NOTES FROM THE COURT HOUSE

Several Law Suits Settled Outside of Court and Dismissed

IREL DIBBLE CASE IS UP AGAIN

Ellsworth Weaver, Age 8, Committed To Lincoln State Colony For Feeble Minded

George Lewis and Clarence Palmer of DeKalb appealed to the circuit court on Thursday, from a judgment for the sum of $78.76 rendered against them in favor of The Mel O'Dee Music Co. The judgment was obtained by the music company on July 13, 1922, before Justice of the Peace W. H. L. Rowe of DeKalb.

An appeal from a judgment for the sum of $132 was taken by Gordon of DeKalb which was recovered against him by W. F. Osbaugh on August 29, 1922, before Justice of the Peace Rowe of DeKalb. The appeal was taken to the circuit court.

The accounting proceedings which were recently filed in the circuit court by the Hero Furnace Co. against the Standard Fdy. & Mfg. Co. both of Sycamore, were settled according to a stipulation signed by the respective parties filed in the clerk's office on October 3rd.

According to the stipulation defendant is to pay the sum of $1000 to the complainant in settlement in full accord and satisfaction of all claims of every character and kind between the parties.

The stipulation further requests that an order be entered in the suit "Suit settled, dismissed costs paid as per stipulation."

Maurice Hait, Herman Hoffman and Jay Wilson, commissioners appointed to make partition of the lands involved in the partition proceedings brought by Irel Dibble against Grant Dibble, Mattie McElhaney and Gertrude Miller, filed their report in the circuit clerk's office on Thursday.

The commissioners report that the property cannot be divided and appraise it as follows:

The east half of the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter, section 16, township 42 north range 4 east of the 3rd p. m. containing five acres, at 375.

The east half of the southwest quarter of the northwest quarter and the east half of the east half of the southwest quarter of Section 19, township 42 containing 58.48 acres at $1,000. A portion of the last mentioned tract having been set off as a homestead.

Ellsworth Weaver, 8 years of age, son of Everett Weaver of Clare was adjudged feeble-minded by a commission consisting of Drs. C. B. Brown and A. D. Bladgen, before Judge Pond in the county court on Tuesday and ordered committed to the Lincoln State School and Colony at Lincoln, Ill. Although eight years of age the tests showed that he had the mind of a child of four years. Of late he developed an insane desire to get up on high places such as the top of the silo or the roof of a barn and nothing could be done to stop this venturesome habit. As no doubt sooner or later this would have resulted in a serious injury or worse it was thought best to place him in an institution for proper treatment.

A treat is in store for Genoa this evening in the first number of the lyceum course to be given at the high school auditorium. This lyceum course, under the management of the well-known Mid-west Mutual Bureau, is under the auspices of the high school and sponsored by the business men of Genoa to secure for the community a series of entertainments of the high class represented by the lyceum.

Four number will be given, a sparkling comedy-drama; a splendid lecture, an evening of musical entertainment and Mr. Zellnar's famous impersonation and character portrayals. These will come thru the winter months, the first, Zellnar, appearing this (Thursday) evening.

He comes with the enthusiastic endorsement of press and public. ## SHERIFF DECKER IN FIGHT FOR LIFE

Drunken Man Overcome In a Hand-to-Hand Struggle

SHERIFF'S COAT-TAIL SHOT OFF

Shot Gun Fails to Hit Mark—Joe Meirath Beaten Until Unconscious $100 Fine and 5 Months in Jail

Sheriff William H. Decker of DeKalb county on Thursday afternoon had a narrow escape from almost certain death in a struggle with Joe Meirath, a madman, crazed from drinking moonshine liquor, when he attempted to take him into custody.

The coat worn by the sheriff was riddled from the charge of a repeating twelve gauge shot gun fired three times at him by Meirath and his escape from death was only a miracle.

On Thursday afternoon Meirath, who is working his father's farm about four miles west of Malta, consuming a quantity of the beverage placed his finger on his wife's forehead and told her that was the place he intended to shoot her. While he walked into another room for the gun his wife jumped through a window leaving behind her on the yard playing in an auto her four year old daughter. She ran to the school house near by and taking with her three other children of hers she notified the authorities at Malta and hailing a machine on the Lincoln highway proceeded to the police station at DeKalb.

Meirath in the meantime barricaded himself in the house and sent word to Mr. Chas. Pease who attempted to go near the house that he would kill the first person who undertook to arrest him.

Sheriff Decker was notified late Thursday afternoon and taking with him Fred Mitchell, one of his deputies, and several smoke bombs he proceeded to the farm where Meirath was located. Meirath in the meantime left the house and walked over to the yard of his neighbor, Chas. Henderson, taking up position there armed with the shotgun he threatened all those neighbors so that no one dared to get out of the house.

When the Sheriff's party arrived in the automobile the machine was left a considerable distance away so as not to create suspicion and Sheriff Decker who was unknown to Meirath attempted to engage in a conversation by asking who lived there.

While talking to Meirath, the Sheriff continued to close in on him until he was within a few feet of him. When the Sheriff attempted to draw his revolver Meirath brought the gun down and leveled it at him. The Sheriff succeeded in taking hold of the gun with one hand; in the other he held his revolver. Not wanting to kill Meirath, the Sheriff dropped his revolver and now took hold of the barrel of the shot gun with both hands. Meirath pulled the trigger of the shot gun and the charge just passed the side of the Sheriff. The next shot went on the other side taking with it a part of the coat worn by the Sheriff. Then Meirath succeeded in getting the gun in front of him until it was leveled directly at the Sheriff. Again fate intervened and this time the gun was discharged between the legs of the Sheriff into the floor. Both men now grappled with each other and both went to the floor, the man still holding on to the gun working to get it out of the Sheriff's hands.

In the meantime help came from the Sheriff's auto and Meirath after being beaten into submission was taken into custody.

Meirath is about six feet two inches tall, weighs about 235 pounds and before he began mixing the concoction that brought about his downfall is said to have borne a good reputation.

Sheriff W. H. Decker is about 57 years old and has served very efficiently during his term of office which will expire next December. He was recently nominated for county treasurer of DeKalb county and is very popular.

State's Attorney Poust on recommendation of the sheriff, filed information in the county court on Monday, charging Meirath with an assault with a deadly weapon and several violations of the prohibition act.

When Meirath was brought into court he presented a sad spectacle and bore evidence of the terrific struggle. The sheriff stated to the court

KNIGHT CAR SHOWS ECONOMY

One of the most remarkable instances of economy of operation of an automobile has been brought to light as the result of a purchase of a Willys-Knight car "sight unseen" by R. M. Bennett of Little Rock, Ark., according to local officials of the community.

In 1914 Mr. Bennett's father bought a Willys-Knight car, which up to the present time has seen 300,000 miles of service without one cent of repairs to the motor, and with relining of the brakes as the only mechanical expense. The original storage battery lasted seven years. On the strength of this performance Mr. Bennett ordered a sedan without demonstration.

"In 1914 my father, E. T. Bennett, purchased the first Willys-Knight car that came to Memphis. This car is now eight years old and is not only still running, but is more powerful and more quiet than on the date of purchase," he wrote to the factory.

"This machine has covered more than 300,000 miles and has not required one cent of repairs to the motor. The only mechanical work that has been done on this car is the relining of the brakes. The original storage battery lasted seven years.

"It is now being used and driven by my brother and has not seen a garage or overhead cover for the last four years.

