness often causes much suffering from backache, lameness, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and kidney irregularities. Neglected, it may lead to dropsy, gravel or Bright's disease, but if taken in time it is usually easily corrected by using Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands. Ask your neighbor!

An Illinois Case

Mrs. E. E. Long, 1404 E. 6th St., Sterling, Ill., says: "My back was lame and the pains were sharp. I had dizzy headaches and sometimes spots would appear before my eyes. I had heard Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended, so I bought some. Doan's relieved me completely of the pains in my back and of the other trouble."

Mrs. Hicks Relieved By Four Eatonic

"I have taken four Eatonic tablets and they relieved me of sour stomach. I recommend it to everybody," says Mrs. G. P. Hicks. If stomach is not digesting your food; if you have sourness, bloating, food repeating, indigestion or acid stomach, Eatonic will remove the cause by taking up and carrying out the acidity and gases, bringing quick relief and healthy digestion. Why suffer stomach trouble? Why not keep your digestion normal and enjoy good health? An Eatonic taken after each meal will prevent discomfort and pain. Make the test today and see how quickly this wonderful remedy acts. It comes in handy tablet form. Carry it with you. A big box costs only a trifle with your druggist's guarantee.

CAN LIVE CHEAPLY IN HAITI
Food Costs Little, and Tips for Servants Rendered Are Hardly Worth While Considering.

Labor and living are cheap in Haiti. There is a hotel in Port au Prince, rated as the best, that charges only $4 a day, for a room and three square meals.
True, the rooms are small, with the ancient washbowl, and unlockable, with concrete floors and rugless, but they are clean and comfortable.
The same meals could not be obtained anywhere in the United States at double the price. Luncheon is a regular dinner and dinner is much like an eight-course feast.
They never serve less than two or three meats, when one, according to the American habit, would be enough. There is fruit in abundance in Haiti, and a boy standing on the front porch, overlooking the sea, often picks the breakfast oranges.
The favorite dish is the chicken, served 305 days in the year without the least variation. Nobody ever wants to see a chicken after staying three weeks in Haiti.
A Haitian boy, waiting faithfully on a guest for 21 meals, beams his delight when tipped 3 gourdes, which is 60 cents. The maid, whose chief duty is to spread the mosquito net, almost drops to her knees for the same fee weekly. The boy who fetches the water and fixes the shoes gladly slips a man extra towels for 3 gourdes a week.
Laundry at American rates would cost more than room and board in Haiti, if there were laundries. There is much to go out from each room daily to washerwomen, and it comes back splck and span at nominal cost.
But Haiti has not reached the point where it may bid for tourist travel. A man, stopping at the best hotel here for the first time feels rather foolish when he asks for room and bath and is conducted to a little house 50 feet away, where he may get a shower. It's a hard life for women.
The best, however, is in sharp contrast with the worst, for the laborer gets 20 cents a day, and thousands of natives live only on fruit that grows wild everywhere the year round, like the roses.

Forests in Bohemia.
In the Bohemia lands (Bohemia, Moravia and Silesia) the needle forests predominate. The pines and firs cover 78 per cent of the forest area, the leaf timber 9.1 per cent, and the mixed about 12.9 per cent. In Slovakia and Carpathian Russia, the new territories, it is noteworthy that the leaf forests prevail, forming about 67 per cent of the whole, and the needle forests make up the balance, or 33 per cent. Ownership of these forests is singular. The state owns about 1,400,000 acres, charitable institutions own 800,000 acres, municipalities hold 2,500,000 acres and the large estates, held by private owners, cover 8,000,000 acres. It must not be taken for granted that the extensive Czechoslovak forests were given over to the use of the whole people. On the contrary, all the benefits to be derived enured to the foreign nobility and the wealthy owners, when the mere walking through one of these private forests was presumptive evidence of a wrongful intent. Of the vast estates held by individuals about 64.35 per cent of the whole in Bohemia were owned in parcels larger than 1,250 acres in extent, while minor holdings, those less than 1,250 acres in area, were held by the poorer classes.

Beware.
Green, Brown and Johnson were invited to Robinson's Christmas dinner.

I'd walk a mile for a Camel

The pleasure is worth it. There's no substitute for Camel quality and that mild, fragrant Camel blend.

The fellow who smokes Camels, wants Camels. That's because Camels have a smoothness, a fragrance and a mildness you can't get in another cigarette.

Don't let anyone tell you that any other cigarette at any price is so good as Camels.

Let your own taste be the judge. Try Camels for yourself. A few smooth, refreshing puffs and you'd walk a mile for a Camel, too.

MAURICE TOURNEUR

PRESENTS

"THE LIFE LINE"

Mighty Scenes Stir Every Emotion!

