WEEK'S PRINCIPAL EVENTS

England's King and Queen Are Crowned.

TRAIN ROBBERS GET MONEY

Friar Question Still Unsettled—Pacific Cable Proposition Endorsed by President Roosevelt.

[Special to The Republican.]

The predictions of the soothsayers have come to naught, and Edward VII is crowned king of Great Britain. The coronation took place in Westminster Abbey on August 9, and passed off with scarcely an untoward accident to mar its solemnity.

In spite of threatening weather the route to be followed by the coronation procession was early lined by eager spectators. Promptly at 10.30 o'clock the first section of the procession left Buckingham palace, but long before that the seats in the stately old abbey were all filled by those whose rank or position secured them admittance. Among them were a large number of Americans. The abbey was beautifully decorated, the prevailing colors being crimson and white. The decorations of the building, the massive gold of the vessels on the altar, the beautiful gowns and brilliant uniforms, the sparkling of jewels and the glitter of polished steel made a picture whose splendor has seldom, if ever, been equaled. The king was crowned by the Archbishop of Canterbury, whose extreme age rendered it very difficult for him to perform the service. After the king had been crowned and placed on his throne, the oath of allegiance was taken by representatives of each grade of the nobility. The crowning of Queen Alexandra was a short and simple ceremony performed by the Archbishop of York. After the Queen was enthroned their majesties partook of the communion and withdrew to St. Edward's chapel. On their return to the nave they were greeted with hearty cheers and similar scenes of enthusiasm marked the entire route of the return to the palace.

The report of the large bond issue said to have been voted by the Cuban house proves to have been premature. The bill is before the senate, while a similar bill has been introduced into the house and referred to a committee. The Cuban government is beset with difficulties due largely to the failure of congress to provide for reciprocity. Some measure for relief must be taken at once, and it is reported that the Cuban government will ask President Roosevelt whether, in case Cuba should sign a reciprocity treaty at this time, he would call an extra session of the Senate to consider that treaty.

In attempting to comply with the request of the American government that the obnoxious Spanish friars should be removed from the Philippines and young American priests sent in their stead, the Vatican is meeting two serious obstacles. The Spanish friars are very unpopular and are not wanted even in Spain so that it is very difficult to find places for them. As for filling their places with priests from the United States, American prelates assert that there are not priests enough in this country to supply the parishes, and very few can be spared.

REAR ADMIRAL HENRY C. TAYLOR.

Admiral Taylor, who is at the head of the commission to investigate the shores of the great lakes to select the best site for a naval school and training station, is chief of the bureau of navigation and one of the most scholarly men in the navy. Prior to taking charge of the bureau of navigation he was the moving spirit at the naval school at Newport. He is what might be called the chief of staff to the secretary of the navy, and has full charge of the personnel of the service. He was in command of the battleship Indiana in the battle with the Spanish fleet off Santiago.

It is probable that there will be direct cable communication between San Francisco and Manila within the next two years. The President has indosed the proposition of the Postal Pacific Cable company to lay a cable across the Pacific. The company is to have access to Navy Department charts and in return is to grant special rates to the government.

Train robbers on August 5 secured $100,000 from the Adams Express company's treasure car attached to the Burlington limited, bound from Chicago to St. Paul. After firing several shots at the express messenger, who returned their fire with interest, the robbers dynamited the coach and secured the valuables in the safe. One of the gang was murdered by his companions. The express messenger, William Byl, will receive $1,000 in gold as a reward for his brave stand against the bandits.

The trouble at Shenandoah continues. Troops are stoned and it is unsafe for non-union men or soldiers to venture on the streets alone or unarmed. It is reported that foreigners among the strikers have formed a plan to cut off one ear from each man who attempts to work in or about the mines against their orders, thus marking them for life as "unfair."

Walter A. Scott, president of the Illinois Wire company, was fatally stabbed on Saturday by W. L. Stebbins, a civil engineer. A quarrel over the payment of an account ended in a fight during which Stebbins struck Scott twice with a blunt letter opener, inflicting wounds from which the latter died an hour later.

Andrew Dickson White, who has been ambassador to Germany since 1897, has resigned. The resignation is to take effect on Nov. 7, Mr. White's seventieth birthday. David J. Hill, first assistant secretary of state, is mentioned as his successor.

King Edward has presented Osborne House, the favorite residence of Queen Victoria, to the nation in memory of his coronation. It will probably be used as sanitarium for army and navy officers.

Mgr. Guidi, at present in the office of Cardinal Rampolla, has been appointed apostolic delegate at Manila. It is said that the new Archbishop of Manila will be an American.

Tissot, the artist and renowned illustrator of incidents in the life of Christ, died in Paris, August 7.

RESIGNS THREE OFFICES.

John Brown of Elgin, formerly of Genoa, a Candidate for Judgeship in Philippines, Has Good Chances.