"I am buying this Willys-Knight on the strength of the service that we have had and are still having from the old car.—Advertisement.

that Meirath had born a good reputation previous to this trouble and that he had a family of five and recommended that leniency be shown the prisoner and that he be given the sentence with which he was ultimately imposed; that is, a $100 fine and 5 months in the county jail and probation for 1 year after release.

The past week witnessed the baseball series between the Giants and the Yanks, but not more than a handful of citizens of this town were aware that the scores were coming in over the radiophone of H. J. Glass at the local electric shop and thence telephoned to the store of E. H. Browne.

The proprietors of the electric shop are getting ready to supply every one in town with any part or parts of a machine that they desire. ### The Hessian Fly Survey

The annual Hessian fly survey has just been completed and shows the Hessian fly to be present in slightly fewer numbers than in the fall of 1921, according to State Entomologist W. P. Flint.

Parasites that attack the Hessian fly are much more abundant than usual. Many of the northern counties show from 70 to 75 per cent of all flies reduced parasitized. The fly has been reduced by late seeding and parasites so that at present it is down to about as low a point as it ever reached. It is still present, however, and only needs a little encouragement to come back strong. Adhere as strictly as possible to the fly-free date of seeding.

In two seed plot localities the fly was so scarce that the earliest plots were very lightly infested, but the wheat from these plots did not give as good yields as from those sown after the fly-free date.

Apparently there will not be serious damage this season even though wheat is seeded early. Early seeding will tend to bring back the fly next year or the year following and, judging from results of our experiments, will not increase the yield. The yields were as follows:

Wheat Yields

Winter wheat variety trials, conducted by the University of Illinois experiment station on the crop production fields at DeKalb, in the northern section; Urbana, in the central section, and at Fairfield and Alhambra, in the southern section of the state, have demonstrated the value of certain varieties for their respective sections.

At DeKalb the high-yielding varieties during the last five-year period are: Hardy Northern, 32.8 bushels per acre.

Red Russian, 31.8 bushels per acre. Minnesota Reliable, 31.4 bushels per acre.

Wisconsin No. 18, 31.2 bushels per acre. World's Champion, 29.8 bushels per acre.

Turkey Red, 29.4 bushels per acre. These are all bearded hard red wheats.

At Urbana, the commercial varieties which have made the highest yield during the last seven-year period are: Turkey Red, 38.6 bushels per acre.

Malakoff 5-400, 38.1 bushels per acre. Dawson's Golden Chaff 9-225, 37.9 bushels per acre.

Minnesota Reliable, 37.8 bushels per acre. World's Champion, 37.7 bushels per acre.

Indiana Swamp, 37.7 bushels per acre. Beloginna, 37.1 bushels per acre.

These are all bearded hard red varieties, except Dawson's Golden Chaff 9-225. It is smooth and soft. Red Cross stands second as a smooth wheat, producing 34.9 bushels per acre. It is a semi-hard wheat.

Kaured and Turkey Red 10-110 have been in these trials during the last five years. Kaured produced 37.7 bushels per acre and Turkey Red 10-110 produced 36.9 bushels per acre. The station strain of ordinary Turkey Red produced 37.2 bushels per acre.

The highest yielding variety at Urbana in 1922 is Clark's Black Hull, grown for the first time this season. It produced 46.7 per acre.

The high-yielding varieties at Fairfield during the past six years are: Illini Chief, 25.7 bushels per acre. Red Cross, 25.0 bushels per acre. Harvest Queen, 24.8 bushels per acre. Marvelous, 24.8 bushels per acre. Fulcaster, 24.3 bushels per acre.

Jersey Fultz, 24.0 bushels per acre. Gypsy, 23.3 bushels per acre.

The Marvelous, Fulcaster and Gypsy are bearded wheats; the others are smooth. All are semi-hard or soft. Marvelous and Fulcaster are different names for apparently the same variety.

Trumbull, a smooth wheat, is a promising variety for this section.

Two yields obtained at Alhambra have, until this year, been low. The varieties having the highest average yield during the past three years are Fulcaster, Mediterranean and Illini Chief. They produced 20.9, 20.2 and 20.1 bushels per acre, respectively.

Clark's Black Hull, grown for the first time this year, produced 33.7 bushels per acre and was the highest yielding variety grown at Alhambra.

Utilizing Crop Residues

The time is not far distant when the value of straws, corn stalks, corn cobs and other crop residues will be much greater for industrial uses than their value as carriers of plant food elements and organic matter for soil improvement. Certain of these crop residues are rich in cellulose, sugars and similar materials from which alcohol, acetone and other organic solvents may be cheaply made by bacterial fermentation. Corn, potatoes, rice and other starchy materials are being used at the present time for the production of certain of these compounds.

With changing market and economic conditions, the coarser materials, such as the straws and stalks, will be sought for the manufacture of these solvents and other products. The increasing consumption of gasoline, coupled with possible exhaustion of the supply in the next decade, further emphasizes the important place which crop residues will fill from the standpoint of the country's production of motor power.

The question is sometimes raised as to the effect of not returning these materials to the soil. It may readily be answered by stating that the incorporation of ample quantities of leguminous materials has been shown to be much more effective in increasing crop yields than the utilization for similar purposes of straw and corn stalks and other high cellulose-containing materials. The decomposition of straw in soil ordinarily goes to carbon dioxide and water, while the decomposition of leguminous materials is not as complete, consequently leaving a nitrogenous residue which has a beneficial effect upon the soil.

Soils which are already well stocked with organic matter are not benefited by the return of the straw. Further, straw interferes with the production of nitrate of oxygen if present in the soil during the active months of nitrification. The proportion of nitrogen to carbon in legumes is decidedly more favorable to the bacterial activity of the soil than that of the straw, corn stalks, etc.

No serious trouble is anticipated when straw and cornstalks are removed from the soil for industrial uses, provided, as suggested above, that sufficient attention is given to the use of legumes for soil enrichment, particularly the sweet clover as a green manure.

Holding Wheat

Does it pay to hold wheat for the market? The following is reported from Bulletin 183, Illinois experiment station:
Gain from holding wheat and oats for highest price (cents per bushel).
Ten-year average price for August, wheat, 92.3; oats, 37.8.
Price necessary to compensate for 1.5 per cent shrinkage, wheat, 93.7; oats, 38.4.
Highest ten-year average price, wheat, 106.3 May; oats, 43.4 May-June.
Gain by holding for highest price, wheat, 12.6; oats, 5.0.

Considering the ten-year period, it would seem to be profitable, so far as shrinkage alone is concerned, to hold small grain until the time of highest prices; but there are other factors, such as interest, convenience to making delivery, condition of roads, cost of labor and storage, losses by rats and mice, and by insects (weevil, etc.), so local in character that only the individual farmer can give them proper consideration.

Bagging Grapes

For the home vineyard bagging grapes is desirable and profitable. The cost is small and the improved quality of the fruit pays well for the time and trouble. Grapes should be bagged as soon as the fruit is well set, about the time when the berries are about the size of a small pea. Two-pound manila grocer's bags are the best to use for bagging. The bag must be pinned above the cane which bears the fruit and not tied around the stem of the cluster. Bagging serves to protect the clusters against birds, insect injury, fungi and the weather. Grapes when bagged are free from sunscald and other disfigurement, and present an attractive, fresh appearance that gives the grower a fancy product for his own home use.

Great Reservoirs of India.
For conserving her water supply there are to be found in India tremendous artificial lakes. At Dhebar, in the Rajputana province, for instance, there is a reservoir with a superficial area of 21 square miles; the masonry dam measuring over 300 yards in length and 32 yards in height. In southern India, too, there are several reservoirs over 12 square miles in area.