Say MAURICE TOURNEUR and you say the last word and the biggest name in melodrama. Tremendous size, blood-stirring action, supreme artistry—these are the qualities that have made Tourneur's great Drury Lane spectacles the wonder-pictures of the photoplay world.

Now he follows "Sporting Life," "The Whip," "The Bluebird," "Prunella," "The White Heather," with amazing scope and sweep of "The Life Line."

Fascinating scenes of the gypsy trail, of the London underworld, of a storm and shipwreck at sea; love crime, mystery—all, true to life, in this towering screen romance.

See the awe-inspiring fire scenes. See the great ocean liner shattered on the rocks. See the terror, the desperation, the daring rescues.

Seeena Owen, Jack Holt, Pauline Stark, Lewis Cody and other famous players in the cast. Don't Miss "The Life Line!"

TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY NIGHTS, May 31, June 1

GRAND THEATRE

On the way there Brown remarked to Johnson and Green:
"By the way, you fellows, I just want to give you a friendly warning. Beware of Robinson's champagne!"
So when the drinks were produced, Johnson and Green said they would drink nothing stronger than lemonade. Much to their surprise, however, Brown did not follow their example, but drank the champagne. So on the way home they asked him:
"What really was the matter with Robinson's champagne?"
"Oh, the quality was all right," replied Brown quietly. "It was the quantity I thought would be deficient—not enough for everybody."—London Ideas.

Miniature House Helps.
A paint dealer has in his office a little house which is made of interchangeable parts. The roof, for instance, is black and the side walls and porches are of some contrasting color. If he wishes to show the customer the effect of different color combinations he simply exchanges some of the parts of the house for other parts of different shades.
He says it has helped him in many cases to secure contracts which otherwise he could not have closed so easily. The expense of the contrivance is not great and it paid for itself in a short time.

New Study of Child.
Child study from the standpoint of the mother is the subject of a course offered by the College of Industrial Arts at Denton, Texas, which is the state college for women, according to a recent issue of School Life. The course consists of lectures, library readings and psychological laboratory work, and is intended to fit the young woman to be mistress of a home and the mother of a family. Child instincts and interests, heredity and environment, subnormal and defective children, diseases of children, and the moral and religious nature of children are all fully studied.

Writing Himself Down an Ass.
Speaking of repartee, says a writer in the London Morning Post, reminds us of one that would be hard to beat. The house of lords was debating an anti-church bill when Atterbury, bishop of Rochester, said: "I prophesied last year that this bill would be introduced this session; I am sorry to find that I have proved a true prophet."
Lord Coningsby then arose and said: "One of the bishops has set himself forth as a prophet; the only prophet I can think of likening him to is Balaam, who was reproved by his own ass."
When the laughter had subsided Atterbury rose, and remarked: "Since the noble lord has discovered such a similitude, I am content to be compared with the prophet Balaam; but, my lords, I am at a loss how to make out the other part of the parallel, for I have been reproved by nobody but the noble lord himself."
Hence the title, Atterbury's ass, clung to Lord Coningsby for many a day.

Cultivate Independence.
It's an easy thing to develop the independence habit. It sets folks to thinking they can do anything they want to. Usually it's the outcome of lax discipline in youth. They are permitted to do as they please and they don't please to do more than they have to. If children are able to wiggle out of things as they wish, they learn to be shifters of responsibility and dodgers of burdens. They get the wrong mental bias and soon imagine they don't have to do anything they don't want to. They talk glibly about what they will do and what they won't do. They may become as obstinate as mules and as out of place in good society as that animal would be in a parlor. Still that does not raise them above the spirit of dependence. Independence is a matter of living without having to lean on others and takes more than talk to do it.

Mrs. Gilbert Cummings and sons, and daughter, Mrs. Sidney Burton, spent Sunday with Mr. Cummings at the DeKalb Hospital.

Timely Tips on Painting

Protection as well as Beauty

Save the surface and you save all. Truer words were never spoken.

Paint on wood prevents rot—definitely; paint on metal prevents rust.

Here's a better way of putting it: Du Pont Paints and Varnishes on wood prevent rot. Du Pont "Antoxide" prevents rust.

Proper painting will cut depreciation losses in half.

Don't overlook the small details, either. A well-painted stove pipe will last five times as long as one that is unpainted.

Use one coat of Du Pont Stove Enamel. Fine for furnaces and water pipes.

Floors get the hardest usage of any part of the house. Keep up the surface with Supremis Floor Finish and they will last for years.

"Made by Du Pont" on any product is an absolute guarantee of finest quality and fair prices.

We sell the Du Pont Line and are proud of it.