In order to clear the way for a federal appointment as judge in the Philippines, John Brown of Elgin has resigned three offices—assistant supervisor, judge of election in fourth precinct and notary public. He resigns these offices thinking that they might interfere with the appointment he is awaiting.

J. H. Becker and several other justices accepted his resignation and reported to the town clerk, who in turn will report to the county clerk. The vacancy will be filled by appointment, the appointive power lying with the supervisor, town clerk and justices of the peace.

The names of George McDonald and L. D. Nish have been mentioned as candidates.

Mr. Brown does not expect to hear anything definite in regard to his appointment before August 20. He has excellent recommendations and assurances from influential people.

The German Village.

The German Village, where, as in his native land, the Teuton sips his beer or wine, sings his songs and smokes to his heart's content, is one of the most popular features of the great Bostock-Ferari Mighty Midway Carnival company, on a specially erected stage are given vaudeville specialties of the land of the Kaiser such as Tyrolean warblers, Gerntan yodlers, Swiss Bell ringers, etc., providing an excellent entertainment where mirth and music, good cheer and good fellowship go hand in hand and where all is pleasure, peace and plenty in an atmosphere that savors of the distant Rhein in the far-off "Fatherland." The German village can be visited on the midway at the Elks' carnival in Elgin during the week commencing August 25.

Sycamore Defeats Rockford.

In a closely contested game, abounding in brilliant plays and clever base running the Sycamore team defeated Rockford, the leaders of the Three I league, by a score of 4 to 2, at the ball park Monday. Bubser was in the box for the home team and pitched his usual good game. The game was one of the fastest ever played on the grounds. Bubser and Owens pitched but five balls apiece one inning.—Sycamore Advertiser

COL. JOHN MELROY.

Col. Melroy, one of the popular candidates for commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic at its encampment at Washington in October, is an old Chicago newspaper man and a past commander of the department of the Postum. He was born in Kentucky, in 1846, and was overtaken by the civil war while he was a typesetter in St. Louis. Soon afterward he came to Chicago, where he joined the army. He was for some time a prisoner in Andersonville. After the war he assisted in the starting of the Chicago Inter Ocean. For the past 20 years, however, he has lived at Washington, D. C.

WILL MAKE FAST TIME.

New Elgin and Chicago Electric Road Will Make Fastest Time in the World, 70 Mile Schedule.

One hundred and sixty miles an hour is the speed that the Elgin and Chicago Electric road expect to accomplish.

The speed trial will be about November 1 and will be on the sixteen mile stretch between Elgin and Wheaton.

The first trial trip over the road was made last week and the officials who made the trip are satisfied that the high speed will be accomplished.

Within a week or ten days the regular train service on the Aurora branch will be inaugurated. At the first the trains will not attempt to make a speed exceeding forty-five miles an hour, but later on, when everything is in perfect condition, a regular schedule of about seventy miles an hour will be adopted. The Elgin line will be ready November 1.

The road is built on the third-rail plan. At street crossings the third rail is disconnected.

Oriental Dancing Girls.

The dances and dancers of the Orient have made it far more famous than anything else that travelers to that far Eastern land see. The beautiful women, in their extremely graceful and wonderful dances, are sights that impress themselves on the mind of the tourist, and give him something to talk about years after his tour. Throughout Egypt, Armenia and Turkey the dancing girls are the most fascinating and there are no others like them. The vulgar imitation of their dances given by degraded American women are miserable burlesques of what, when seen in its native originality, is the height of grace and perfection of motion—an indescribable poetry of dreamy action, which must be seen to be appreciated. The dozen or more olive-skinned beauties with the Oriental theatre of the Bostock-Ferari Mighty Midway Carnival company of their respective countries brought direct from the harems of the rulers. They will be seen at the Elks' carnival at Elgin the week commencing August 25.

Elgin Butter Market.

No butter was offered or sold on the Elgin market Monday. Market was firm at 20c.

We can show advertisers our list—no circulation lies told by THE REPUBLICAN.

ANNUAL PICNIC.

Old Settlers of Northern Illinois and the DeKalb County Farmers will Assemble in Kingston on Thursday, Aug. 28.

The old settlers of Northern Illinois and the farmers of DeKalb County will hold their annual picnic in Stuart's grove in Kingston on Thursday, August 28th, 1902.

BUYS LIVERY STABLE.

J. H. Danforth, Veterinary Surgeon, Purchases Livery Stable from Loren Olmsted and B. Campbell.

J. H. Danforth closed a deal Saturday with L. Olmsted and H. Campbell and is now proprietor of the livery and feed stable known for many years past as the Olmsted livery.

The new proprietor will keep up his practice as a veterinary surgeon and will have his office at the barn.

He will put in some new rigs this season and will run an up-to-date livery in every respect.

Held to County Court.