Death After Few Days' Sleeplessness.
The longest period of complete and continuous insomnia authentically recorded terminated on the ninth day with the death of the victim after horrible suffering.

THE SEXES AT MIDDLE AGE
Woman Invariably Remains Younger Than the Man, Declares Writer in Eastern Magazine.

"If we consider the average middle-aged woman," writes W. L. George, "her faculty for adopting new ideas, for being converted to new religions, however incredible, for packing her day with occupations such as social intercourse, dress, causes, occupations which may be entirely imbecile, it surely must be agreed that she retains more characteristics of childhood, or, if you like, savagery, than does her sold husband, plodding away at his office, making money with dull enthusiasm, and going to sleep after a day devoid of phantasms."

"It is likely that the middle-aged woman is younger than the middle-aged man. She thinks herself very clever, but as a rule she is the baby of the pair, and if it comes to a struggle where one must outwit the other, the man will usually prevail if he puts his mind to anything so futile. If women often beat men at the game of intrigue, it is mainly because men can't be bothered; they're generally thinking of something else."

"That is the central point. Most men, when they reach the shadow line, are infinitely more interested in their ambitions, in their career, in the making of money, than in the quest for love. They have passed through all that, if they are lucky, and if they have not passed through it, love encounters formidable rivals. I am sure that this day many lonely women are bitterly saying, 'What's a woman by the side of a career?'"—Harper's Magazine.

MUST HAVE WORD FOR LOVE

Suggestion That Oldtime "Sweetheart" Be Substituted for Allen "Fiancee" Seems Worth Considering.

The old belief that "love hath no need of words" has proved itself to be wrong, declares London Answers. When you become engaged to be married you cannot introduce the future sharer of your domestic life by taking her up to a friend and saying:

"This is my—" and do the rest with a display of eye work. Yet that is what we were told—that "love spoke with the eyes." The poor man would think that love had driven you mad.

We had to find some word to describe our own chosen one of the fair sex, and we selected, of all things—fiancee, a French, and at its best a terribly sounding word.

At last, however, a protest has been made, and "betrothed" has been suggested. The word sounds sweet on a poet's lips.

He is the first flower of my freshest age
Betrothed me into the only heir.

"Beloved" has been another suggestion, but the dear old word "sweetheart" requires a lot of beating. But whether it is betrothed, beloved, sweetheart or even a new word—new words are always creeping into the language, so why shouldn't we have a new one for love?—don't please, call her your fiancée-say.

REMINDEES OF OLD DETROIT

"Ribbon Farms" of Early French Settlers May Be Traced in Names of Various Streets.

Traces of the French "ribbon farms" in Detroit remain in the names of streets crossed in going along East Jefferson avenue. Of roads there, was little need, though an Indian trail, later called the River road, led along the bank and out what is now West Jefferson avenue, across the Black swamp to the country of "les Bastonnais." The river was the broad highway down which the Campaus, Chenes, Rivards and their neighbors went to Fort Ponchartrain du Detroit on market days, says the Burton Historical Collection Leaflet published by the Detroit Public Library.

During the early years of the American occupation (1706-1805) a compact little town still surrounded by high pickets similar to those which had enclosed Fort Ponchartrain occupied the site of the old fort. Back of it on the hill from which the Fox Indians had attacked the settlement in 1712, stood Ft. Lemoult (called Ft. Shelby under re-occupation of the Americans under Gen. McArthur, September 29, 1813), built by the English during the War for American Independence. Already there were "suburbs," as the space within the pickets was becoming crowded, but the barrier was highly prized by Detroit conservatives, 12 of whom voted in the election of April 28, 1804, to replace the pickets which Colonel Hunt had ordered removed. But there were 13 progressives who approved the removal. The water front at that time was a high bluff, and the river came up to Woodbridge street.—Detroit News.

FRUIT HAS DIVERS FLAVORS

Durion, Growing Only in Burma, Highly Esteemed by Some and Disliked by Others.

In Burma is found a curious and delicious fruit, called the durion. This fruit grows on a tree of about sixty feet in height. It is oval-shaped, from ten to twelve inches in length and from six to eight feet in diameter. It is of a light green color and the outside is covered with thorns half an inch long. These thorns are very tough and strong. The interior is divided into five sections, in which lie rows of seeds about an inch long, surrounded with the delicious pulp, which is considered a great delicacy by those who like it. Others dislike the taste. The flavor is described as follows: "Take the sweetest bananas, the richest pineapples, the most juicy of oranges, some peaches and cream, flavor the mixture with some rare spice, and you might have something that would resemble a durion." It has a pungent, spicy fragrance which is greatly admired by many, and not liked by others. The king of Burma used to send every year special steamers to Moulmein, Burma, to procure royal specimens of this most royal fruit.

Power of Sight in Animals.

The two familiar expressions, "An eagle's eye" and "Blind as a bat," just about sum up the average person's knowledge of the sense of sight in animals. The popular impression is that all large, dangerous animals of the jungle have powerful eyes; but, in fact, many are decidedly weak in sight.

The elephant has poor eyes, and relies on his other senses, mostly on smell, to compensate for this, writes L. E. Eubanks in Our Dumb Animals. Also the rhinoceros sees but a short distance, and depends on his sense of smell, even in charging an enemy. The buffalo has good eyes, but those of the bear are so poor that when a little confused he will run directly over the hunter he is trying to avoid. Bears' eyes are dramatically described as "red rimmed and savage," but bears, ordinarily, are not quarrelsome, and prefer to use their eyes in retreat.

Wasting Sunshine.

"The greatest waste is our failure to utilize, not our carelessness in methods of utilization," says Edwin E. Stosson, noted scientist and writer. "We waste two-thirds of our coal before its energy gets into the engine. But we waste all of the sunshine that falls upon our arid region lands, and that means a greater loss of energy than we get from all our oil and coal. The richest region in the United States is Death valley, California. Even the green leaves are not able to catch and incorporate more than 1 per cent of the power of the sunshine that falls upon them. If some one would invent a solar engine with an efficiency of even 5 per cent it would add incalculably to the wealth of the country through the utilization of the wasted sunbeams that fall upon our arid land."

Beautiful Girls Sold as Slaves.

The Abyssinian girls are remarkably pretty, with large eyes and delicately-shaped features. These girls are brought down from the Galla country by the slave-dealers from Abyssinia. The opposing tribes often at war are only too happy to sell their female prisoners to the Arab slave traders.

These people bring down the young girls in gangs by various routes, but the principal outlet is the Red sea, about Massowa. A great market is at Gallabat, the frontier town of Abyssinia. There, says a correspondent, I have seen them crowded together in mat tents, awaiting for purchasers, from those commissioned to procure slaves by the wealthy Arabs and Turkish officials.

NO RIVER LIKE THE JORDAN

Characteristics of Historic Stream Have No Counterparts Elsewhere in the World.

In one matter, Palestine enjoys an advantage obvious at once to the student of her maps. The River Jordan, which Joshua crossed dryshod, in which Naaman the Syrian bathed away his leprosy, and where John the Baptist preached, is unique. Among the rivers of the world, there is no other like it. The source of the Jordan is 900 feet above sea level. From that source to its outflow, the distance is only sixty miles, but it is a distance which the river itself, by the frequent winding, more than trebles. The outflow is not into any open sea, but into a lake surrounded entirely by mountains and exhausted only by evaporation or soaking of the water into its bleak and desolate shores. This lake is so charged with various salts that to sink in its waters is impossible, while bathing severely tests the complexion. Most remarkable of all is the fact that the lake, supposed to contain the ruins of Sodom, Gomorrah and other cities of the plain, is situated 1,300 feet or thereabouts below the level of the sea. Nowhere, not in the Grand canyon itself, is there a phenomenon so mysterious and so sensational.—P. W. Wilson in the World's Work.