On complaint of Fanny Kniprath, a seventeen year old girl, Theodore Lawrence was arrested on Friday last and confined to the county jail. He was taken before Justice Mitchell Monday morning. The justice, after hearing the girl's testimony, decided the defendant was guilty. Lawrence did not take the stand. Defendant was held in $600 bonds to the county court. Bail was furnished. The case will probably come up for trial in December. Both parties are from Kingston. The usual large crowd was present to pass judgement on the evidence given.

If you know anybody who does not take our paper, let us know.

THE TALL CAREYS.

Five Men of the Family Reach Aggregate Height of 31 Feet.

Everybody in San Jose knows the Carey family, and are proud of them as typical California productions, says the San Francisco Bulletin. They form the tallest group of men in the state, perhaps in a number of states. If they lived in a smaller country they would be termed giants.

The combined height of the father and four sons aggregate 31 feet, and each of the four sons weighs over 200 pounds. The total weight of the five is 1,055 pounds—about half a ton. They are all hearty, fine-looking men, and as strong as oxen.

Patrick William Carey is a gentleman who, 26 years ago, came straight from Ireland, and is proud of the fact. As a boy he was a famous jockey, but, as he says, "I was being too tall at last that prevented me from makin' a very rapid fortune. Shure, I grew too tall to ride at all."

For 16 years he lived with his family up in the Black mountains, and then came to San Jose to go into the butcher business. The old gentleman is hale and hearty at 80 years of age, and spends much of his time superintending matters out at the slaughter house, about five miles from town.

Mrs. Amelia Carey, the mother of this family of giant voters, is not a small woman, her height being five feet nine inches. She has a daughter, a nurse in a San Francisco hospital, who is only of the average height.

William Patrick Carey is the eldest son, and also the tallest of the boys. He is a man of family, and has a pleasant home in San Jose. He towers up to a height of six feet 6 1/2 inches. A second look always follows him on the street. Though he weighs 220 pounds, his great height does not give the impression of a heavy man. He owns to 39 years.

The next in order as to age and height is George J. Carey, who lives at Palo Alto and is also in the butcher business. He has a little bit of a wife, though he measures six feet four inches. He is 36 years of age and weighs 225 pounds.

Then comes Richard Thomas Carey, also a married man, and not a small one, for his height is six feet three inches, and he tips the scales at 218 pounds. He is 32 years old.

Last comes the pet of the family, John Francis Carey, 29 years old, and yet a beau. He is a swell when he dresses his six feet 2 1/2 inches in fine apparel. He does not weigh much; only 212 pounds.

There are no finer specimens of huge manhood to be found in California than the Carey family.

LOST IN A BIG BUILDING.

A Rear Admiral Who Consulted a Compass to Get His Bearings.

Rear Admiral Louis Kempff, whose discretion and tact during the exciting naval bombardment of the Taku forts in China in the summer of 1900 have been the subject of much praise, found that his good seamanship availed him not when he encountered the mazes of the state, war and navy department buildings one day, says the Washington Star. He had been in Secretary Moody's office, and when he came out three corridors and four staircases loomed up before him. After a few double right-about faces the admiral gave it up and, fumbling for his watch chain—a tiny compass—he consulted it attentively. "It's the only way I can tell north from south in this blasted building," he explained to an official of the department who came up to him, "and it's the only way I'll ever manage to get out." But the other official offered to act as a convoy, and saw the admiral safely anchored in the proper elevator.

A Maddening Legacy.

A young man at St. Mendel was driven mad by a legacy of £1,000. From the moment the money came into his possession he was oppressed by the fear of losing it, and always carried it about with him. He finally made a bonfire of it in the form of notes and then attempted to blow out his brains.

Italy and Britain are about the same size. But the United Kingdom and her colonies have 259 out of every 1,000 of the earth's population, and Italy only 22.

PRETTY PARLOR TRICK FOR CHILDREN.

It is a very pretty trick to present a boy or girl with a white rose, telling him that though the flower looks pale, it will revive and glow with the blush of health, if it is worn a few hours. In order to make your prediction come true, you must select, not a naturally white rose, but a red one, which you have bleached in the manner illustrated in the picture—by holding it over the fumes of burning sulphur. The rose can be bleached almost or quite white in this way, but the natural color returns after a few hours' exposure to the air. The cut we have taken from the Cincinnati Enquirer.

PHANTOM HOUNDS.

Apparitions the Humble Folk in Localities in England Tell About.

Some of the thousands of readers whose interest has been excited by Dr. Conan Doyle's enthralling story of "The Hound of Baskervilles" may not be aware that a phantom dog is numbered among the most grisly and fearsome specters of the East Norfolk coast, says the St. Louis Republic.

The apparition known as Old Shuck or Black Shuck, takes the form of a huge black dog, which on stormy nights may be encountered prowling along certain narrow lonesome lanes in that sparsely populated district lying between Yarmouth and Cromer. The demoniac howling of this awful monster—which has flaming teeth, and a solitary fiery eye in the middle of its forehead—is heard above the roaring of the wind and sea, and the fishermen and farm hands, when they hear it, take care to hasten to their homes, for to see Black Shuck is to receive notice that you will die before the end of the year. Stories are told in some of the coast hamlets of persons who have met this Norfolk Snarl-yow, and almost invariably, the country folk will tell you, those persons did not live more than 12 months after the encounter.

There is, however, one way of escaping the penalty of intrusion on Black Shuck's nocturnal prowling, and that is, you must preserve absolute silence about the monster for 12 months after your encounter with him. People who are fond of cruising on the Norfolk Broads will be interested to know that Neatishhead Long Lane, near the lovely road at Barton, and the roads leading to Coltishall bridge, over the Bure are Black Shuck's haunts; but he also frequents the lanes in the neighborhood of Bacton, where another Norfolk ghost, the Long Coastguardsman, takes a nightly stroll at a witching hour.

Another canine phantom is the Mauthie Doog, or "Moddy Dhoo," which used to haunt Peel Castle, in the Isle of Man. This was a large black spaniel, which for centuries was able to obtain access to every room in the castle, no matter how securely the doors might be locked and bolted, but which never appeared before nightfall and always disappeared before dawn. At the time when the castle was garrisoned the Mauthie

Doog became such a familiar phantom that little heed was paid to its appearance and movements, though most of the soldiers carefully avoided doing anything to excite its anger.

But on one occasion, one man, made reckless by excessive drinking, declared his intention of discovering whether the so-called ghost was a "dog or demon." His companions did their best to persuade him not to interfere with the apparition; but on a certain night when he went alone to lock the gates of the castle it was with the avowed intention of settling forever the question in dispute. Soon after his departure a strange noise was heard, but no one dared attempt to find out the cause of it, though when the soldier returned to the guardroom there were many inquiries as to the nature of his experiences.

The man, however, had become suddenly and strangely sober, and notwithstanding his companions' frequent interrogations he preserved absolutely silence. Three days later he died, apparently in great agony, but without revealing either the nature or cause of his fatal illness, and from that time the Mauthie Doog ceased to haunt Peel Castle. Some Manx folks assert that it took up fresh quarters on the Kirk Jarryn mountains, but others affirm that the howling monster of those parts was the ghost of a wolf.

Precious Picture Frames.

Perhaps the most valuable frame ever made for a picture is that which encloses "The Virgin and Child" in the cathedral of Milan. Its size is eight feet by six feet, and is of massive hammered gold, with an inner moulding of lapis lazuli. The corners have hearts designed in large pearls, and precious stones are inlaid around it. It is said to have been the gift of a rich nursery, and its estimated value is £35,000. One of the pictures in the vatican at Rome is enclosed in a frame studded with jewels, so that the value of the frame nearly equals that of the picture. Many continental churches have pictures with similar frames of great value.

High Shot Tower.

One of the highest shot-towers in the world is to be found at Villach, in Carinthia, where there is a fall of 249 feet.

DAIRY ESTABLISHMENT ON SAN JUAN HILL.

The famous blockhouse of San Juan hill has a competitor as an attraction for visitors to Santiago, El Caney and San Juan. On the very top of the hill, and within a stone's throw of the blockhouse which Roosevelt and his Rough Riders charged, is located one of the "largest" dairy establishments in the vicinity of Santiago. It consists of a cow stable, milk house and residence combined in one. Eight or nine cows comprise the "herd." They are patient animals which, after trying themselves in grazing, rest beneath the shade of the historic "surrender tree."

THOSE WHO CAN'T KEEP UP.

It is human nature mebbe to be borne 'long with the crowd, and when they shout and holla, to holla just as loud; But there's a sight o' pleasure like a draught from nectar's cup, In just a-totterin' back along with those who can't keep up.

One needn't think the only men God ever made are those Who wear the finest linen and the latest cut in clothes— I find patriotism, honor and fidelity to truth In the man whose outward bearing often is the most unorthodox.

In the weather-beaten cottage where the eaves most touch the door, Whose shingles are quite hidden with the moss that's gathered o'er, There is still the old-time altar, where duly morn and night The inmates bow and ask the Lord to guide their steps aright.

The gentlest words are spoken when the heart is sad with woe, And the rarest wisdom emanates from those whose steps are slow, And those whose eyes are blind to sights that gladden for a day See glories far transcendent that can never fade away.

So I like to totter back a bit; the crowd may surge along, Perhaps for some it's pleasant thus to jostle with the throng; But I find my life grows richer, even drinking sorrow's cup, With the weary and unfortunate who cannot quite keep up! —Adelbert F. Caldwell, in Ladies' World, New York.

My Strangest Case

CHAPTER XI.