STILL BELIEVE IN WITCHES

Alaskan Indians Cling to Old Superstition Despite All the Teachings of Missionaries.

The primitive trait to shift the blame for one's misfortunes to some one else, still endures among the Thlinget Indians of Alaska in the form of witchcraft, despite the efforts of the missionaries and the presence of white settlers. When sickness or trouble of any kind falls on a community and endures more than the ordinary length of time, the word goes forth that the village has been "witched" by some enemy dwelling among them.

Twenty years ago each tribe had its witch doctor whose duty it was to detect witches, but since the government authorities abolished these medicine men, witches are detected in other ways. They are still punished as they were before the white man came, with this difference: In the old days death followed torture. Now the victim is tortured and ostracized. The most efficacious punishment, according to the Thlingets, is thrusting a stick through the looped hair and twisting the scalp off the unfortunate victim.

Evolution of Name "London."

The name "London" dates back to the time when the inhabitants of Great Britain were wild and uncivilized and when the Thames was much wider than it is at present. In fact, this river was then a sort of lake or lagoon up which the tide came from the sea.

It was upon this body of water that the Celts built a rude sort of fort, to which they referred as "the fort on the lagoon," or in Celtic "cair Londun." Upon their invasion of England, the Romans adopted the same name with a slight alteration to enable it to fit into the Latin, and the town was then known as "Londinium." It was during the Roman occupation that the place grew to be an important town, and even after Romans departed, the Latin term clung to the city until well on into the Middle ages, when the gradual trend away from the strict Latin form caused the elimination of the last two syllables and the changing of the first "i" into an "o" thus producing the name "London," precisely as it is today.

Path of English Liberty.

Alfred the Great had his troubles in establishing trial by jury. The judges refused to submit cases to judges, and then Alfred would hang the judges. He hanged 44 of them in one year following convictions of impeachment before a grand council, known as the "wittenagemote," which was the real beginning of the English parliament. The Normans came and turned things topsy-turvy for a time, but in the reign of King John the barons of England took the bit in their teeth and forced the Magna Charta upon the king. The Plantagenets, Tudors and Stuarts, all full fed on the doctrine of the divine right of kings, tried to administer justice in their own several fashions, but this only led to the revolution of 1688, which established the bill of rights and set the people of England free.

Pat Knew What He Meant.

The village constable found Pat moaning and writhing by the roadside. "Hello, Pat! What's the matter with you?" he asked. "Who've you been fighting with?" "Sure it's not fighting at all that I've been," replied Pat. "A couple of motor bikes and side whisks came tartin' by an' one of the whisks took me in the back and landed me in the hedge." "You mean side cars—not side whisks," said the policeman. "Indeed, I do not," replied Pat. "They both whisked off before I could get their numbers!"

The Impression One Gets.

"You've traveled much?" "Oh, I've been everywhere." "Tell me something." "Well?" "What size tip do you have to give a prime minister abroad?"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Pigs Not Naturally Dirty.

Pigs are popularly looked upon as dirty animals, but they are not really so, and the unclean appearance of the domestic porker is generally the result of the condition of its sty. In its wild state, the pig keeps itself clean by bathing in river or lake, and rubbing until dry against tree trunks.

Marriage a la Mode.

It is well life in the South seas is so simple and not complicated by social or financial pressure; otherwise, their young married set would have a difficult time, for the average age of the bride is twelve and that of the bridegroom seventeen. Usually the woman does the proposing and the man waits to be chosen.

French "Reign of Terror."

That period of the French revolution known as the reign of terror is generally considered to have extended from January 21, 1793, the date of the execution of Louis XVI, to July 28, 1794, when Robespierre and other sanguinary leaders were guillotined.

Mountaineering Comparatively New.
Mountaineering for its own sake is comparatively recent; even since the invention of photography few people who have not made an ascent can comprehend the thrilling uplift of spirit that comes at the top of a high mountain after a long and difficult climb. Mont Blanc, 15,781 feet high, was first ascended in 1786, and at that time writers had only expressions of horror for the attempt.—Youth's Companion.

These tropical rains descend with great violence. In the year following the three years' drought, there was a rainfall of 150 inches, 10 inches falling in one night.

NUT HAS HIGH FOOD VALUE
Seed of Pinon Is Not as Fully Appreciated in This Country as Its Qualities Deserve.

Few easterners are familiar with the Indian nut, a tiny but wonderfully flavored and nourishing pine tree seed. This nut, which finds high favor on New York's lower east side, is much misunderstood. It is called an Indian nut and mountain nut, but most people believe it comes from China.
It is found only in North and South America and is the seed of the pinon pine. It is about the size of a navy bean, is autumnal brown in color, with dapples and striations of a deeper brown, making it beautiful to look at. It is highly charged with oil and is most delicious. It is the principal food of mountain squirrels or chipmunks.
The wood of the tree which produces this seed is the best firewood in the world. It burns slowly, produces beautiful colors of flame and great heat. It abounds most profusely in the temperate zone Rockies. The Colorado Rockies produce it in great quantities.
Another peculiar fact relative to the pinon nut is that it finds no favor in its native country excepting among the squirrels. There is little sale for pinon nuts in the West, but the western mountaineers make much pin money gathering the nuts for the markets of the big eastern cities.

Indians in Confederate Army.
In the latter part of 1861 the Cherokee nation entered into a treaty of alliance with the Confederate states and agreed to furnish a regiment of troops for the Confederate military service. The regiment became demoralized and practically ceased to exist soon after the battle of Pea Ridge, Ark., in 1862.

RECORDS FOR SWIFT TRAVEL

Projectile From Gun Has Greatest Velocity, but Light and Electricity Are Easily First.

What are the slowest and speediest things on earth? Scientists believe light and electricity, which travel 186,000 feet a second, are the fastest, and the human thumb, which grows two one-millionths of a yard a second, is probably the slowest.
The fastest material thing on earth is thought to be the projectile from a gun, the velocity from which is 2,000 miles an hour. According to sporting records a man can walk a mile in 6 1/2 minutes, and run it in 4 1/2 minutes.
Probably the fastest speed at which a steam engine and train ever ran over the rails was in 1901, when an engine and train reached a speed of 120 miles an hour, or two miles a minute.
Tommy Milton traveled in an auto at the rate of one mile in little more than 23 seconds. An electric train between Berlin and Zossen attains a speed of 130 miles an hour, which is the highest ever attained by a railroad train.
The highest speed attained by an aviator is that of De Romanet, the French aviator, who reached 193 miles an hour. It has been reported, however, that this speed has been exceeded in this country.

Bee's Sting.
A bee loses its sting and its life when it stings a person, because of the peculiar shape of the sting. It is usually a working bee that stings humans, for, although the queen has a sting, she generally uses it upon rivals only. The working bee's sting is just a tube which carries the poison. The tube is fitted with two sharply-toothed minute saws, which are driven into the wound alternately. If the person who is being stung remains perfectly still, the bee can withdraw its sting, somewhat after the fashion of a cork screw—that is, by moving round in a circular direction. In which case, of course, it lives to sting again. Usually however, the outraged human retaliates on the bee, which, driven away perforce leaves its sting, tearing away a portion of the stomach to which it is attached, and so killing itself.

GATHER IN WHEAT

Farmers of Western Canada Rejoice at Harvest.

Largest Crop in the History of the Fertile Provinces May Be Considered Assured.