It was in the early afternoon following our leaving Paris that we reached Naples. But this time, in spite of our endeavors to prevent it, Miss Kitwater was quite tired out. She certainly pretended not to be, but it was difficult, if not impossible, for her to conceal the fact. Immediately on arrival we conveyed her to the best hotel, of the proprietor of which Leglosse had already made inquiries, in order to find out whether or not Hayle had taken up his abode there.

It was with relief that we discovered that no person answering at all to his description was located there. That done, we commenced our search for the man we wanted. We decided to first try the offices of the various steamers plying across the Mediterranean to Port Said. Considerably to our amazement, however, we happened to be successful at the first cast. A man signing himself as Henry Gifford had applied for a first-class passage to Colombo, with the intention of changing at that port into another steamer for Hong-Kong.

"What was he like?" I inquired of the clerk; "and did anything strike you as peculiar about him or his appearance?"

"Well, there was one thing," he said. "And at the time I must say I thought it funny. When I asked him his name he began 'Gideon,' and then suddenly corrected himself and said: 'Henry Gifford.' I remember wondering whether he was using a false name or not. He booked his passage at the last moment, and seemed in a great hurry to get aboard—being afraid he would miss the boat."

I questioned him as to the man's general appearance, and when I had learned all he had to tell us, I was perfectly satisfied in my own mind that Hayle was the man who had gone aboard.

"He didn't lose much time," said Leglosse. "Mark my words, he'll leave the steamer at Port Said, and will either come back on his own tracks, or go up the Palestine coast to Jaffa, and thence back to Europe. What do you think is the best thing to be done?"

"See the agent of the company here and get him to telegraph to Port Said," I answered. "Both to their agent there and the captain of the steamer. If the captain telegraphs back that Gifford is our man, we must wire to the police authorities authorizing them to detain him pending our arrival. There is a bit of risk attached to it, but if we want to catch him we must not think of that."

We accordingly interviewed the agent and placed the case before him. We told him who we were, and Leglosse explained to him that he held a warrant for the arrest of one Gideon Hayle, an individual whom he had every reason to believe was endeavoring to escape under the assumed name of Henry Gifford. The clerk was next called in, and gave his evidence, and these matters having been settled, the telegrams were dispatched to both the captain and the agent.

Some four days we knew must certainly elapse before we could receive a reply, and that time was devoted to searching the city for Kitwater and Codd. That they had not booked passages in the same boat in which Hayle had sailed, we soon settled to our satisfaction. In that case we knew that they must be domiciled in Naples somewhere. In the intervals between our search Leglosse and I used our best endeavors to make Miss Kitwater enjoy her stay. We took her to Pompeii, climbed Vesuvius together, visited Capri, Ischia, the great museum, the king's palace, and dined together every evening. I had not been acquainted with the girl much more than a fortnight, and yet I felt as if I had known her all my life, and the greater my experience of her was, the better I liked her. As for Leglosse, he outdid himself in his devotion. He made the most extraordinary toilets in her honor, and on one occasion went even so far as to inform me that, if all Englishwomen were like that particular specimen, he would say good-by to his beloved Paris, and cross the channel never to return again.

At last the eventful day arrived, and from nine till twelve we called repeatedly at the office for the telegram that was to mean so much to us. It was not, however, until the afternoon was well advanced that a message was received. I could have taken my stick to the agent for the slowness with which he opened the envelope. The clerk was called in, the code translated, and the message presently transcribed.

"This, gentlemen," he said at last, pointing to the telegram, "is from our agent in Port Said, and is as follows:

"Gifford, small man, gray hair, and wears spectacles. No scar on face, cannot find first-class passenger with one. Fear you have been deceived."

"Confound the fellow," I cried, "he's done us again. What's worse, we've wasted four precious days waiting for this message. What shall we do now?"

"Look for him elsewhere," said Leglosse. "If he didn't go by that boat, he might have left by another."

We thanked the agent for his courtesy, and were about to leave the office when another telegram was handed in. We waited to see whether it was from the captain, and presently found that we were not destined to be disappointed. Once more the agent consulted his code, transcribed the message, and read it to us.

"Have interviewed Gifford, threatened him with the police for using passage booked by another person. He confesses having been induced by stranger such as you describe to accept passage Colombo. How shall I act?"

"We've been done again," I cried, bringing my fist down with a thump upon the table. "It's only another proof of Hayle's cleverness. The ingenious rascal books his passage here, knowing very well that it will be one of the first places at which we shall make inquiries, lets fall a 'Gideon,' and then transfers his ticket to somebody else. I suppose he didn't bargain for my getting out of that house in time to follow him, and to telegraph to Port Said. Now that we are certain that he did not go that way, we must try and find out in what direction he did proceed."

"And also what has become of the blind man and his companion," said Leglosse. "They may be hot upon his trail, and if we can only discover them, and keep an eye on them, we may find out all we want to know. But it is likely to prove a difficult task."