Reports of Western Canada's wheat crop, which may be considered fairly accurate, as they are made at the end of the season, when the crop is fully harvested, would indicate a yield of between 350,000,000 and 370,000,000 bushels from a total acreage of 21,471,000. This is the greatest yield in the history of the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. This immense yield has only been harvested through the combined energies of all public bodies—railways and governments. It required the assistance, outside of that locally employed, of upward of 40,000 men. These were brought into the country from the East, the West and the South, by railroads, and rushed forward at express speed, to be placed in the different districts, under the direction of officials who were kept advised daily, by wire, of the needs.

As a result of this combined effort the largest wheat crop in the history of the West was successfully harvested. The threshing reports show that almost universally, in every section of the country, the grain graded high. In very few places did rain interfere with stacking. The province of Manitoba was the first to complete threshing, very few fields being left at the time of writing.

Portions of Saskatchewan that had suffered from drought for the past two or three years reaped a crop that largely made up for past disappointments.

In Alberta there was a strange condition. In the central district, always noted for its heavy yields, there was considerable of a falling off. Instead of the 35 and 40 bushel yields the average ran from 10 to 12, while in southern portions, where drought had affected the country for some time past, there were exceptionally high yields.

Reports of individual yields in different portions of the three provinces lead to the impression that when threshing returns are in there will be found to have been a much better crop than at present seems possible. Some of these returns give individual farmers as getting as high as 45 bushels others 35, and so on, while in some districts, where in early August not more than 8 or 10 bushels might be looked for, 15 and 18 bushels are recorded. The improvement having been brought about by rains that worked marvels in the appearance of the crop. And then, too, instead of the head carrying four rows, most of them carried six rows, and filled to the top, which, to those who know, means at least fifty per cent more.

The rye crop of all Western Canada is exceptionally good; the oats generally good and barley fair.

The weather at the time of writing is threatening for a rainy spell, which may interfere with threshing, and prolong it somewhat.

Most of the newcomers from the States have excellent crops. During August, the trains to Western Canada carried hundreds of capitalists and others interested in Western Canada land, going up to take care of the crop that they had arranged to have put in on the land they owned. Very few of them will be disappointed.—Advertisement.

But at the table that noon Aunt Jane read it to Father out loud. So that's how I came to know just what was in it. She started first to hand it over to him to read; but as he put out his hand to take it I guess he saw the handwriting, for he drew back quickly, looking red and queer.

"From Mrs. Anderson to you?" he asked. And when Aunt Jane nodded her head he sat still further back in his chair and said, with a little wave of his hand, "I never care to read—other people's letters."

Aunt Jane said, "Stuff and nonsense. Charles, don't be silly!" But she pulled back the letter and read it—after giving a kind of an uneasy glance in my direction.

Then Aunt Jane cleared her throat and spoke.
"You will not let her go, of course. Charles; but naturally I had to read the letter to you. I will write to Mrs. Anderson tonight."

Father looked up then.
"Yes," he said quietly; "and you may tell her, please, that Mary will go."

"Charles!"
Aunt Jane said that. But I—I almost ran around the table and hugged him. (Oh, how I wish he was the kind of a father you could do that to!)

"Charles!" said Aunt Jane again.
"Surely you aren't going to give in so tamely as this to that child and her mother!"

"I'm not giving in at all, Jane," said Father, very quietly again. "I am consulting my own wishes in the matter. I prefer to have her go."

"I'm most cried out then. Some way, it hurt to have him say it like that, right out—that he wanted me to go. You see, I'd begun to think he was getting so he didn't mind so very much having me here. All the last two weeks he'd been different, really different. But more of that anon. I'll go on with what happened at the table. And, as I said, I did feel bad to have him speak like that. And I can remember now just how the lump came right up in my throat."

Then Aunt Jane spoke, stiff and dignified.
"Oh, very well, of course, if you put it that way. You are quite well understood that you would want her to go—for your sake. But I thought that, under the circumstances, you would manage somehow to put up with the noise and—"

"Jane!" Just like that he interrupted, and he thundered, too, so that Aunt Jane actually jumped. And I guess I did, too. He had sprung to his feet. "Jane, let us close this matter once for all. I am not letting the child go for my sake. I am letting her go for her own. So far as I am concerned, if I consulted no one's wishes but my own, I should—keep her here always."

With that he turned and strode from the room, leaving Aunt Jane and me just staring after him.

But only for a minute did I stare. It came to me then what he had said—that he would like to keep me here always. For I had heard it, even if he had said the last word very low, and in a queer, indistinct voice. I was sure I had heard it, and I suddenly realized what it meant. So I ran after him; and that time if I had found him, I think I would have hugged him. But I didn't find him. He must have gone quite away from the house. He wasn't even out to the observatory. I went out to see.

The next day he was more as he has been since we had that talk in the parlor. And he has been different since then, you know. He really has. He has talked quite a lot with me, as I have said, and I think he's been trying part of the time, to find something I'll be interested in. Honestly, I think he's been trying to make up for Carrie Heywood and Stella Mayhew and Charlie Smith and Mr. Livingstone. I think that's why he took me to walk that day in the woods, and why he took me out to the observatory to see the stars quite a number of times.

Twice he's asked me to play to him, and once he asked me if Mary wasn't about ready to gress up in Marie's clothes again. But he was joking then, I knew; for Aunt Jane was right there in the house. Besides, I saw the twinkle in his eyes that I've seen there once or twice before. I just love that twinkle in Father's eyes!

But that hasn't come any since Mother's letter to Aunt Jane arrived. He's been the same in one way, yet different in another. Honestly, if it didn't seem too wildly absurd for anything, I should say he was actually sorry to have me go. But, of course, that isn't possible. Oh, yes, I know he said that day at the dinner table that he should like to keep me always. But I don't think he really meant it. He hasn't acted a mite like that since, and

I guess he said it just to hush up Aunt Jane, and make her stop arguing the matter. Anyway, I'm going tomorrow. And I'm so excited I can hardly breathe.

CHAPTER VI. When I Am Both Together.

BOSTON AGAIN.

Well, I came last night. Mother and Grandfather and Aunt Hattie and Baby Lester all met me at the station. And, my! wasn't I glad to see them? Well, I just guess I was!

I was specially glad on account of having such a dreadful time with Father that morning. I mean, I was feeling specially lonesome and homesick, and not-belonging-anywhere like. He never even spoke at the breakfast-table. (He wasn't there hardly long enough to speak, anyway, and he never ate a thing, only his coffee—I mean he drank it.) Then he pushed his chair back from the table and stalked out of the room.

He went to the station with me; but he didn't talk there much, only to ask if I was sure I hadn't forgotten anything, and was I warmly clad. Warmly clad, indeed! And there it was still August, and hot as it could be! But that only goes to show how absent-minded he was, and how little he was really thinking of me!

Oh, I did so hope he wouldn't go down to the junction. It's so hard to be taken care of "because it's my duty, you know!" But he went. I told him he needn't, when he was getting on the train with me. I told him I just knew I could do it beautifully all by myself, almost-a-young lady like me. But he only put his lips together hard.

Yes, I know it's been ages since I've written here in this book; but there just hasn't been a minute's time.

First, of course, school began, and I had to attend to that. And, of course, I had to tell the girls all about Andersonville—except the parts I didn't want to tell, about Stella Mayhew, and my coming out of school. I didn't tell that. And right here let me say how glad I was to get back to this school—a real school—so different from that one up in Andersonville! For that matter, everything's different here from what it is in Andersonville. I'd so much rather be Marie than Mary. I know I won't ever be Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde here. I'll be the good one all the time.