We tried the various shipping offices, without success. We called at every hotel, important or otherwise, questioned the city police, who assured us they had seen nothing of the men we described, and finally were compelled to own ourselves thoroughly well beaten. Leglosse's face was the picture of despair, and I fear mine was not much better. We inserted advertisements in the papers, but with no more luck than before. From the moment the trio had entered Naples, they seemed to have vanished entirely. Then one evening a ragged urchin called at the hotel and asked to see us. In reply to our questions, he informed us that he had seen two Englishmen only the day before, such as the police were inquiring for; one of them was blind, the other dumb. Indeed, he was sure of this, for the reason that he had carried their bag for them down to the harbor whence the Palermo boat sailed. We pricked up our ears on hearing this. If his story was correct, and Kitwater and Codd had visited Sicily, then without a doubt Hayle must have gone there too. But we had no desire to allow ourselves to be taken in again. It might be another of Hayle's tricks, and for this reason we questioned the boy more closely. He adhered, however, to his story without a variation. His description of the men was perfect in every respect, and he assured us most emphatically that he knew nothing of any individual with such a scar upon his face as Hayle possessed. At last we became convinced that his story was genuine, and we rewarded the boy accordingly. After he had disappeared we informed Miss Kitwater of the discovery we had made.

"You will follow them to Palermo?"

"Assuredly, mademoiselle," Leglosse replied. "I have my duty to perform."

"Then I must go with you," she answered. "If he is on the island the chase must be drawing to a close, and I must be present to protect him, if possible, against himself."

Accordingly next morning, for the steamer for that day had long since sailed, we set out for the kingdom of Sicily, that gem among islands as Goethe terms it. It was the first time Miss Kitwater had seen the southern coast, and for this reason I made her promise that she would rise early next morning in order that she might witness our approach to the far-famed island. This she did, and side by side we watched the vessel draw closer to the land. Away to the west lay the island of Ustica, its outline sharply defined in the clear morning air.

"How beautiful it all is!" she said, "and to think that we are sailing such lovely seas upon such an errand."

"You must try not to think about it," I said. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." Let us hope that it will all come right in the end. If only Leglosse can get hold of Hayle first, your uncle cannot possibly do him any harm, however much disposed he may be that way. Between us we ought to be able to manage that."

Shortly after breakfast we obtained our first glimpse of Sicily. It was a scene never to be forgotten. The blue seas, the towering mountains rising apparently out of it, made up a picture that was lovely beyond compare. Presently we steamed into the harbor, and made our way to the Dogana, where our luggage was examined. Here we commenced our inquiries concerning Kitwater and Codd, and had the satisfaction of learning, on undoubted authority, that the story the boy had told us was correct. Such terrible infirmities as theirs could scarcely fail to attract notice, and more than one of the officials remembered seeing and commiserating them. On leaving the Dogana, they had traveled to the city by cab, so we were informed.

"The man who drove them is outside now," said one of them. "Perhaps the senior would care to question him."

I replied that I should like very much to do so, and we accordingly went out into the street together. It appeared that the cuman remembered his fares perfectly, the more so by reason of the fact that the blind man had sworn at him for not using greater speed in reaching the city. He had driven them to some furnished lodgings kept by his cousin, he said, and was proceeding to recommend them to us, when I cut him short by informing him that we had already decided upon a hotel. We thereupon entered the vehicle, he mounted the box, and we set off. From the moment that we had set foot ashore Miss Kitwater had been growing more and more nervous. When it was taken into consideration that before nightfall some very unpleasant things might happen, I do not think this fact is to be wondered at. I pitied her from the bottom of my heart, and was prepared to do all that lay in my power to help her. It was a strange change for her, from the quiet little village of Bishopstowe, to the pursuit of a criminal across Europe to an island in the Mediterranean.

"And when is it over?" was the question I asked myself on numerous occasions. "What is going to happen then? I suppose I shall bid her good-by, she will thank me for the trouble I have taken, and then our acquaintance will be at an end."

After that it had become my habit to leave a prodigious sigh, and to wonder whether she could be induced to—

But somehow I never got much further with my speculations. Was it likely she would ever think twice of me? She was invariably kindly and thoughtful; she deferred to me on everything, and seemed to think my opinions and actions must of necessity be right. Apart from that I felt certain I had made no other impression upon her.

"Now, mon ami," said Leglosse, when we had installed ourselves at our hotel, "I think it would be better that you should efface yourself for a time. None of the men we are after know me, but Hayle and Codd would both recognize you at once. Let me go into the town and make a few inquiries, and if they are satisfactory we shall know how to act. Do your best to amuse mademoiselle, and I will hasten back to you as soon as I have anything to tell."

Upon my consenting to this arrangement he set off, leaving me free to devote myself to the amusement of Miss Kitwater. As soon as she joined me we made our way into the garden of the hotel, and seating ourselves on a comfortable bench spent the remainder of the morning basking in the sunshine, and watching the exquisite panorama that was spread out before us.

"I wonder what they are doing in Bishopstowe now?" I said, and a moment later wished I had held my tongue.

"Poor little Bishopstowe," my companion answered. "How thankful I shall be to get safely back to it! don't think I shall ever want to travel again."

"Ah! you cannot tell," I replied. "You are seeing the world just now under very unfavorable auspices. Some day, perhaps, you will follow the same route under conditions as happy as these are the reverse."

I think she must have guessed to what I referred, for her face flushed a little, and she hastily diverted the conversation into another channel, by drawing my attention to a picturesque sailing-boat which at that moment was entering the harbor. I tried to entice her back to the subject later, but she would plainly have none of it. Only once did she refer to it, and that was when we were making our way back to the hotel to lunch. I stated my fear lest she should find all this ruminating about from place to place tiring for her.

"You need not be afraid of that," she answered. "I am very strong, and am not easily tired. Besides, you have been so good and kind, Mr. Fairfax, and have done so much to insure my comfort, that, if only out of gratitude to you, I could not very well be fatigued. I think you know how grateful I am to you, do you not?"

As she said this she looked up at me with her beautiful, trusting eyes, and so overwhelmed me that it was as much as I could do to keep back the words that rose to the tip of my tongue. I answered her to the effect that I had only done my best to promote her comfort, and was about to say something further, when Leglosse made his appearance before us. There was a look of great satisfaction upon his face.

"I think I know now all that there is to know," he said. "If mademoiselle will excuse me, I will tell it. M. Hayle arrived here some five days ago, and has taken possession of a charming villa some ten miles from the city. It is situated on the coast and the agent declares it to be unique. How long he intends to occupy it, he, the agent, could not say, but he has paid a high rent for it in advance, which appears to have given unlimited satisfaction. The other two men are still prowling about the city in search of him, but so far they have not been successful in their endeavors."

"Could I not go to my uncle?" Miss Kitwater inquired. "It might be possible for me to persuade him to leave the island without seeing this wretched man."

"I fear it would be useless," I answered. "And you would only cause yourself unnecessary pain. No! what we must do is to communicate with the Palermo police; Leglosse can show them his warrant, and then we must endeavor to get Hayle under lock and key, and then out of the island, without waste of time. That is the best course, believe me."

"If all goes well, I shall make the arrest to-night," said Leglosse, and then added: "I must get back to Paris as soon as possible."

That afternoon he went out once more, this time to interview the police authorities. At five o'clock he returned in a state of great excitement. "The other two have discovered Hayle's whereabouts," he said, when we were alone together. "And they have set off in pursuit. They have been gone more than an hour, and, unless we start at once, we shall be too late to take him before they run him to earth."

"Good heavens! Are you quite sure of this?"

"As sure as I can be of anything," he answered. "I have been to their house."

"Do not say anything about this to Miss Kitwater," I said hurriedly. "We must make the best excuse we can to account for our absence."

I tried to do this, but she saw through my endeavor.

"You are going to arrest him, I can see," she said. "Poor unhappy man! But there, I would rather that should happen than that he and my uncle should meet. Go, Mr. Fairfax, and I pray God you may be successful."

SOMETHING JUST AS GOOD.

Storekeeper Had an Idea That People Could Do Their Own Blowing if Necessary.

Abel Judkins kept the corner store in Centerville, and it was his boast that no man who patronized him need lack for anything he wanted, provided he had the wherewithal to pay, relates Youth's Companion.

Occasionally some unreasonable person would ask for a commodity not included in Abel's list; but if he did so, he was either provided with something which Mr. Judkins assured him was better than the article he had desired, and served exactly the same purpose, or he was made to feel that it was, for some dark and mysterious reason, no longer "carried" by any progressive and self-respecting shop.

When a carping summer resident, whose pair of ancient bellows, bought at an auction sale, had collapsed beyond repair, expressed surprise that no bellows were to be had of Mr. Judkins, the Centerville storekeeper turned upon her with a lofty smile.

"Folks here, ma'am," he said, coldly, "don't hold with getting so took up with old ideas, or being so narrow, as some of those that summer with us from below. The advances of civilization are prized here in this town, and air-tights with drafts are more thought of than old chimbley fireplaces that require constant feeding and have to be blown on to keep 'em a-going."

He glanced at the summer resident, but could discover no special signs of weakening or humility in her face. With a briskness which always marked his mercantile proceedings, he changed in a twinkling from the advocate of progress to the upholder of primitive methods.

"But folks will be folks, ma'am," he said, indulgently, "and if you like an open glow I don't know what's to hinder. And better than any bellows that ever were made, ma'am, is an onion-stalk. I can fit you out complete with three stout ones at this present, and when you've blown them out o' usefulness, all you've got to do is to come to Abel Judkins and get some more."

Doctor's Wife's Advantage.

"Papa," said a Hyde Park preacher's little daughter the other day, "when I grow up I'm never going to marry either a minister or a doctor that gives people medicine."