Mother's a dear. And she's so happy! And, by the way, I think it is the violinist. He's here a lot, and she's out with him to concerts and plays, and riding in his automobile. And she always puts on her prettiest dresses, and she's very particular about her shoes, and her hats, that they're becoming, and all that. Oh, I'm so excited! And I'm having such a good time watching them! Oh, I don't mean watching them in a disagreeable way, so that they see it; and, of course, I have to get all I can—for the book, you know; and, of course, if I just happen to be in the window-seat corner in the library and hear things accidentally, why, that's all right.

And I have heard things.
He says her eyes are lovely. He likes her best in blue. He's very lonely, and he never found a woman before who really understood him. He thinks her soul and his are tuned to the same string. (Oh, dear! That sounds funny and horrid, and not at all the way it did when he said it. It was beautiful then. But—well, that is what it meant, anyway.)

She told him she was lonely, too, and that she was very glad to have him for a friend; and he said he prized her friendship above everything else in the world. And he looks at her, and follows her around the room with his eyes; and she blushes up real pink and pretty lots of times when he comes into the room.

Now, if that isn't making love to each other, I don't know what is. I'm sure he's going to propose. Oh, I'm so excited!

I haven't heard from Father. Now just my writing that down that way shows that I expected to hear from him, though I don't really see why I should, either. Of course, he never has written to me; and, of course, I understand that I'm nothing but his daughter by order of the court. But, some way, I did think maybe he'd write me just a little bit of a note in answer to mine—my bread-and-butter letter, I mean; for, of course, Mother had me write that to him as soon as I got here.

But he hasn't. I wonder how he's getting along, and if he misses me any. But, of course, he doesn't do that. If I was a star, now—and said, cold, like ice: "Are you then so eager to be rid of me?" Just as if I was the one that was eager to get rid of somebody!

Well, as I said, he went. But he wasn't much better on the train than he had been in the station. He was as nervous and fidgety as a witch, and he acted as if he did so wish it would be over, and over quick. But at the junction—at the junction a funny thing happened. He put me on the train, just as Mother had done, and spoke to the conductor. (How I hated to have him do that! Why, I'm six whole months older, 'most, than I was when I went up there!) And then, when he'd put me in my seat (Father, I mean; not the conductor), all of a sudden he leaned over and kissed me; kissed me—Father! Then, before I could speak, or even look at him, he was gone; and I didn't see him again, though it must have been five whole minutes before that train went.

I had a nice trip down to Boston, though nothing much happened. This conductor was not near so nice and polite as the one I had coming up; and there wasn't any lady with a baby to play with, nor any nice young gentleman to loan me magazines or buy candy for me. But it wasn't a very long ride from the junction to Boston, anyway. So I didn't mind. Besides, I knew I had Mother waiting for me.

And wasn't I glad to get there? Well, I just guess I was! And they acted as if they were glad to see me—Mother, Grandfather, Aunt Hattie, and even Baby Lester. He knew me, and remembered me. He'd grown a lot, too. And they said I had, and that I looked very nice. (I forgot to say that, of course, I had put on the Marie clothes to come home in—though I honestly think Aunt Jane wanted to send me home in Mary's blue gingham and calfskin shoes. As if I'd have appeared in Boston in that rig!)

My, but it was good to get into an automobile again and just go! And it was so good to have folks around you dressed in something besides don't-care black alpaca and stiff collars. And I said so. And Mother seemed so pleased.

"You did want to come back to me, darling, didn't you?" she cried, giving me a little hug. And she looked so happy when I told her all over again how good it seemed to be Marie again, and have her and Boston, and automobiles, and pretty dresses and folks and noise again.

She didn't say anything about Father then; but later, when we were up in my pretty room alone, and I was taking off my things, she made me tell her that Father hadn't won my love away from her, and that I didn't love him better than I did her; and that I wouldn't rather stay with him than with her.

And she asked was he lonesome; and I told her no, I didn't think so; and that, anyway, he could have all the ladies' company he wanted by just being around when they called. And when she asked what I meant, I told her about Mrs. Darling, and the rest, and how they came evenings and Sundays, and how Father didn't like them, but would flee to the observatory. And she laughed and looked funny, for a minute. But right away she changed and looked very sober, with the kind of expression she has when she stands up in church and says the Apostles' Creed on Sunday; only this time she said she was very sorry, she was sure; that she hoped my father would find some estimable woman who would make a good home for him.

Then the dinner-gong sounded, and she didn't say any more.
There was company that evening. The violinist. He brought his violin, and he and Mother played a whole hour together. He's awfully handsome. I think he's lovely. Oh, I do so hope he's the one! Anyhow, I hope there's some one. I don't want this novel to all fizzle out without there being any one to make it a love story! Besides, as I said before, I'm particularly anxious that Mother shall find somebody to marry her, so she'll stop being divorced, anyway.

A MONTH LATER
Yes, I know it's been ages since I've written here in this book; but there just hasn't been a minute's time.

Veils Decorate Fall Hats; Winter Coats for Tots

IT IS the whim of designers often to use the veil on new millinery, for veiling or decorating the hat, instead of the face. They add it as a coquettish allurements to millinery already fascinating. Perhaps they have pondered Shakespeare's "Why veil the rose's bloom?" or perhaps they have determined that veils are more becoming as a background than as a screen for the features of beauty. Any arrangement on the season's wonderful millinery.

Now that the flurry and excitement of "getting the children ready for school" has subsided, the next number on the program is the selection of little daughter's winter coat.

This is really a momentous question in that it must be considered from many viewpoints. Especially is this so, since the element of style enters so way, they have found new ways of placing it on all sorts of fall and winter headwear and a few of them are shown in the group of hats pictured here.

The face veil is not left out of the season's recocking by any means, but it is another story. Women experiment with the new weaves, meshes and colors and buy their face veils at the same time that they buy their street hats—if they wear veils at all. Their choice is all a matter of becomingness. It is the business of the face veil to enhance the becomingness of the hat, to contribute to neatness of appearance and to protect the complexion. This season's face veils are mostly fine-mesh affairs inconspicuous and delicate, many of them without borders. A bordered face veil appears in the group of decorative veils, at the bottom of the picture.

It entirely covers a soft, felt street hat and corresponds with its simple trimming—merely a collar of ribbon decorated with soutache braid.

At the top of the group a pretty hat of dark colored velvet, with brim facing of lighter color, is brightened by circles of iridescent beads on the crown. A heavy, square-meshed silk veil is drawn about the brim, falling largely into the realm of juvenile apparel.

Durability, suitability and that intangible but exacting quality of style all have to be taken into consideration. It makes a difference as to whether the little one's coat is for every day or "dress up" occasions, or must, perhaps serve for both. Of course if one can afford it, two coats are better than one.

For general practical wear, chin-chilla cloth is the preference for coats for tiny tots. The strictly tailored mode is a leading influence in this class. Bolivia is also practical and some dealers declare it is most in demand. Heavy wool sports fabrics, many with either contrasting solid or plaid backs are also developed in these tailored models.

Broadcloth, duvetyne, and suedine for "Sunday best" are fashioned into most alluring garments. These have considerable shirring and smocking and frequently the yoke is introduced. Gray with gray fur is favored, also white with unspotted ermine collar. Brown is especially good, ranging from seal to light-wood tones.

Miniature fur coats, fashioned like mother's own, are the delight of the little one's season. For these beaver or squirrel are employed, and an interesting model was recently displayed in raccoon, copied after big sister's sports coat.

Fu is a foremost trimming feature for cloth coats in the juvenile world of fashion, and the collars are matched with hats of squirrel or beaver.

A FRIEND IN NEED A FRIEND INDEED

Writes Mrs. Hardee Regarding Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Los Angeles, Calif.—"I must tell you that I am a true friend to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken it off and on for twenty years and it has helped me change from a delicate girl to a stout, healthy woman. When I was married I was sick all the time until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in bed much of my time with pains and had to have the doctor every month. One day I found a little book in my yard in Guthrie, Oklahoma, and I read it through and got the medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and took eight bottles and used the Sarsaparilla Wash. I at once began to get stronger. I have got many women to take it just by telling them what it has done for me. I have a young sister whom it has helped in the same way it helped me. I want you to know that I am a 'friend indeed' for you were a 'friend in need.'"

Remarkable Recovery Case in Serious Kidney Case.

This letter, from George Roberts of Church street, Malpas, Cheshire, England, sounds almost unbelievable, yet every word is true and was signed before a notary public.

For eleven years I suffered acute pain and sickness. I consulted several prominent doctors and each one had a different opinion. At last I was put under X-rays and it was found I was suffering from gall stones. My doctors and the specialist at the Royal Infirmary, Chester, told me they were not porous and no medicine in the world would move them, so there remained nothing for it but an operation. When my wife heard this she told me to get Dodd's Kidney Pills, as they had cured her when she suffered from black jaundice and gall stones. It is now nineteen years since my wife felt any symptoms of these troubles. I purchased a quantity of Dodd's Kidney Pills and took them according to directions. This is seven years ago and I have had no return of the trouble.

It was a surprise for all the doctors. They had to admit the fact as I was under the X-rays several times, and for a while they did not know what to make of it, until they found they had disappeared altogether. They asked me what I had been taking and were not pleased when I told them Dodd's Kidney Pills. I am enjoying the best of health and have lost no time through sickness. I also suffered with rheumatism as well as gall stones before I was cured by taking Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Allies and Kemalists Decide on Armistice Plan, and Then Comes Disagreement.

ISMET DEMANDS TOO MUCH

Insists Turkish Army Must Enter Thrace Immediately—Greeks Want American Help—Reginald McKenna's Advice on War Debts—Woman Appointed Senator From Georgia.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

RUSSIA is determined to be a party to the peace conference of the Near East. Turkey says Russia and all other nations bordering on the Black sea must be represented in the meeting. France finds her policy regarding the Near East is almost identical with that of Russia, and therefore will probably favor the admission of the soviet government to the conference.

Do you think this would be both just and wise, and that soviet Russia's rulers have so far receded from their extreme policies that they are now entitled to representation in conferences of the powers?

IF, as now seems likely, the crisis in the Near East passes without warfare between Turkey and Great Britain the credit may be given largely to two men and to the good judgment of their governments in giving them a free hand. Those two are General Harrington, commander of the British forces there, and M. Franklin-Bouillon, the skillful Frenchman who negotiated the preliminaries to the armistice conference at Mudania. Between them are succeeding in bringing about a peaceful settlement and at the same time "saving face" for their countries. This latter, of course, was sorely needed for France, but England had to recede from the position assumed for her by Premier Lloyd George and is now enabled to do so fairly gracefully.

Since Ismet Pasha, representing the Turkish Nationalists, was quite conciliatory, an agreement was speedily reached at Mudania giving eastern Thrace to the Turks and placing Constantinople under dual control of the allies and the Nationalists. The latter are to establish civil authorities in the capital, but agree that the allies shall remain there and control the port until definite peace arrangements are made. Eventually the Turks are to have full military and naval control of Turkish territory. Meanwhile the Nationalists agree to get out of the neutral zone and the British retire from Chanak to Gallipoli. Greece is given ten days to evacuate Thrace up to the Maritza river, and if she fails to do so the allies will blockade Greek ports and permit the Turkish Nationalists to send troops across the straits to push the Greeks out. This plan seemed to give assurance of speedy settlement of the whole affair, but on Thursday Ismet Pasha suddenly changed his attitude and vehemently demanded that the Turkish army be allowed to enter Thrace immediately. He would not listen to the arguments of General Harrington, and the result was a temporary rupture of the conference. The allied generals asked their governments for further instructions and meanwhile they returned to Constantinople.

The fighting spirit of the Greek army in Thrace has been revived and both the soldiers and their officers believe they can successfully resist occupation of that territory by the Turks. Probably they must yield eventually, and this is admitted by Venizelos, who is acting as Greek ambassador at large. His present concern is the safety of the Greek population in Thrace, and he asked Ambassador Harvey in London to transmit to Washington a request that the United States persuade the allies to take steps to protect those Greeks and to prevent Turkish troops from crossing to Thrace until the Christians there have been evacuated. Already there are strong bodies of Turkish irregulars in Thrace and, to prevent atrocities and protect property, three military missions composed of British, French and Italian officers have gone to Adrianople, Lulue Burgins and Rodosto.

THE United States has sent 12 destroyers to the Near East to reinforce our naval fleet there and help in protecting life and property, but there is not the remotest chance of America's being drawn into war there. Bishop James Cannon of the Methodist church, South, sent rather hysterical cables to the State department from Constantinople urging militant intervention to save Christians in the East from Turkish massacres. In reply Secretary Hughes said the government had done and was doing all it could in this way through representations and by helping in the evacuation of the refugees from Smyrna. He concluded:

"As you are probably aware, the executive has no authority to go beyond this and there has been no action by congress which would justify this government in an attempt by armed forces to pacify the Near East or to engage in acts of war in order to accomplish the results you desire with respect to the inhabitants of that territory and to determine the problems which have vexed Europe for generations."

THOUGH the revolutionists in Greece are having considerable trouble in getting together a cabinet, they are making progress in other ways and the new government may be considered as established. Actual recognition of King George II by the allied powers and the United States is expected soon. Former King Constantine and his wife and younger son are in Palermo, Italy, and it is said they will come to America.

Jugo-Slavia had been credited with hostile designs on Greek territory in western Thrace, but the Serbian minister to Athens has reassured the new government on this point, at the same time stating that his country would like to be assured free port rights at Saloniki. He said Greece could count on Serbia's help in restraining Bulgaria should she become aggressive.

DISPATCHES from Moscow indicate that the Turkish affair has brought within sight a rapprochement between France and Russia, which have been such bitter enemies since the advent of the soviet regime. As was stated above, they find their Near East policies practically identical, and now the French are being given assurance that the Russians will recognize their pre-war debts to France. The new feeling of friendliness is being fostered by a French business mission now in Moscow, and also by M. Herriot, mayor of Lyons and president of the radical socialist party of France, who also is visiting Russia.

AUSTRIA is saved from disaster, at least for the present, by the League of Nations plan which was made effective last week when Chancellor Seipel and representatives of Great Britain, France and Italy signed the protocol. Austria is authorized to issue and sell bonds for nearly $132,000,000, and the three allied powers named, together with Czechoslovakia, are to be guarantors for 80 per cent of it; Austria pledges her customs receipts and the tobacco monopoly for the interest, agrees to balance her budget and accepts supervision of reforms by a commission of the league. The four guaranteeing powers declare they will respect Austria's territorial integrity, independence and sovereignty.

LOUIS BARTHOU, who has been French minister of justice, has succeeded Louis Dubois as president of the reparations commission and French member of the board. He may be a little more lenient toward Germany than his predecessor. There doesn't seem to be any improvement in Germany's financial condition. The new tariff of the United States has hit her steel industry a hard blow. For instance, about half of the Solingen steel output formerly came to America; now there has been heavy cancellation of orders with entire absence of fresh demands. On the London market Wednesday German marks struck a new low level. About 2,000 of them could be bought for a dollar.