"Why, dear?" he asked. "Don't you like preachers and doctors? You know, preachers and doctors ought to be the most useful men there are. Doctors try to save people in this world, and preachers do their best to save them in the next. Isn't that pretty good business?"

"Yes," replied little Caroline, "but Dr. Pelletier's wife was here calling on mamma to-day, and they got to talking about things, and Mrs. Pelletier said when she was sick it was always just terrible to think of taking any of her husband's medicine. And then mamma said: 'O, but you're an awfully great deal more lucky than if you were a preacher's wife. You have only to refuse to take the medicine when you're sick, but a preacher preaches every Sunday.'"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Comes That Way.

A young minister who was naturally of a shy disposition was rather embarrassed at his first marriage ceremony, and unwittingly reversed the usual order of the service, thus making the bridegroom promise to love and obey his blushing bride. The error passed unnoticed at the time, but shortly afterward it dawned upon the father of the bride that a mistake had occurred, and he said to the minister: "I believe, Mr. —, you have made John promise to love and obey my daughter. Ah, well," he added, after a pause, and with a sly look at his better half, "I suppose it won't matter much; it generally comes to that anyway."—Stray Stories.

Land Bargains

Martin County, Minnesota, next to the Iowa line

A Choice Farm Three hundred and twenty acres within three miles of two new towns and two railroads. Land is all high and slightly rolling; no low land. No waste on the entire tract. Two good sets of buildings, one on each quarter. Improvements worth $5,000. No better is offered in the Northwest. It is just as good as any Illinois farm. Can be bought on a small payment down and the balance March 1st without interest. Place is clear of incumbrance. Can borrow all you want at 5 per cent.

Quarter Section A well improved quarter section within four miles of a good town. All fenced and under a good state of cultivation. Buildings very good. Price, $52 50

For $40 A rolling quarter section six miles from town. Improvements small. Can be bought right at $40 00.

400 Acres The best soil, in a German neighborhood. German church and parsonage on farm. One of the oldest places in southern Minnesota. Improvements worth $5,000. Owner has Oklahoma fever and will sell right. This place will bear investigation.

Martin County

Martin County is geographically located in the southern tier of Minnesota counties, next to the Iowa line, 200 miles west of the Mississippi river. It has long been recognized as one of the garden spots of the Northwest and in the past year the fact has been emphasized by the unprecedented boom and influx of the best class of Illinois farmers. The country has now lost all appearance of newness and is as well developed as DeKalb county. We have German and Scandinavian communities, as well as mixed settlements where the Yankees predominate. The beautiful lakes scattered throughout the county are one of the most attractive features of the landscape. The soil is a heavy black loam from two to four feet deep, underlaid with a clay subsoil. This combined with one of the finest climates makes an ideal farming country.

Swift County---Banner County of Minnesota

Only 120 miles west of the Twin Cities. It is well developed and improvements are first class. We have a large list of improved farms here that can be bought for $30 to $40 an acre. Our best is a farm of 360 acres, three miles from town. Very fine land, with a good set of buildings. Can be bought for $37.50 an acre.

Near Benson A half section within six miles of Benson, the county seat, and two and one-half miles from a railway station. Fair improvements and a good farm. Price, $32.50 per acre.

North Dakota - - In the Great Bend Country

Northwest of Bismark west of the Missouri river, we have a fine list of wild lands that we are offering at from $5 to $10 an acre. On the plains between Bismark and Jamestown, extra good lands close to town can be bought for $10 an acre and less.

Write us what you want and we can fit you out. Do not let your money lie in the bank at 3 per cent. and 4 per cent. interest when, by investing in first-class farm lands, it will double in value in ten years' time, to say nothing of a good rate of interest in the meantime. We can prove these things to you if you give us an opportunity.

WILL RETIRE AS CONSUL.

Head Consul William A. Northcott of the Modern Woodmen of America Will Retire About June First.

Head Consul Northcott of the Modern Woodmen order has notified the head camp at Rock Island that he will not accept another nomination. His present term will expire in June of next year and the job pays a salary of $5,000 a year.

Northcott has held it for many years and at one time pulled the order out of the slough of despond and has been the main factor in its present prosperity. His retirement will bring up a crop of aspiring candidates for the succession.—DeKalb Review.

MONEY IN SELLING FRUIT.

An Italian Youth in New York Saves Up a Tidy Sum.

That the Greeks and Italians from the southern section of the peninsula, who earn a livelihood by selling fruit from push-carts in the city streets, earn considerable money is not altogether a theory. An old Italian was detained at Ellis island this week, preparatory to being deported because he had arrived here penniless. He sent for his son, a push-cart man, who had been in this country just one year. The boy (he was not more than 20) brought his bank book showing deposits aggregating $250. This money represented the sum he had saved above his living expenses. It had been earned selling fruit from his cart. He impressed upon the inspectors his ability to support his father, and the old man was admitted.