THE American Bankers' association, in annual convention in New York, was addressed on the subject of the allied war debts by Rt. Hon. Reginald McKenna, former chancellor of Great Britain, and now chairman of the largest bank in the world. He said England was able to pay her debt to the United States in full and would do so, but he suggested that the bankers use their influence in favor of postponement of payment by any others of our creditors. Mr. McKenna warned his hearers that an attempt to enforce payment of the war debt beyond the ability of the debtor nations to pay would be fraught with the most serious consequences for the United States, as well as the countries of Europe. There would be an inevitable injury to the international trade of the whole world, reduced profits, lower wages, and unemployment, lower standards of living.

As a solution of the problem he suggested that "a full and frank" conference between the debtor and creditor nations should be called in order to discover the exact amounts that could ultimately be paid by the nations unable to meet their debts in full.

After a warm debate, the association adopted by a viva voce vote a resolution declaring that "it viewed with alarm" the tendency toward the establishing of branch banking in the United States and expressed its opposition to any branch banking in any form by either state or national banks. The banks of the towns and smaller cities were far too strong numerically for the big bankers who protested that branch bank system must prevail. John H. Puelicher of Milwaukee was elected president of the association.

GOVERNOR HALDWICK of Georgia was desirous that his state should be the first to have a woman United States senator, so he appointed to succeed the late Tom Watson, Mrs. William H. Felton, eighty-seven years old and distinguished for her work in the causes of temperance and woman suffrage. At the same time Mr. Haldwick announced himself a candidate for the unexpired term of Watson. The election is to be held November 7 and there is no chance for Mrs. Felton to qualify before that date by taking the oath of office in the senate chamber. Authorities in Washington are wondering whether or not she will be entitled to the salary and to the franking privilege and other prerogatives. Anyway, she has the distinction of being the first woman to be appointed United States senator with credentials duly made out and sent to Washington by a governor.

THAT the prophecies of another coal strike next spring will be fulfilled was made fairly certain by the action of the policy committee of the United Mine Workers of America Wednesday. It reaffirmed the demands of the February, 1922, convention of the union in Indianapolis, demanding the continuance of the present wages in coal mines until 1925, and, in addition, the six-hour days and five-day week, time and one-half for overtime work, and double time on Sundays and holidays.

According to a bulletin sent out by B. M. Jewell, 83 railroads, operating about 65,000 miles of line and employing between 125,000 and 130,000 members of the shop crafts organization, have settled the shopen's strike with their system federations. The latest road to join the peace ranks is the Chicago Great Western.

FOREST fires in northern Ontario have destroyed the mining towns of Halleybury, North Cobalt, Charlton and Heaslip, and several other towns have been partly burned. More than 5,000 persons were rendered homeless and there was considerable loss of life. Refugees from Halleybury arriving at North Bay said they were crowded from a dock while trying to board a rescue ship. Northern Minnesota also is suffering severely from forest fires, some small settlements have been wiped out and many more are threatened.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA. Special Care of Baby. That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases. Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food. A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived. Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups. MOTHERS SHOULD READ THE BOOKLET THAT IS AROUND EVERY BOTTLE OF FLETCHER'S CASTORIA. GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK, CITY.

FOUND OUT WHAT WAS WRONG. Physician Might at Least Take Comfort in Fact That His Subconscious Mind Was Right. Have you ever done a piece of work, conscious at the time that something was vitally wrong with it, but unable to figure out the defect until after the job was finished? The "feeling that something is wrong" floats up vaporlike from the subconscious mind, one of every person's two brains. A Toronto doctor tolled evenings for two winters building in his cellar an eighteen-foot motorboat for Muskoka lakes. At that time he was conscious that something was wrong, but could not figure it out, though he pondered in detail everything from engine to paint. When it came time to take the boat to the freight train he abruptly learned what had bothered his subconscious brain: There was no way of getting the boat out of the cellar except by tearing a big hole in the foundations of the house and digging a deep opening to the outside.

SILLY IDEA OF "BLUE BLOOD". Austrian Aristocratic Requisites About on a Par With the Action of Foolish Boy. Dean Hevel of Lafayette college said at a dinner in Easton: "The Austrian aristocracy must be taking Austria's new democratic government very hard, for Austrian society was the most rigidly exclusive in the world. You had to have four quarters to your coat of arms—that is, all the way back to your grandfather and grandmother on both father's and mother's side, all your people had to be noble. A drop of common blood, and you were not received at court or in society. "This absurd treatment of good Austrians who didn't happen to be noble deserved to vanish as it has vanished, for it was stupid, absurd, cruel. In fact, it was all of a piece with the action of the boy who was found stoning a frog and yelling savagely at it: "I'll 'larn ye to be a frog!"—Indianapolis News.

Believe in Old Prophecy. Koreans Flock to Secure Holdings in What They Are Satisfied Is to Be Great City. Kelyong, the lonely mountain of Korea, experienced a real-estate boom that made the old-town promoter pale into insignificance. On a tiny piece of land on the mountain side were encamped 2,562 persons, forming 518 households, while hundreds more were gathered at the base, bidding high prices for the privilege of buying a bit of land among the favored. The Korean prophet, Chyong Kam, whose writings have been preserved in the ancestral mausoleum of the one-time imperial family of Korea, long ago prophesied that Mount Kelyong would be chosen as the religious center of the sect which he founded and of the peninsula. His prophecy has recently been given great publicity, it is reported, and thousands of Koreans are flocking to the mountain, firm in their belief that it is to be one of the greatest cities of the world and that they are "getting in on the ground floor."

"That's nuth'n," replied Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "The blame fool says himself that half of the time he forgets when he swapped 'or his best dog."—Kansas City Star.

Helpful Youngsters. Tommy and Bob just came home from a visit to grandma. "I suppose grandma was quite busy cooking her basket of peaches?" said mother. "Not very," replied Bobby. "Tommy and me saved her a lot of work. They tasted so fine we didn't leave her but a few to cook." Patience and good nature will get away with any exigency in life.

$10.50 AN HOUR FOR YOUR WORK

Whoever heard of a farmer making $10.50 an hour? Outside of the Elgin asylum no person would dare venture such a statement, but that is what some farmers are making in the time spent in the selection of their seed corn.

Take up your pencil and figure for yourself. A man ought to pick in the neighborhood of fifteen bushels or seed corn in a ten-hour day. Some farmers are doing this and selecting their own type corn, which in many cases is probably outyielding the average corn in their community.

Experimental evidence has shown that it is possible to increase the yield of corn from four to five bushels to the acre by the selection of disease free corn. If your yield was increased only two bushels to the acre by a field selection over crib selection on the present market basis, if you picked fifteen bushels of corn in a day you would be making $10.50 an hour. —DeKalb County Soil Improvement Association Bulletin.

HOME COMING AT ILLINOIS U.

Homecoming at the university of Illinois this fall will be celebrated by students and alumni October 20 and 21 with a two-day program of reunions, the Iowa-Illinois football game, stunts, parades and a dedication ceremony for the new $2,000,000 memorial stadium, provided the work of construction has progressed far enough.

Efforts are being made this year to provide features with a general appeal that will attract and entertain non-fraternity alumni. While the fraternities are having their alumni banquets, a combination mixer and banquet for non-fraternity homecomers is planned for the gym annex, formerly the old armory.

Accommodations and registration committees working in conjunction with the unit system, a new plan for uniting unorganized men that was instituted last year, will list rooms and provide a directory for all non-fraternity men.
